o Edged Blade in Coal Strike.

stminster Gazette Beholds Revolutionary Situation in England.

Editorial Comment n Great Labor War Is Generally Pessimistic.

h and Welsh Minority Hated for Trying to Rule or Ruin.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NDON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Uncertainty as to the outcome of the government's decision to pass a bill establishing compulsory arbitration of the differences in the coal industry characterized nearly every utterance on the subject. It is admitted that the course followed by Premier Asquith in the matter of giving any promise of a settlement of the strike within a definite period and therefore the support of the majority of people support the government.

THE THUNDERER'S QUESTION.

"Will the bill end the strike if it becomes a law?" asks The Times, almost tells. The miners' leaders encourage us to view the situation with little hope.

"They are moving toward the settlement uncertainties; still they must know that this strike cannot be endured much longer by an outraged nation. It is a thousand pities that the country will not wait a while longer in the hope that the tendencies of many miners to return to work voluntarily would gather irresistible force."

A TWO-EDGED SWORD.

The Daily Mail tells the miners that they have caused the government to unsheathed a two edged sword and warns them that when the proposed act becomes a law anybody resisting it is liable to fine and imprisonment.

"The Scotch and South Welsh coal mine owners," says the Daily News, "have driven the state to embark upon a course that is veiled with fate and full of peril. Both masters and men in the English fields are anxious to settle, but the Scotch and Welsh minority are determined to rule or ruin, and hence the present disaster. Well, we must face it, so let us do so, hoping that as we have begun so we shall finish and that we shall be able to say that the greatest industrial struggle known to the modern world has passed away without the flash of a saber or the loss of life in riot."

The Daily Chronicle urges the government to stop short of compulsory arbitration if possible, adopting the "most moderate policy that will at all restart the mines."

The Westminster Gazette declares that the disputants have brought about a revolutionary situation. "Both labor and capital," it says, "may henceforth find themselves occupying a wholly different position under the British law."

Some business men fear that all trades now will begin to clamor for a legally established minimum wage and that the entire economic system of the country will be thrown into confusion. The fact is recalled, however, that Premier Asquith in recommending a minimum wage in the coal industry, was careful to say that this was one of the great primary industries, furnishing life blood to all other industries, and therefore occupied a unique position from the point of view of the state.

CHANCE FOR OIL MEN.

Dr. Deisel, maker of the Deisel engine, lecturing before the Institute of Mechanical Engineers last night, declared that the coal miners of the world could not strangle the world's industry.

"Oil, both mineral and vegetable," he said, "will be used more and more. England will continue to live by its coal, but in the form of gas, coke and oil and the last will be used in driving engines to generate electricity in bulk and lead to preventing a

War Cry Sounded By Suffragette

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont Says Heads, Not Windows, Will Be Smashed.

"Will Meet American Situation in American Way," She Declares.

"Women Strong Enough to Use Scrubbing Brushes Can Carry Rifles."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Not stones but shotguns, not broken windows but broken heads—that is the war cry of the militant movement of woman suffragists of America.

That these women will form an army, equip themselves for battle, and engage in warfare to the death with the corrupt politicians who are withholding the right of the ballot, is the prediction of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, president of the Political Equality Association of New York, and she adds significantly, "And it will be soon."

Mrs. Belmont was shown today the statement of Dr. Anna P. Shaw, president of the National Woman Suffrage Association. Said Dr. Shaw:

"We hope that we will not come to the militant methods of our sisters in England, but I say that if we are played with, made fun of, and greeted with supercilious smiles by Congressional committees, as we were yesterday, we will come to it. If it does come the daughters of old England here will be ready to suffer as the women are suffering in England."

"We shall not adopt the militant methods of English women," began Mrs. Belmont, "although I thoroughly approve of them in England. Many people here are so uneducated. They do not know that at every political election in England there is window-breaking. It is a matter of course; a recognized method of expressing revolt. The Englishmen who smash windows are not put in prison or pilloried by the newspapers. Those punishments are reserved solely for the women.

"But," the suffrage leader unconsciously straightened and a sparkle came into her eyes. "But women in America will choose their own military methods, and use them, too, without waiting much longer. We will not meet an American situation in an English way, but we will meet it in an American way.

"It is the corrupt politicians who have the power in the States. They will not give us by permission what we want. We have been trying that method for sixty years and we have gained nothing, or very little.

"The women suffrage party will never condescend to bribe these men. Then what is there left but to fight

ENTERS THE JULIUS TOWER.

Where the Germans Have Their War Gold a Los Angeles Man Gets in and Is Arrested.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Robert W. Poindexter of Los Angeles, accompanied by Mr. Stern, an American of German descent, ran against the authorities in an attempt to see the inside of the Julius Tower in Spandau, where $30,000,000 are kept for use in case of war. Poindexter told the sentinel that he wanted to see the commandant and marched into the tower while the soldier's back was turned. There the two men were detained by a guard while the police were being summoned. They were taken to the police station, but were released when they established their identity.

Poindexter says that he is the first American who was ever inside the tower.

BLOW HITS FRUIT MEN.

Rates to Europe Are Sent Skyward.

New Schedule in Effect in a Month Boosts Charges on All Shipments.

All Dried Products from California by Water Are Almost Doubled.

Railroads Are Expected to Follow Suit; Big Fight Is Promised.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the West Indies conference lines, part of the steamer trust, advanced the rate to Europe on dried fruit from California via the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and Puerto Mexico, several weeks ago, it emphasized the general tendency toward advanced rates by increasing charges on many other products for which Europe has to a considerable extent depended upon California.

This fact was in evidence today upon the arrival at the offices of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company of the new rate schedule adopted by the West Indies conference, in which the freight charge on some products is increased as high as 100 per cent.

If these rates go into effect—and the dried-fruit shippers as well as the American-Hawaiian are now preparing a short but vigorous fight to reduce them to a reasonable figure—there is little doubt that California shippers will suffer a tremendous loss.

TREMENDOUS INCREASES.

An idea of the percentage of increase may be gained from these figures: Dried fruit, whether in bags or boxes, soars from 60 to 100 shillings; apricot kernels go from 65 to 90 shillings; vanilla beans from 101.5 to 150; dry hides, from 70 to 180; wine, from 50 to 90; olive oil, from 65 to 90; olives, from 45 to 75; tallow, from 45 to 60; mustard seed, from 50 to 75. These are a few of the commodity rates to be affected, and the class rates go skyward in proportion.

Shippers were notified by telephone today from the American-Hawaiian company's offices of the new rates proposed and adopted, but they were also informed that the rates were not announced for quotation for the fall trade and would not be until the efforts of the steamship company, whose officials say they will have the co-operation of all Pacific water lines to bring them down to a level sufficiently reasonable to allow California shippers to retain the European markets, are fruitful either of success or failure. The rates adopted by the conference lines are almost without exception considered prohibitive and are near the level of the overland rates to Europe via New York.

MAY BOOST RAIL RATES.

While among shippers there is a tendency to suspect interests common to both the rail and water carriers to be back of the general advances, there is said to be a likelihood of the overland rates on European shipments from the Pacific Coast soaring within a few weeks. The Southern Pacific company has been trying for the last ten days without avail to obtain from the water carriers with which it connects at New York rate quotations for the fall fruit shipments. The company's inability to do so has led to an expression among shippers that the carriers of the international mercantile marine making the port of New York are contemplating a big increase in European rates, and if this proves to be the case, the railroad rates will jump accordingly.

The overland rates maintained at present, in comparison with the rates effective via the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and Puerto Mexico, have been such as to divert much of the fruit shipments to the water carriers. An advance of the rates via Tehuantepec as contemplated will be prohibitive, shippers assert, and a further advance by the shipping trust on the New York rates would be such as to practically annihilate any hope of retaining the European market or any portion of it.

WILL HIT SHIPPERS.

Shippers especially deplore the advance now because of the exporting outlook for this fall. The European crops failure caused inquiries about the California crop much earlier than usual, and the inability of the shippers to quote prices is sending buyers elsewhere.

"The American-Hawaiian will have the support of the other Pacific lines in attempting to hold down Atlantic rates to a reasonable base," said an official of the American-Hawaiian today. "We are preparing for a vigorous fight against the increase, and to have practically a month in which to show what strength of argument can be brought against the advance.

"The Atlantic rate increases are bound to affect the business of the Pacific Coast carriers as well as the Pacific Coast shippers, and until we hear definitely from the West Indies conference about the advances and about the result of our efforts, we will not quote the rates adopted in the new schedule."

Crying Foul.

ROOSEVELT WILL CONTEST DELEGATIONS FROM SOUTH

Complaint Will Be Taken Up With National Committee on Charge that Delegates Have Been Illegally Chosen—Director of Taft Bureau Declares Conventions Were Held Strictly in Accordance With Call.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Contests against Taft delegates from all Southern States to the Chicago Republican convention will be taken before the National Committee in June by the Roosevelt forces, according to a statement given out there today over the signature of Senator Joseph M. Dixon, Col. Roosevelt's campaign manager.

The purpose of the Roosevelt managers to attempt the overthrow of all of President Taft's southern strength before it can be seated in the Chicago convention is further borne out by tables contained in the Dixon statement.

The Dixon estimates give Col. Roosevelt forty-four delegates and conceds only fourteen to President Taft. The Taft delegates from southern States, eighty-four in number, are placed in the "contested" column.

Director William B. McKinley of President Taft's campaign committee, who also published a tabulated estimate of strength, today claimed 131 for the President and conceded only thirteen to Col. Roosevelt. The only item upon which the widely divergent statements of the campaign managers agree is the concession of two delegates from the Seventh Iowa District to Senator Cummins.

Senator Dixon's statement declares contests will be made in all Southern States because most of the conventions have "been called and controlled by office-holders and have been illegal and fraudulent both in character and in the methods and tactics pursued."

"Convincing proof of this fact will be presented to the National Committee," added Senator Dixon, "by the delegates instructed for Col. Roosevelt, none of them office-holders, elected by legal and proper methods, and in accordance with the call of the National Committee.

"It is apparent that Taft managers propose to carry the plan of contesting delegates into Northern States in order to cloud conditions. This is demoralizing to the party, but the issue as thus made, will be made with vigor.

"In adopting this plan, the Taft managers have assured a decision of the contests on their merits. Northern States and districts never will submit to the manhandling of their delegations through bogus contests. When the National Committee is confronted with the necessity of making fair decisions in northern districts, it will establish precedents that must insure fair decisions in southern districts, also."

The Taft claims as given out by Director McKinley, concede contests in the following Congressional Districts: First Georgia, Third Virginia, Third and Fifth Missouri and Third Oklahoma. This makes a total of ten delegates.

The Roosevelt statement declares that the following delegates now claimed by the Taft forces will be contested: Alabama 14, District of Columbia 2, Florida 12, Georgia 20, South Carolina 6, Tennessee 12 and Virginia 18.

"The conventions in the Southern States were all called and held strictly in conformity with the call issued by the National Committee," said Mr. McKinley.

"So far as we know, the Roosevelt supporters went into these conventions and made their fight; if they held separate conventions and elected other delegates, we have not been advised of the fact."

HOLD A POLITICAL DEBATE.

Fresno Leaders Discuss the Claims of Roosevelt and Taft on the Republican Party.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRESNO, March 16.—Chester H. Rowell, editor of the Fresno Republican, and F. H. Short, attorney, both prominent for many years in Republican politics, debated tonight before the Fresno Commonwealth Club the issues in the party today, Rowell taking the side for Theodore Roosevelt and Short for President Taft. About 100 prominent citizens were present, including one-third women.

Short, who opened and closed the debate, declared Taft was entitled to a renomination by party custom, had earned the approval of all voters by fulfilling party pledges and especially had been a friend of California. He declared Roosevelt presumptious in seeking a renomination.

Rowell declared the issue to be the right of the people to choose a President, which, he said, the Taft organization was seeking to deny. Taft, he affirmed, had failed as a leader and now for a renomination was receiving the support of the strongest opponents of his declared policies.

CANNONS BOOM A REQUIEM TO HULK OF THE MAINE.

With Banners Flying She Plunges to Her Everlasting Sleep Six Hundred Fathoms Deep in the Waters of the Gulf—Under Frowning Skies the Old Battleship Is Towed Away for Decent Burial.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HAVANA, March 16.—Under lowering skies and a heavy sea the old battleship Maine, resurrected after fourteen years' burial in Havana Harbor, today plunged, with her colors flying, to her everlasting rest 600 fathoms deep in the waters of the gulf. The sinking of the hulk was carried out precisely as planned, marking the end of the work begun more than a year and a half ago.

After imposing ceremonies in the morning, which ended with the formal transfer of the custody of the bodies of the dead by the Mayor of Havana, Julio de Cardenas, to Brig.-Gen. W. H. Bixby, chief of the Engineer Corps, U.S.A., as the representative of the United States, the coffins were taken aboard the armored cruiser North Carolina, where they were deposited on the quarterdeck, covered by a great mound of floral tributes under a guard of honor composed of marines. Minute guns were fired by the North Carolina, and the scout cruiser Birmingham and the batteries of Cabanas Fortress until the ships cleared the harbor.

Soon after 2 o'clock the heavy tug Osceola, aboard which were the United States Minister, Arthur H. Beaupre, and the staff of the legation, Brig.-Gen. Bixby, Col. William H. Black, Lieut.-Col. Mason M. Patrick and Maj. Harley B. Ferguson, constituting the Maine commission, passed lines to the stern end of the wedge-shaped wreck and started seaward. Two flanking tugs attached lines to either end of the bulkhead, which then became the after part of the bulk, to steady and steer her.

Her decks covered deep with flowers and palms and a United States flag floating from the jury mast, where the mainmast formerly stood, the Maine put to sea on her last voyage. On deck stood Capt. John O'Brien, famous as "Dynamite Johnny," skipper of the filibustering steamers "Dauntless" and "Three Friends," acting as the Maine's last pilot. As the wreck passed the United States squadron the crews manned the rails, the marines presented arms, the bandsmen on the quarter-deck played the national anthem, while minute guns boomed a requiem.

Progress necessarily was slow. Half an hour later the North Carolina and Birmingham got under way, followed by the Cuban gunboats Haturi, Yara, Enrique Villundas and De Octubre, the United States engineer's steam dredger Bernard, carrying all the men who had worked on the cofferdam, a steamer with the Havana camp, Spanish-American War veterans aboard, Commodore Carbonell's yacht Gypsy, with the Havana Chapter D.A.

Railroad Record.

RECORD WEEK OF BLOCKADES.

March Earnings Melt Like Snow on the Sun.

Hard Work to Keep Trains Going in the West.

Nineteen Solid Days of Storm in Kansas.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All record for blockades of even the record-breaking winter just about to close, were broken again this week, and prospects are that March earnings of the western railroads will be eaten into deeply as a result. Coming as it does after a January and a February, which, in themselves, were beyond all precedent, the last few days have only served to add laurels to the crown of a winter the like of which no railroad man can remember.

What March has been for the western roads is indicated by a report by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, that yesterday was the nineteenth consecutive day of snowstorms in Kansas. Beginning February 25, there was not one day on which it was not snowing on one or all the divisions of the railroad in that State. Where it was not snowing the high wind was blowing the snow into cuts in such volume that expenses and difficulties entailed were as great as if the blizzard were raging.

Railroads operating to the southwest from Chicago report that the storm of the last few days was the worst of the entire winter. Extending from Denver and Colorado Springs on the west to beyond Chicago on the east, and from the Dakotas on the north to the Oklahoma State line on the south, there was hardly a road within the confines of this territory which was not stalled completely in some part of its line, while some of the roads had hundreds of miles of snowdrifts to combat. For several days the principal through trains operated by some of the roads were tied up completely. One western line alone had from twelve to fifteen trains tied up centrally at various stations through the snow belt. All, however, had diners and live engines, so that passengers were kept warm and well fed.

A NEW REVOLT OF THE WOMEN.

ENRAGED NOW AT THE CONDUCT OF QUEEN MARY.

She Is Getting Altogether Too Audacious in Her Efforts to Teach Society Ladies How to Dress and Now They Are Beginning to Resent.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The women of London society are up in arms against "the first lady in the land." Queen Mary has been trying to lay down sumptuary laws, against which every tea table in the West End trembles on its legs to protest.

Nothing in the nature of a circular intimation, such as the leading dressmakers received last season, has been sent out, but rules have been laid down all the same for observance by women attending the courts in Buckingham Palace, and it is against these rules that society is in revolt.

Tight dresses are taboo.

Certain regulations as to trains and veils are enforced.

Even the manner of wearing feathers is strictly prescribed.

At Wednesday night's court two girls appeared in dresses which, while very far removed from the kind known as "hobble," were tighter than Queen Mary liked. So sourly did the Queen scowl at the unfortunate wearers that both girls left the royal presence in tears. A woman well known in society vented her wrath on the following day.

"The sooner Mary, who is not Queen Mary, but only Queen Consort," she exclaimed, "realizes that her position on the throne does not entitle her to dictate to us what we shall wear, the better for her."

"Courts are not held for her glorification, but are simply designed for the purposes of society. Society does not require Mary to teach it how to dress, or to darn socks, either. The way she scowled at those poor girls was disgraceful."

The crowd of surrounding women expressed their unanimous approval of the speaker, who added:

"That sort of thing will drive us all into the arms of Lloyd George."

Promises Shotguns for American Suffrage.

them with physical force, the only weapon they can understand?

"If a woman is strong enough to scrub floors all day, if she is strong enough to work as hard at this desk as I do," exclaimed Mrs. Belmont, "she is strong enough to carry a gun and fight."

QUOTING PARNELL TO GET THE VOTE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A shower of green hued paper mottoes bearing quotations from Parnell and other Irishmen attracted the eyes of hundreds of passers-by on Washington street today. Pedestrians reaching for the green slips raised their eyes skyward to see if a miracle were being performed in honor of St. Patrick and were greeted by a twelve-foot green sign fluttering from the campaign headquarters of the Portland Woman's Club in the Rothchild Building. The sign bore the words "Votes for Women" in conspicuous white lettering.

The green motto cards were embellished with an Irish harp and bore such quotations as the following:

"Taxation without representation is tyranny."

And this from Parnell: "We cannot consent to look upon a single Irishman as not belonging to us."

POLICE SAY WOMEN ARE PLOTTING ARSON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is reported that the police have more serious evidence against Mrs. Pankhurst and other suffragette leaders on the conspiracy charge than their telegraphic code arrangement for causing disturbances and acts of violence against certain ministers. It is declared that the authorities have information of a plan to set fire to the British Museum library, the National Gallery and Kensington Palace, which caused the issuance last week of an order closing these places to the public. Among papers seized at suffragette headquarters are accounts of payments to imported suffragettes, and in some cases their families, based on a regular scale according to the nature of violence to be undertaken and sentence imposed.

The possession of a fund of $575,000 enabled the organization to deal generously with its dupes and interesting evidence on this point is anticipated. The authorities have knowledge of some intended reprisal on either property or life if Mrs. Pankhurst is convicted, but believe that it will be the end of the suffragette movement.

FRICTION IN RANKS OF NORTHERN WOMEN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Declaring that it was organized "for work and not for contention," the Campaign Committee of the Portland Woman's Club in a long communication today withdrew from the Advisory Committee organized two weeks ago for the purpose of being a general clearinghouse for the campaign work carried on by the various equal suffrage leagues in the State, and as a result it is probable that the committee will be dissolved and its work taken over by the State Central Committee.

Friction in the ranks of the suffragists and a disposition to work independently instead of co-operating as was proposed by the Advisory Committee, has, it is understood, induced the club's committee to take the action.

The work planned by the Woman's Club committee will be carried on persistently throughout the campaign it is asserted, and emphasis will be laid on the help to be secured through the various woman's clubs.

Strife and contention have been much in evidence ever since the present campaign opened, through the refusal of several sub-organizations of women to accept the leadership of Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway, or to affiliate with the national organization.

GIRLS CAUSE A FIGHT.

President of Brigham Young University Assaulted Because Co-Eds Pick Their Partners.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President George H. Brimhall, of Brigham Young University at Provo, near here, was assaulted on the street today by Frank Schwab, 21 years old, son of the leading merchant of that town. The university president's eye was discolored by contact with the young man's fist and he promises to swear out a complaint charging assault and battery.

The altercation was preceded by a heated debate over the right of the co-eds of the university to establish an exlusive dancing club.

Friday night the Girls' Dancing Club held a leap year ball, inviting only young men of the college. None of the town girls and none of the town boys were admitted. When Schwab and a girl friend sought admission he was barred, being told that the girls had permission of the school authorities to invite a select list of partners.

On his way to the college President Brimhall met Schwab. The latter resented the action of the girls and demanded that Brimhall take a hand in the affair and see that the town boys got a "square deal," since they had often invited co-eds to their functions. Brimhall hotly replied and Schwab hit him. President Brimhall is 65 years old. They were separated by friends.

BANISH DOUBT, FEARS AND TEARS.

Defeat and wretchedness come only to those who expect them. Courageous, aggressive, self-confident men win, while those who are timorous, apologetic and distrustful of their own powers fail.

Achievement is the outgrowth of effort, and the ability to accomplish comes from trying. Never mind what others say, do or think, but regulate your conduct by your own conscience, do your work well, make yourself as helpful as possible and be kind today, and peace and plenty will be a shorter distance away tomorrow.

ATTACK RUMORS HARASS PEKING.

Chinese Capital Continues in State of Panic.

President Unable to Establish His Authority.

Army Composed of Mercenaries Out for Spoils.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEKING, March 16.—Rumors of coming attacks on Peking by Mongols and Manchus keep conditions panicky. Few, except market shops, are open; the streets are almost deserted. President Yuan Shi Kai cannot assemble enough loyal troops in the North to re-establish his authority.

From Yuan's home town of Chang Te comes a report that the loyal troops are disarming the others and paying them a few dollars to return to their homes. Various sections are subscribing thousands of dollars to pay the garrison soldiers to abstain from looting. President Yuan has issued a proclamation reciting the duties of the soldiers to the State and declaring they should have pride enough in the profession to maintain its good name. But the Chinese army is composed of mercenaries, who have taken up arms only because prospects are better in the army than in laboring as coolies.

Last week detachments of United States, French, German and British soldiers accompanied a car containing 600,000 silver taels from Tien-Tsin to Peking. This consignment of money came from the "Four Powers" group of bankers to the Chinese finance board. Another party of United States marines served as a guard for 100,000 taels, which was taken from the ruins of a native bank and transferred to an international bank. The director of the native bank had set fire to his own premises when the place was entered by looting soldiers. He smoked the soldiers out, but only after a large amount of money had been stolen.

The foreign bankers already have advanced several sums to the Nanking and Peking governments, and have agreed to carry the provisional government financially for several months longer. They are irritated, however, by the loan contract signed yesterday by Premier Tang Shao Yi and the Anglo-Belgian syndicate for $5,000,000 secured by the revenues of the Peking-Kalgan Railway. They contend that this loan cannot be consummated, as the Franco-British loan of 1908 is secured by all revenues of the board of communications.

DISORDER IS ON WANE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NANKING (China) March 16.—The outlook in China is more hopeful today than at any time since the outbreak of the revolution. Carefully compiled reports received here show that while the unrest is general, during the last week disorder has decreased steadily, and there is increased confidence in a restoring of trade.

The districts of the Northwest and the distant West are in the worst condition, but the authorities in Nanking give assurances that unless something unforeseen occurs the country will be under control within sixty days after the announcement of the formation of the coalition Cabinet. Officials point out the inevitableness of sporadic outbreaks in districts with which it takes from two to three weeks to communicate or where masses of disorderly and lawless persons are congregated.

Alarmist predictions that a widespread uprising and mutinies in many places would occur have not been fulfilled. The flurry in the North appears to be nearly over.

William J. Calhoun, United States Minister in Peking, telegraphed today to Rear-Admiral Joseph B. Murdock, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, that the situation had improved so greatly that it was not necessary any longer to keep the United States cruiser in Tien-tsin. From all sections of the country within reach of the telegraph encouraging reports are bing received.

The Nanking assembly has completed preparations for handing over the government when Premier Tang Shao Yi arrives. Dr. Sun Yat Sen personally is directing plans to restore order. He continues quietly optimistic, but is watchfully jealous of close adhesion to the terms of the provisional constitution which endows the assembly with full powers. President Yuan Shi Kai evidently has recognized this fully, for he submits everything telegraphically to Nanking and consults Dr. Sun Yat Sen on all points.

The assemblymen unanimously assert that Nanking, the seat of the present government, will remain the capital until the provisional assembly selects or designates it.

BOATS ORDERED TO MANILA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Significant orders were issued from the Navy Department late today, directing three of the big armoured cruisers of the Pacific fleet to proceed at once to the Philippine Islands for an indefinite stay. The Navy Department will not admit that the vessels are to be attached to the Asiatic fleet, but their arrival will give the United States the most powerful foreign fleet, excepting that of Japan, in touch with Chinese waters. The vessels ordered to the Philippines are the flagship California, and the South Dakota and Colorado, now at Honolulu.

STILL ADVANCING ON PEKING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 16.—Gen. Sheng Yun, with his army of 10,000 troops from the province of Kansu, who was reported a few days ago to be marching on Peking after defeating a republican army, continued his advance on the capital today, in spite of the appeals of President Yuan Shi Kai, according to a dispatch from Tientsin. A telegram from Mukden says that Gen. Chang Tsao Lin is expected to march on Peking at any moment with an army from Manchuria to cooperate with Gen. Sheng Yun.

The gravest apprehensions are felt at Peking.

Some delay is being experienced in appointing the new Cabinet, says a Nanking dispatch today, but it is believed that within three weeks the entire new government, including the Assembly, will be transferred to Peking.

YAUN ANNOUNCES CABINET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—President Yuan Shi Kai of the new Chinese republic announced today the personnel of his Cabinet, according to a cablegram received from Shanghai. Tang Shao Yi, Premier, organized the Cabinet and named Gen. Dun Yi Sui as Minister of War; Gen. Lem Tin Wei, Minister of the Navy; Luk Chui Cheong, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Chu Bing Kwan, Minister of the Interior; Choi Yin Puy, Minister of Education; Leong Yu Ho, Minister of Posts; Chang Kee Mee, Minister of Commerce and Labor; Chang Chun Sin, Minister of Agriculture; Wong Chun Fui, Minister of Justice; Chang Kim Lo, Minister of Finance.

Gen. Dun is a Manchu, who offered able resistance to the republican forces during the revolution. Chang Kee Mee, Minister of Commerce and Labor, formerly was Governor of Shanghai. Wong Chun Fui, Minister of Justice, formerly was Minister of Foreign Affairs under President Sun Yat Sen.

A WOMAN'S FINANCES.

She Invests Four Hundred Dollars and Gets Back Two Dollars and a Half From Lewis.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, March 16.—Woman witnesses at the trial of E. G. Lewis on a charge of using the mails to defraud, testified in the United States District Court today that they had invested their savings in the stock of the Lewis Publishing Company, in the hope of receiving 15 per cent. dividends and they received no adequate returns.

Mrs. A. E. Stoner, Montvale, Va., testified that in 1908 she sent $400 to the company to purchase four of its 7 per cent. notes.

In December of that year she traded one of the notes to the company for one share of the preferred stock of the Lewis Publishing Company.

She did this, she said, because of advertisements in the Woman's National Daily, which said the company would pay a 15 per cent. dividend in the following March.

All she ever received, she said, was a 2½ per cent. dividend on the share of stock. She put in $400 and got back $2.50.

LADIES ALL A-FLUTTER.

They Hear That the Prelates of Rome Don't Like Dresses Too Much Decollette.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is an unusual flutter of excitement among the ladies of the black aristocracy, as the party owing strict allegiance to the Vatican is styled, on account of the Pope forbidding church dignitaries to attend social functions at which the ladies wear dresses with the bodice out too low.

Nature having bestowed beauty of form as well as of face on some of these ladies, the inborn feminine desire to resort to art—or absence of art—as an aid to nature resulted in costumes which to Cardinal Merry Del Val's mind suggested a taint of the original sin.

"After all," said a well-known society hostess, one of the arch-offenders, "there is no occasion to despair. In my invitation cards I hoist the danger signal to prepare to meet such and such a prelate. So shall they be forewarned."

HOW CHICAGO PROFITS.

CHICAGO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gross earnings of the Chicago City Railway and the Southern Street Railway, included in the system, amounted in the fiscal year ended January 31, to $10,711,000. This is about $600,000 more than in the preceding fiscal period. The net earning were $1,654,000, of which $900,800 goes to the city of Chicago as its 55 per cent. share provided by ordinance. The city railway's share 45 per cent. of the total net, amounted to $744,400. To this was added $2,088,000, as 5 per cent. on the capital investment, as certified by the Board of Supervising Engineers. Under the terms of the ordinance this amount is deducted from the gross earnings before there is any division with the city.

Panama.

PROPOSE A SOLUTION OF CANAL RATE ISSUE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—The exclusion of railroad-owned vessels from use of the water-way and the exemption of American craft engaged in coastwise trade from canal tolls are advocated by the State Railroad Commission in a series of recommendations formulated today in relation to the Panama Canal bill now before Congress.

Either direct subsidy or exemption from tolls for American bottoms in foreign trade is favored.

In its statement, which it says was prepared "after a public hearing and a careful investigation," the commission sums up the points in favor of each proposal. The decision of the United States Supreme Court on the "commodities clause of the interstate commerce act is cited in proof of the legality of a law barring coastwise ships "owned, operated or controlled" by railways competing by land.

"The history of coastwise traffic," it says, "shows railways use their steamship lines to crush out every independent line."

Remission of tolls for the coast-to-coast trade is advocated as a means to encourage American shipping and to reduce freight rates. In answer to the objection that the roads might try to make up for loss in water competition by increasing interior rates, the commission argues:

"If rightly regulated, the railroads must give reasonable rates to all points. The fact that a less than 'reasonable rate' is put in by railroad companies voluntarily to meet water competition does not justify such companies in putting any different rate into effect elsewhere than it could legally do if it did not meet such competition."

Unless American shipping receives assistance either by subsidy or remission of tolls the commission fears that "the United States, which built the canal at a tremendous outlay, would be the only nation whose vessels would sail through the canal without government assistance."

large part of the coal being wasted, as now, every ounce of its power producing virtue will be utilized."

ANOTHER WEEK OF STRIKE ASSURED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 16.—Realizing that no settlement of the coal strike is possible for another week, the nation faces with calmness the prospect of an increasing industrial paralysis, accompanied by hunger and destitution.

The Cabinet discussed today the draft of the bill which it was hoped would end the struggle.

The chief difficulty lies in embodying in the legislation Premier Asquith's pledge that the minimum wage bill "should provide an adequate safeguard for the protection of the employers." This involves the application of compulsion in some form, and union-labor leaders are opposed strongly to legislation of this character. The miners' executives have announced that they would direct the men not to return to work until a bill is passed which is satisfactory to them.

It is considered significant that James Ramsay MacDonald, the labor member for Leicester, was not called into consultation in today's Cabinet meeting.

In Glasgow trade and commerce practically have been throttled and train services have been reduced drastically. At the Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. shipbuilding works, Newcastle-on-Tyne, notification has been given that if the strike lasts another week 20,000 employees will be suspended.

That the prolongation of the strike will affect seriously the nation's overseas food supply is indicated by a cablegram received from Buenos Ayres by a large firm of ship-owners in Liverpool saying it would be impossible to obtain bunker coal for steamers at any River Platte port after the end of March.

In a speech tonight V. Hartshorn, the Welsh mine leader, after declaring that compulsory arbitration would not settle the strike, said:

"The outstanding fact is that the workers are masters of the situation. They have all the power, and it is simply a question as to how they will use it."

The first disorder occurred today at Lanarkshire, Scotland, where one policeman was seriously injured in a conflict between officers and striking union miners. The trouble was preceded by a raid on the homes of 200 non-union miners, who had left to return to work in the mines. Extra precautions are being taken to check outbreaks.

Hundreds of thousands of men and women will be added within a few days to the two million persons idle throughout Great Britain. Ten thousand skilled mechanics were thrown out of employment today by the closing down of the Great Western railroad construction works at Swindon, forced by the coal shortage. The London and Northwestern railway gave notice it would curtail its service Monday.

In many places manufacturers have kept their work going only by extraordinary efforts. They will now no longer be able to do this.

At Sheffield many of the works have continued in operation during the past week only by the most careful hoarding of coal. Even with this thriftiness over 25,000 men in that city have been discharged, and Monday, it is feared, practically every factory in the town will be closed. Not only has the passenger service on the railroads been cut down, but the freight trains have been reduced to such an extent that it is almost impossible to ship any goods at all.

A few small collieries are still working and wagons from the neighboring towns form long lines ove' night awaiting the doling out of the scanty supply.

COMPROMISE OR SUSPENSION OF WORK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—A suspension of work of 180,000 miners in the anthracite coal region on April 1 can be prevented only by compromise, but neither the coal operators nor the miners gave the slightest indication today of yielding from their positions.

The miners have declined to modify their demands for a 20 per cent increase in wages, an eight-hour working day, recognition of the union and other conditions. The operators made no counter-proposal.

Members of the Anthracite Miners' Committee conferred today on a statement given out by the operators that it was impossible to advance wages unless they could in some manner realize from the sale of coal products a sum equal to the increase in wages.

Should neither side retreat from its present position the mine workers in the hard-coal region, on the expiration of the present working agreement on March 31, will lay down their tools and suspend work until an agreement is reached. It is within the power of the Policy Committee at their meeting March 25 in Cleveland to call a strike in both the hard and soft-coal regions, should the bituminous men and their employees fail to reach an agreement at the Cleveland conference next Wednesday.

GERMAN MINERS RETURNING TO WORK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 16.—From 5000 to 18,000 miners in the Westphalian coal district resumed work today, thus avoiding the loss of six days' pay the mine owners announced they would deduct from back wages, according to contract, if they did not return to work today. More than half of the workers in the district still are out.

Miners of Silesian fields have announced their readiness to negotiate with the owners and a strike may be avoided, but attempts at conciliation in the Lorraine coal fields have proved unsuccessful.

The mine owners in Saxony have rejected all the miners' demands and a strike is expected tomorrow.

Boy With a Gun at His Back Takes Orders.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) March 16.—The first trace of the three convicts that escaped from the State penitentiary after killing the warden and two assistants last Thursday, was found this afternoon, when it was learned that they had stolen a fat work team from a farmer near Dew View and had driven to Lincoln evening of the prison break.

The three men came to the farmhouse shortly before 10 o'clock. They had been seen in the vicinity near this city early in the day, but a search proved fruitless. The farmer found a boy and two men at his home. They held up the couple, compelled them to keep them there the night. Early in the morning they took a milk wagon and left the boy in with them. The boy ran out for the city. Shortly after 6 o'clock in the morning the wagon stuck in a snowdrift, near the home of Chief of Police Hunt. The chief was just returning home in search when he saw the wagon stalled in the drift. The boy had a revolver against his side and told the officer that he was driving to the penitentiary on an early delivery and that the convicts had helped his horse through the drift and headed them up the road to a paved street. The boy then drove to the railroad tracks in the eastern part of the city, where he got out.

Both the boy and his mother said they were terrorized.

The convicts, according to the story told the police today by the boy, told his mother that if she phoned in and they were followed they would kill the boy and told the boy that if he told his mother after he had come back and kill them.

Thief's Agent Collects His Reward for Services.

PORTLAND, March 16.—Three thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, stolen from Mrs. Lucille M. Ayers of this city on the night of January 19, was restored to the owner through an agent of the thief who received from Ayers a promise that nothing looking to the prosecution of the thief was done. The jewelry, with the exception of a solitaire diamond ring valued at $500, was intact. The solitaire, the intermediary promised, would be returned to Mrs. Ayers in a few days. For the return of all the jewelry but the solitaire ring, Mrs. Ayers paid the go-between $350, with the understanding that $120 additional, making a total of $500, will be paid him when the ring is handed to her.

Mrs. Ayers attended a dinner party at a downtown cafe the evening of January 19. She wore several rings and a large gold locket, studded with diamonds, suspended from a gold chain. Before the dinner had ended she opened her hand bag and transferred all but her wedding ring and the articles of jewelry to a chamois lined bag. Mrs. Ayers rode home in an automobile and shortly after reaching her residence discovered that the bag containing the jewelry had disappeared.

Detectives were employed and the trail of his agent was located, but conditions for the return of the jewelry were not satisfactory and negotiations were suspended.

A day or two later, the agent of the thief called Mrs. Ayers on the telephone and made an appointment to meet her, giving her permission to act as his escort. The appointment was kept and Mrs. Ayers and her escort were taken in an automobile to Lone Mountain Cemetery, where from a hole at the base of an oak the jewel-laden chamois bag was restored to her, and the reward money paid over to the thief's agent.

SEATTLE, March 16.—Herbert L. Hanlon was convicted of larceny today in spite of the fact that Howard Hanlon, his young brother, a high school student, confessed the theft on the stand.

When Herbert Hanlon was charged with the crime, he laid the blame upon his 15-year-old brother and the latter confessed. The janitor of the building in which the Hanlons lived testified, however, that he had heard the mother tell Howard he must not tell to save his brother. The attorney of the prosecution was that the Hanlons decided to save Herbert from the penitentiary by sacrificing Howard, who, on account of his youth, would receive no severer punishment than a reformatory term. The jury accepted this view.

Man About to Complete Sentence at Alcatraz Will Be Taken to Salt Lake On a Requisition.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, March 16.—A requisition was honored today from the Governor of Utah upon Gov. Johnson for the return of Joe Haley to Salt Lake City for trial on a charge of robbery. Haley is now held at Alcatraz, where he is about to complete a sentence imposed by the United States War Department for desertion from the army. Haley entered a restaurant in Salt Lake City and ordered a ham sandwich. When the waiter turned to fill the order Haley drew two revolvers and ordered the patrons and employees of the place to throw up their hands. He lined a score of men against the wall and rifled the till of $150.

OVERCOMES POLICEMAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALT LAKE (Utah) March 16.—The crime for which Joe Haley is to be returned to this State was committed in December, 1909, when he entered Young's Cafe here and robbed the cash register of $150. After the robbery Haley made his way to a rooming-house, where he soon was discovered by the police. A policeman, who attempted to arrest him at the rooming-house was knocked down by Haley, who then made his escape down a fire escape, knocking down another policeman, who was waiting below.

Haley was chased through the streets for several blocks by a score or more of policemen, who fired more than a hundred shots at the fugitive without hitting him.

STOCKTON RAISES CASH.

WANTS NATIVE SONS' MEETING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stockton's recent invitation to the Native Sons of the State to hold their next convention here will be backed by subscriptions aggregating $10,000. Committees from the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Association and the local parlor of Native Sons today held a joint meeting and pledged themselves to raise the funds. So far as known the only city that will compete with Stockton for the honor is San Jose. Great enthusiasm was shown at the committee meeting and it was intimated that more than $10,000 could be secured if necessary. George E. Catts, W. C. Numillier and W. E. O'Connor proffered their services to go out on the streets and secure the necessary financial support.

DECORATED BY EMPEROR.

BERKELEY MINISTER HONORED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY (Cal.) March 16.—The Rev. H. B. Johnson, D. D. of this city, was decorated today with the Order of the Rising Sun, the highest honor which may be paid by Japanese to men of other nations. Dr. Johnson is superintendent of the Pacific Japanese mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The honor was conferred by the Emperor at the time of Dr. Johnson's recent visit to Japan, but was not formally presented until the reception last night when the elaborate decoration was pinned upon the doctor's coat by M. Naimi, Japanese Consul General of San Francisco.

ANGELENO KILLED IN NORTH.

BELIEVED TO BE SAM WALKER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PENDLETON (Or.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The body of a man who was undoubtedly Sam Walker of Los Angeles, was found mangled and lying beside the railroad track, just east of this city this morning. The manner of his death is unknown. He was dressed as a laborer and had only a small sum of money in his pockets. Two receipts one for $50 and one for $45 and signed by L. E. Hillen and Company of Los Angeles were the only means of identification. They were dated in October, 1911. The man's left foot had been cut off just back of the toes in some former accident.

SMALLPOX DISAPPEARING.

DISEASE IS UNDER CONTROL.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, March 16.—Reports received by the State Board of Health indicate that the smallpox situation in California is improving rapidly. Fewer cases are being reported and local boards of health declare they have the situation well in hand. The last case reported was from Barstow. A week ago the average was from one to three cases a day. The reports are now about one every other day, or two in three days.

DREAM PREVENTS DISASTER.

Section Man Has Vision in Sleep of Washed Out Bridge, and Contrives to Save Train.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) March 16.—Awakening from a sleep in which he dreamed that a near-by trestle on the Southern railroad had been washed away, O. T. Kitchins, a section foreman, arose from his bed and went to South River, six miles from here, before dawn today to discover that his dream was a reality. The foreman knew that a passenger train en route from Atlanta to Columbus, Ga., was due, but had no means of reaching the opposite bank to warn the engineer of the danger. He "hallooed" for half an hour and finally attracted the attention of a man on the other side, who flagged the train.

BAY CITIES HOME PHONES BOUGHT BY THE PACIFIC.

Change of Ownership Announced in San Francisco. Deal Involves the Payment of Nearly a Million Gold and the Transfer of Bonds Worth Several Millions of Dollars—One System in All Coast Cities.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Bay Cities Home Telephone Company has been sold to the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The change of ownership was announced this afternoon by President Robert M. Frick of the Home Telephone Company.

Deeds were placed on file with the Recorder today, conveying title to the property from the Bay Cities to the Home Long Distance and from the Home-Long Distance to the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, the consideration in each instance being $10.

MONEY INVOLVED.

The deal, closed yesterday, involved the payment of $895,000 in gold coin, $1,300,000 in preferred stock of the Pacific company, and $7,080,000 in bonds of the Home Long Distance Telephone Company, which are guaranteed by the Pacific company.

The purchase includes all the real property of the Home company, and also the franchise owned by the Home company. Whether the automatic telephone system will be maintained, or abandoned, is a question that has not been decided by the new purchasers. The Pacific's engineers are now studying the system, and if it is found to be feasible to use, in connection with the Pacific's vast urban and suburban system, it will be continued and enlarged.

Yesterday the Home Long Distance Company filed notice with the Superior Court that it had created a bonded indebtedness of $7,080,000, which is now guaranteed by the Pacific, and becomes part of the purchase price.

The transfer of ownership removes all possibility of the acquisition by the city and county of San Francisco of the Home company, as was the purpose of persons who invoked the initiative to bring about an election to determine whether or not the municipality should purchase the plant. The Home had applied for permission to sell to the Pacific States, but the permit had been refused by the Board of Supervisors, and a petition for an election circulated. City Attorney Long, in an opinion, held that the election called for April 29, proposing the purchase, was invalid, and under the law it was impossible to call another election within six months.

HISTORY OF COMPANIES.

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company was organized in 1907 to take over all the holdings of the Pacific States Telephone Company. The franchise of the Home company reads, in effect, that the grantee shall not sell its property to any other corporation "now engaged in the telephone business in the city and county of San Francisco."

The franchise was granted in 1905, when the Pacific States was operating the other system, and inasmuch as the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company was organized the following year, it is pointed out by the parties to the deal that the consent of the city is not necessary.

"We never believed it necessary to obtain permission to sell," said President Frick today, "but we applied to the Supervisors in the belief that there would be clasping of hands over the suggestion, so great was the demand of our subscribers and the community generally for the transfer. This is shown by the fact that of the 13,000 persons who signed the petition for the city to purchase the Home system, only 250 were telephone subscribers and at all interested."

The sale of the Home company to the Pacific virtually means the maintenance of only one system in all the principal Pacific Coast cities, with the exception of Los Angeles. Both here and across the bay, the Home has had a hard struggle, and merchants and business men have been compelled to maintain a dual system, which had proved expensive and unsatisfactory. From innumerable sources have come support of the proposed acquisition by the Pacific of the Home company.

The Home has been handicapped from the inception by the fact that it had no long distance business. That deterred progress, and the upkeep of the system and its extension have involved large amounts of money.

The Home companies have been independent and separate organizations in all sections where the system has been maintained. Originating in Los Angeles, the Home worked its way into other cities by organizing distinct concerns, separately managed and financed. There has been no "parent" company, and this has proved a handicap in many ways.

Recently, the Pacific company purchased the Home systems of Tacoma and Seattle, and was prepared to buy the local concern when the Supervisors refused permission to sell. One of the conditions of the Home franchise is that it shall not be transferred without the consent of the Board of Supervisors.

In San Francisco the Home is operating approximately 18,000 separate telephones and a couple of hundred pay stations. It has been conducted at a loss from the outset.

MORGAN AS AN ARAB.

Financier Is Living in a Hut in Egypt, Where He Is Watching Excavation of an Old Cemetery.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—J. Pierpont Morgan has been spending his winter vacation on the ancient oasis of Khartegeh, which is four days west of Thebes, on a 4000-year-old caravan route. The principal reason for Mr. Morgan's stay there is to watch the workers he has employed to excavate in the desert around Khartegeh, in search for a Christian cemetery, which dates back to the early days of the Christian era.

The financier lives in a small house erected for him close to the ruins of the Temple of Ammon, where are some fine cartouches of Rameses II.

According to a party of Americans, who have just returned to this city after visiting Mr. Morgan at his desert retreat, he enjoys Khartegeh much better than the galeties of Cairo, Luxor or Assouan, which are filled all winter with pleasure-loving American tourists. He was wearing a big sun helmet, flannel suit and tan shoes, and was in the best of health when the American party left Khayet in February.

MR. TAFT'S SECOND TERM.

As a Member of the Yale University Corporation He Is Assured Re-Election by Unanimous Vote.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW HAVEN (Conn.) March 16.—President Taft will be given a second term as member of the university corporation and trustee board by Yale men. Six years ago he was elected to membership on the board and his term expires next June. The election will take place at the annual commencement exercise, just a week after the Republican National Convention in Chicago.

President Taft has promised to be a candidate for re-election, and the alumni will elect him for his second term by a unanimous vote. It is said that no rival alumnus will enter against him.

BUSINESS GETS ROCKING JOLT.

Pre-election Affairs Cause Widespread Stagnation.

Reflected in Condition of the National Banks.

New York City Is One of the Notable Exceptions.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Business stagnation in many parts of the country was indicated, according to Treasury officials, by the reports to the Comptroller of the Currency on the condition of national banks on February 20. Pre-election conditions are regarded as responsible.

The most notable exceptions were New York City, showing enormous gains in loans, cash and deposits; other reserve cities of the Eastern States and both the city and country banks of the Middle States.

Primarily because of the increased activity in New York the country as a whole showed substantial gains in business as compared with December 5, 1911, the date of the previous call. The totals for all banks of the country showed these gains on February 20 over December 5:

Loans and discounts, $151,624,116; cash, $87,706,201; and individual deposits, $94,516,950. The number of banks was increased from December 5 to February 20, by eleven.

New York City, the point of greatest activity, showed gains in loans and discounts of $132,826,167, in cash $68,052,369 and in deposits, $49,089,037. The other reserve cities of the Eastern States reported gains in all three items. The country banks showed losses in loans and cash, but gains in deposits. The eastern section bankers report these gains:

Loans, $129,791,688; cash, $77,129,928, and deposits, $65,201,476

Reports from other sections of the country, showed:

New England States—Losses in loans, $713,462; in cash, $916,083; in deposits, $8,716,910.

Southern States — Losses in loans, $590,979, and in cash, $146,507; gain in deposits, $17,537,366

Middle States—Gains in loans, $30,545,275; in cash, $11,651,667, and in deposits, $23,450,065.

Western States—Losses in loans, $494,910; in cash, $2,326,768, and in deposits, $347,575.

Pacific States—Losses in loans, $7,376,553 and in deposits, $1,725,651, but gains in cash of $2,247,826.

The total resources and liabilities of the 7669 banks reporting February 20, was $10,812,427,982. Their reserves amounted to $1,507,514,867, an average of 21.44 per cent, or $87,078,967 above the amount required by law.

FOR LOS ANGELES.

STEPHENS SEES ENGINEERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Congressman Stephens today called on the Board of Army Engineers and discussed various matters of interest to Los Angeles, including the application of the city to change the jetty and erect a fishing wharf on the east side of the channel regarding which no report has yet been made by the District Engineer, the city's application for bulkheading or filling in the Huntington concession on which a report is expected daily and the reconsideration of the Stokey report. He was promised action as soon as possible on all these matters.

PENSION LEGISLATION.

CRY OF ECONOMY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Members of the Senate were accused by Senator Kern of Indiana today of crying economy at the mention of pension legislation only because old age is believed to have robbed Civil War veterans of their influence in political affairs. The Senator urges the adoption of the Sherwood "Dollar-a-day" pension bill, and declared his opposition to the Smoot substitute, favorably reported by the Senate pension committee.

HARVESTER REORGANIZATION.

SENATE RESOLUTION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The Senate agreed today to the resolution introduced yesterday by Senator Lea, of Tennessee, for the correspondence on file in the department of justice regarding the reorganization of the so-called Harvester Trust. The demand is made upon the report that the Harvester company has made application for permission to reorganize in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court.

TWO MONTHS' COAL AHEAD.

What a Strike in American Anthracite Fields Would Mean.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Statistics bearing on a possible coal strike in the United States show:

Annual consumption of anthracite coal in the United States, 70,000,000 tons; mined and shipped in February, 1912, 5,875,968 tons; possible output for March, 1912, 5,800,000 tons; on hand April 1, (operators estimate) 5,300,000 tons; on hand April 1, (miners estimate) 4,550,000 tons. In the event of a strike April 1, coal will last (operators estimate) two months. Number of miners who may be called out 500,000; of these there are working in the anthracite mines 180,000, in bituminous mines 330,000. Number of operators affected 42.

EXCISE BILL DEBATED.

Heated Discussion Occurs in House Over Measure, and Spectre of Socialism is Paraded.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The Democratic excise tax bill, providing a 1 per cent. tax on incomes of corporations, firms and individuals of or exceeding $5000 a year, was debated vigorously by the House today. A vote on the measure will be taken according to an agreement reached early today. General debate on the bill will conclude Monday.

Early in the proceedings today Representative Prouty of Iowa, insurgent Republican, aroused Democratic applause by declaring his intention to support the bill. He justified his determination on the ground that he always favored a tax on incomes because "it placed the burden of taxation on the shoulders of those best able to bear it." Later Democratic applause was renewed, when Representative Jackson of Kansas, Republican, announced he would vote neither for nor against the bill.

The spectre of Socialism was paraded by Representative Garrett of Tennessee, Democrat, who argued that the growth of that party and the spread of socialistic doctrine was due directly to the unrest of the people under the unequal distribution of taxation.

NO DANGER OF FREE SUGAR.

If the Senate Does Not Amend It to Save Home Industries the President Will Veto It.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Beet sugar growers of California need not be alarmed over the passage by the Democratic House yesterday of the free sugar bill. The bill today came over to the Senate and was referred to the Finance Committee, where it will be pigeonholed for two or three weeks, the committee not having finished with the chemical bill. It may be two weeks later before the committee arranges for hearings on the bill.

Meanwhile the Republican Senators led by Perkins and Smoot, and Foster and Thornton, Democrats, from Louisiana, are organizing to defeat the bill on the floor of the Senate, or to amend it so that it will not be harmful to the best sugar interests of the West, or the cane sugar growers of Louisiana. The Republican majority in the Senate probably will defeat the bill or amend it.

President Taft let it be quietly known today that he will veto the free sugar bill, should it get through the Senate.

Houck Knocks Out Loree.

NEW YORK, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tommy Houck of Philadelphia knocked out Johnny Loree of this city, in the ninth round of their scheduled ten-round bout tonight. Although Loree weighed nearly 140 pounds and Houck tipped the scales at only 124, the Philadelphian hammered his adversary and cleverly avoided Loree's attacks.

POPE PIUS MUST PAY TAX.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) March 16.—Pope Piux X will have to pay $20 inheritance tax under the laws of Wisconsin on a $500 bequest left him by Johanna Brand, Milwaukee, who died January 27, 1911, according to a ruling made here today.

SUFFRAGETTES ACTIVE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 16.—Chicago suffragettes have asked permission of theater managers to distribute woman suffrage literature between acts at every show in the city and also have requested politicians to allow a woman speaker at every meeting. Thousands of postal cards have been mailed bearing the inscription: "Women vote in Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Washington and California. Why not in Illinois?"

RUNNING TO POLITICS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 16.—Candidates for office who are city employees will be asked to take a leave of absence while they are doing campaign work. Mayor Harrison last night directed a letter to the Civil Service Commission asking it to advise all employees that they must not use the city's time to advance their respective candidacy or to play politics. The Mayor took action after he had been advised that there were twenty candidates for office in the Department of Public Works alone.

Labor.

WOULD ROUND UP THE AGITATORS

Portland Business Men Tired of the Won't Works.

Want Fire Department to Turn on the Water.

But Mayor Rushlight, He Says "Wait Awhile."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Strongly urging that the city do something to squelch the mouthing rabble of I. W.W. street orators who nightly insult the American flag and utter seditious speeches against all organized authority, the committee of ten from the Portland Realty Board held a conference with Mayor Rushlight this morning. Some of the committeemen asked that the Mayor send out the fire department to turn the hose on the men who revile everybody from President Taft down, in case the police could not rout them.

C. C. Craig, one of the committeemen, pledged the Mayor that if the police could not handle the situation he would organize a band of huskies "and run every last one of the disturbers into the river."

"I'll be number one in the squad of huskies and guarantee the city won't have any further trouble," he said.

While the Mayor agreed that the situation was serious and that everything the delegation said was true, he temporized that he would take the matter up with the Central Labor Council when he returned from California. He leaves tomorrow night and will be gone several weeks.

"It isn't as if there were only a half dozen of this class of speakers," the Mayor explained, "but there are a thousand or more of them. It would mean a long and bitter fight to undertake to suppress them. We are tearing down our old jail and our new one is not built. We have a little sub-jail, out at the rock pile, which can take care of only about sixty prisoners, so we are absolutely in no shape to round these fellows up and herd them."

The only remedy the Mayor suggested was that people cease to stop and listen to the agitators.

Deluge.

EIGHTEEN LIVES LOST.

STORMS AND FLOODS SWEEP THROUGH GEORGIA.

Serious Situation in Augusta, Where Persons Are Being Rescued from the Second Story of Their Homes by Boatmen—Water in Broad Street to the Entrance of Planters' Hotel.

ATLANTA (Ga.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Floods are sweeping Augusta and Macon, Ga., a wide section of the Carolinas, and around Montgomery, Ala., where rivers are overflowing and are causing great property damage. The situation became most serious today in Augusta where the Savannah River reached the 35.5 stage, the highest there since the flood of the spring of 1898 when it reached the 38-foot mark and caused the loss of fourteen lives and $1,500,000 property damage. A great portion of Augusta is under water and boats are being used to rescue persons from the upper stories of their houses.

The Ocmulgee in Macon reached a twenty-four-foot stage this morning, the highest since 1837, and low-lying parts of the city are under water.

The Alabama River reached the flood stage at Montgomery today, and is rising.

The lowlands are generally inundated. At West Point, Ga., the Chattahoochee overflowed its banks and submerged the banks of the Atlanta and West Point railroad, interfering with traffic and making it necessary to detour trains between Atlanta and Montgomery.

Eighteen lives are known to have been lost as a result of the floods and the windstorm and the list will probably be increased when full reports are received. The railroads have been practically put out of business in the two Carolinas, where many bridges and trestles have been washed away. The most serious situation is in Augusta. The Savannah River, creeping higher and higher under the heavy rains, rose through the mill canals and sewers, flooded the lower districts and entered Broad street and the uptown district. Already it has reached the Planters' Hotel.

The trolley line from Augusta to Aiken, S. C., which had been offering transportation to safe ground, has been put out of commission by the high waters.

Filtered Water Isn't Pure

Drink PURITAS, and Be on the Safe Side.

Many people are deluded into believing that if they thoroughly filter their drinking water they thereby purify it, and free it from germs and vegetable matter.

But did you ever look inside your filter after you have used it a little while? Just try it—you'll find it full of discolored particles—vegetable and mineral substances, dirt, alkali; all sorts of disagreeable and unpleasant things. And every drop of water you drink runs through this collection!

Now consider the way in which PURITAS is put up. First the water is drawn from deep, pure wells; then it's thoroughly distilled; finally it's aerated, to restore to it the "life" and sparkle which you've missed if you've ever drunk boiled water.

And then we bottle PURITAS in big, clean glass demijohns, carefully seal each cork, after covering it with foil to prevent absorption, and deliver the whole to you—a five-gallon demijohn, for only forty cents!

Of course, if you live beyond the old city boundary lines the cost is just a trifle more, because of the longer haul. And if you're out of town, you probably can secure PURITAS through one of the many dealers in Southern California. But if you can't, a telephone or written message will bring a prompt supply to you.

There is not a shadow of doubt about it—Distilling water is the only method that absolutely and scientifically removes every impurity of every sort; that renders alkaline water soft and palatable. And aerating water is the only method that restores its sparkle and pleasant taste.

So it follows that PURITAS Distilled Water is THE drinking water that should be in the homes and offices of every Southern Californian. Have it in yours—at once, and be safe.

INDECISIVE BATTLE.

GEN. VILLA CAPTURED.

A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.

PASO (Tex.) March 16.—Word has been received here tonight that General Villa, the Federal leader in the district of Mexico, has been captured by rebels and ordered shot. That a severe battle was fought at Gomez Palacio a week ago and that two hundred foreigners in the district are said to be fleeing from the country. The details of the battle was brought to Juarez by refugee Americans, the vanguard of the French, German and other foreigners who are fleeing from Mexico.

Eight Federal volunteers and two rebels were killed in the fighting, it is reported. The engagement was

BOMB MEANT FOR JUDGE MANGLES OFFICER'S HAND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

Judge Otto A. Rosalsky,

Who received an infernal machine through the mail at his New York home yesterday. The package was turned over to the police, and the inspector who opened it received a seriously injured hand from the explosion that followed. Judge Rosalsky presided at the trial several years ago of Brandt, Millionaire Schiff's former valet.

NEW YORK, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A package containing a bomb was delivered by mail at the home of Judge Otto Rosalsky in the Hendrick Hudson apartment-house at Broadway, Riverside Drive and One Hundred and Twenty-first street at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. Judge Rosalsky partly opened the package and, discovering its contents, notified police headquarters.

Arthur Egan, inspector of the bureau of combustibles, who has had twenty years' experience in the bureau, took up the process of opening where Judge Rosalsky had left off. The bomb exploded, badly mangling Egan's hands and spattering his face with small wounds. The library of the apartment in which the bomb was opened was wrecked.

The bomb was of the iron-pipe sort, with a shoulder in the pipe—much the same sort as that which killed Grace Walker on February 3. When Judge Rosalsky was asked if he thought it had any connection directly or indirectly with the Brandt case he declined to say anything.

A New Stomach

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Restore Lifeless Organs to Normal Condition.

A trial Package Free.

Many a sufferer from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and kindred ailments of the digestive organs carries around an absolutely useless stomach—a dead load, and a cesspool for ever-increasing disorders. The muscles are seemingly worn out, the mucous lining has lost its secretive power, and food taken into the stomach lies there and ferments, causing sour eructations, belchings, heartburn, dizziness and other distressing conditions. Many sufferers have given up in despair until they have been induced by some interested friend to try a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the dyspeptic's hope. They are a natural restorative of healthy action to the stomach and small intestines, because they supply the elements that the weak stomach lacks—pepsin, golden seal and other digestives.

If you are afflicted with any of the symptoms above described, be assured that your digestive organs are losing power,—they need help, and there is no more sensible help to be given them than to supply elements which will do the work of digestion for them.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been found by test to have digestive powers, one grain of the active principle of these tablets being sufficient to digest 3000 grains of ordinary food. It is plain that no matter what the condition of your stomach, or how far your disease has progressed, one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken at meal time will do the work—give your stomach an opportunity to regain its lost powers, the muscles will be strengthened, the glands invigorated, and you will be a new man.

It costs nothing to prove the effectiveness of this cure. Send for a free sample package today. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Alarm.

AMERICANS STILL SAFE IN THE CITY OF TAMPICO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, (Mex.) March 16. Alarming reports occasioned by reports circulated by the United States Consul in Tampico to the Embassy here of threats that an attack on Americans was planned for this night appeared tonight to be unfounded. Reports received tonight to the effect that no disorder had occurred, and none was expected.

Though no American citizens were molested by Mexicans who terrorized the city last night, great apprehension was felt there, according to a consular report today.

The American Embassy has instructed Consul Miller to take every precaution, arming for protection if necessary, and to make representations to the Mexican authorities there, who will be held responsible for any loss of life, or destruction of the property of Americans.

Felipe Angeles and Burgos, in the state of Tamaulipas, have pronounced against the government.

Reports sent yesterday to Vera Cruz, formerly provisional capital of Mexico, over the signatures of fifteen members of the Chamber of Constitutional party, urging Madero to return to Mexico, is denied in the Nueva Era, a Madero organ. The newspaper says: "The contents of the message do not contain observations to be heeded. What Madero does is La Barra. What La Barra is to go on record before the country as having attempted to prevent the aggravation of the ills which afflict the country."

It is confirmed that all Senor Madero can contribute is to augment the state of the country by the dangers of his partisans, whose ambitions of militant leadership and to strengthen the pretense that Madero is still administering the affairs of the country and that Senor Madero is the only fit one."

Despite many charges as to the duplicity of De la Barra, and a belief that if he is a patriot he has failed to complicate the situation.

THE DECISIVE BATTLE.

TORREON CAPTURED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, (Mex.) March 16.—Word was received here tonight that Gen. Pascual Orozco, the Federal leader in the north, had been defeated by rebels and ordered to Mexico City. A severe battle was fought at Palacio a week ago. Several hundred foreigners in Torreon are said to be fleeing from the country.

Reinforcements are being brought in from Americas, the vanguard of which, German and Spanish, are fleeing from Torreon.

Federal volunteers and troops are rushed to the fighting, but the engagement was not decisive. Torreon and Gomez Palacio, a large railroad station, are connected by street car. Rebels hold the latter place and Federals the former.

Pablo Lavine, a Federal officer, it is said, was discovered to have been taking rifles and ammunition from Torreon to Gomez Palacio. He is alleged to have secured many of these supplies from a German storekeeper of Torreon named Bruchanau, who with his clerks, was arrested.

It was determined to attack Gomez Palacio at once. A force of 2000 Federal volunteers was assembled for the purpose. The Federal regulars, numbering 1800 men, declared that they were loyal to Madero, but that they would not leave the city lest looting begin.

The volunteer army was met on the outskirts of Gomez Palacio and thousands of shots were fired. The volunteers then retreated back to Torreon.

The report of the capture of Gen. Pancho Villa came in a telegram from Gen. Orozco to Col. Ponce in Juarez. The telegram repeated a report which Orozco had received from Gen. Salazar from the front that Salazar, a semi-independent leader, defeated a portion of Villa's small force on Thursday and added that today he had overtaken and captured Villa and twenty-nine of his men, with 29,000 pesos.

Villa is said to have offered to join the Liberal movement, in reply to which Orozco, according to his telegram, ordered him shot. Orozco and Villa are personal enemies.

A private dispatch from Hermosillo, where there has been a small Federal garrison, states that the soldiers revolted and declared themselves at the command of Orozco.

SUCCEEDS ROJAS.

FATHER OF OROZCO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHIHUAHUA (Mex.) March 16.—Col. Pascual Orozco, father of the commanding general, will take the place of Gen. Antonio Rojas as commandant in Ciudad Juarez. Rojas will come to Chihuahua and from here go to the front. Col. Orozco and his nephew, Col. Jose Orozco, left today for the frontier town on a train bearing a detachment of rurales.

Five hundred rifles and 30,000 cartridges were added to the local arsenal as the result of the edict of Gen. Orozco that all ammunition and guns must be delivered at the headquarters within three days.

SEES ANARCHY IN MEXICO.

REFUGEES ARRIVE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—One hundred and thirty refugees from Mexico, all Americans, arrived today on the steamship Morro Castle. Two-thirds were women and children, who left Vera Cruz on twenty-four hours' notice.

"American men and women are swarming into Vera Cruz," Hundreds implored the ship's officers to take them on board the Morro Castle, but, of course, only a limited number could be booked.

"Anarchy practically rules all over Mexico," said George A. Beater, one of the party.

"Engineers, business men and miners with their families are awaiting the first opportunity to get out of the country."

A PEACE PARADE.

HURRAHS FOR MADERO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAREDO (Tex.) March 16.—Two thousand supporters of the "peace commission" movement in Mexico participated in a parade through the streets of Nuevo Laredo, across the Rio Grande from this place, today. Along the line of the march the name of Madero was greeted with almost continuous "Vivas." The demonstration grew out of the peace meeting in Nuevo Laredo under the auspices of a "peace commission" now traveling in Nuevo Leon. The commission hopes to create sentiment against further revolutionary agitation among the masses of the Mexican people particularly among members of labor unions. The "commission" is similar to others now at work in other portions of the republic. Its members are union-labor leaders.

ANONYMOUS LETTERS.

WARNINGS TO LEAVE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—American Consul Miller at Tampico, Mex., informed the State Department today that he had received an anonymous letter warning all Americans to leave that vicinity before 4 o'clock this morning. The authorities promised proper precautions would be taken. A battle is expected at Torreon, where Federal troops have been concentrating. Withdrawal of the government troops from various localities for the Torreon movement is reported to be responsible for the scattered disorders in various parts of the country.

HOME RULE BILL AFTER EASTER.

Details of the Measure a Secret of Ministers.

Greatest Worry Is Financial Arrangements.

Unionists Fighting the Government on This Score.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, March 8.—The Irish Home Rule Bill is not to be introduced in the House of Commons before Easter.

Thus far the members of the ministry have kept the secret as to the details of the bill entirely to themselves, unless, perhaps the Nationalist leaders have been given a hint as to how far the government is prepared to go. Mr. Churchill delivered a long speech in Belfast without letting very much out and he has been followed by Mr. Birrell, the Irish secretary, who has said even less. He, however, did tell the country that the bill was to be introduced by Mr. Asquith, the Premier, in this respect following the example of William Ewart Gladstone, who personally introduced both his home rule bills, and that "this was proper, as the bill was no departmental measure, but an important and an authoritative act of the whole Liberal party."

THE FIRST CLAUSE.

The preamble or first clause will set forth that the bill sets up on Irish soil an Irish Parliament, a House of Commons and a Senate, with legislative authority over the whole range of purely Irish domestic affairs. This was hardly news. What the people have been asking is what safeguards have been inserted to protect the Protestant minority in Ulster, and more particularly what are to be the financial arrangements. The ministers have assured the Ulsterites that the safeguards against religious intolerance will be sufficient without having as yet stopped the agitation against the bill in Belfast and the surrounding country. However, this will not be the government's greatest difficulty, for the non-conformists in England are not giving their fellow religionists in Ireland the same support that they did in previous home rule campaigns.

FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS.

What will trouble the ministers are the financial arrangements. Nationalist members speaking in Ireland lately, have been demanding full fiscal autonomy, a demand that the government can hardly grant a refusal of which might cause the bill to be rejected by the Dublin convention, as was the Irish Councils bill. The government might grant the control of excise or inland revenue, but to hand over the control of the customs would be to court the opposition of some of their own English and Scotch free trade supporters. It has been suggested that a way might be found out of the difficulty by introducing a provision that complete free trade should be continued between the two countries and by giving the Irish Parliament the power of varying the rates of customs duties on foreign imports, while withholding the power to vary the articles on which duty is now levied. If the demands of Ireland as to financial arrangements are not satisfactory, Mr. Redmond might prefer to oppose the bill before submitting it to the convention.

THE PROTESTANT ISSUE.

Besides the alleged unfairness of placing Protestant Ulster under a government which, by the nature of things, would be largely made up of Roman Catholics, the Unionists are fighting the government on the finances. They point out that the trade of Ireland has increased enormously in recent years and that now England gets a very appreciable portion of her food supplies from the sister isle. So long as Ireland remains in the Union no enemy could stop that supply, on which England's very life might depend—no enemy, that is, except an unfriendly government in Dublin, which could stop the export of food to England when she needed it most. Ulster too, they say, should have something to say about the disposal of the customs collections, for, while she pays something over $10,000,000 annually in customs, the rest of Ireland contributes under $5,000,000.

It is estimated that the expenses of government in Ireland are about $53,500,000 and the income from the island $41,000,000. The balance has come out of the pockets of the other members of the Union and the government in its bill proposes that Ireland should be granted a subsidy for fifteen years to cover the deficiency. Then there are the old age pensions, paid by the Imperial Exchequer and the billion dollars invested in land purchase and other matters of finance, every one of which offers a difficulty to the framers of a home rule bill. To satisfy all, of course, is impossible, and even to satisfy a sufficient number of members of the House of Commons to make home rule possible this year, Unionists say, is out of the question. Therefore they are looking for a general election in the summer.

THE CAMPAIGN.

Both sides are campaigning in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, but still Ulster remains by far the most interested. Excitement has cooled down since Mr. Churchill's visit to Belfast; but the Unionists have no intention of allowing this, the greatest asset in their campaign—the intention of Ulster to fight—to lose its force. To keep up the fighting spirit, therefore, Mr. Bonar Law, the Unionist leader, is to visit Belfast on Easter Tuesday and address a great open-air gathering, as did the First Lord of the Admiralty. He is to be supported by the Duke of Abercorn, Sir Edward Carson and others. Preceding the meeting there is to be a great demonstration of Unionists and a parade through the city. Should the parade pass through the Nationalist section troops may be needed, as they were during Mr. Churchill's visit. It is expected that there will be in the parade 100,000 members of the Ulster Unionist Council, Loyal Orange lodges and Unionist clubs of Ireland.

Should the bill be accepted by the Nationalist convention, or even if rejected be proceeded with, the debate in the Commons will rank as one of the great parliamentary duels with Mr. Balfour out of the house, as he has been since the opening. Mr. Asquith has been the master of debate. Mr. Balfour, however, is coming back for the Home Rule bill and will take a prominent part in the earlier discussions. The two great speeches will thus be delivered by the old opponents and the harder subsequent fighting left to Mr. Churchill, Mr. Lloyd George and other ministers on one side and Mr. Bonar Law, the Unionist leader, Sir Edward Carson and other frontbench Unionists on the other side.

OBJECTS TO NEW SYSTEM.

German Secretary of the Treasury Resigns His Position Because of Financial Departure.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 16.—Adolph Wermuth, Imperial Secretary of the Treasury, resigned his office today. Under Secretary of the Imperial Treasury Kuehn was appointed to succeed him.

Herr Wermuth resigned because he was dissatisfied with the system of finance adopted to cover the increase in expenditure on army and navy, according to the Lokal Anzeiger.

Herr Wermuth, who abolished the old borrowing policy under which loans to cover deficits were a customary feature of German budgets, insisted on the principle that no new expenditures should be incurred without full arrangements being made for covering them. The abolition of the "love gifts," which are an exemption from taxation of a specified amount of the production of distilleries, is expected to yield less than $12,500,000, or about one-third of the estimated ultimate of the military reforms, probably stopping, according to Herr Wermuth, the redemption of the national debt.

The German Distillers' organization has cancelled all price lists and called a meeting for March 19 to arrange an advance in prices in view of the proposed legislation abolishing the exemption of excise duty which hitherto have been in force.

Possible Release.

ACTRESS WIFE IS CRITICALLY ILL.

KATHERINE CLEMMONS GOULD IN ALARMING STATE.

Friends of Howard Gould Speculate Upon His Chances to Marry Object of His Present Attachment, Which He Cannot Do During Life of First Choice

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Katherine Clemmons Gould, actress wife of Howard Gould, is reported dangerously ill in Spain.

Her death, if it occurs, would leave Mr. Gould free to marry the former Boston girl, Miss Katheryn Hutchinson, who won some reputation as an actress in America.

Rumor has coupled the names of the pair for several years. They have been seen together constantly, but were always accompanied by a chaperon. Last year they took a place in Scotland, where the chaperon was greatly in evidence and also after they came to Paris. They lived at No. 26 Rue de Lubeck, each having separate apartments, Miss Hutchinson living with the omnipresent chaperon, who conserved the conventionalities.

They rarely, if ever, frequented the restaurants, but otherwise seemed to make no secret of their attachment, Gould declaring to his many friends his intention to marry her at the earliest possible moment.

The only time that their discretion was brought into the limelight was when they were leaving New York for Europe. They did not leave on the same steamer, but Miss Hutchinson and her chaperon sailed the same day as Mr. Gould, but on another line.

Mr. Gould and Miss Hutchinson, with her chaperon, left Paris several weeks ago with the intention of going to Cuba, and are expected back to occupy their apartments in May.

Miss Hutchinson is a stunning beauty. She is a tall, queenly blonde and is conspicuous wherever she goes for her beauty and grace. It is said that Mr. Gould has tried to reconcile his wife to a divorce by offers of large settlements, but money will not appease the bitterness of the wife toward the husband, and she holds with determination to her purpose not to give him his liberty.

Pertinacity.

FIFTY YEARS OF STRIKES IN ENGLISH COAL FIELDS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The following list gives the dates of the principal disputes in the British coalfields during the last fifty years, the districts in which they occurred, the approximate number of men idle, and the length of the dispute, and may serve as a basis to calculate the duration of the present strike:

1864 — South Yorkshire, 37,000, four months.

1864—South Staffs, 20,000, four months.

(Both these disputes were on the question of trade unionism. Widespread suffering and poverty was produced.)

1871-2—Throughout England and South Wales there was a series of long and bitter disputes for improved conditions and the recognition of trade unions. The new leaders—Mr. Abraham, M.P. ("Mabon,") and others—began to come into prominence.

1873—South Wales, 60,000, eleven weeks. (Strikes for improved conditions. Turbulent scenes. Unions disorganized.)

1875—South Wales, 70,000, nineteen weeks. (Renewed struggle by reorganized unions for improved conditions, resulting in establishment of the sliding scale system.)

1877—West Lancashire, 30,000, six weeks.

1877 — Northumberland, 14,000, eight weeks.

1878—Durham, 70,000, six weeks.

(The last two disputes led to the adoption of the sliding scale system in Northumberland and Durham.)

1880-81—Lancashire, 50,000-60,000, seven weeks. (After these disputes the sliding scale worked well for a time, until the heavy fall in prices in the nineties led to the breakdown of the sliding scale system and determined opposition by the miners to a reduction in wages.)

1891-2—Durham, 75,000, eleven weeks. (Against a reduction of 15 per cent. in wages. Aggregate time lost, 1,500,000 days.)

1893—South Wales, 90,000, three-four weeks. (Against a reduction of 42½ per cent. Aggregate time lost, 1,500,000 days.)

1893—Federated Districts, 300,000, thirteen weeks. (The great Midland lock-out over the proposed 25 per cent. reduction by owners. Owing to the intervention of Lord Roseberry the present Conciliation Board was formed. Aggregate time lost, 21,137,000 days.)

1894—Scotland, 70,000, fifteen-sixteen weeks.

1898—South Wales and Monmouthshire, 100,000, twenty-five weeks. (Against the sliding scale. This dispute led to the formation of the South Wales Conciliation Board.)

1902—In the Federated Districts there was a strike of pit lads for higher wages.

1906—In South Wales there was a campaign against non-union labor. The strike lasted a fortnight, and there were disturbances in which a number of women took part.

1910-11—South Wales experienced a disastrous dispute in the Cambrian collieries over abnormal places. The strike lasted about ten months, and there was rioting at Tonypandy and elsewhere. The dispute only ended when the Miners' Federation entered on the movement which has led up to the present crisis.

Obliging Hotel Clerk Helps in the Identification.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When G. M. Schempf, a rich old sheep raiser of Heppner, came to town Wednesday he wore an elusive gosh-think-what's-goin'-to-happen smile. He registered at the Perkins Hotel as in a dream. But he didn't tell anyone his business in the city.

Then on Thursday there came to the Perkins Mrs. Violet Irwin and her small son. She, too, carried that smile, or one like it, and as she registered from Los Angeles she asked for Mr. Schempf.

The obliging clerk told her to wait a few minutes—Mr. Schempf was out. So the woman sat down in the lobby. The clerk forgot all about the woman till he happened to glance over the chair warmers in the lobby. Then he saw Mr. Schempf sitting beside Mrs. Violet Irwin, neither saying a word. The clerk called the woman over to the counter.

"Mr. Schempf," he said, "is yonder—the gentleman with whom you have been sitting."

The woman gasped, then went over to the sheep man and told him she was Violet. Schempf stuck up a hand and they became acquainted. An hour later the grower of spring lambs announced to the clerk that soon Violet, whom he had found through the matrimonial "ad" columns, was going to be his'n. Then they went to the Courthouse, obtained their license and were made one. Later they departed for Heppner.

THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Elaborate plans have been made for the funeral services for the Maine's dead here, next Saturday. President Taft, members of his Cabinet, and other government officials will attend the open-air services at the south front of the State, War and Navy Department buildings. Business in the Capitol will be suspended. Leaving the Maine at her last resting place at the bottom of the sea today, the cruisers North Carolina and Birmingham headed direct for Hampton Roads, Va. Arriving there, the caskets containing the recovered remains of sixty-five of the warship's crew will be transferred to the Birmingham and brought to the Washington navy yard. The Birmingham is due here Friday. Saturday the caskets will be placed on flag-decked artillery caissons and escorted to the scene of the funeral services by bluejackets, marines and soldiers. After the services the funeral procession will reform for the march to Arlington National Cemetery, where many of the Maine's victims are already buried.

CANNONS SALUTE MAINE.

R., and a fleet of tugs and chartered vessels.

Passing out of the harbor no salutes were fired, the flotilla headed by the Maine proceeding in silence with flags at half-mast. The course was almost due north, so as to keep the wreck head-on to the heavy sea and thus avoid the danger of falling into the trough.

At 4:35 o'clock a three-whistle blast from the North Carolina followed by one gun, announced that the three-mile limit had been crossed. Half an hour was given laggards of the fleet to arrive. Then the United States cruisers took up a position to the eastward of the wreck; the Cuban warships moved to the westward, and the accompanying vessels were grouped to the north and south.

Meanwhile the wrecking crew went aboard the hulk and made ready to carry out the arrangements for the sinking, which consisted of opening numerous valves in the bottom, operated from the deck, the large sluiceways in the bulkhead and all the doors in the two permanent bulkheads remaining in the ship.

Precisely at 5 o'clock another whistle sounded from the North Carolina and another gun was fired. The crew threw open the valves, and with Capt. O'Brien jumped aboard a tug alongside, which steamed a little distance away. Then all eyes in the great fleet were fixed on the wreck, the crews of the warships lining the rails.

For ten minutes no change was visible in the battered hulk, which pitched heavily as the rollers struck her. Then she was seen to be sinking at the bulkhead, and soon the waves began to wash over the deck. The stern was seen to rise, and in a few seconds the hulk was almost vertical, showing first the propellers and then the full keel. The next moment there was a flash of blue and white as the ensign flying at the mast struck the waves and disappeared. Simultaneously the decks were blown up by the air pressure and the Maine plunged down, leaving flowers on the surface of the sea.

Whistle blasts from the whole fleet was the only salute.

Ten minutes later the Cuban flagship Haturi fired a farewell national salute to the squadron, to which both cruisers replied, then shaped their course for Norfolk.

Precisely twenty minutes elapsed from the opening of the valves until the vessel disappeared. This was exactly as planned. The depth where the Maine plunged is estimated to be not less than 600 fathoms and on account of this and the velocity of the Gulf Stream, it is believed that she did not reach the bottom until carried many miles to the north and eastward.

FLAGS AT HALF-MAST.

OBSERVANCE IN NEW YORK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—Flags were half-masted on public and many private buildings today, in commemoration of the burial of the battleship Maine at sea, which was scheduled to be towed to sea from Havana Harbor today and sunk in a final resting place. Bells on Trinity Church and its nine chapels were to be tolled, and the St. Patrick's Day parade of 30,000 halted and stood to attention for five minutes with colors trailing, at the time set for the burial of the Main.

CORPS PASSES MUSTER.

California Coast Artillery Makes Creditable Showing at Inspection by Regular Army Officer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All the companies of the Coast Artillery corps, N.G.C., have passed the annual muster and inspection successfully, and the corps made a splendid showing, averaging 85 per cent.—10 per cent. above the minimum required by the War Department. The entire corps proved to be completely equipped for field service, and has a greater strength per company than the best infantry organization in the State.

The Seventh company has received especial praise and merits for the condition of its property, which is a credit to its new commander, Lieut. W. O. Jones. The appearance and drilling of the companies proved very good, and the showing made it hard for the muster officers to decide which of the companies was the best. The inspection was conducted by Col. George A. Schastey for the State, and Capt. H. R. Casey, appointed by the War Department.

Former Adjt.-Gen. J. B. Lauck and Col W. A. Bradbury were visitors at many of the inspections, and Maj. N. A. Chase of the Coast Artillery corps also attended.

The corps is getting ready to go into camp at the Presidio for the summer exercises of the Coast Artillery, which are to be held from June 1 to 15.

NATIONAL CHAIRMANSHIP.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The chairmanship of the Republican National Committee, made vacant today by the death of John Fremont Hill, will be filled to the time of the national convention by Vice-Chairman Victor Rosewater, editor and proprietor of the Omaha Bee. Announcement of Mr. Rosewater's appointment was made tonight by William Hayward, secretary.

TEXTILE STRIKERS AND POLICE IN HOT BATTLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BARRE (Mass.) March 16.—Several shots were exchanged today between strikers and officers at the Barre Wool Combing plant. Half a dozen officers were slightly injured and five men, all Italians, were arrested.

The clash followed the removal of freight cars from the plant.

One man managed to escape from the officers after he had been severly clubbed. The management of the mill had planned to ship cars loaded with goods, and although the strike committee last night agreed not to interfere, when the switching engine puffed into the mill yard, a crowd of strikers and townspeople had gathered awaiting developments and sixty officers were on guard near the mill.

Without interference the train moved up the track but suddenly about 200 strikers surrounded and attacked half a dozen officers.

Reinforcements were sent, but meanwhile persons concealed behind a building, opened fire on the officers who returned it. A bullet grazed the face of an officer, another scarred a policeman's back, and a third passed through an officer's helmet. Another policeman, had his head split open by a club and others were hurt by stones.

The riot quickly was quelled and the streets cleared.

Peg-legged Rivals.

SHOOTS HIS RIVAL THEN KILLS SELF.

FOLLOWING a bitter quarrel regarding the affections of the woman he loved, Fred W. Emery, a cook employed at the New Turner hotel, attempted to kill his rival, F. H. Meadors, a trainman employed by the Salt Lake road, and subsequently committed suicide by firing a bullet into his brain at the home of Mrs. M. Carlisle, No. 2306 Wall street, last night.

The tragedy was the outcome of jealousy on the part of Emery, who had been in the habit of calling at the Carlisle apartments at frequent intervals and upon several occasions he is known to have expressed the determination of killing himself in the event that his suit for the woman's heart was rejected.

About 9 o'clock last night Emery went to the Carlisle home and was denied admission, which seemed to arouse his ire, as a moment later he broke in the glass door and flourished a revolver in his right hand. Meadors was conversing with Mrs. Carlisle at the time his rival called, and despite the fact that he possessed only one leg, he tried to prevent Emery from entering the apartment by using his crutch as a weapon of defense.

Emery himself was crippled in one leg and was unable to reach the woman's caller with his fist and during the altercation that ensued Emery is said to have fired two shots at Meadors, both of which took effect in the latter's arms.

Believing that his life was in jeopardy, Meadors sprang to the second-story window and jumped to the ground where he was picked up in an unconscious condition by the police of the University Station a few minutes later. Meanwhile the enraged lover uttered a number of threats against the apparent cause of his disturbed state of mind and upon receiving little satisfaction suddenly announced that he would end it all by killing himself.

Turning the muzzle of the revolver towards his own face Emery sent a bullet crashing through the top of his mouth and fell dead in his track. Both men were subsequently removed to the Receiving Hospital where Emery officially was pronounced beyond the aid of human skill.

His rival was found to have been shot in the right arm, near the shoulder, and again in the left arm below the elbow. Neither of these wounds are likely to prove serious, the doctors assert, unless complications arise.

Emery lived at No. 339 West First street, and Mrs. Anna Hill, the former landlady, told the police that he frequently had threatened to kill his sweetheart and himself unless she consented to marry him.

Mrs. Carlisle is said to be a wealthy widow and is the owner of the apartment-house, where the tragedy occurred. She was prostrated by the events of the night, and could give no connected story of what actually happened.

The body of Emery was sent to the Bresee undertaking rooms to await the action of the Coroner. He is believed to have a mother living in San Francisco.

Inflammable.

SPRING STREET FIRE DESTROYS PROPERTY.

PROPERTY valued at more than $15,000 was destroyed late last night by a fire which started in the rear of the Philadelphia Shoe company's store, No. 624 South Spring street, which was occupied as a storeroom by Theodore Neilson, a paint and wall paper dealer doing business at No. 611 South Spring street.

The flames first were seen ascending from a shelf containing a large quantity of paints and other inflammable materials. As dense clouds of smoke began to seep out of the place two alarms were turned in to insure efficient apparatus to smother the fire before it obtained too great a headway.

In addition to the loss of property belonging to Neilson, the Philadelphia Shoe Company sustained considerable loss on stock. The Excelsior autocycle store at No. 628 and Joseph Miller's hat factory at No. 626 were damaged considerably by smoke and water, as well as the Tire Service Company at No. 620, but as the flames failed to reach any of these places the firemen believe that the loss will be nominal.

During the progress of the fire about fifty tenants in the Whittier apartments on the second floor at No. 618½ became frightened at the dense volume of smoke and, despite assurances of safety, all left their rooms and made their way to the street. Later they were permitted to return, when it was found that the place had suffered no damage except by smoke.

Although an investigation was made by the police, the origin of the blaze could not be ascertained last night, but it is thought to have been caused by spontaneous combustion.

Fifth Victim.

JUROR DIES OF WOUNDS INFLICTED BY OUTLAWS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HILLSVILLE (Va.) March 16.—With Juror Augustus Fowler added to the roll of dead, bringing the total to five, little or no progress had been made tonight looking to the capture of the Allens and their partisans, who escaped to the mountains after their murderous attack on the officials of the Carroll county court.

Reports from the mountains last night that Sidna Allen had been captured and his wife had been killed proved erroneous. Detectives who went to the Allen home found it deserted.

Floyd Allen, left wounded after the courthouse fight, and Victor Allen and Ed Marion, charged with murder in the first degree, were spirited out of town this afternoon and are now on their way to Pulaski. They may be taken to Roanoke. Ten detectives guard them.

Now that the men are out of the way the detectives will give themselves over to the hunt of the missing members of the clan. Cabell Strickland, held as a witness, and John F. Allen, charged with aiding the Allens to escape, remain in jail here.

It was reported today was that the Allens and perhaps twenty of their clansmen had been located at Devil's Den, in one of the wildest regions of the Blue Ridge Mountains, near the Virginia-North Carolina line.

Confidence in processes of the law has replaced the panicky demoralization following the tragedy. The grand jury summoned by Judge Walter R. Staples met today and quickly returned indictments against Floyd Allen, Victor Allen and Claude Swanson Allen, his sons (Sidna and Friel Allen,) Wesley Edwards and Sidney Edwards (nephews of Floyd Allen,) and Byrd Marion, all charging murder. John F. Moore was indicted for felony, the charge being that he assisted the Allens to escape.

After the grand jury reported Judge Staples adjourned court until March 26.

The grand jurors, seven in number, were charged solemnly by the judge and were adjured to cast out of their hearts all fear except the fear of God. He declared the murders which had called the jury together were the most humiliating and distressing that ever had stained the good name of the Commonwealth and darkened the history of the United States people. He assured the jurors that in their deliberations and in their findings they would have back of them the entire resources of the State.

FILTH AND TYPHOID FEVER.

Surgeon General's Startling Comments on Unwholesome Conditions in America.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The equivalent of a city having 35,000 inhabitants perishes annually in this country from typhoid fever alone. Every seventh person ill of the fever dies. The disease has reached such prevalency that the cases now number 500,000 a year.

Hardly any community in the United States is free from the typhoid fever germ, a rod-shaped and sexless vegetable organism that multiplies itself in geometrical progression by splitting in two when fully developed, and continuing the process in milk, water, and the bodies of human beings. The bacilli are so small that millions of them can swim around in a single drop of fluid.

The cost of the disease in life destroyed is shameful, for the reason that it is unnecessary. Man is often as greedy and stupid as are the house flies of summer, which go tumbling into pots of sweetened vinegar and onto paper covered with varnish and sugar, utterly heedless of the drowned or wriggling forms of their friends, relatives, and ancestors. In money, the cost of typhoid fever is $350,000,000 yearly, counting time lost from productive labor, medicines, and the fees of nurses and physicians.

This tax, for it is a tax, on life—mostly young life—property, and earning capacity will go on indefinitely, and increase, probably, unless the American people wake up. Cholera and smallpox are more feared than typhoid fever because they come in theatrical bursts, though generally localized. Typhoid fever, ceaselessly at work almost everywhere in this country occasionally explosive, it is true, and then terrorizing villages and small cities, is so undramatic and commonplace that it is now accepted, it would seem, as one of the expected ills of mankind. Yet, next to tuberculosis, and perhaps pneumonia it is the most deadly malady of the present generation.

EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF.

Collective protection, unless worked out with much skill and labor through a long course of time, is impracticable. Each person, therefore, must look out for himself if he wants to escape one of the very worst diseases actively, but unsensationally epidemic for many years. Protection, proved beyond any doubt whatever, is to be obtained by vaccination. Wonderful tests have been made in the United States army showing that individual immunization is not alone possible, but that it is easy and cheap, considering the discomfort it causes and the cost in medical fees. The military surgeons are just beginning to give the world the results of their astonishing experiments—greater experiments, by the way, than were ever attempted previously either here or in Europe.

WONDERFUL RESULTS AT SAN ANTONIO.

Last year 12,801 officers and men—part of the so-called maneuver division, but which, as a matter of fact, was sent into the Southwest to watch Mexico—were in camp four months at San Antonio. They used and drank artesian water. San Antonio and Jacksonville are in the same latitude. There was but one case of typhoid fever among nearly 13,000 soldiers comprising the division. Every officer and man had been vaccinated, however, either before going to San Antonio or immediately he arrived there.

The deaths at Jacksonville in 1898, from other causes than typhoid fever, were 281. In all, including the mortality from typhoid fever, 529 men lost their lives. There were no deaths from typhoid fever at San Antonio, and only a total of eleven deaths from other maladies. Such contrasting and astonishing instances show two things: "That we have learned how to make camp," as Gen. Torney remarked to me, and the sure immunity that follows anti-typhoid vaccination.

"Now, it must be remembered," Gen. Torney declared, "that the men at San Antonio were not quarantined against typhoid fever, but that they daily went from camp into town where the disease was then prevalent."

After Maj. Russell had been detailed to study the subject of vaccination, Gen. Torney met the surgeon-general of the British army. "He told me," Gen. Torney said, "of a regiment in one of the cantonments of India where an early and decisive test of vaccination was made. Out of 680 men 490 voluntarily submitted to inoculation. The members of the regiment lived in the same barracks and under the same dietary conditions. Of the 490 men who were vaccinated, eighteen had typhoid fever and two died. Of the 190 men who refused to be vaccinated, ninety contracted typhoid fever and eighteen died. The test in India was the most conclusive on record up to the time that our maneuver division was ordered to Texas.

HOW CAMP WAS PROTECTED.

"Vaccination with us, however, was compulsory. While I believe that inoculation prevented the introduction of typhoid fever into our camp at San Antonio, still military sanitation has made extraordinary progress the past thirteen years. During the Spanish War the wastes of camps were, measured by present standards, disposed of unscientifically. Many horses are always present with soldiers. There were 6000 at San Antonio. Flies breed in stable manure. There were millions of flies swarming about the camps in 1898. Dr. William Osler, who is noted for picturesque expressions, says that typhoid fever is spread by 'flies, food, and fingers.' The human waste at Jacksonville and elsewhere had lime thrown over it every day or two. Officers while at table often saw flies with lime on their legs walking over bread and other food. The lime could have only come from the latrine pits. I am talking plainly, but the American people, the householder, equally with the soldier, needs to know a few elementary facts in disease prevention.

"The camp in Texas last summer was made fly-proof. Garbage was destroyed in crematories, mere holes in the earth lined with cobblestones. Stable manure was burned regularly and the ground on which the horses stood was gone over weekly with burning hay and crude petroleum. Moreover, the kitchens and mess tents were screened. The latrine pits were closed against flies and daily purified by fire. Men coming into camp from northern posts were segregated for two weeks. If they were perfectly well at the end of that period they were sent where they belonged. Our main fight, of course, was against typhoid fever, but incidentally we attacked all other diseases until, as Maj. Kent Nelson, who superintended 3500 cases of vaccination, says, 'the health record of the encampment has probably never been equaled.'

"What we did for 12,801 men can be done, let us say, by every farmer in the land for himself, his family and his neighbors. I bring in the farmer because typhoid fever is a rural disease. From the farm it is carried to the city. Battle as we may in large places, there is constant danger of the infection slipping in from peaceful-looking valleys and from beautifully wooded hillsides. The germ is almost always a visitor from the country, and the sooner the people realize and act on that fundamental fact the better it will be for everybody.

SOLDIERS EXPOSED TO DISEASE.

"While the sanitary precautions taken at San Antonio were complete, it must be recollected that it was impossible to prevent communication between the town and the camp. Soldiers came and went. While in San Antonio they were, so long as they remained, inhabitants of the place, eating the same food and drinking the same water as the residents. Besides, peddlers came to the edge of the reservation with all kinds of raw and cooked eatables. The contact, therefore, between the soldiers and the populace was continuous and unpreventable. In the meanwhile, there were forty-nine cases of typhoid fever in San Antonio, of which nineteen were fatal.

"Also, there was a camp at Galveston. The sanitary and preventive measures there were the same as at San Antonio. The men mixed freely with the people. But there was not a single case of typhoid fever, though there were 192 cases in the city. The one case at San Antonio was so slight as to be hardly noticeable. Indeed, it would have escaped observation had not our surgeons been uncommonly watchful. One case, therefore, is to be charged against eight regiments of infantry, two each of cavalry and artillery, and the usual number of engineers, signal men and hospital attendants. In some regiments, during the war with Spain, there were as many as 400 cases of typhoid.

"My object in giving you a detailed history of our experience in the Southwest last summer is to show that typhoid fever is preventable through vaccination. We have proved our case. The tests we made are absolutely conclusive and final. And they are of great importance to all the people of this country. Typhoid fever is more prevalent here than in Great Britain, Germany, or Norway. It has been killing Americans for generations. There were 80,000 cases in the northern armies during the Civil War and one out of every five soldiers suffered an attack of the disease during our war with Spain.

NO TYPHOID IN GREAT BRITAIN.

"In time we may be as free from typhoid as is Great Britain or Prussia. The former country began sixty years ago to construct adequate sewers and to safeguard its water supply. Now in this day it is enjoying the results of its intelligent and persistent efforts to eradicate the disease. Prussia has accepted the incontrovertible testimony of Koch, who says that 'it is the feces and urine which carry the typhoid bacilli into the world from the human body and spread these germs.' Acting accordingly, the inhabitants of Northern Germany have practically rid themselves of the malady.

"Experimentation with anti-typhoid vaccine goes back to Pasteur, the French chemist and microscopist, and to Robert Koch, the German physician and discoverer of the bacilli of cholera and tuberculosis. Others developed the treatment. Pfeiffer and Kolle, in 1896, disciples of Koch, immunized two men. Sir A. E. Wright of the English army, who really perfected the technic of anti-typhoid vaccination, immunized two other men at about the same time, using killed typhoid germs. The following year, 1897, Wright began the present world-wide anti-typhoid campaign by vaccinating eighteen men and giving publicity to his methods. Four thousand soldiers were vaccinated by him in India during 1898.

"The vaccine we use is made in our own laboratory. It is standardized suspension of killed typhoid bacilli in a physiological salt solution. I should like to simplify the description so that it could be understood by the average layman, but, I fear it would be impossible. I can say, however, that dead germs are employed to render live germs innocuous. We grow the germs and then kill them, and it required long and patient labor to discover what degree of heat was best for the purpose. The heat, you understand, must be at an exact point of intensity to give the killed bacilli their greatest inoculatory effectiveness.

"Three vaccinations are necessary, and are performed ten days apart. A few drops of vaccine are put into the arm with a hypodermic syringe. The first dose contains 500,000,000 bacteria or germs. They are dead, as I have said. The second dose is given ten days later and contains, 1,000,000,000 bacilli. After another ten-day period the third dose of the same strength as the second is administered. The wound caused by the needle is closed over with collodin.

EFFECTS OF VACCINATION.

"Vaccinated men in the army are relieved from duty for twenty-four hours and are instructed to refrain from muscular exertion and the use of alcoholic drinks and to keep out of the sun. Vaccination should occur at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The next morning, ordinarily, the reaction is then at an end. Commonly, the effects are not disagreeable, merely a red place on the arm, a dull headache, possibly, and a feeling like that which occurs when one is getting sick with a cold. Sometimes there is a slight chill and a little temperature.

"How long the immunity will last is an unsettled question. We think it will continue for about three years. Several wholesale drug houses are now selling vaccine to physicians and hospitals. Enough for one person costs $2.50, but a quantity sufficient for ten persons can be bought in the bulk for $5. Free vaccination stations have been established in Buffalo. Every city should have them. If one were vaccinated by one's physician, the fee, I should say, would be $5, or maybe double that charge.

"Human beings alone are responsible for the spread of typhoid fever germs. Koch says: 'There is no other source for typhoid infection than mankind. It was believed once that the bacillus could thrive anywhere, especially in the ground, where it would live for centuries, multiplying all the time, and whence it would come with its millions of descendants when the earth was turned over by a shovel or a plow. Ancient epidemics of the disease were attributed to the excavations of new railroads and canals, whereas they were caused by the bringing together of workingmen in unsanitary camps. We know now that typhoid bacilli will not live long in water or in the soil. Their habitat, if I may use the word, is man himself, though they flourish almost as well in milk. The germ invariably enters the body either in food or drink, having come from some other human being, and, finding its natural field of operation immediately begins to grow and split and multiply tremendously.

WHY THE PATIENT DIES.

"If the germs defeat the anti-bodies which nature creates for its own defense, the patient dies. If the germs are defeated, however, the patient gets well. The battle so fought continues for about three weeks and is known as 'the regular course of the disease.'

"There are many ways by which a person ill of typhoid may infect others. The ambulatory type of the malady, known as walking typhoid because the attack is slight, is extremely dangerous to the friends, family, and associates of the sufferer. The case is not correctly diagnosed, possibly not diagnosed at all, by a physician, and the germs are spread by contact, far and wide, on street car tickets, money, postage stamps and food. Conradi, the eminent specialist, says that 58 per cent. of the typhoid cases originating from contact, which he investigated, were contracted from persons in the very first stages of the disease. Most of those responsible for the spread of the fever, I dare say, thought they were developing colds or other uninfectious ailments.

"Practically all of the sudden outbreaks of water-obrne typhoid can be followed back to the farm houses situated on the watershed. No surface water is pure. The rain falling upon the earth, no matter in what locality, carries typhoid bacilli with it as it flows, first from the field into a brook, thence into a creek, and finally into a river that forms the water supply of some city. Typhoid, as I said, is always to be found in the country. Persons away on their vacations bring the germs back to their homes in large places from farm houses and rural hotels. Then, as we know, milk is the readiest and easiest vehicle for the propagation and circulation of the bacteria. Cows do not have typhoid fever. Mothers taking care of children ill of the disease do go from bedsides to spring houses, however, where they wash milk cans and strainers, neglecting first to wash their hands. Hundreds of such instances have been traced. Nor are country physicians always careful to advise the application of disinfectants.

"I quoted what Dr. Osler said about fingers. It is not a pleasant topic, but fingers, unclean fingers, are filling our graveyards. Every man in the United States army must wash his hands before sitting down to his meals. So far as the hands are concerned, the world is still in a state of barbarism. Milkmen, butchers, bakers, grocers, cooks, private and public, and waiters at hotels and restaurants, are not particular with their hands after attending to certain functions, and everybody knows it, though thinking of the matter may be breaks of water-borne typhoid can repulsive, the finger is a suitable and eloquent guidepost—to the cemetery."

A LITTLE DANDERINE WILL MAKE YOUR HAIR LUSTROUS, SOFT, FLUFFY, ABUNDANT

Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

If you Wish to Double the Beauty of your Hair in Ten Minutes surely Try a Danderine Hair Cleanse

Exposition at Seville.

Celebrate the Opening of Canal That Will Restore the City's Sixteenth Century New World Trade.

[Consular Reports:] In 1914, upon the completion of the canal which is to shorten and straighten the Guadalquiver River from Seville to the Atlantic Ocean, it is proposed to hold in Seville a Spanish-American Exposition to celebrate the opening of this new era in the history of that city as a seaport. This port, now available for oceangoing vessels with draft of twenty-five feet, is expected by this Alfonso XIII canal to secure a larger ocean trade.

In the sixteenth century Seville was the principal European trading port with the New World. To inaugurate a second epoch of great commercial and maritime activity the Spanish-American Exposition has been planned, and all the Spanish-American republics of the Americas will be invited to participate.

According to the project of the Executive Committee, the exposition will utilize the park section, including the beautiful San Telmo Palace gardens. The fair grounds form an irregular crescent, with a shorter length of 4200 feet between the horns. It is near the banks of the Guadalquiver, from which water will be conducted to the fair site of about 166 acres.

This is to be divided into five architectural groupings, a national exhibit of arts, industries and sciences; exhibits of the American nations; exhibits of the various Spanish provinces, ethnography and archaeology; historical and traditional Seville; a park of attractions.

To house these exhibits a group of eight buildings is projected; palace of fine arts, palace of decorative industries, manufactures and arts, palace of agriculture, palace of machinery and electricity, pavilion of mines and metallurgy, pavilion of war and marine, pavilion of public works, the royal pavilion. Auxiliary buildings will be a palace of arts, and fiestas and of administration, and a grand casino containing the principal entrance.

The group of buildings comprising exhibits of the various American nations is of importance, and for such of these nations as are not able to construct a special pavilion a common exhibiting building is proposed.

The exhibits of the various Spanish provinces will include the priceless examples of ancient art and archaeology in Spain and representations of the interesting provincial types. Historical and traditional Seville is intended to give an idea of the city in the different epochs of its history, with particular emphasis on the sixteenth century, its life and customs.

The general style of architecture for exposition buildings is the best Moorish modified in specific instances to meet special requirements, without impairing the continuity of Moorish effect. It is planned that even the smallest details, such as lighting, placing of benches and seats, fountains, gates and gardens, will all conform to the same general idea; the gardens and fountains will probably be modeled after the Alhambra Gardens in Granada and the Royal Alcazar Gardens of this city. The tiles in glaze and polychrome, so indispensable in Moorish construction, will be much used in the buildings and throughout the grounds.

The total cost of construction is estimated at $540,000, of which $191,700 is for permanent buildings, $255,780 for temporary buildings, $77,220 for auxiliary structures, and $15,300 for installation of water, fire protection, drainage, etc. In order to inaugurate the work the Spanish government has approved a subvention of $108,000 made by the Province of Seville, and the municipality of Seville guarantees a loan of $360,000 more, one-half of which it is proposed to sell as securities to investors at 5 per cent. annual interest for the four years ending 1915.

ANCIENT AMERICAN BUILDERS.

Ruins of City in the Andes Reveals Use of Stones Weighing One Hundred and Seventy Tons.

[Christian Science Monitor:] Investigations of ancient cities in South America, are attracting much attention nowadays. There are the remains of the great city of Tiahuanacu, on a high barren plateau in the Andes, over 12,000 feet above the sea, that is one of the unsolved mysteries of the silent past. One savant even estimates its age as 12,000 years and thinks that it was built when the Andes were much lower than they are now and that it has risen through the slow ages with the slow emergence of the mountains. Others think it is not so old as the Christian era.

Concerning these things a writer in the World Today says:

"If stones could speak these ruins would reveal a story of deepest interest. The difficulty in solving the mystery is due to the present nature of this region. This city, covering a large area, was built by highly skilled masons, with the use of enormous stones, one weighing 170 tons. Apart from the monoliths of ancient Egypt there is nothing in any other part of the world to equal them.

"The point next in interest to the enormous size of the stones is the excellence of the workmanship. The lines are perfectly straight, the angles accurately drawn and all surfaces level. The upright monoliths have mortises and projecting ledges to retain the horizontal slabs in place. The carvings are complicated, but accurately designed and executed, affording ample proof of the advanced stage reached by the builders in architectural art. Flights of stone steps, recently discovered, prove that the ancient city, which is now several miles from Lake Titicaca, was once on its shore. Here, indeed, was a great metropolis built in a region where corn cannot ripen, nor a dense population be supported; yet the vestiges of the ancient civilization silently proclaim a state of affairs entirely different.

UNIQUE ROLLING STONE.

A Round Ball on a Tombstone has Been Slowly Revolving on a Horizontal Axis.

[Nashville Democrat:] In a cemetery near Marion, (O.) there is a monument having a stone ball whose extraordinary movement has attracted the attention of many men of science.

This ball, about thirty-six inches in diameter, weighs about forty-two hundred pounds and rests upon a large stone base. For some time, says Harper's Weekly, the stone ball has been slowly turning upon its base, revolving about a horizontal axis in a direction from north to south.

At first the ball rested in a socket provided on the base. The portion of the ball that fitted in the die was not polished. In 1904 it was observed that the unpolished spot of the ball had become visible and that the ball had revolved nearly twenty inches in a northerly direction from its original resting place.

The employee who reported this fact to the authorities found that they flatly refused to credit his statments. He was right, however, as was proven by a regular and systematic inspection that was instituted with reference to the phenomenon. It was soon ascertained that the ball had a continuous and regular movement. Between July and November of one year the ball moved five inches.

All manner of explanations were immediately offered by all sorts of people everywhere. Investigation showed that the ball had in no way been fastened to its base, the builders evidently expecting that its weight would hold it in place.

Perhaps the best explanation offered of the curious behavior of the ball is this: First, the ball becomes, in the sunshine, more heated than does the base and consequently expands more, giving rise to a slight "creeping." The ensuing contraction, it is thought, is probably not sufficient to "take up" the displacement occasioned by the heat of the early day. In the second place, the circumference of the sphere probably lengthens on one side, giving rise to a pulling between the ball and the base whereon it rests."

Handsome Waverley Fleet.

Ten Deliveries Make Great Hit at Chicago Motor Salon—Second Order Ten Follows.

While the Chicago Auto Show was in progress word was received from New York of an order placed with the Waverley representative in that city for ten electric delivery wagons of the shaft-drive type that has attracted so much attention wherever it has been demonstrated by the Waverley people.

This was followed a few days later by a second order for ten, making twenty in all. These orders were placed after long experiment with a Waverley running in competition with other electrics and several gasoline trucks in the operation of which the Fleischman company learned about all there is to know about motor truck delivery.

Their decision in favor of the Waverley was a well-earned compliment, and shows the practical advantages of a mosquito fleet of small, speedy electrics so simple in operation that they may be driven by messenger boys need be.

The distinctive feature of the car is its shaft drive, which makes it as noiseless as any Silent Waverley brougham milady drives.

Simplicity of handling, serviceable speed and unusual economy of operation are other points claimed for it by the Waverley company.

Dozens of these little electrics have been sold actually to replace gasoline trucks of large capacity, because it was found that they were always on the job, doing the work of two or three horse-driven wagons and at much less cost.

PASSING ON PRIMARY.

SANTA ROSA (Cal.) March 16.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Superior Judge Denny took under consideration tonight the question whether the Presidential primary on May 14 is to be a general or a special election. His decision will interest the entire State, as many communities are in the same quandary as Santa Rosa. The question came up here as a result of the Supervisors' action in setting a local option election on the day of the Presidential primary.

Promising Boy.

PLAYER TAKEN ON QUEER HOPE.

Scout Grabs Him for Knowing Where to Throw.

New York Giants Gets One of This Description.

Selected Because He Has Real Baseball Sense.

Sometimes it is a small matter which induces the scout for a major league team to recommend a ball player to a major league manager. True the personality of the scout is likely to have something to do with it.

There are scouts who have been on the trail for the last two or three years who lack keen perception in estimating the possibilities of young players. The man who is doing his best in the minor leagues must do a very good best to convince the scout that he is worth having.

Probably that scout isn't worth so much as a scout as his employer thinks he is. It doesn't take sudden brainstorms nor a very discerning intelligence to tell first-class ball playing from second-class ball playing, even if it happens to be going on in a minor league circuit, so the scout who can see deeper than the surface is likely in the long run to be of more assistance to his major league club than the scout who can only pick out the player who is sure to finish on top in the minor league averages.

There is a young player who is to go to Marlin with the Giants this year who was recommended not so much on his ability as a member of the Fond du Lac baseball club, which finished at the bottom of the race of the Wisconsin-Illinois League in 1911, as for the reason that the man who took a look at him one afternoon happened to observe that Stock, the player in question, knew what to do with the ball when he had it.

There are some major league players who to this day are not wholly sure on that score. They need a warning voice to tell them what to do when there is a quick move to be made. Frequently there is a pinch in a game when the observant ball player catches some unwary chap off third base instead of throwing the ball over to first, where everybody expected that it would be thrown. That one play might win a championship.

This scout, who had his eyes on Stock last season, discovered that one thing in which he excelled was handing the ball to the right man, and, as he is young and was doing fairly well, in fact, quite well with a tail-end club, he told the New York people that it would not be a bad idea to go after him on general principles.

Stock played in 119 games with the Fond du Lac club. He was at bat 437 times, made 57 runs, 117 hits, stole 28 bases and found himself the proud possessor of fourteen sacrifices and a batting average of .268. That's not so bad for a boy who is not out of school.

In the field he had 211 putouts at shortstop, 578 assists and sixty-two errors. His fielding average was .897, which could be better without demanding too much of the doctor.

He may not get an opportunity to play with the Giants this year. Players never know what is going to happen when they join the Giants for the spring training trip, but possibly he will have an opportunity to play with a better team than that with which he was connected in 1911.

Two Records Go.

POMONA TRIMS BERKELEY FRESHMEN WITH EASE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT (Cal.) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pomona 77½, California Freshmen 44½, two records, one Southern California and one Coast record, went by the board in the meet here this afternoon between Pomona College and the freshmen of the University of California. Gillette in the quarter mile romped home in the wonderful time of 50 seconds flat, thus breaking his own record of 51 seconds, made in the A. A. U. meet this year. In the relay this long-legged youth finished up the half-mile event in Coast record time of 1 minute 33 2-5 seconds.

The meet was started right by Coolidge the big freshman from Healdsburg, heaving the hammer 145 feet 6 inches, thus putting himself in a class with Shattuck and Rice. He failed to come through in the shot put however, letting "Shoestrings" Kingman win. Barnes could not do much in the hammer throw. He was just out of a sick bed, but he came strong in the pole, clearing 11-6 with ease.

The hurdles were a surprise, both to Berkeley and Pomona. In highs Heath ran a pretty race in 16-2, not touching a hurdle. In the low sticks Brooks barely nosed out Knapp for first in 26-4.

Ed. Stanton ran a beautiful race in the hundred, winning from Gillette by a yard and a half; in the 220, he had things his own way as Gillette was too tired after his quarter to run. He loafed home in the excellent time of 22 2-5, reminding every one of his brother Forrest as to form and speed. When a man can run a hundred in 10 flat in his freshman year he is good for something better later on.

DISTANCES ALL POMONA.

The mile and two-mile, as usual, were all Pomona. In the mile George Lorbeer nosed Cooper out for third by a scant yard. In the half Billings finished with an awful sprint, tying the college record in 2 minutes 2 seconds.

In the high jump Chauncey Gillette surprised every one, himself included, clearing 5ft., 6in., in pretty form.

To get back to the quarter, Gillette ran in easy form all the way. He let Sloane tire Todd out in the first 220 and then took the lead, winning by about fifteen yards. F. Lorbeer capped the climax by beating Todd a yard for second place.

In the relay Nye started against Todd. Both men ran their hardest the first hundred yards, but neither could gain an inch on the other. Williamson, in the second furlong, led his man all the way, finishing a good five yards ahead of Bogardus. Little Lorbeer lengthened the lead out to ten yards and Gillette increased it to twenty over Stanton. A watch caught Gillette in 22 2-5s. for his lap.

TEN FIRSTS FOR POMONA.

Pomona won ten firsts out of a possible fourteen, so, that if firsts only had been counted as intended the college would have won by a greater margin. Every one of the freshman team fought their hardest but Pomona was in a winning mood so they had no chance.

From the results of this meet Coach Stanton will decide who shall have that trip North, starting next week. The summary: Mile run—Won by Sturges, (P.;) Merrit, (P.,) second; G. Lorbeer, (P.,) third. Time, 4m., 40s.

100-yard dash—Won by Stanton, (C.;) Gillette, (P.,) second; Nye, (P.,) third. Time, 10s.

120-yard hurdles—Won by Heath, (P.;) McKim (C.,) second; Wiley, (C.,) third. Time, 16 2-5s.

The 440-yard dash—Won by Gillette (P.;) F. Lorbeer (P.,) second; Todd (C.,) third. Time, 50s.

The 880-yard run—Won by Billings (P.;) Heisen (C.,) second; Atwood (P.,) third. Time, 2m. 2s.

The 220-yard dash—Won by Stanton (C.;) Nye (P.,) second; Williamson (P.,) third. Time, 22 2-5s.

Two-mile run—Sturges (P.,) and Loveland (P.,) tied for first; G. Lorbeer (P.,) third. Time, 10m. 31s.

The 220-yard hurdles—Won by Brooks (P.;) Knapp (C.,) second; Wiley (C.,) third. Time, 26 4-5s.

Half-mile relay—Won by Pomona; Nye, Williamson, Lorbeer, Gillette. Time, 1m. 33 2-5s.

Hammer throw—Won by Coolidge (C.;) Barnes (P.,) second; Thomas (C.,) third. Distance, 146ft. 6in.

Shot put—Won by Kingman (P.;) Thomas (C.,) second; Durkee (P.,) third. Distance, 39ft. 6in.

High jump—Won by C. Gillette (P.;) McKim (C.,) second; Beans (C.,) and Brooks (P.,) tied for third. Height, 5ft. 6in.

Pole vault—Won by Barnes (P.;) Gower (C.,) and Seward (P.,) tied for second. Height, 11ft. 6in.

Broad jump—Won by Bogardus (C.;) Wileym (C.,) second; Harris (P.,) third. Distance, 20ft. 11½in.

Demetral Here Tomorrow.

William Demetral, light heavyweight champion wrestler of the world, known as the Greek demon of the mat, will arrive here tomorrow morning and go in training at the Naud Junction pavilion for his match on Wednesday evening with Bill Schmidt at the Walker Theater. The match will be the best two out of three falls. Schmidt is a wrestling partner for Zbyscko.

Today at the Croffroth arena in San Francisco Demetral is scheduled to meet Zbyscko, the famous Polish wrestler.

Thrilling.

BIG CROWD SEES RODEO CONTESTS.

INTENSE RIVALRY AMONG BIDERS FOR HONORS.

Standing Cowboys' Race One of Spectacular Numbers on Programme—Cowgirls' Steer-Roping Contest Won by Oregon Girl. Many Exciting Events.

From the spectacular cowboys' standing half mile race, which opened the afternoon's sport, until the pandemonium at the culmination of the wild horse race, the Rodeo cowboy championships at Santa Anita, yesterday afternoon, thrilled 10,000 excited spectators.

In each of the fourteen sensations, labeled "events" on the programme, rivalry among the contestants was keen.

Pounding into the stretch neck and neck, each man standing upright on galloping horses, a trio of daredevil horsemen brought the nerves of the spectators to tension points at the very start of the contests. Making the half-mile in 47 seconds flat, Ben Corbett, a Texas cowpuncher, now living at Edendale, sent his animals to victory by half a length.

Before the announcer bellowed the result, a score of buckskin clad, whooping rangemen were leaving the post in the right-and-left stake race, the finish of which was the immediate signal for the start of the cowgirls' steer-roping contest.

The preliminary to the championship of the Southwest was at stake and the cowgirls were off in a hot race to win the honors. Hazel Hoxie of Oregon, came out first. As this event was an elimination contest, she will ride in the finals.

Following rapidly one upon the other, the fancy roping teams plyed the riatas, the second heat of the cowboys' relay race was run and taken by A. J. Stanley, a Los Angeles cowboy. In the elimination competition for the bucking championship of the Southwest for lady riders, Bertha Blancett again won first laurels.

In the steer wrestling elimination contest, to decide the championship of the Southwest, J. G. Briscoe's sturdy little pony figured almost as conspicuously as his hardy rider. Briscoe's horse was soon able to run the fleet-footed long-horn down. Briscoe then leaned far out in his saddle, took a firm hold of the steer's horns, threw himself from the saddle, gave a quick twist and forced the steer to take the count in just half a minute from the time Briscoe laid hands on him.

The four-horse stage-coach race, the tug of war tournament, the laughable amateur bucking contest, the Mexican pony race and the wild horse race were the closing events.

Thousands of school children were present as the guests of the management. For today the best programme of the Rodeo has been arranged.

New High Jump Record.

SANTA ANA EASY VICTOR IN ORANGE COUNTY MEET.

SANTA ANA, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In point of attendance, entries and enthusiasm, the biggest track meet ever held in Orange county was held here this afternoon. It was the county high school meet and its final score was: Santa Ana 50½, Anaheim 37, Huntington Beach 22½, Orange 6, Fullerton 5.

At times during the meet Anaheim had Santa Ana guessing as to the result. Youngman of Santa Ana won the most points. He got first in the 50-yard and the 100 dash, tied for first in the 220-yard dash and ran in the relay, which his team won. The county record for the high jump was broken by Newlands of Huntington Beach with a leap of 5ft. 8½in. Newlands took first in the broad jump.

In two classy runs Beebe of Anaheim took the two distance contests. King, a one-armed negro lad from Fullerton, made all the points his team made. James Donahue, olympic games champion, ran an exhibition low hurdle and made an exhibition broad jump.

Summary of events:

The 50-yard dash—Youngman (Santa Ana,) first; Douglas (Anaheim,) second; Livernash (Huntington Beach,) third. Time 5 2-5s.

The 440-yard dash—Bauer (Anahenm,) first; Linn (Huntington Beach,) second; Jacobs (Santa Ana,) third. Time 56 1-5s.

The 120-yard hurdles—West (Santa Ana,) first; Chamberlain (Anaheim,) second. Time 18s.

The 100-yard dash—Youngman (Santa Ana,) first; Lane (Orange,) second; Newcomer (Santa Ana,) third. Times 10 2-5s.

Mile—Bebe (Anaheim,) first; Adkinson (Santa Ana,) second; Bates (Santa Ana,) third. Time 4m. 48s.

The 220-yard dash—King (Fullerton) and Young tied for first; Lane (Orange,) third. Time 24 1-5s.

The 220-yard hurdles—Kelley (Anaheim,) first; Foutz (Santa Ana,) second; Watson (Orange,) third Time 28 2-5s.

Half-mile—Beebe (Anaheim,) first; Adkinson (Santa Ana,) second; Armitage (Huntington Beach,) third. Time 2m. 2s.

Shot put—Barker (Santa Ana,) first; Yorba (Anaheim,) second; Livernash (Huntington Beach,) third. Distance 41ft. 9½in.

High jump—Newlands (Huntington Beach,) first; Lacy (Santa Ana,) second; Smith (Santa Ana,) and Hubbard (Huntington Beach) tied for third. Height 5ft 8½in.

Broad jump—Newlands (Huntington Beach,) first; Livernash (Huntington Beach,) second; King (Fullerton,) third. Distance 20ft. 7½in.

Pole vault—Foutz (Santa Ana,) Swanner (Santa Ana) and Hebbard (Huntington Beach) tie for first. Height 9ft. 6in.

Discus—Rennew (Anaheim,) first; Elliott (Anaheim,) second; Shapkey, third. Distance 99ft. 8in.

Half-mile relay—Santa Ana, first; Anaheim, second; Huntington Beach, third. Time 1m. 34s.

Redlands High Victorious.

REDLANDS, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Redlands High School defeated Riverside High School in their annual track meet at Riverside, 67-46.

Two Records Broken.

LONG BEACH WINS COUNTY INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET.

DISPLAYING marked superiority in the races, the Long Beach High School track team grabbed the lion's share of the points and won by a good margin the tenth annual Los Angeles county interscholastic track and field meet held at Long Beach yesterday afternoon, by the score of 59 points.

Long Beach's nearest competitor, Pasadena, won second place with a score of 47½. The U.S.C. preps came in third, scoring 11 points.

The boys from Monrovia gathered in 9 tallies; South Pasadena, 3; Glendale, 1; Santa Monica, ½; and Whittier, 0.

Alleging that they had violated rules of the city section of the Los Angeles County Athletic League, officials of that organization refused to consider Occidental preps eligible to enter the meet.

Long Beach also won the mile relay, for which a special championship banner was offered by the county league.

TWO RECORDS SHATTERED.

Los Angeles county records were broken in the pole vault and discus throw. Wilson of Long Beach, who was the star of the meet, cleared the bar in the pole vault event at 11ft. 6in., breaking the former county record of 11ft. 3in. Wilson then tried for the Southern California record, but failed to get higher than 11ft. 9in.

Clements of the U.S.C. preps broke his own record in the discus, hurling the weight 107ft. 1in. His former record of 100ft. 7in. won the county meet last year, which was the first time that event figured in any of the prep meets.

Ninety-five athletes entered the meet yesterday, which is the largest in point of number of entrants in the history of the county meets. Over 1100 spectators cheered their favorites to victory from the bleachers and sidelines.

WILSON BEST WINNER.

Considering the disadvantage of running directly against a strong wind, some remarkable time was made in some of the races. Wilson of Long Beach scored the most individual points, winning first in the pole vault, first in the broad jump and second in the high hurdles and second in the 440-yard run, and 1¼ points for running a lap in the relay. His total was 17¼ points. Dodd of Long Beach was second with 10 points to his credit, winning first in the mile run and first in the half-mile.

In the mile run Dodd loafed the final 100 yards, trotting across the tape in the time of 4m. 48s., with his nearest rival, Green, also of Long Beach, fifty yards behind.

RELAY IS EXCITING.

The meet was brought to a fitting close by the most exciting relay race ever witnessed at Long Beach. The issue was between Long Beach and Pasadena.

On the first lap, Middough, of Long Beach, finished his lap with a lead over Doty, of Pasadena, of at least ten yards. Heath, of Pasadena, made this up on Ohl, of Long Beach, coming in at least fifteen yards in advance of his opponent. With this lead, Bennet, of Pasadena, was overtaken by Snow, of Long Beach, who negotiated his lap in the fast time of twenty-two seconds flat. With an even start, Wilson, of Long Beach, and Wells, of Pasadena, raced the final lap, Wilson forging ahead at the tape a winner by two yards.

A great demonstration of enthusiasm was displayed by the several hundred Long Beach rooters, when Wilson, the hero of the hour, was borne upon the shoulders of admirers to the band stand, where, as captain of the Long Beach team, he received the two pennants won by his team.

WINNERS OF MEET.

The summary:

One hundred yard dash—Won by Johnson, (Pas.), Newby, (Pas.), second; Morse, (L. B.) third. Time, 10.2.

Competition Keen.

SWIMMING RECORD BROKEN BY RESELEURE IN TRYOUTS

THE second night of the Olympic try-out swimming championships held at the L.A.A.C. last evening went off with even more eclat than the first. From the standpoint of the competition and the records made, the races were more successful than those of Friday.

The first event of the evening was the 220-yard swim, and it went exactly according to dope, the winner being Reseleure of the University of California, who won by a fair margin from Langer, breaking Langer's Southern California record. He lowered it to 2m. 46 2-5s.

Incidentally, Reseleure nailed his second State college championship in this race. Dugan of Bimini led off at a terrific pace, but was unable to do the work. He dropped out after six laps, Barker of the Y.M.C.A. pulling third out of the fire.

The next event, the under-water swim, had only two contestants, but both of these were good. H. Siefert of Occidental College led off at first, but Lenz of Long Beach won the event with 185ft.

The women's diving contest was won by Miss Gertrude Johnson of Ocean Park, without competition. She made several exhibition dives, enthusiastically applauded by the spectators.

Following this race there was a water push-ball game between two teams picked from the swimmers. The game proved to be much more exciting than water polo, there not being quite so much of the rough stuff and a great deal more real action. Ben Watlington and George Freeth were the stars.

Immediately after the game several of the swimmers gave an impromptu diving exhibition . George Freeth did some fine work. Lenz, of Long Beach, performed a "pile-drive," which was heartily enjoyed.

The next event on the programme was the 100-yard novice race, and it proved to be one of the closest on the programme. The race was won in a close finish by Mark Howlett of L.A. H.S., William M. Henry of Occidental was second, and Lenz, of Long Beach, third.

During the exciting finish of the novice race a spectator became highly excited in the gallery and fell into the water. Frank Holborrow bravely dived in and rescued the victim, who, after a thorough examination, proved to be Roger Cornell in disguise.

The last event of the tournament was the half-mile, with Reseleure a winner. This made his third win of the tournament. He won from Langer by about forty feet, while Langer was nearly a length ahead of Harrell, who finished third.

The University of California got away with every one of the college races, winning the State championship with ease.

CANADA BEATS ENGLAND.

Exciting Polo Contest at Coronado Is Enjoyed by a Large Crowd. Tournament Closed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 16.—In what proved to be the most closely contested polo match of the Coronado tournament, Canada, this afternoon defeated England by a score of 4 3-4 to 4.

Ideal weather prevailed, a large crowd turned out and much enthusiasm was shown, first as one team would score a goal and take the lead and then when the opposing four would bring their colors to the front. The contest was not for any trophy and marked the close of the tournament.

The teams lined up as follows:

Canada—K. Snowden, G. Roton, J. Hobbs and A. Hone.

England—C. Burke, Viscount Gower, Lord Herbert and Lord Tweedmouth.

"ICEMAN" SPENCER DYING.

Celebrated Jockey Ill With Tuberculosis, at Oakland, Has Ridden Last Race—Splendid Career.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—Henry Spencer, better known as "Iceman" Spencer, formerly a celebrated jockey, is dying in his home in Oakland, of tuberculosis. Physicians say he probably will not survive longer than three or four days.

At the height of his career in 1900, Spencer headed the list of winning American jockeys. His most notable victory that year was in the futurity, which he won with James R. Keene's Chacornac.

Spencer's career in the saddle covered a period of ten years and he had a reputation for squareness that was equalled only by his reputation for nerve and coolness, which brought about his nickname of "iceman." He rode for some of the foremost horsemen in this country and accumulated a snug fortune.

KILBANE PARADE TODAY.

New Irish Champion to Share Honors With St. Patrick on Arrival in Cleveland.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLEVELAND, March 16.—His train delayed by storms in the West, Johnnny Kilbane, the new featherweight champion, will not reach Cleveland tonight as had been expected and the reception and celebration planned in his honor has been postponed until tomorrow.

A mammoth parade in four divisions with numerous bands had been arranged. The fact that tomorrow is St. Patrick's Day and Kilbane an Irishman, will add zest to the affair.

ONTARIO WINS.

ONTARIO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ontario High opened the Citrus League track season here this afternoon by defeating Claremont High in a dual meet, 63 to 44. The local men took every first except the 220-yard dash, the broad jump, and the mile. After today's showing the local High School feels optimistic of showing well in the annual meet of the Citrus Belt League at Claremont, next Saturday, when six schools, Ontario, Pomona, Riverside, Redlands, San Bernardino and Claremont will fight it out for the league championship.

Wins in Ninth Inning.

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) March 16.—[A. P. Night Wire.] The Sacramento Coast League team scored one run in the last of the ninth and defeated the Galt semi-professional team 3 to 2, here today. Fred Brown, the former Sacramento State League pitcher, who was sought by Vernon and Los Angeles this year, pitched for Galt and fanned six of the leaguers.

ALTON HEADS CRICKETERS.

Makes Ninth Consecutive Year He has Been Accorded the Honor. Other Officers.

Cricket was given a tremendous boost last night, when John Alton, assistant cashier of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank, was elected president for the ninth consecutive year.

The responsible post of secretary was filled by P. J. Higgins, on the motion of W. Meggett, seconded by H. R. Hilton. W. Meggett, who headed the bowling averages three years ago for Southern California, was elected treasurer, on the motion of T. D. Bamford, seconded by W. C. Barnes.

The meeting was held at No. 301 Mammoth Hall. Among those present were the following named players: John Alton, P. J. Higgins, W. Meggett, M. Mold, T. D. Bamford, W. Wright, C. H. Prax, W. C. Barnes, R. H. Prax, T. Brown, C. Cadman and H. R. Hilton.

President Alton stated that the finances of the local cricket club were in good shape and that the club had plenty of paraphernalia on hand to carry itself through the present season. "There is no doubt that a club like ours is dependent upon a good secretary, and for that reason we must feel proud that P. J. Higgins has agreed to officiate in that capacity. As we have a very migratory crowd to draw upon for our talent, our teams are constantly being augmented by new blood, so that the club is being stimulated." These and other salient remarks were made by John Alton.

T. D. Bamford, last year's captain, said: "I would like to see some of the younger players take hold of things and boost the game in this city. Any man who comes out to play should be given an opportunity to play and not be debarred because he happens to have been drafted to some other team."

C. Cadman, said: "A good paid groundsman was absolutely necessary, as the pitch had to be cared for and all paraphernalia kept under lock and key in the pavilion."

It was unanimously agreed that the subscription fee be limited to $5 per annum. M. Mold stated that he had no intention of taking an active part in cricket this year, but anyone who knows Mold kows that it will take several teams of horses and then some to keep him away from the game he learned to play in his boyhood days.

Among others who offered suggestions for the welfare of the club were W. Wright, P. J. Higgins, H. R. Hilton and T. Brown. W. G. Cochrane, captain of the Fresno Cricket Club, and an active member of the local cricket club, arrived in this city yesterday. He is arranging a series of matches between his club and the local contingent.

HOW BILL DONOVAN MADE ALTROCK QUIT.

Bill Donovan of the Tigers has a flow of sarcasm that would make the talk of a baseball manager on a losing team appear weak. At the same time Bill has a witty tongue. He is Irish through and through, and the player who steps into repartee with him usually becomes much wiser and much more precautionary.

One day a few seasons ago Nick Altrock, then with the White Sox, essayed to throw hot bon mots with Williams.

Nick strolled toward third base, and as he was passing the Detroit bench he screwed up his mouth to one side and said:

"Gosh, Bill, your nose was made for slicing 'punkins,' wasn't it?"

Bill glanced up, then, in his own mild manner, returned:

"Ye-ah, an' yours was made for scooping them out."

Whereupon Nick returned to the Chicago bench and expressed himself quite emphatically on the Detroit team and certain of its members in particular.

OLD SILENT KNIGHTS.

Cars Built in Nineteen-Six Still Running in Reno With Sleeve-Valve Motors.

Out in Reno, Nev., doing mountain livery service, are two six-year-old cars, whose history is more than remarkable. They are Silent Knight cars, built by Charles Y. Knight himself in 1906. Shipped to Reno several years ago, they are now owned by George E. Porter, proprietor of the Golden Hotel, in whose livery service they have done scores of thousands of miles.

It was not until the recent interest in Stearns-Knight cars swept the country that these old models were discovered. Visitors to Reno have often remarked on these cars, because in curious contrast to the majority of cars used in mountain service, they are notably quiet and smooth-running. This, of course, is due to the silent sleeve valve type of motor which is employed in both of them.

In a letter to the Stearns company Porter says that these old cars so far as the motor is concerned, are practically as good as new, and that they are daily called upon to take long, hard mountain trips. Porter purchased one of the cars about five years ago, and after watching its performance for a year, secured another one of the same model.

Now that the Silent Knight motor is attracting such attention, old Knight cars are beginning to turn up in every section of the country. A number are running in Chicago in livery as well as in private service, while many have been turned in as part trade on new Stearns-Knight cars.

LABOR AND THE EXPOSITION.

[The Argonaut:] Commenting on the Argonaut's demand for freedom and a fair field in the work of the exposition, the Fresno Republican gravely remarks that "the law of the State * * * already requires that the unpacking and setting up of exhibits shall be done by each exhibitor in his own way, with whatever labor he chooses." This appears, in the mind of the Republican, to be both a final and a happy adjustment. It appears likewise to the same confiding mind to stamp as impertinent any further questionings. The matter has been "settled;" the Legislature has settled it. "The condition was understood and agreed to by the labor unions; no further perturbation or agitation therefore is needed"—thus saith the Republican in its cocksureness.

Apparently the Republican has no consciousness of the fact that organized labor is wholly indifferent to "laws of the State;" that it has laws of its own which in its own view supersede and override not only laws of the State, but all other laws of God and man. There are laws of the State guaranteeing to citizens the rights of life and liberty, unhampered and undisturbed. Does the Republican need to be told that organized labor disregards these laws whenever they interfere with its purposes or would curb its passions? Apparently it has failed to observe the boycotts, the intimidations, the maimings, the murderings done by organized labor precisely as if there were no law of State guaranteeing the rights of life and liberty. There are laws of the State assuring to every citizen the right to labor in any lawful occupation of his choice upon his own contract. Does the Republican need to be told that these laws are nullified whenever it suits organized labor to do it—even though it must strike with a bloody hand or shoot from the dark at the backs of its victims? There are laws of the State against intimidation, conspiracy, blackmail, arson, murder, and a hundred other crimes. Again does the Republican need to be told that organized labor pays not the least heed to these laws when their violation may serve its uses? By what token does the Republican assume that a law of the State which assures to exposition exhibitors the right to do certain legitimate things will have higher respect than other laws which are persistently disobeyed and wantonly trampled upon?

Why, let us ask the Republican, was it deemed more necessary or seemly by the late Legislature to pass a special law "requiring" that exhibitors shall unpack their goods in their own way than that these same exhibitors shall walk the public streets or attend religious services at their pleasure? What was there in social or legal logic making it necessary or reasonable to pass a special law in re-enactment of rights fundamentally fixed in our Constitution and already defined on our statute books? The Republican knows that the thing was done because organized labor in San Francisco stands as a lawless and menacing force ready to strike down whoever or whatever may stand athwart its purposes or its will. And the Republican knows now that if for any reason, or no reason, the mood of organized labor shall change it will disregard this new law precisely as it disregards every other which comes between it and the things it wants to do.

Quite calmly the Republican tells us that "this condition was understood and agreed to by the labor unions." Here indeed we have significant comment upon a Legislature assumed to represent all the "progressive" virtues. Not only does this Legislature deem it necessary to re-enact in a limited interpretation and definition certain simple rights guaranteed by the Constitution and the statutes, but before doing so to ask and receive permission from organized labor. For, "this condition was understood and agreed to by the labor unions," says the Republican.

In other days, before the passions of politics and the bias of faction had corrupted his judgment, the editor of the Republican was a patriot and a man of common sense. If we measure him now by his own utterances, he appears to be neither. For where are the resentments of patriotic spirit against a usurpation which must be consulted and placated by the Legislature before it can enact a simple law in assertion of constitutional rights? And where is the common sense of one who assumes that a particular law will be respected by an association which habitually disregards all laws at its sovereign pleasure?

There is only one form of assurance by which exhibitors at the exposition can be secured in their rights of doing their own work in their own way. This can not be done by the enactment of special laws, for organized labor is no respecter of laws. It can not be done by special treaty, for organized labor is no respecter of treaties. It pledges its faith today, but it breaks it tomorrow; this is its rule and its practice. There is but one way and that is to break the back of a system which at its best is a social usurpation and at its worst a criminal conspiracy. In demanding freedom and a fair field in the work of the exposition we propose no injustice, no hardship upon union labor. We do propose the only rule under which the exposition enterprise can be carried to success. For if this enterprise be left subject to the arrogance, the selfishness, and the cruel spirit of organized labor as it exists in San Francisco, it will surely end in failure and collapse. If, there be not resource and courage enough to carry this enterprise through on lines of legality and legitimacy there will surely not be the means of carrying it through on any other lines. Now as always the right way is the easiest way; and if the easiest way is not possible, then there is no use considering any other way.

THE WILEY CASE.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The investigation of conditions in the Federal Bureau of Chemistry by the House has not ended with the resignation of Dr. Harvey Wiley. Chairman Moss announced today his committee had not closed its inquiry and further investigation was probable of the friction that Dr. Wiley declared forced him to retire. The appointment of Dr. Lucius P. Brown, State Pure Food Inspector of Tennessee, to succeed Dr. Harvey W. Wiley was urged on the President today by the Tennessee Delegation in Congress. Dr. Brown is a Democrat.

DANGERS OF AVIATION.

SACRAMENTO, March 16.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Interest in aviation, which last September won him an opportunity to escape from the County Jail while Chief Jailer Meyers and Under Sheriff Just gazed at Robert Fowler in his flight from San Francisco to Sacramento, has also proved the downfall of Arthur Hayes, alias "Kid" Nash, who was arrested at Marysville while he was striving to get a look at Charles K. Hamilton and his machine. Hayes could not resist the temptation to feast his eyes on another birdman, even though he took the chance of being caught. He was arrested by Marysville officers, who knew he was wanted for escaping in this city.

IOWA CONTROL GOING TO TAFT

Already He Has Seventy Per Cent. of Majority.

Less Than Half the Counties Have Chosen Delegates.

Among Democrats Clark Has Lead With Delegates.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Six Republican and five Democratic county conventions today put national politics in an interesting situation in Iowa. It brought the total number of Republican county conventions up to forty-six, which have given Taft a total of 552 delegates in the State convention, or 70 per cent. of the number necessary to control.

There will be 1481 delegates in the convention. Cummins has 187 delegates and Roosevelt twenty-four. Fifty-three counties are yet to hold conventions.

The number of Democratic conventions held to date are fifteen, giving Clark 129 delegates, Wilson twenty-five and five uninstructed.

Four of the Republican county conventions were in the first district. Taft delegates were elected to State and district conventions by Des Moines 22, Henry 14, Jefferson 12 and for Cummins Washington 14. The latter is the only county in the district to give Cummins delegates. The district convention will next Wednesday elect two Taft delegates to the national convention.

Johnson county broke the ice in the second district by electing delegates for Taft, and it is now predicted the whole district will be for the President. Tama county, the first in the Fifth district, selected fifteen delegates for Cummins.

Clark leaders in Des Moines claim the instructed delegates selected today in Democratic county conventions in Decatur, Tama, Mahaska and Wapello counties, and concede the uninstructed delegation in Sioux county is divided, five for Clark and three for Wilson, intimating that application of the unit rule will make it solid for Clark. Congressman Jamison of Shenandoah, in charge of the Clark campaign, tonight claimed that Clark will have eighty per cent. of the total number of delegates in the State convention.

SOLID FOR TAFT.

RESULT IN INDIANA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, March 16.—Supporters of the renomination of President Taft controlled the Seventh Congress District Republican convention today and elected their candidates for delegates to the national convention by a vote of 128 to 6 over the Roosevelt candidates.

Resolutions were adopted instructing the delegates to vote for President Taft and condemning the political theories of recall of the judiciary or judicial opinions and the Presidential third terms.

THE CANAL BILL.

ADAMSON PRESENTS IT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Representative Adamson, of Georgia, chairman of the committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, reported the Panama Canal bill to the House today and spoke on its provisions which may limit the tolls charged to $1.25 a ton with discretionary authority vested in the President. "The apprehension of railroad-owned vessels driving competition from the canal," the report says, "is an evil which already exists in the coast wise trade on both coasts as well as on our lakes and rivers. The proper function of a railroad corporation is to operate trains on its tracks, not to occupy the water with ships in mock competition with itself, which in reality operate to the extinction of all genuine competition."

Disaster.

LINER SINKS IN CHANNEL FOUR LIVES ARE LOST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW HAVEN (Eng.) March 16.—The German bark Pisagua collided with the P. and O. liner Oceana off Beachy Head in the English Channel this morning.

For some time the lives of the liner's forty-one passengers and of the 280 men of her crew were placed in danger. Twenty-eight of the passengers were landed here and nine at East Bourne in small boats, but it is feared that the other four have been drowned, together with some members of the Lascar crew, by the capsizing of a boat which was transferring them to a cross-channel steamer standing by.

The Oceana was bound from London for Bombay. She was proceeding down the English Channel, when the bark smashed into her broadside-on and practically tore the side out of the steamer. The passengers and the steamer's officers behaved with great calmness, but the crew, composed of Lascars, were panic-stricken and delayed the lowering of the boats. Boats lowered from a cross-channel steamer picked up a large number of others. Life boats were sent out from shore in reply to signals of distress.

An attempt was first made to beach the Oceana, but she sank too quickly. The collision occurred while the passengers were in their berths. The water rushed in so quickly that the lower decks were awash in a few minutes and the passengers, trying to make their way to the upper decks, had to wade through water up to their waists. The first boat lowered was swamped and the passengers were thrown into the water, but were all picked up. The second boat was just sinking when a life boat from shore reached it.

The Pisagua is reported to have proceeded on her voyage with most of her headgear carried away.

The Oceana was one of the oldest of the peninsular and oriental liners and this was to have been her last voyage.

She has been running continuously since 1888. She had on board a lot of specie for China as part of the advance of international bankers to the Chinese government.

REACH LONDON.

LONDON, March 16.—A score of passengers from the wrecked steamer Oceana reached Victoria station today clad only in night dresses and pajamas. Half of the number were women, most of whom were in a state of collapse. Some of them were without stockings or shoes and some had fallen into the water during the rescue and still were clad in their wet clothes.

When the passengers rushed on deck after the first shock the water was already dashing over the liners bows. The officers and some of the members of the crew quickly marshaled the passengers near the boats. Women were passed down first, but a panic occurred among the Lascars, who tried to get into the boats with the women. They were thrown out. The officers, including the captain and 120 Lascars were landed at New Haven, while others were landed at Eastbourne, but their exact number has not been ascertained.

ANOTHER DISASTER.

WRECK IS REPORTED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CEUTA (Morocco) March 16.—A fishing boat reports that an Italian trans-Atlantic vessel has been wrecked off the coast of Almanza on the African side of the Straits of Gibraltar. The fishermen declare that a number of the steamer's boats, which put off from the vessel, capsized and that the occupants were drowned.

SANTA MONICA COMMITTEE FAVORS COMMISSION RULE.

SANTA MONICA, March 16—Mayor Dow's cabinet of advisers has gone on record as in favor of the commission form of government. These men and women advisers to the Mayor have been discussing the question for several months, and early in the year appointed a committee to investigate the question. After future research, this committee has submitted the following report, which was unanimously adopted:

"Your subcommittee, appointed January 19, to take up the matter of a new charter for the city of Santa Monica, and report upon the same, at a subsequent meeting, beg leave to submit the following:

"It has been a settled question in the minds of a large majority of Santa Monicans, for a long time, that the present city charter is not only inadequate, but actually a handicap, to the best interests of our growing municipality.

"Therefore, after a careful study of city government, considering the best model charters, and meeting in committee with a charter expert, J. J. Hamilton of Des Moines, Iowa, your committee respectfully recommends the adoption of government by commission for the city of Santa Monica. Believing that, that form of legislation will best meet and provide for the needs and conditions of our city.

"And, we further recommend, that our Honorable Mayor, ask the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce, Board of Trade, Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, and the Pacific City Club, each to nominate three of their members, the same to be citizens of Santa Monica, and freeholders, these to constitute a committee to draft a suitable charter for the city of Santa Monica. The nominations to be submitted to the City Council for ratification."

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

C. E. Douglas, a well-to-do mining man from Chihuahua, who came here to rest and recuperate during the progress of the Mexican revolution, made this morning what may prove to be, a successful attempt at self-destruction. He had been ill and despondent for some time and today, for a moment, eluded the vigilance of his nurse, and securing possession of a revolver, fired a bullet into his head. While the skull was not fractured, the depression was such as to render his condition at once critical. Surgeons were quickly summoned and after the patient had been taken to the hospital the bullet was removed. Mr. Douglas was accompanied to this beach by his family and purchased property on Ocean avenue. He had recently been worrying considerably over the insurrection in the South.

COUNTY CHARTER.

President P. J. Dudley of the Chamber of Commerce, has appointed the following named delegates to the convention to be held in the assembly room of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Thursday, March 21, for the purpose of considering ways and means for perfecting an organization to nominate fifteen persons for the office of freeholders, to be elected May 14, from the county at large, to draft a charter for the government of the county: Dana Burks, A. R. Fraser, Frank Stewart, Roy Jones, Carl Schader.

This appointment was made at the request of the Board of Supervisors and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. All commercial organizations in the county have been invited to send delegates to have a voice in the steps preliminary to the submission of the project of placing the county under the commission form of government.

BOY KILLED.

The 9-year-old son of C. H. Featherstone was run over by an automobile, and killed, tonight at Speedway and Paloma avenue. The machine was driven by J. Dickenson of Park avenue, who says the boy ran in front of his machine while he was proceeding at a leisurely pace.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

CAMPAIGN FOR MORE MEMBERS.

Pasadena Board of Trade Plans Lively Month.

Worshipers Want Police to Guard Their Autos.

Representation on Charter Commission Desired.

PASADENA, March 17.—In order that it may become an even more efficient factor in the affairs of the city than it now is, the Pasadena Board of Trade has launched a campaign materially to increase its membership. The organization will be twenty-four years old next month, and it is the hope to celebrate the occasion by the admission of 200 new members.

The Board of Directors yesterday set April 22 as membership day. That will be the official birthday anniversary, and upon that day the new members will be admitted and plans will be made for the coming year.

While no particular programme for the event has been planned, it is not improbable there will be a dinner or some other form of meeting.

The organization now has 1000 members. It is planned to increase the number to 1200. Each member yesterday was requested to make it his business to secure one other member.

The Board of Trade has the best interests of Pasadena for its object, and since its organization has played an important part in the progress of the city.

Two sets of plans for the proposed new Colorado-street bridge across the Arroyo Seco arrived yesterday from the architects in Kansas City, and more are expected to come tomorrow.

"The plans were a little late in arriving and the time for bids will have to be extended," said Mayor Thum last night. "They will probably not be called for before the middle of next month. I presume that it will take about ten days to complete the contract, and that it will then be about ten days more before actual work will have been begun. The bridge is to be completed within a year."

It is understood that the county of Los Angeles will take similar action in regard to the extension of time for receiving bids.

POLICE TO GUARD AUTOS.

The police department is confronted with a new problem, which is to guard the automobiles left standing in front of churches on Sundays.

For some time an officer has been detailed to the First Methodist Church to do this work. There on Sundays the automobiles are lined up along the curb for a block in either direction. Several other churches are now asking that like provision be made for them, both so that none of the machines will be stolen while the owners are at services, and so that there will not be the least possible congestion.

Pasadena will make an effort to secure at least one membership on the board of fifteen freeholders that is to draw up the new proposed charter for Los Angeles county.

The Board of Trade directors met yesterday to consider the matter, and a committee of five was appointed to name twenty delegates to the convention soon to be held in Los Angeles, at which candidates will be nominated. This committee will meet at 8 o'clock this morning. The members are L. H. Turner, Leo G. McLaughlin, Lloyd R. Macy, Harry Geobegan and A. J. Bertonneau.

Councilman Rhodes of this city, yesterday appeared before the City Council of Alhambra in regard to the garbage situation, and, as a result, it is probable that the ordinance recently enacted by that city governing the hauling of Pasadena garbage through Alhambra to the city farm will be temporarily suspended.

Mrs. C. A. Peck, of No. 53 Dayton street, is the owner of a hen, a cross between a Rhode Island Red and a Wyandotte, which holds the record of having laid six eggs in the last three days. Two eggs were laid by the hen yesterday within an hour's time.

E. P. Taliaferro will deliver a lecture on the Bible at the Board of Trade rooms at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Five well-known residents of the city have been asked to appraise the portion of the Rosenbaum estate which will be required in the right of way for the new Colorado-street bridge, across the Arroyo Seco. City Attorney Carr has agreed to abide by their judgment. They are W. L. Green, M. E. Wood, Lloyd Macy, David Blankenhorn and C. T. James.

T. J. Norton, general attorney for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, a resident of Chicago, is in the city for a visit. He is staying at the Hotel Maryland.

Local Democrats formed a Woodrow Wilson Club at the rooms of the Board of Trade last night.

Theatrical Man Gives Seven Hundred South Pasadena Youngsters a Pleasant Afternoon—News Briefs.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 16.—The pupils of the elementary schools of South Pasadena were the guests of W. H. Clune at a minee performance in his theater at Pasadena, this afternoon. Transportation and admission were free. Special cars left Mission road and Fair Oaks avenue at 2 o'clock, taking the children to the theater, and returned with them at 4:30. Each teacher had the students in her room under personal charge, and about 700 pupils enjoyed the pictures.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The concert given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church last evening was a most enjoyable affair. Bridal wreath and asparagus plumoso was arranged in an appropriate manner on the platform and choir rail. Mrs. Willis N. Tiffany was the soloist of the evening, and she rendered pleasing number from Grieg, Debussy, Ware and Nevin. She was assisted by Miss Birginia Stivers, reader, who presented "The State of Main Girl," by Kate Douglass Wiggin, and other selections. The flute solo by William Mead, and flute duet by Messrs. Mead and Miss Mead were heartly encored. Other numbers on the programme were a duet by Messrs. Arthur Stinton and Horatio Cogswell, and a baritone solor by Mr. Cogswell. This is the second of the series given, the next occuring next Friday evening, when Dr. Murkett will give his reading, "Scenes from Grand Point."

Two speeders were brought before Recorder Soper yesterday. One a resident of Pasadena was fined $15; the other from Los Angeles, who had been brought before the Recorder about five weeks ago, was fined $50.

Nearly 2000 voters of South Pasadena are estimated to be registered in the books, which have just closed for the coming election. Of this number about 35 per cent. are women, although definite figures are lacking.

St. Patrick's Day was celebrated at the South Pasadena High School yesterday by appropriate exercises in the auditorium at assembly period. A paper on the origin of St. Patrick's Day was read, followed by music and Irish jokes and anecdotes.

COVINA.

COVINA, March 16.—Mrs. S. J. Walton, a local elocutionist, won the gold medal at the W.C.T.U. medal contest Thursday night in the Methodist Church. Others contesting were Mrs. Joe Heath, Miss Brandt, Mr. Schaffer and Mrs. E. G. Prather.

The marriage of Dean Fesler of Covina to Miss Margaret Brandt occurred on Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Lordsburg. The couple will live in Covina.

The Covina City Trustees have introduced an ordinance which provides for a strict censorship of moving-picture shows and vaudeville entertainments.

The regular meeting of the Covina Valley Farmers' Club was held this afternoon at the home of the president, Ben F. Thorpe.

Long Beach.

WANT SERVICE NON-SECTARIAN.

Long Beach School Officials Confront Old Issue.

Electric Railroad Agrees to Establish Better Rates.

Huntington Beach Orators Are Defeated.

LONG BEACH, March 16.—The High School senior class next Wednesday will decide on the baccalaureate services and a lively discussion is looked for, as several members insist that the exercises shall be held in the auditorium and be of a non-sectarian character, and that Catholics as well as Protestants be given a place on the programme. One of the graduates is a Catholic but those agitating the idea say they are not doing it particularly for his sake but from a feeling that it is the fair thing to do.

Last year after the school board had designated the Methodist Church as the place for the baccalaureate service Rev. Father Reardon of St. Anthony's Church wrote a public letter bitterly scoring the board for an evident inclination to make the exercises entirely Protestant. The board rescinded their order and left the matter entirely with the graduating class, who decided to stand by the first plans. It is to avoid any trouble along this line this year that the seniors favor a public hall and a non-sectarian service.

FREIGHT RATES.

Mayor Hatch and President B. F. Tucker of the Chamber of Commerce received word this morning from Traffic Manager Pontius of the Pacific Electric that it had been agreed that the disputed freight rates between Long Beach and Los Angeles would be adjusted at once and that the same tariffs between San Pedro and Los Angeles would apply to Long Beach. The readjustment came about through a protest from the city to the railroad commission and the threat of the North Pacific steamers to withdraw from the Long Beach port unless the existing discrimination was removed.

GASOLINE EXPLOSION.

The explosion of a gasoline stove last night set fire to and totally destroyed a cottage on Obispo avenue, with its contents. The house was the property of Mrs. J. F. O'Brien and valued at $2500, partially covered by insurance. The household goods of J. W. Bennett, a tenant, were also burned.

ORATORICAL PROWESS.

Long Beach debaters last night defeated Huntington Beach debaters on both sides in the simultaneous debate on the subject of old-age pensions. In Long Beach Henry Buffum and Elmer Tucker, taking the affirmative, won from Paul Leebrick and Ray Overacher by a score of 207 to 183½ and at Huntington Beach Albert Morosco and Hugh Shippy, taking the negative won from Leonard Livernash and Charles Decker by a score of 214 to 187. By this victory Long Beach increases its lead over other schools in the league and will probably win the championship.

CHARGE DISMISSED.

Justice Underwood this morning dismissed the criminal charge against T. E. McDonald, of securing money under false pretenses from a local business woman, deciding that the evidence would indicate that the victim would have to recover her money through a civil action.

McDonald was released and threatens criminal action against a man named Ward, who, he says, impersonated an officer and arrested him.

NEWS BRIEFS.

While attempting a pole vault this afternoon Harold Davidson, aged 12, fell and caught his arm under him in such a way that both bones were broken, the ulna protruding through the flesh. The boy bore the pain bravely while the bones were reset.

Miss Alice Grayden, the new secretary of the Associated Charities, arrived today from Indiana, and at once took charge of the affairs of the organization.

Because of the absence of Judge Call in the East, the arguments in the strand beach title suite have been continued in Judge Bordwell's court until April 2 and the bathhouse tide land suit will have to be advanced to a later date.

David Harrington died this morning at his home on Elm avenue. He was 51 years of age, and came here only a few weeks ago from Wayne, Neb.

The steamer Yosemite, in tow of the steamer Saginaw, arrived from San Diego this evening and entered the Craig dock to have her broken propellor shaft replaced. A wireless message was sent to Craig's this morning, off Newport, announcing her safe progress northward.

The brother of Mrs. J. C. Clough, living on Atlantic avenue today asked the police to locate his sister, who left home on Thursday and has not been seen or heard from since. She is 76 years of age and it is feared harm has befallen her.

Henry Labouchere.

[Argonaut:] The late Henry Labouchere was with the British legation in Washington for ten years. One day a strident Britisher blustered into the office where Labouchere was, and demanded an audience with his country's representative. Labouchere answered that the British Minister was out, and asked whether he might not do for the business in hand. The visitor replied that "no understrappers" would do; he would wait for the Minister's return. Labouchere imperturbably smoked his cigarette, and after two hours prepared to leave for the day. "When will the Minister return?" asked the visitor. "I don't know exactly," answered Labouchere. "You don't! And this is a British representative! Where has he gone?" "To England. He sailed from New York last Saturday."

STOMACH DISTRESS AND DYSPEPSIA GO

HEARTBURN, GAS AND INDIGESTION GO FIVE MINUTES AFTER TAKING PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

As there is often some one in your family who suffers an attack of Indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat, without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy Stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula, plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes, and relieves at once such miseries as Belching of Gas, Eructations of sour, undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other Stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common, everyday cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and besides, poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the Stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

VETERANS RECEIVE PENSIONS.

One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars Paid Out at End of Quarter—Recent Deaths.

SOLDIERS' HOME, March 16.—When a small balance still due to pensioners on furlough shall have been mailed, the total amount disbursed at this branch for the quarter will exceed $150,000.

The sum of $106,027.16 was paid in cash to pensioners, by Treasurer E. W. Moore; checks amounting to $41,018.82 have been forwarded to members on furlough, and a balance of $2058.70 is being hurried to other veterans "absent with leave," making a total of exactly $150,104.68 for the quarter ending March 4.

MANY FURLOUGHS.

Though furloughs are usually much in demand, following a March pension day, the spring wanderlust is just now assailing restless old vets in record-breaking numbers. One hundred and thirty have already been granted furloughs for period of from one to three months, while more than a score of applications, now waiting approval, will make a total of 150 furloughs for the quarter. In addition to that, thirty members have, upon their own request, been granted honorable discharges. Several of the latter quoted, in conversation, the current opinion: "We are banking on the passage of a reasonable pension bill for future maintenance at our own homes."

RECENT DEATHS.

John C. Wilkinson, formerly of Co D, First Nebraska Cavalry, a native of Ohio, admitted from Portland, Or., in 1912, died March 12, aged 64.

James M. Diamond, formerly of Co. A, Second Illinois Light Artillery, a native of Vermont, admitted from Sunland, Cal., in 1902, died March 9, aged 74.

George W. Brower, formerly of Co. E, First Michigan Engineers, a native of New York, admitted from Los Angeles in 1905, died March 18, aged 71.

Thomas J. Brawner, formerly of Co. F, First Iowa Cavalry, a native of Ohio, admitted from Jerome, Ariz., in 1902, died March 14, aged 73.

Moses H. Jones, formerly of Co. F, Twelfth United States Infantry, a native of New York, admitted from Argus Range, Colo., in 1895, died at Neenah, Wis., March 4, while on furlough, aged 70.

Charles E. Sausser, formerly lieutenant of Co. B, Eighty-fifth Ohio Infantry, a native of Ohio, admitted in 1911 from Los Angeles, died in that city while on furlough, February 24, aged 78.

Homer E. Remsburgh, formerly of the United States Navy, a native of Ohio, admitted from Winchester, Cal., in 1903, died at Fresno, Cal., while on furlough, March 6, aged 77.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING.

Avalon Couple After Fifty Years of Matrimony Deliberately Renew Their Vows—News Briefs.

AVALON, March 16.—Mr. and Mrs. N. V. Grey celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last evening among a large circle of their friends. The home was artistically decorated with flowers. The bride is 69 years of age, the bridegroom, 75. In 1883 the couple came to Southern California and for sixteen years have been residents of the island.

An impressive feature of the celebration was that Prof. F. E. Burnham performed another "marriage ceremony," much to the amusement of all present. "Does anyone know more about Nathaniel V. Grey than his wife does at this time? If so, let him now state it, before I again pronounce them man and wife," he said. The same question was asked of the "bride." No response. The ceremony proceeded. "Not content with having been in bondage for fifty years, Nathaniel V. Grey is willing, before these witnesses hein assembled, to solemnly declare that he will willingly serve another fifty upon the same plan."

Many presents were received by the happy couple. Several days previous to the celebration numerous presents were received from friends in all parts of the State.

Among those present were Capt. and Mrs. T. Grey, Violet Grey, Capt. and Mrs. L. Casey, Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Beckham, Dr. and Mrs. J. Sovereign, Prof. and Mrs. F. E. Burnham, Capt. and Mrs. S. Clover, Capt. and Mrs. I. L. Newberry and daughter, and Mr and Mrs. A. A. Carraher.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Commencing April 1, Edwin Stanton, postmaster, announces that deposits will be received for the postal savings bank. For several years efforts have been made to establish a bank on the island. The postal bank will be of considerable service.

The funeral services of W. A. Broham, aged 82, were conducted here today, Rev. M. A. Martin officiating. For thirty years "Billy Bruin," as he was better known, never left the island. When removed to the hospital in Los Angeles several weeks ago, owing to his sickness, he had his first electric railroad trip. Many floral tributes were sent with the body, which arrived here today for interment. Back of his little cottage, where he has resided many years, lay the local cemetery, and in a little private patch of ground, at the request of J. B. Banning, Sr., the remains were buried. Mr. Broham first came to California in 1876 and had been in the employ of Phineas Banning, founder of the Banning interests, many years. He was one of the oldest residents of the island.

BURNED WITH HOT TAR.

Glendora Roof Worker Victim of a Terrible Accident—Candidates Named for Charter Commission.

GLENDORA, March 16.—A workman on the Frank Chance brick block in course of erection (known as Joe) was horribly burned with hot tar this afternoon. He was engaged with several other men on the roof when a bucket of tar heated to a high temperature was accidentally overturned above his head while he was in an upright position, the entire contents falling upon his head and neck and went streaming down to the waistline and down the arms and over both hands, covering him almost with the red-hot, tenacious inky blackness.

The hair was a mat of gripping tar and the skin on the exposed surface pealed off in places when temporary relief was attempted. His agonizing cries, heard for two blocks, soon brought a number of men to the scene of the accident. Dr. W. R. McNair was called, but not being in at the time, J. W. Maloney, his pharmacist, rushed to the aid of the injured man with first aid remedies. The probabilities are that the eyes of the victim will me swollen shut by morning from the effects of the terrible burns about the face, and that it will be weeks before he will be able to go to work again.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Responding to the invitation sent out by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Glendora Board of Trade held a special meeing Thursday evening in Flora Hall and elected C. H. Converse and Dr. W. W. Strain delegates to attend the convention called to meet in Los Angeles Thursday next for the purpose of naming fifteen candidates for the county charter commission, the same to be ratified by the people at the ensuing election.

After an enforced suspension of almost two weeks, owing to the serial rains from March 1 to the 13th of 15th, the Glendora packing-houses have resumed operations with full crews of pickers and packers. Ten to twelve carloads are being forwarded daily, and it is the intention of the managers of the packing-houses to take full advantage of the opportunity afforded by the more favorable weather to keep the fruit moving rapidly until the close of the season.

Coronado is full of life now.

CLAREMONT.

CLAREMONT, March 16.—At a meeting of citizens held last night in the City Hall, reports of the appraisers of the Citizens Water Company were heard. They placed the present value of the Light and Power Company's property at over $89,000. A resolution of the stockholders in the company was also read offering to sell the property for $65,000 to the town. After considerable discussion, the citizens voted to ask the trustees to submit the question of bonding the town for the purchase of the plant in the very immediate future.

Last night, the students at the Claremont High School gave an athletic benefit at the new high school auditorium. A farce, "The Sleeping Car" by William Dean Howells was presented under the direction of Mrs. Worth Merritt. The play which was in three acts was uproariously funny, the principal parts being taken by the Misses Marjorie Woodford and Helen Sturges. The Messrs. Tom Hughes, Robert Fleming, William Cree, Stanley Barnes and Julius Becker also distinguished themselves. The two high school Glee clubs also sang and the orchestra was composed of high school students.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, March 16.—At the regular monthly meeting of the city trustees the question was discussed of allowing the Pacific Light and Power Company to sell power to outside parties who desire to operate pumping plants within the city limits. The city holds a contract with the power company to furnish power only to the municipality, and there is some opposition to allowing the company to sell power to individuals, but the policy of the present board of trustees is to permit this under certain restrictions, charging the company a gross per cent upon the revenue so collected.

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night a committee was oppointed to whom all persons soliciting favors from the city will in future be referred. Plans for further beautifying the Santa Fe Park were also discussed.

BUYERS OF BEES GO TO ORANGE.

VIGILANT APIARISTS KEEP HIVES CLEAR OF DISEASE.

Recent Rains Make Owners Feel Practically Sure of a Fine Crop of Honey This Season—New Town Is to Have a New Bank, With Ample Working Capital.

SANTA ANA, March 16.—That Orange county bees are recognized over the State as among the freest from disease is shown by the large number of buyers of bees who have made purchases here in the last month. Today 350 stands are being loaded for shipment to Brawley. These bees were bought by Roy Bateman. County Bee Inspector Pleasants went through the stands in search of foul brood, and found every stand in healthy condition.

So far the vigilance of apiarists of this section has kept the European foul brood from appearing here. The American foul brood has been present all over the State for years, but by constant inspection and prompt destruction of infected hives, the disease is kept at its minimum here.

The recent rains in the foothills have assured the apiarists of a fine crop this year. The flowers are blossoming and the bees are at work.

NEW BANK.

Articles of incorporation were filed today by the La Habra Valley Bank, which will do business as a State bank at Brea, in the rich oil district and farming section in the northern part of the county. The capital stock is $25,000, subscribed by Los Angeles men, George and C. M. Chaffey, W. J. Hole, C. R. Thomas and Thomas Davidson. Less than a year ago there was no town at Brea, and now it is a thriving community, big enough for several kinds of business houses, including a bank. The development of the oil industry in that section has been little short of marvelous.

NEWS BRIEFS.

When the City Trustees meet next Monday night they will be presented with a petition signed by many property owners asking that another policeman be added to the force, which now numbers four. The petitioners want the new man added to the railroad's beat. J. H. Isenberg will be an applicant for the appointment should the Trustees grant the petition.

FAMILY OF LONG LIVERS.

Octogenarian First of Five Brothers to Die—Veteran of Civil War and Business Man.

Col. W. B. McCord, the eldest of five brothers died at the Columbia hospital, Friday evening, aged 80 years. Since the war he was a resident of Chicago where he was engaged in business, but in the last few years he had been coming to pass the winters in Southern California.

Col. McCord was the first of the family of brothers to die and all the others are more than 70 years old each. They were close in family affairs and business. The five and a sister's husband enlisted at the first call to arms for the Civil War and each served three years or more. Col. McCord enlisted as a sharpshooter, but later was appointed to command a negro regiment and served with distinction.

Two sons, A. C. and D. W. McCord, and a daughter, Miss Eva, were with their father for some time before his death. The funeral is to be held in Minneapolis.

Dynamite Is Found on Y.M.C.A. Building Site.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 16.—Henry Anderson, who was knifed Thursday night by Nels Hanson, died at 4 o'clock this morning at the County Hospital of blood poisoning. Before Anderson died he and his slayer faced each other. Anderson was making his ante-mortem statement. Several times he turned to Hanson with the exclamation:

"That's it, isn't it, Nels?"

Then Hanson gave his version of the killing: "Of course, we never had much sense. I am sorry. Neither one of us is worth very much," was the way the accused wound up his statement, which differed very little from that given by the deceased.

The two were members of the "vino gang," a group of shiftless fellows, given to wine drinking, who have hung about town many years, some of them coming from rather good families. They quarreled over 75 cents which was supposed to be the change from a dollar used in buying a bottle of wine.

Hanson and a member of the gang named Brady offered to fight Anderson. The latter fought with Hanson, and an hour later as the two met Hanson thrust a knife into Anderson's stomach. Blood poisoning quickly developed. The inquest will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

COLLIER FUNERAL.

The funeral of Dr. J. T. Collier, who died at the Angelus Hospital at Los Angeles Thursday at midnight, occurred from the family residence here this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment was in Mountain View, under auspices of the Masonic lodge. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. Arthur Polk Brown, of the Baptist Church. At the cemetery Chaplain M. B. Shaw of the Seventh Regiment, for the Masons, presided. The pallbearers were: Judge B. F. Bledsoe, Dr. J. N. Baylis, F. H. Magoffin, W. A. Vale, Robert Poppett, W. C. Seccombe.

CONGRESSIONAL ASPIRANT.

Justice of the Peace A. B. Paddock of Rialto has had his friends "throw his hat into the ring" for Congressional honors. Last night the citizens of Rialto held a rousing meeting at which the nomination of Justice Paddock was made. He has for years been a leader in Republican politics in this county, is one of the heavy orange growers of the Rialto section, and has a host of friends. Until this announcement Riverside has been the only town with announced aspirants, Francis Cuttle, president of the Riverside Water Company, and Samuel C. Evans, former Mayor of Riverside.

VICTORVILLE BOOMS.

That a full-sized boom has struck Victorville is the news brought back by recent visitors to the town. Hotel accommodations are at a premium Agricultural activity extends for thirty miles out on the desert. In all directions well rigs are sinking for water, and water is being developed. Between 25,000 and 30,000 deciduous trees, mostly apples, are being set out this month. The last census gives the town 800 population, but estimates now place the population at 700.

DYNAMITE PLAN.

John W. Barton last night saved the Y.M.C.A. site from being disturbed by a dynamite explosion. From his window opposite the site he noticed a curling smoke. Investigating he found a sputtering fuse. Pulling it up, he found two heavy charged dynamite caps. Why anyone would seek to blow up the site, the dynamite being at the roots of a gigantic palm, is a mystery. The officers are investigating.

FULLERTON.

FULLERTON, March 16.—Elliott Johnson, who was severely burned in a gas explosion in his bunkhouse on the lease of the Delaware Union Oil Company in Brea Canyon yesterday morning, died today at the Anaheim Sanitarium. Johnson was a relative of the Waterburys of New York, who own a large interest in the Delaware Union and was himself well to do.

POLICE CHIEF SERVES NOTICE ON AGITATORS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Upon receipt of notice from the secretary of the San Diego branch of the Socialist party of America, that another demonstration in front of the City Jail would be attempted tomorrow Chief of Police Wilson issued a warning that any act of a breach of the peace would not be tolerated.

Chief Wilson tonight intimated that last Sunday's resort to water from fire hose to disperse the crowds would not be repeated. Instead he declared that other methods of dealing with the situation, which he would not reveal, will be put into action. His note of warning to the law-breakers follows:

"Mr. J. R. Cathran, secretary San Diego branch Socialist party, No. 1533 H street, city.

"Dear Sir: Replying to your letter of the 15th inst., permit me to say that at the present time the holding of a meeting by the Socialist party or any other political organization at the time and place named in your letter could serve no good or worthy purpose.

"A lawless and disturbing element has gathered in our city from all parts of the country, an element composed largely of aliens, and men who boast that they owe no allegiance to the government laws or Constitution of the United States, who openly flout the flag of our country, which the world over is recognized as the symbol of freedom, liberty and popular government. This element has for some weeks been creating disturbance and openly defying the law.

"Such a meeting as you suggest would be in violence of ordinance No. 3324 of the city of San Diego, and cannot be permitted.

"Recognizing that the party you represent is composed very largely of American citizens who love their country, and only differ from any other patriotic citizens in their theories of good government, and methods by which it should be attained, I very earnestly wish you refrain from any acts that can only be regarded as unwise and unpatriotic.

"Yours very truly,

"J. K. WILSON,
"Chief of Police."

LIQUOR TREATMENT

Dr. Neal's Method Always Reliable as to Satisfactory Results.

PLAN MUNICIPAL SYSTEM.

Oceanside Trustees Ask for Price on Private Plant and May Call a Bond Election.

OCEANSIDE, March 16.—Four of the five City Trustees are on record requesting the Oceanside Electric Company to state the lowest figure at which it will sell its plant. If the price is not satisfactory the same four Trustees are for proceeding with arrangements for the voting of bonds for the construction of a municipal plant for lighting purposes. The action of the board is the outcome of considerable dissatisfaction on the service given by the local company The company is not now operating under a franchise, and owes the city $80 franchise tax.

The fifth member of the board takes the position that the lighting company need not hold a franchise but says that if the company is operating without a license the city would have the right to fix the rates charged for lights. He also states that the managers of the company claim that the operation of the plant is not profitable at present.

As yet the company has not set a price upon the plant. Less than two years ago Seth Hartley, who was in the field for the plant, was unable to make satisfactory terms. It was Hartley's scheme to obtain the plant and operate it in connection with the plant at Escondido which he at that time owned, furnishing light and power for the two cities and for the intermediate country.

For a small plant it is considered one of the best on the Coast. It was installed by E. V. Griffes, the present manager, who is a large stockholder.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Judge Britt of Hunsaker & Britt, attorneys of Los Angeles, will be in the city the first of the week to confer with the city officials on matters connected with the proposed diversion of water from the San Luis Rey River for use near San Diego. The city will probably resist the taking of this water and the plan is to employ Hunsaker & Britt as counsel.

Eighteen men stationed on the line between Orange and Riverside and San Diego counties, in charge of Capt.-Gen. S. Marron, by order of the Supervisors, have turned back scores of "I Won't Work" travelers, en route for San Diego city.

THREE BOYS ALARM CITY.

Redlands Youngsters Spend Disagreeable Night On Snowclad Mountain—Searchers Start.

REDLANDS, March 16.—After a strenuous night spent near the summit of Mt. San Bernardino, Warren Stokes, Jacob VanVleet and Clarence Thornquist, aged 16 years, for whom a searching party had been organized, telephoned this morning from the Edison powerhouse in the mountains that they were safe and would be home by noon.

The lads left here yesterday morning expecting to go to the summit of Mt. San Bernardino and return home last evening. A snowslide on the trail caused them to lose their way and they were wandering about on the mountain about thirty miles from Redlands when the sun went down last night. They finally came across an abandoned cabin in which they spent the night. With two feet of snow on the ground, they were unable to secure any dry wood and as a result the smoke from the burning timbers on the fireplace almost drove them outside. They managed to weather conditions and as soon as they were able to see the valley below this morning, they began their descent.

The parents of the lads were greatly alarmed and a searching party left here at 9 o'clock this morning.

EDUCATOR DIES.

Miss Phoebe Allen, age 73 years, who taught the exclusive school in New York at which Mrs. Grover Cleveland received her higher education, died in this city today. Miss Allen was born in Norwalk, Ct., in 1839. She taught in the public schools of Cleveland for twenty-five years before establishing the New York school. She was a prominent worker in the Theosophical Society. The body will be taken to Pasadena Monday for cremation.

SWISS PIPE WITH A HISTORY.

Riverside Man Receives Heirloom Which Has Been in Family for Eleven Generations—News Briefs.

RIVERSIDE, March 16.—A Swiss pipe four feet long and eleven generations old has, by the process of heredity, just become the property of A. Hoagland of this city. This ancient solace of the house of Hoagland was made in Sweden in the year 1707. The heirloom has always descended from oldest son to oldest son, so when Mr. Hoagland's father died several months ago he claimed his birthright, and recently a sister sailed for America to deliver the priceless pipe, arriving here a short time ago.

The pipe which was made at Umeo, province of Westobotten, by Mr. Moagland's ancestor eleven generations removed, existed intact until 1878, when the original stem was destroyed by fire, and for many years the great massive bowl was laid aside simply as a recic and finally the great-grandson of the original maker of the pipe refitted it with the stem it now has. The great bowl is carved from a solid piece of brier root with fitting of silver; the stem is of wechsel wood and the mouthpiece is of bone, being attached to the stem by a few inches of bright red leather, thus making the pipe more easily moved about while in use. When smoking the bowl of the pipe rests on the floor. This style of pipe is still extensively used in Northern Sweden.

ELECTRIC COMPANY ORGANIZED.

The Southern California Utilities Company, which proposes to generate and sell electrical power and energy, has organized and capitalized at $10,000,000, of which $50,000 is paid up, and articles of incorporation have just been filed here; the incorporators are Charles E. Waite, M. M. Millice, La Monte Simms of Riverside, W. S. Peloubet and Maurice Salzman of Los Angeles. The company is organized to do business in San Diego, Riverside and Orange counties, and its organization is significant of early developments in the construction of trolley lines connecting San Diego and Los Angeles by way of Riverside, although the incorporators refuse to give out any information at this time.

Those closely in touch with matters pertaining to the new trolley line say that the tentative route leaves San Diego in a general northerly direction through the El Cajon Valley, Sycamore Canyon, thence to Escondido, Rainbow, Temecula Valley and from there directly into Riverside. Branches may also be built into Hemet and San Jacinto, the former place with its immense dam offering possibilities for generating a large amount of electricity.

RIVERSIDE BRIEFS.

George M. Gleason, for ten years secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Osaka, Japan, is at the Mission Inn for a few days accompanied by Mrs Gleason, their two little children and a Japanese maid. Mr. Gleason will speak tomorrow morning at one of the churches, in the afternoon at the Y.M.C.A. and in the evening at the Inn. He and his family are on their way to Philadelphia for a visit, but will return to Japan this summer.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Associated Charities was held today. The report of the treasurer showed the cash receipts for the month to be $128.50; from citizens and the Supervisors there were received three loads of wood; twenty-five sacks of flour; 100 pounds of sugar, 300 pounds of beans; 500 pounds of potatoes; five pails of lard, two cords of wood. From women's organization garments valued at $162.60 were received and from one merchant goods valued at $50.25 were received. During the month eighty families were helped, ten of these being colored, thirty-eight white and thirty-two Mexican.

A municipal garage is about to be erected for the shelter and general care of all automobiles and auto trucks used by the various departments of the city. The city already owns a motor-propelled chemical engine and has placed orders for two more of 80-horsepower each, these will be powerful to pull the steam fire engine and will be equipped for that purpose. The Street Department and the Police Department will also probably soon be equipped with an automobile and patrol wagon, while the electric light collector uses a runabout, there being poor economy in using horse-drawn vehicles in a town as scattered as Riverside.

RAILROAD MEN IN CONFERENCE.

RIPLEY AND SPRECKELS MEET AT SANTA BARBARA.

While No Definite Announcement Was Made by Either of the Principals It Was Intimated that the Discussion Involved the Future Control of New Road.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Arriving this morning from San Diego aboard his magnificent steam launch, John D. Spreckels made an appointment with President E. P. Ripley and this afternoon the men held a conference at the latter's home, discussing railroad matters as they relate to the territory in the vicinity of San Diego. Just what they did take under consideration neither would divulge, but Mr. Ripley admitted that important business was what brought them together.

The sudden visit of Spreckels with Mr. Ripley coming soon after published anouncements of financial differences between Spreckels and the Harriman system gives color to the rumor that Spreckels's object was to have Ripley help him out of the situation. According to reports recently in circulation President Robert L. Lovett of the Harriman roads called upon Spreckels for $2,000,000 which Spreckels is said to have borrowed for the building of his new railroad from San Diego to Yuma.

Whether Spreckels was able to meet the demand of Lovett is unknown and Mr. Ripley would not admit that this was a feature to today's conference. Mr. Ripley is vitally interested in the railroad conditions in the southern part of the States and it has long been known that the Santa Fe was very anxious for an outlet from San Diego to the east. It, of course, has an opening via Los Angeles, but would have a nearer approach and the Spreckels line to Yuma is considered practical.

"Did you make any arrangements with Mr. Spreckels concerning his road from San Diego to Yuma," was asked Mr. Ripley, and his laconic reply was: "We talked very little business, devoting the most of our time to pleasure."

STILL ON ROCKS.

The oil steamer Rosecrans that was beached at Gaviota Tuesday night during a fierce southwest blow may never be rescued from her bed of rocks. Several crews of seamen today succeeded in pumping most of the water from her hold and patched one of the rents on her port side, but this did not give much encouragement to the owners and it is doubted whether the attempt tomorrow to float her will be successful.

It developed today that the steamer is very strongly held among the rocks and it is thought that she might be broken to pieces when the tugs and wrecker start to pull on her.

WILL ACCEPT.

Mayor Boeseke anounced today that he would accept the resignation of City Engineer Samuel J. Paul, who stated last night that conditions in the municipal engineer's department were so unsatisfactory that he could not remain. Paul came here from Los Angeles. Assistant City Engineer will take his place temporarily.

MAY EXTEND THE LINE.

Eagle Rock Road May Be Built to Glendale if Present Plans Are Carried Out.

PASADENA, March 16.—At a meeting held yesterday afternoon in the schoolhouse in La Canada, a tact agreement was entered into, which may result in the Eagle Rock line of the Pacific Electric Railway Company being extended to Glendale, passing through La Canada. The length of new track would be about eight miles. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, attended by about 100 persons. The proposition is to raise $25,000 and work towards this end. This has already been set on foot.

C. H. Jones of Los Angeles appeared in his own interests and those of the Western Empire Improvement Company, and declared that the road would be built and turned over to the Pacific Electric Company later for a bonus of $25,000. Other funds are to be raised at other points which it will touch.

The general expression at the meeting was to the general effect that subscriptions would be easily secured and that the fund would be raised. A committee, composed of Jesse Knight, F. D. Lanterman, W. T. Fomes and E. A. Brighton, was appointed to make further investigations and to take the matter up with other residents of the community.

LOVE FINDS A WAY.

Girl Has Guardian Appointed at Fresno and Marries a Man in the County Jail.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRESNO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stating that she had received "a favorable offer marriage" 16-year-old Marina Aguilarya asked Judge Church to appoint a guardian to grant her permission to accept the offer. Robert Heguera, the man who had sought the hand of the girl, was at the time in the county jail, awaiting trial on a misdemeanor charge.

With the guardian appointed by the Superior Judge, the girl proceeded to the County Jail to her betrothed, accompanied by Sheriff McSwain. The party next went to a justice of the peace, where the marriage ceremony was performed. Instead of going on a honeymoon, however, the bridegroom went back to his cell in the jail and the girl went home, but they expect to be reunited soon, as the charge against the bridegroom will be dismissed.

PROJECT NOT FAVORED.

SAN GABRIEL, March 16.—Last night a mass meeting was held at the Masonic Hall under the auspices of the San Gabriel Chamber of Commerce and the San Gabriel Improvement Association for the purpose of ascertaining the sentiment of the people toward the proposed storm water district in this vicinity. W. H. Wright was chairman of the meeting. F. H. Oldstead, civil engineer, explained the details of the work and its probable cost.

T. Earley, former Mayor of Pasadena, spoke in favor of the project and explained the benefits derived from the storm water district in Pasadena. Supervisor C. D. Manning discussed the question from the standpoint of the Board of Supervisors, and advised that the project receive favorable action.

After a lengthy discussion, in which all sides of the question were brought before the meeting, a motion in favor of the project was downed by a vote of 191 to 61. Large petitions are being circulated by both sides of the controversy, and a hot time is promised on March 18, when the matter comes before the Board of Supervisors for final discussion.

MOVEMENT WANES.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dissolution seems facing the county charter movement. N. J. Gilbert, R. F. Garner and G. M. Cooley have withdrawn as candidates at the freeholders' election to be held early in May. Cooley initiated the county charter movement. Gilbert and Garner boosted the cause enthusiastically. Other resignations are said to be contemplated.

MIDDLE-AGED EMPLOYEES.

Business Men Are Recognizing that They Are Steadier and Better than Younger Office Workers.

"Among the men I hire nine out of ten are better workers at 45 years of age than are men of 25 or 30," declared the secretary and manager of a Chicago commercial house to a writer in Business. "The average young man in business is always seeking a 'soft snap' job, and is not content with sticking it out with an employer, through thick and thin, until his services become highly valuable and perhaps indispensable.

"Long experience with employees of all ages has convinced me that men of 45 or even older make better subordinates than younger men. Of course, this may not apply in hiring men for some jobs, but as a rule it is a safe policy to pursue.

"Young men holding positions of more or less responsibility in the offices of a concern are more easily tempted to spend money that does not belong to them, especially when they are intrusted with it over night. Take our collectors, for instance, who start out at 7:30 a.m. and are not required to report at the office again until the following morning.

"I could recite several instances of young men who came in the morning after and told me they were short because they had been in bad company the night before and had spent some of the money they collected. The man of 45, particularly a married man of that age, knows that he cannot afford to take such chances, hence he is more honest. We do not require men of that age to furnish bond, because we know from experience that they are as a rule dependable."

PROMINENT SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.

THE HEAD AND THROAT.

This form of catarrh is most common, resulting from neglected colds. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

Is your head stopped up?
Does your nose discharge?
Is your nose sore and tender?
Is there pain in front of the head?
Do you hawk to clear the throat?
Is your throat dry in the morning?
Do you sleep with your mouth open?
You can be easily cured now. Don't let it run into complications. Call or write.

OF THE STOMACH.

Catarrh of the stomach is usually caused by swallowing poisonous mucus, which drops down from the head and throat at night.

Are you constipated?
Is there nausea?
Do you belch up gas?
Do you bloat up after eating?
Is there constant bad taste?
Now is the time to be permanently cured. Drs. Shores are curing hundreds every year.

OF THE EARS.

Catarrh extends from the throat along the eustachian tube into the ears, causing partial or complete deafness.

Is your hearing failing?
Do your ears discharge? Do they ring?
Is the wax drying in your ears?
Do you hear better on some days?
Does a cold make your hearing worse?
Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES.

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes and, after a while, attacks the lungs.

Have you a cough?
Do you take cold easily?
Have you a pain in the side?
Do you raise frothy materials?
Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?
Do you feel like you were growing weaker?
Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

CIVIC BODIES CONFERENCE.

Woman's Progressive League Inaugurates Plan for New Organization—To Operate As Clearinghouse.

Plans were partially formulated yesterday morning at a committee meeting at the headquarters of the Woman's Progressive League in the Higgins building for the organization of a conference to include delegates from all of the city's civic bodies.

The committee having the proposition under consideration was appointed at a conference of civic workers two weeks ago. Its work was not completed yesterday and it was decided not to make a public report prior to a meeting at the league's headquarters on the 25th inst., at 10 a.m.

All civic organizations in Los Angeles are urged to be represented on that occasion. The permanent conference which is to be organized at that time will not commit any organization to any movement to which it does not voluntarily subscribe. It is designed to operate as a clearing house between the several societies and the hope is that it will unify the affiliated organizations along many lines of action. The Woman's Progressive League has taken the initiative in this direction because it believes that some such body should exist to assist Los Angeles in reaching conclusions about many important questions which the completion of the Panama Canal will bring both to this city and State.

The members of the committee, who discussed the project yesterday are Carl McStay, Mayor Alexander, Dr. Elbert Wing, Mrs. D. C. McCan, Mrs. Oliver P. Bryant, Mrs. O. P. Clark, Mrs. E. C. Bellows, Clifford Howard, Dana Bartlett and Meyer Lissner.

Senator Thompson of Alhambra addressed the Woman's Progressive League yesterday afternoon on the subject of charter revision. He advocated a comprehensive charter for the county.

Under a law passed by the Legislature at its last session a county may adopt the commission form of government.

An active branch of the league has been organized at Monrovia. It is called the Monrovia Woman's League and has 100 members. They held a meeting Friday for the purpose of hearing the candidates, who stand for municipal election on April 15.

IN FURNITURE COMPANY.

O. J. Singer of Indianapolis, a furniture man of twenty-five years' experience, prominently connected with the H. Lauter Company of that city, the largest furniture manufacturers in the United States, has decided to make Los Angeles his home.

By a deal which has just been closed, Mr. Singer becomes vice-president and secretary of the Los Angeles Furniture Company, a concern which, grown most favorably known in Los Angeles since 1870. He will have an active part in the business affairs of the company. Mrs. Charles E. Fredericks remains in the corporation as president and treasurer.

Through observations made in his travels all over the United States, Mr. Singer has become one of the best informed men in the furniture trade. Many of his ideas will be adopted in the plans for the expansion of the business. It is hinted that his factory connections in Indianapolis may prove to be a great value to the people of Los Angeles from a financial standpoint.

MILLER-BROGAN WEDDING.

Miss Loretto Brogan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Brogan of West Forty-second place, and Mr. Albert Miller of Dayton, O., were principals in a quiet wedding ceremony performed yesterday morning by the assistant rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in the presence of a few friends and members of the bride's family. The event is the culmination of an extended courtship entered into some years previous to the bride's coming to Los Angeles to live, but will nevertheless prove a surprise to friends of both parties in this and their home city, Mrs. Miller having formerly resided in Dayton. After an extended honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Miller will return to Dayton to live, Mr. Miller being in business in that city and prominent in club circles as a Thirty-second degree Mason and a Shriner.

ADDRESS TO MINISTERS.

Rev. Ralph B. Larkin, Congregational superintendent of home missions, will speak at the meeting of the Congregational ministers, Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock, at the First Congregational Church. His subject will be "Efficiency in the Local Church," and his address will be followed by a discussion of concrete plans for improvement. The meeting will be open to laymen and each Congregational church is expected to be represented by one or more men of the church, in addition to the pastor.

There's Satisfaction In Perfect Eyesight

So many afflictions follow in the train of poor, strained eyesight that it is one's duty to see that the eyes are not abused by overwork.
It is surprising how many cases of suffering that have been endured for years disappear of themselves when the cause, EYESTRAIN, is removed. Indigestion, nausea, nervousness, fainting spells, languor, tiredness, morbidness, nervous dyspepsia and other nervous conditions are symptoms of EYESTRAIN that only right-fitted glasses will relieve.
My specially ground lenses and my methods are calculated for the relief of just such conditions.
No extra charge for the examination.

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Remember, I make this broad statement after putting ten years of my time on this one disease and handling in the meantime a quarter of a million cases of this dreadful disease. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY, I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or any one else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see I am telling you the truth.

"Reedcraft" is an art product of superior design and workmanship. Its popularity was so pronounced that imitations soon sprang up, but like all others, they lacked the essential features that go to make perfection in Basketry. Too many people believe that our furniture is beyond their means. REEDCRAFT QUALITY, we admit, is beyond the best of the average store, but is not high priced.

Reedcraft is made and sold only at 808 South Broadway.

BIG RUSH FOR SEEDS FOLLOWS THE RAINS.

Ranchmen, Gardeners and Home Growers Swamp the Stores and Nurseries—Trainload of Agricultural Implements Reported Sold in Past Four Days—Thousands of Dollars Worth of Packages Handled.

LIKE A FLOCK of hungry harvester hands the ranchmen and small garden owners of Southern California have descended upon the seed, truck and agricultural implement stores and nurseries of Los Angeles and have fairly swamped them with orders since the rains of last week.

It is estimated that 50,000 pounds of seeds—garden, ranch and flower—have been sold here during the past four days.

It would require a respectable-sized freight train to haul away the gardening and farming implements that have been purchased since the rains.

Inquiries as to the stocks of seeds and implements on hand began coming into the stores one week ago when the rains were pouring generously over the Southland. The astute owners of garden patches and ranches saw that the ideal time for planting every character and breed of seed, bulb and root was nearly at hand.

The large seed stores had been carrying heavy stocks of seeds from last fall. They had cut down their working forces as the months of continued dryness continued.

With the coming of the rains the store men immediately overhauled and refilled the seed bins, engaged an extra force of men, and waited. Their expectations were more than fulfilled.

Much of the demand has come from the small land owner who has a truck garden either for his own and family's use, or who may sell what he raises.

In the garden implement and hardware store practically the same rushed conditions were found. Seeders, drills, harrows, rakes, hoes, spades, shovels, lawn mowers, lawn rollers and the hundred an one utensils necessary to scratch and delve in the earth were purchased by the carload. Plows, harrows and things of that kind ditto.

ALL IN A RUSH.

It was common yesterday and Friday to see a man struggling toward his street car or his wagon laden with a half hundred small packages and carrying one or more garden tools under his arm.

The hurry to get the fertile seeds into the ground with the least delay possible resulted in many amusing incidents. One man who had purchased a lawn mower insisted on carrying the piece of machinery with him when he found that it would be impossible to have it delivered until Monday morning. His troubles on the car were augmented by the fact that he was carrying half a dozen large packages of seeds and bulbs.

All week the seed stores sold wholesale lots to the retail trade owing to the tremendous call. Seed potatoes, alfalfa, barley, vetch and corn went by tons and carloads. One seed house had a dray bill of $600 for the six days between the store and the depots. This was due to the big demand from the Imperial Valley, Redlands, Pomona, and other interior points which look to Los Angeles for supplies. Dealers say more seed-stuff is sold here than in any other city of the West.

One house which receives 2000 carloads of seeds every year has practically sold out during the last week, and its manager states a famine in seeds may arise, but that it will not last for many days, as heavy consignments are en route here.

In one store the clerk at the small counter where the garden seeds are retailed in small packages was able to dispose of $5000 worth, mostly 5-cent packages, during the past ten days, breaking all records.

While the rains are the primary cause of the tremendous rush, the merchants say that it is much greater than even during former post-rain periods. This, they believe, is due to the prevalent desire of many salaried men in the city to purchase a little tract of land and do ranching on their own account. These tracts are maturing and ready to be planted, the merchants say, and these small buyers are contributing to the greatest rush the seed stores have ever known.

ON A LARGE SCALE.

With irrigation to furnish a dependable water supply the small farmer doesn't care whether it rains or shines. The man who is farming on a large scale, however, counts upon rain to save his barley, beets and beans, and to boost his alfalfa. That is why the rains of the last few days have had a rousing effect upon the local seed supply. Alfalfa is now selling for $20 a hundredweight. It takes about twenty pounds to sow an acre of ground. The cost of the seed and of the planting comes to about $7.50 an acre. If it goes upon soil of the first quality it may produce twelve tons to the acre, but from eight to eleven tons is a better average. Even an eight-ton crop brings a rich profit and a stand of alfalfa is good for seven years.

Alfalfa seed is usually taken from the fourth crop of the year, when the ripened hay is cut and threshed after the manner of grain. The farmers of Southern California do not go to the trouble of saving the seed and those who do so in the North sell the product to home people. It would be too expensive to bring it to Los Angeles for some reason, and as a consequence Arizona supplies a large amount of the seed sold here. The Arizona article is the Chilian, while German possessions in South America furnish the Arabian and the Turkistand.

Barley, of course, pays nothing like alfalfa, but it does not commit the land to a long tenure. It does not rank with the clovers as a legume and it is the most sensitive of all grains. Most farmers dislike it because of its treacherous disposition. It is the one crop that can find forty excuses for failing, but after threatening itself with destruction from every possible source, it generally manages to come through with a satisfactory amount of hay. Barley costs $2.50 a hundredweight for seed and it requires about eighty pounds to the acre. This year with alfalfa selling at $30 a ton, barley hay has been worth $22.

Potatoes are high this year, both for the table and for seed. A first-class seed potato is now worth $4 a hundredweight, although fairly satisfactory ones can be obtained at $2.75. It takes 500 pounds of potatoes to plant an acre of ground and the crop may range anywhere from seventy to 170 sacks, according to the soil and its treatment. With potatoes, like every other crop in the West, correct irrigation is a big feature.

FALL MAY BE FATAL.

J. C. Williams, 72 years old, a blacksmith of Orange, was perhaps fatally injured, yesterday afternoon, when he walked into open trap-doors in front of No. 447 South Main street and fell twenty feet to the basement. His pelvis was broken and he received a bad cut on his chin and another on the back of his head.

PICKING GOOD BOTH WAYS.

Detectives Arrest Two Men on Suspicion of Being Notorious Eastern Pickpockets.

"The picking is good," remarked W. H. Austin over the telephone to a friend and made an appointment to meet him.

Detectives Wedge and McNamara, who heard him telephone, also considered the picking good, so they picked up Austin and his companion, J. J. Gainor, on South Broadway, yesterday. They believe they have captured two noted eastern pickpockets.

The men first aroused the suspicion of the detectives when they acted in a peculiar manner while walking on the streets, and they were sized up as "dips" and followed. Austin talked loud enough to be overheard and the arrest followed.

HORSE BITES BOY'S FINGER.

Oscar Schmitt, 15-year-old schoolboy, living at No. 224 South Avenue Twenty, was bitten by a horse belonging to the Smith Grocery Company, yesterday, the laceration exposing the bone of a finger. The lad was endeavoring to feed the animal.

Higher Bond.

STANDARD ARRAIGNED AND AGAIN IN JAIL.

EARL STANDARD, the embezzler, looking as if he might be 18 instead of 24, though his face was drawn and his cheeks furrowed with tears, stood before United States Commissioner Van Dyke yesterday to answer. He took more than the total surplus of the American National Bank of Pomona, but the specific charge against him yesterday was that on January 15, 1912, he stole $4936.13 of the bank's funds.

There was little in this proceeding. The prisoner said he did not care to have the complaint read to him, and on the suggestion of Assistant United States District Attorney Regan, his bond was fixed at $20,000.

An effort was made by Attorney Loucks, representing the accused, to have the bond reduced, saying that his client was already under bond of $10,000 to answer the same charge in the State courts. He asserted that Standard is sick, suffering from an affection of the lungs caused by overwork, and that the original amount of the bond was sufficient.

On the part of the government Regan replied that while the charge against Standard is for embezzling less than $5000, that the total amount of his stealing is about $150,000.

Commissioner Van Dyke refused to reduce the bond, but said that a motion can be made at some future time for that purpose, if the circumstances warrant. The hearing of the case was set for April 15 at 2 p.m.

Standard, his wife and brother immediately got busy on the telephone calling up friends in Los Angeles and Pomona to secure bondsmen, but they failed.

Standard was returned to the Coun-

MEXICO'S CHIEF TO COME HERE.

President Madero Makes a Promise to Shriners.

Famous Band and a Cavalry Escort Included.

Programme for Wonderful Week Completed.

The elaborate programme completed yesterday, for the entertainment of 50,000 members of the Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, who are expected in Los Angeles in May, for the Imperial Council, guarantees a week of entertainment on a scale never before undertaken in this country, according to the local managers. There will be magnificent electrical pageants by night, gorgeous daylight parades, and other pleasing attractions without number.

The visit of the nobles and their friends, beginning May 4 and ending May 11, is to be made an occasion all will cherish happily in memory to the end of their days.

Over $75,000 has been subscribed by Al Malaikah Temple and public-spirited citizens to the entertainment fund to be used in making the affair the most pretentious of its kind ever held. The fund is to be increased to $100,000.

Scores of special trains will be required to bring the throng of Shriners and visitors to the royal fete prepared by the nobles and citizens of Los Angeles. Every large city in the United States and Canada will send a strong delegation to participate in the festivities.

PRESIDENT MADERO EXPECTED.

One of the special features programmed for the week's conclave of fez wearers will be the presence of President Madero, of Mexico, escorted by a troop of Mexican cavalry and the world-famous President's band. President Madero telegraphed Motley H. Flint, chairman of the Executive Committee, in charge of arrangements, yesterday, that he will surely come if the revolutionary situation is not too serious at the time, and asked him to reserve headquarters at the Alexandria.

Shriners from various parts of the United States and Canada are arriving in numbers every day to escape the icy blasts of the more unfortunate climatic regions.

In the next few days 30,000 copies of the official programme will be mailed to the recorders of the various Shrine Temples throughout North America, inviting the members to come and enjoy the hospitality and wealth of semi-tropical verdure and sunshine of Los Angeles.

The programme is as follows:

WHOLE PROGRAMME.

Saturday, May 4—Arrival of visiting delegations and special trains. Escort to hotels by Al Malaikah Shrine band and Arab Patrols. In the afternoon the Nobles and their families will be escorted to the beach to witness the great Santa Monica road race over the course that now holds the world's record of 74.63 miles an hour. The first illumination of the electrical display will take place—a display in intricacy of designs and intensity of illumination eclipsing any of the heretofore great ones produced in the City of the Angels.

Sunday, May 5—Touring day of the Angel City. Automobile drives for the visiting Shriners and their ladies, designed to give the visitors a thorough knowledge of the extent, growth and beauty of Los Angeles. The tour will take in the industrial, wholesale, retail and residential districts. Fleeting visits will be made to the civic buildings and imposing edifices devoted to religious works, including the celebrated old Plaza where yet remains the cathedral of the Spanish Dons and surrounded to this day with the romance of old Spain. Automobiles will start from the Hotel Alexandria beginning at 10 o'clock a.m., and will continue until all Shrine visitors have been properly provided for. For the accommodation of the Nobility and their friends extra trains for Mt. Lowe will leave at short intervals during the afternoon. A special fare of $2 for the round trip is made for this day.

Monday, May 6—Crown City Day. Automobiles will convey the Shriners through Pasadena and over the most beautiful drives of that charming place. Free tickets will be given to Shriners to visit the Cawston Ostrich Farm at South Pasadena. A special excursion for the Imperial Council officers, representatives and ladies to Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, will start at early in the morning. Returning party will arrive in Los Angeles in time for dinner. In the evening receptions by various visiting temples in all the prominent hotels, with "Sunny Jim" McCandless of Aloha Temple, Honolulu, leading in the distribution of souvenirs and "salve" at the Hotel Lankershim, to which function all nobility is invited. Islam Temple, San Francisco, will give a beautiful reception in the ballroom of the Hotel Alexandria, at 8 p.m.

Tuesday, May 7.—Santa Monica Day. At 9 a.m., one of the most spectacular features of the annual meeting will be enacted in the escort of the Imperial Officers and Representatives from Hotel Alexandria to place of meeting of the Imperial Council, by fifty Shrine bands and Arab Patrols. Automobiles provided for Imperial officers and Representatives. Ladies accompanying the Representatives to the Imperial Council, under escort of Al Malaikah Temple. A sumptuous shore dinner will be served at Hepburn and Terry's famous retreat. Visits will be paid to Venice, Ocean Park and other beach cities. Bathing and dancing free to Shriners and their friends. In the evening there will be a magnificent pyrotechnic display and an informal Shrine ball.

At 8 o'clock the first great electrical parade will be held in Los Angeles. Arab Patrols, Shrine bands and members of the Nobility with dress suits and fez, as escort to the electrical parade, consisting of fifteen beautiful floats, each built on trucks of sixty-foot electric passenger car, the subjects being something that is prominently before the world at this time and of decided interest to all.

Thursday, May 9—San Diego Day. Set aside in compliment to the stirring, thriving and hustling city of the Golden Gate—farthest south—San Diego will appear in pageant to do honor to the visiting Nobles. Director-General Collier, of the California-Panama Exposition of 1915 at San Diego presents in their chronological order of establishment miniature reproductions of the famous missions of California, accompanied by eight hundred monks, Indians and soldiers apropriately garbed, depicting in impressive tableaux the times and scenes of that day. The parade will move through the principal streets of Los Angeles at 10 a.m.

The exhibition drills of fifty parols will occur at Ascot Park, beginning at 1 p.m., attended by the Shrine bands of all the temples. On this evening the third and final appearance of the electrical pageant will be made through the city over the route of the previous evenings.

Friday, May 10—Los Angeles Fiesta Day. A day given over in the "City of the Angels" to las flores and allegory; art and industry; municipalities and civic enterprise. The morning's activity is ushered in at 9 a.m. with assemblage of all the Shrine and regular bands at government buildings at Temple block, from which place of formation they will march en masse to the rendezvous of the floral and allegorical parade, playing in unison en route world-famed and beloved "Onward Christian Soldier," "America," "Star Spangled Banner" and "Dixie."

The parade will be made up of five divisions representing fraternal, floral, industrial civic and military features.

The crowning feature of the Nobles' visit will be the Shrine ball to be held in the evening at the Al Malaikah Coliseum. Costume de rigeur.

Thousands of tourists in Los Angeles are preparing to remain until after the Imperial Council meeting to witness the spectacle and participate in the wonderful and varied attractions.

SHOULD ATTACK ROOT OF EVIL.

COURT GIVES ADVICE REGARDING THE SOCIAL EVIL.

Tells Purity Squad Patrolmen Men Who Live Off Earnings of Women Should Be Prosecuted—Fines Couple Who Were Arrested During Investigation.

Police Judge Chambers placed himself on record yesterday as opposed to methods sometimes used by members of the Purity Squad in securing evidence against women vagrants when he told Patrolmen Luth and Carter that they were pursuing wrong tactics. Helen Anderson, who said she is a housekeeper, had testified that a man telephoned her to go down to No. 211½ East Fifth street, and meet Grace Briggs and two "gentlemen friends." The latter were Luth and Carter.

"Who telephoned you to go down?" asked the court of the Anderson woman.

"I don't know, sir," she replied.

"Did either of you men do it?"

The patrolmen said they did not; neither did they know who did it. Luth added:

"We have had several written complaints about that house and Sergt. Varey told us to go down and investigate. We were simply acting under orders."

"You can't drive that class of women out of a big city like Los Angeles," said the court. "In this case what you should have done was to have ascertained the identity of the man who telephoned to this woman. He is the one who should have been arrested more than these women. You would accomplish more if you brought more of men and fewer women into court. My advice to you is to run down these men who live off the earning of women."

The Anderson and Briggs women were fined $25 each.

HOLD-UPS ARRAIGNED.

BLAME MOTION PICTURES.

Hold-up "drammers" shown in motions picture houses incited Ray Nettle and Willis Knowles, the boy street car highwaymen, to turn "bold, bad bandits," according to a confession they made yesterday prior to being arraigned before Police Judge Williams in the University Court.

The boys, drug store messengers, were temporarily out of work, and passed their time in cheap theaters. It was their intention to return to their homes in Akron, O., after they had secured sufficient funds. Nettle is 22, and Knowles 19 years of age.

"I'm too young to be tried in this court," said Knowles when he was arraigned. "I'm not of age yet."

"We'll look into that matter latter," said Judge Williams as he fixed their bail at $10,000, and the 19th inst. as the date for their preliminary examination.

Fortune Hunter Speechless.

William Stewart, bald-headed, middle aged man, who, in his quest for a young and wealthy young girl to marry that he might live a life of ease and luxury, followed Miss Luella Forrester and Miss Lucy Langdon, school girls, was sentenced to spend thirty days in jail by Police Judge Chambers yesterday. Stewart was ill at ease throughout the morning as he sat in the prisoners' dock awaiting sentence, having been tried Friday. He didn't have a word to say when sentence was imposed.

Brothers Face Court.

Joaquin Garcia was sentenced to nine months in the City Jail yesterday morning by Police Judge Chambers for resisting Patrolman Arguello when he attempted to arrest Thomas Garcia, brother of Joaquin, for a minor offense. The brothers, who live on North Utah street, attacked the officer, Thomas, stabbing him in the left shoulder and cutting him on the left hand. He has been charged by Arguello with assault with a deadly weapon, and his examination was set for the 22nd inst. Bail was fixed at $2000. Arguello, weak from the loss of blood, and much bandaged, appeared against the brothers, and told how he brought them to the Central Police Station after he had been stabbed.

Plan Carefully, But Fail.

Thomas W. Kelley, arrested by Detective McKenzie for framing up a hold-up with a former jockey named Mayby, was sentenced to 150 days in the City Jail or the payment of a $300 fine by Police Judge Chambers yesterday. The scheme fell through because Walter Cannon, asked by Kelley and Mayby to assist them, tipped the deal off. The former jockey escaped to San Francisco.

His Deal Is Ignored.

Joseph Ignatious Brunschwiller, cashier of the California National Bank of Sacramento, found it necessary to come from the State capital yesterday to appear aginst E. L. Hunt, alias Hant, who passed a fictitous check for $1046.35 on his institution.

Hunt posed as a government agent, buying a carload of hay for an alleged cavalry camp to be established at Burbank, from the Wholesale Hay Company. His efforts to sell the hay at a great reduction at Burbank led to his arrest by Detective Zeigler. Police Judge Rose bound the man over to the Superior Court under $1500 bail.

"I deny your right to try me in a State court as it was a government offense," defiantly said Hunt to Judge Rose.

"I'm too busy to explain the law to you now," replied the court as he bound the defendant over.

Dame Fashion Leads to Jail.

The Fashion Show had such a bewildering effect on C. L. Allen Friday night, as he paraded up one side of Broadway and down the other, that he mistook a number of women for old friends and persisted in discussing the latest styles with them. He was thus engaged when Plainclothesmen Burgess and Ammon appeared. Police Judge Chambers sentenced the man to $60 or sixty days, and he took the latter.

SMILES
—AND—
Good Teeth

Are inseparably connected.

Bad teeth banish smiles, encourage pessimism, menace the health, and depreciate their owner.

Good teeth promote smiles, increase optimism, maintain good health, and constitute a valuable asset that can scarcely be measured in dollars and cents.

Which class are you in?

If you have bad teeth, my IMPROVED METHOD OF ALVEOLAR DENTISTRY will give you smile-producing teeth, far superior to plates or bridge-work, without any of the drawbacks of either.

Call and learn more about it. I will put my time against yours for consultation and examination. It will cost you nothing.

See me if you need any kind of dental service. I take pride in superior filling, careful, sympathetic extraction and particular attention to every detail that will give my patients the best possible service and value. My charges are very moderate. I will make you glad that you came to see me.

STANDARD ARRIGNED.

ty Jail. It is understood bond will be furnished tomorrow by relatives and friends.

"GOOD TO HIS FRIENDS."

Before young Standard was arraigned he talked freely about his case, and did not endeavor to shield himself. "I started to steal two years ago," he said. "It was simply a case of a man being good to his friends, and I wanted to help them out; when I saw I was in for it, and when I could not replace the money there was nothing left for me to do except to keep on, which I did."

Asked if his methods of "doctoring" the books were at all unique, he said: "Oh, no, but I always was pretty good in figures. But the bank officers, if they were on to the job, ought to have found it out; there was nothing complicated about it. I graduated from the business college in Pomona, and was offered the place in the bank; I did not apply for it. President Lathrop made the tender five years ago, and I accepted.

"I did the work of three men at the bank, and was paid the magnificent salary of $83 a month at the time of the trouble. I worked like a slave, and today I am suffering from what I am afraid will be a serious attack of lung trouble."

STILL SAYS OTHERS IN IT.

He was asked point-blank if anybody else was in the steal. Standard gazed vacantly out of the window, beat a rat-a-plan with his fingers on the desk where he was seated, and with a smile and curl of the lip, said: "Oh, yes, there were others." He could not be induced to go into details except to say that all will be known later on.

Referring to the statement in The Times that Bank Examiner Gatch had tendered his resignation, Standard declared: "I will bet a dollar to a cent that his resignation was requested by the Department of Justice. Of course, I know nothing about it, but that is my guess."

On the subject of the property that he had turned over to the bank the young man said that if the oil prospects in the Kern county land pan out there will be enough to pay all that he owes and plenty beside. He said he patented two sections of land in proven oil territory, and filed entries on nearly three sections in addition that in course of time will be patented on the payment of $1 an acre. He expressed the view that if his assets are properly handled and his hopes are realized as to the oil proposition, they will make everything right so far as the shortage is concerned.

READY TO PLEAD GUILTY.

Whether the case will be carried immediately to the grand jury instead of holding the preliminary examination April 15 is not yet determined by the United States District Attorney. If he is indicted, Standard will have an opportunity of pleading guilty in open court when arraigned, and this he will do, he declares, if given a chance. The boy was "broke" yesterday, having but $2 in his purse.

Frank P. Hyatt of Pomona, attorney for the mulcted bank, accompanied by George Hunt, a stockholder, were callers at the office of the United States Marshal while Standard and his wife were waiting for bondsmen.

"The implication or statement of Standard that others are implicated with him in this steal is untrue, at least so far as the officers and attaches of the bank are concerned," said Hyatt. "Last Tuesday he admitted to me that he was alone in the embezzlement in answer to my desire, vigorously expressed, that I wanted to know the truth of rumors as to that matter. President Graham of the looted bank has aged perceptibly since the developments of the bank's affairs; he loses between $50,000 and $60,000."

"Young Standard was the most expert manipulator of figures I ever saw," Stockholder Hunt declared, "and his memory was marvelous. That boy could take a column of figures, rub out every other amount, and the next day restore every figure just as it originally stood."

Go Ahead!

NOW READY TO BEGIN ON INNER HARBOR.

THE FIRST UNIT of inner harbor work was decided upon at a protracted session of the Harbor Commission yesterday afternoon, at which City Engineer Hamlin, Assistant Vincent and Deputy Stuart represented the City Engineer's office, Henry W. Schlueter, one company from Duluth, another from Milwaukee and another from Chicago, all of which will bid on the work, and M. M. Upson and Thomas D. Campbell represented the Raymond Concrete Pile Company.

Chief Engineer Hamlin answered the written criticisms that had been made of the specifications for the work on the inner harbor by James D. Schuyler, engineer for Schlueter's companies, and of the Raymond Concrete Pile Company's engineers, in detail. He explained the strength demanded in his specifications for the sheet piling by declaring that the ground back of the sheet piles would probably have to support electrically operated railway tracks and also an electric crane, making the danger from electrolysis a factor. This was conceded. The discussion was a highly technical one. The companies' objection to what they called the excess requirements as to compressive stress on the extreme concrete fiber was shown to be an objection that could not be overcome without amending the building laws of Los Angeles.

Hamlin was sustained to a great extent in his declaration that the factor as to concrete piling or piers to sustain such loads as would be met with at Wilmington basin is the bearing power of the earth under and around the pile, rather than the compressive strength of the concrete in the pile—that is, the pile, under heavy loads would sink farther into the earth before the concrete was crushed.

With these important questions settled, the general concrete construction was decided upon, and the engineers gathered around the table to note what changes would be made in the specifications. The City Engineer promised that his office would work over-time in getting the revised specifications out, so that they would be ready for the contractors to figure upon tomorrow. Instead of the original 856 feet of wharfage to be figured upon, the board agreed to the suggestion of the companies that the contract should be for 2050 feet. This raises the estimate from close to $100,000, which was Hamlin's idea of the cost of the 856-foot contract, to a figure variously estimated from $240,000 to $280,000. The Mormon Island channel will get 1250 feet of this and the remainder will be on Wilmington basin.

The adoption of these specifications clears the way for the submissions by the competing companies of their own specifications and plans for a harbor project for the inner harbor. They declined to submit the plans until the city's were complete. But the idea that these plans will be for a complete harbor project is stated by the Harbor Commission to be incorrect. The competing companies do not intend to submit their own views of a complete project for the inner and the outer harbor until the City Engineer shall have introduced his plans, showing the location of the proposed warehouse sheds, railway tracks and concrete construction generally. City Engineer Hamlin will not have these plans ready for a fortnight at the earliest.

BARRY AND THE PLAYERS CLUB.

["Vanity Fair" in the Argonaut:] Mr. Richard Barry, having persuaded a court of justice to order his reinstatement in the Players' Club, says now that he will not be reinstated. He has shaken the dust of that classic resort from his feet and it will stay shaken. He will try to drag on a miserable existence without the aid of the Players' Club.

Now Mr. Barry should think twice about this. He might have a pretty good time if he would only consent to go back. He could have the club premises to himself whenever he wished. If he approached the bar his fellow convivialists would fold their tents like the Arabs and silently steal away. There would be no irritating conversation in the reading-room, because there would be no one there to converse. He would have the undivided attention of waiters, bellboys, and messengers. Practically speaking, the club premises would belong to him.

But we can not help thinking that the Court of Appeals has struck a vital blow at clubdom. It will be remembered that Mr. Barry was expelled from the Players' Club for discussing the affairs of the club in his magazine. He was said to have acted in an ungentlemanly manner, and so he invoked the aid of the courts to disprove the charge. But Mr. Barry seems to have misinterpreted the judgment upon which he prides himself. The court did not say that he had not been ungentlemanly. It said that he must not be expelled from the club, or that, having been expelled, he must be reinstated.

Now privacy is the keynote of club life. A club with no privacy is not a club. A club where one's words must be watched for fear of publication is not a club. The life of the club would be impossible under such circumstances. If Mr. Barry should decide to return to the Players' Club he will probably find that nothing worth reporting comes his way. The silence of the tomb will surround him.

BARD FOR TAFT.

Lincoln-Roosevelt Leader in California Cannot Follow Movement in Its Antagonism to President.

Thomas R. Bard of Oxnard, former United States Senator and one of the founders and leaders of the Lincoln-Roosevelt movement in California, is for the renomination and re-election of President Taft.

Mr. Bard visited Los Angeles yesterday on business and made no hesitancy in expressing his views: "I am for Taft and shall do all I can to help his renomination and re-election. Roosevelt is foolish and dangerous.

"I believe that the leaders of the Lincoln-Roosevelt movement are going too far. While I have high personal respect for my many friends in it I think they do not all understand that when I entered it it was with reservations as to the initiative, recall and referendum, in which I do not believe. But I have been with them on other questions, principally the elimination of corporation control of politics and in that result I am still with them.

"But I possess distrust of Roosevelt and have confidence in Taft and I shall gladly help the Taft forces in the Presidential fight."

THE FASHION SHOW.

By T. Howard Wilson.

From finest wool and soft cocoon,
Fabrics spun beneath the moon
While frail fairies dance about
In a rhythmic, mystic rout,
Come these garments flamed with gold,
Dazzling as some tale of old
When Queen Mab still ruled the world
In a lily-bell unpearled.

Garments spun on fairy looms,
Pearly white with shaded glooms;
Bright as yellow poppy's breast;
Red as Phosphor on the West;
Green as sea nymph's fairest dream
When she rides a moonlit beam;
Art and poetry in laces
Wrought by nimble-fingered graces
Under spell of anodyne
Mixed by all the muses nine.

Down the crowded thoroughfare
Thousands murmur as they stare,
Giving those their hard-won praises
Who have wrought these fairy mazes.

PLENTY OF GOOD PURE WATER

Tells of Nature's Great Remedy for All Diseases—Also a Simple Home Prescription to Relieve Stomach Trouble, Kidney and Bladder Affliction, Rheumatism—Mix This Yourself at Home and Try It.

"The people here do not get enough water to keep well," claimed a well-known authority on numerous cases of stomach, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism that are mainly due to the fact that they drink very little water, nature's greatest remedy for constipation and bad blood, but big stump in our system, and if we only the stocks in the companies in which we have been well for a long time to get all of this already in the system, which the individual, as fast as it is eliminated, a change apparent as the result of the recent common prescription treatment will not shatter the nerves of the stomach.

"To cure rheumatism and make the kidneys do their work, are the filters of the blood, which must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter that is the cause rheumatism; the acids that cause rheumatism must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the nerves, and most of all you must stop forming in the stomach from fermenting in the bowels, which is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these purposes you can do no better than use the following prescription: Get from any pharmacy 3 ounces of Juniper Berries, one ounce of Fluid Extract Dandelion, one pint of Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, and four ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful before each meal and one after meal, don't forget the water. Do this often and often.

"This valuable information and simple prescription should be printed up in every household and taken at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or stomach trouble, no matter how slight.

STORY IS MADE IN OIL INDUSTRY

Important Happenings of Past Few Days.

tion and Standard Advance Price of Crude Oil.

ther Menace Taken in Hand by Operators.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 16.—Important history has been made in the local oil industry in the past ten days. In immediate, apparent results the most conspicuous event is the adoption of the plan of the Union Oil Company for lifting from the shoulders of the members of the Independent Oil Producers' Agency the burden of storage charges which they have been so long and so complainingly bearing. It is stated, is to be lost in putting the plan into effect, and by April 10 the Agency executive committee promises to have the storage certificates ready for distribution. Agency members will then be able to exchange certificates to the Union at $1 per barrel, or they may hold them in the hope that the certificates represent in time a larger price if the oil declines a larger price when it ultimately is sold. In the meantime the oil is to be held without storage charges.

All of the certificates are guaranteed for 1000 units per barrel, it will be possible for the Agency member to raise money on his certificates without selling them if he chooses to do so, also to accept the offer of the Union to buy the certificates at their guaranteed value. It is to be open but thirty days after they are printed and distributed to the Agency members. The new agreement, moreover, will permit the Agency to sell each month fully 10 per cent. of its current production, and it is not at all unlikely that in a very short time the entire available output of the Agency wells will be sold as fast as it can be delivered. The present symptoms of the oil market are favorable to increased production and better prices. Although the stocks in the hands of the oil companies in the different fields have been well cleaned up, and the new arrangement respecting storage starts with a practically clean slate, a resolution adopted at the recent meeting of the Agency directors, each member hereafter will be required to furnish storage on his own lease for his surplus oil. A number of the most active and influential members of the executive committee, notably H. V. McQuigg, have been advocating for years past the plan of general storage, and only the evident inability of the weaker companies to provide the necessary tanks and reservoirs has prevented its adoption. The proposal of the Union has cleared the atmosphere, and it seems likely that the policy of the Agency is to be definitely and permanently adopted, and that no great bulk of the oil ever will be allowed to accumulate in the hands of the producers again.

It is well known, of course, that many prominent members of the Agency have had dreams of a great storage of oil to be held in permanent storage tanks and reservoirs under the Agency to constitute a reserve supply to facilitate the taking of large long-time contracts in which the certainty of deliveries would be an important factor. The comparative failure of the Agency's life and the widely varying financial strength of its members, however, have interfered from time to time in the carrying out of the plan.

STANDARD'S NEW PRICES.

The second big event of the week is the announcement of an advance in prices by the Standard Oil. The Standard's new price schedule, already referred to in this correspondence, is as follows: Under 18 gravity, 30 cents per barrel; from 18 to 20.9, inclusive, 40 cents; from 21 to 23.9 inclusive, 50 cents; from 24 to 26.9, inclusive, 60 cents; from 27 gravity up, 60 cents.

Owing to the fact that the Agency has raised the price to its members for the month, it is hard to tell whether the new schedule of the Standard is to meet the Union's offer of 25 cents per barrel. All the Agency oil from the Kern River field would come under the Standard's 35-cent rate, while the thousands of oil from the other fields would command the 50-cent rate.

Whether the new bid is an indication of generally advancing prices cannot be told by a greater demand for oil, and with the restrictions which the Federal government has placed on new development by the issuance of withdrawals there is little reason to suppose that the slump in oil prices will be of long time to come. The effect of this already is seen in the manner in which the industry locally has undergone a change almost as distinctly apparent as the change of sentiment which the recent rains have brought in the farming communities. Another important development is that the whole oil industry is the object of the producers of the state to protect the oil bearing and penetrating waters. Committees appointed at the meeting last week have been in session at Los Angeles during the present week formulating plans and getting ready for the first important work of getting the necessary funds. The plan adopted is to figure the Agency's share on the basis of 2 cents per acre per month, plus 1 cents per barrel per month of a cent per barrel of production, and forward for a check for the

The plan was adopted on the suggestion of Thomas A. O'Donnell of Los Angeles and others who have little doubt that concerted will be readily met if the operators are told that unless they are, that but a small proportion of them, but that it is doubtful if a great majority could be induced to sign agreements that would lessen the value of their control of their properties.

The effect of the water situation is a wide difference of opinion as to the extent to which the danger is exaggerated. O'Donnell stated that in his opinion the fear that the oil fields will ruin any large tract of land together is exaggerated. "At the worst it can only cause one locality to another. The water break into my wells, but it will be to drive the oil into my neighbor." Mr. O'Donnell said it is well established that there is more or less water in the oil sands themselves, sometimes filling large areas to the exclusion of the oil which is found elsewhere in the same strata. Sometimes an oil well will go to water and pump water exclusively for months, then turning back to oil again when the vast globule of water imbedded in the oil is exhausted.

EDUCATION IS THE PLAN.

The need of a general educational campaign among the oil superintendents and drillers is laid stress on by the men who are most prominent in the fight against the water. Different drillers have different names for similar formation, which makes the comparison of logs of wells in the same vicinity very confusing. Others map all their well logs as though the surface of the ground were at the same level in each instance. The compiling of a geological dictionary for oil drillers and the mapping of the strata of all the west side fields in cross section are among the early practical tasks to be attempted. It also will be the aim of the organization to establish uniform methods of shutting off water. Some operators now make it a practice to cement the surface water above the tar sand, while others cement below the tar sand. The result is that in the latter case the surface water may enter the tar sand, flow along that stratum to the well that was cemented above the tar sand, and flowing down the outside of the casing enter the lower oil strata.

Another matter which the association will take up is the action of different kinds of water on different brands of cement. All the water encountered in the oil wells is mineralized, and the different minerals act injuriously on certain cements. It is suggested that many unsuccessful cementing jobs are due to the use of cements that will not set in the particular kind of mineral water encountered. Experiments, research and education along all these lines are to be the chief present resort of the association.

The recent rains have made the roads to the Lost Hills field almost impassable for automobiles, but the production of oil and its delivery through the associated's west side pipe line go merrily on. The Universal is now delivering the last of a 250,000-barrel contract to the Associated and has made a new contract for 3000 barrels per day at a better price.

The Universal has gone into the sand with its well No. 19, which promises to be in the same class with the other good producers on section 32, 26-21. On section 34 the American Oilfields is getting down close to the 2000-foot mark.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Abandoned Cesspools Dangerous.

LOS ANGELES, March 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I beg space in your valuable columns to ask our city officials why it is that there is no attention paid to the thousands of old abandoned cesspools that are today little short of death traps all over the residence portion of the city.

It is well known to every official in this city that prior to the completion of the outfall sewer some five years ago, that the greater part of the residence districts were using cesspools.

On the completion of the outfall sewer, the property owners were notified to disconnect the cesspools and connect with the sewer. In some instances that notice also called for the filling up of the cesspools, but these orders were never enforced, and today not one in forty of these death traps has ever been filled up.

In a city where there are as many tenement houses as there are here, and where so much property is constantly changing hands, there are necessarily many unsuspecting people walking over these foul pits that are likely to break through without a moment's warning.

Strange to say many property owners have beautiful lawns and shrubbery growing over these pits, knowing that some member of the family is likely to an unsavory bath any day.

I suppose if the Coroner should get a few jobs on this account the blame for it would be charged to the already over-burdened shoulders of Providence. If there is no law governing this matter, it is time the City Council was enacting one.

BANQUET OF HIBERNIANS.

Bishop Conaty To Be The Guest of Honor in Celebration of St. Patrick's Day.

The Hibernians of this city will do honor to their Patron Saint on Monday night with a banquet at the Alexandria at 8 p.m. The guest of honor of the evening will be Bishop Conaty. The list of speakers includes: President Osborne, of the Chamber of Commerce, Judge McCormick, who will speak on "Judicial Administration in Ireland;" Lieut.-Gov. Wallace, whose address will be on "The State of California;" and Rev. Paul Dillon who will deliver the final address on "The Day we Celebrate."

During the dinner The Philharmonic Male Quartette—Messrs. Jepson, Balinger, Ostrom and Adams—will sing Irish songs. The harp will be played by Mrs. Tessie Cook Haskins.

The Reception Committee, of which Dan Murphy is chairman, has arranged all details for the banquet and it is expected to be attended by the representative Irish business and professional men of the Southwest.

CHINESE PRESERVED EGGS.

Some Recently Shipped to Portland Had Been Packed Several Years and Were Still Fresh.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean:] Veteran Chinese eggs, apparently just as good as new, are being shipped into Portland in great quantities from the Orient. The stock which has been arriving has been puzzling the scientists, exciting the commission men and worrying the cold storage dealers. The stock indicates excellent quality, even though it may be several years old.

Cold storage men say that eggs placed in icehouses are seldom of marketable quality after nine months, but the stock coming from China—hundreds of barrels at a time—is said to be several years of age, yet when opened seem to be freshly laid. Importers have sold hundreds of barrels of these Chinese eggs to logging camps, where they have given perfect satisfaction. Dealers report the eggs are sold not only at a lower price, but are guaranteed to remain fresh almost indefinitely.

Chemists who have attempted to solve the secret have arrived at no satisfactory explanation as to how it is done.

LAND DECISION AFFIRMED.

The decision of Receiver Robinson and Register Buren of the local Land Office involving over-lapping claims to 1800 acres of land in the Imperial Valley, has been affirmed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office. The parties to the suit were John R. Seifert, Robert M. and Thomas W. Davis, Nat R. Titus, Roy C. Holbrook, George H. Wollscroft, D. D. Copenhaver, Arthur Ewens, two claims, Milton P. Adams, Robert Barry, Mary Koch, David F. Harbison, Eugene Gannon, George W. Stephenson, Judson H. Payne, Maude Markwell, Thomas and Edward Donnelly, Peter J. Storms, Alva T. Vaughan, Elliott McMullin and Nellie Minnear.

BANISHING WAGES.

If the Democrats remove the duty from typewriters and sewing machines and printing presses what will there be to prevent the manufacturers of those articles from removing their plants to Europe or even to Asia, where workmen can be trained and hired for half the wages paid to Americans?

TOO MUCH GINGER.

Another playwright, whose wife is an authoress, has discovered himself unhappily married and a new divorce is about to blossom at Reno. Temperament seems to be worth a lot more in books than at a family fireside. One genius at a time is as much as any family should be asked to suffer. Temperament plus temperament invariably equals domestic upheaval.

WILD OATS.

It is unfortunate that an opinion prevails in the public mind that every man must sow his wild oats. It is equally unfortunate that many men who fail to sow the seeds of folly in their youth insist on going bad at an age that should be filled with honor. The whole proposition is absurd. A man may sow wild oats in his youth and become a comparatively good man when he finally settles down to the business of living; but the bird with the broken wing can never make the flight of the bird that has never fallen.

ALL IN TIME.

A "city beautiful" expert criticises Los Angeles for devoting too much energy to municipal and commercial enterprises and for not paying enough attention to schemes for enhancing the city's loveliness. Two answers may well be made in the city's defense. One is that Los Angeles possesses so many natural advantages in climate and in flora that every door yard is in itself a little gem. The other is that Los Angeles in its splendid youth is now only laying the broad foundation for the magnificent city which it is to be. With its development along material lines, the finer forces are certain to enter and in the end the fruit will justify the solidarity of the vine.

SLIM AND STOUT.

Sartorially, slim effects in men are to be all the rage this season. So the tailors have decreed. And where is the would-be Beau Brummel to dare defy the decrees of the tailors in convention assembled?

But this being also a Presidential election year, slim men may be said to be popularly out of the running. And where is the insurgent politician capable of thwarting the desires of a whole people that a stout man—stout not only in form but also in heart and principles—occupy the Presidential chair for another four years?

Verily the fashions in clothes be changeable, but in men fixed and certain.

NEARSIGHTED.

Mountain outlaws killed a Virginia judge, a Sheriff and a District Attorney in order to gain a few hours of freedom for one of their number. Three convicts assassinated the warden, deputy warden and usher at the Nebraska penitentiary in order to escape prison. There is no hope that any of these men can retain their liberty for more than a few days, and their arrest is almost certain to be followed by capital punishment. With all society organized against crime and with so little advantage to be gained by any kind of violence, it is exceedingly strange that any man lives who would continue to think himself smarter than all of the forces of the world and superior to all the laws which govern not only man but the universe.

REMOVING SUGAR DUTY.

The Democrats in the House of Representatives represent very few farming communities. Their constituencies are found in the great commercial and manufacturing centers where naturalized and unnaturalized foreigners congest. The clear air, clean living and right thinking of the country is a soil wherein the disease germs of Democracy and the devil grass of insurgent Republicanism do not thrive.

Considering the political origin and purposes of Democrats and their Rooseveltian Republican allies, it is not surprising that 174 Democrats and 24 insurgent Republicans voted to place sugar on the free list, against the votes of 96 Republicans and of 7 Democrats from Louisiana and Mississippi to retain the present moderate duty. The farmers who raise sugar beets cannot, except on this coast where the freight tariff from the East protects them, compete with beet-root sugar made in Germany where agricultural laborers are paid less than half the wages obtained by American farm hands. Placing cane sugar on the free list will not close the plantations in Hawaii where Japanese and Chinese labor is employed, nor will it seriously affect the Louisiana planters who hire negro labor. The beet growers of the Middle West and Northwest will probably discontinue planting that vegetable, and the beet-sugar factories will close, if the Senate shall pass the House bill and the President shall approve it.

But the Senate may not agree with the House. There is no pretense that the cost of producing beet sugar in Germany is not less than in the United States. It is Republican doctrine that there should be a duty equal to the difference in the cost of production, and the Senate is safely Republican.

NEUTRALITY REGULATIONS.

Once more the American people have occasion to return thanks that there is a statesman instead of a featherhead in the White House. The Mexican situation was entangled in grave complications by the capture of Juarez by the insurrectos. It gave them complete possession of a Mexican port of entry, which carried with it the right to import arms and munitions of war. Our officials considered that they could not under our laws stop such shipments, although they might be morally certain that the importations would be used by the insurrectionists against the Madero government, and might be used to aid in the robbery, murder and expulsion of our own citizens from Mexican cities.

"Silent arma inter leges" is a maxim of the law of nations. With our peaceful and friendly relations with the Mexican people placed in serious jeopardy by a narrow and technical construction of our neutrality laws, and a total disregard of their spirit, it was time to put a stop to the miserable business of allowing guns and cartridges to go into Mexico merely because they passed through the customhouses in the daytime as merchandise instead of being smuggled over the border after nightfall.

President Taft proved himself to be equal to the exigency. He called the statesman, Senator Elihu Root of New York, and Senator Culberson of Texas with Senators Cullom, Bacon, Hitchcock and Smith of the Foreign Relations Committee, along with Secretary of War Stimson and Atty.-Gen. Wickersham, into consultation, and impressed his views upon them. Those views were accepted by both the Republican and Democratic Senators as sound and statesmanlike, and a joint resolution was prepared to meet the exigency. The customs of the Senate, if invoked, might have prevented its immediate consideration. But "nice customs curtesy" to great occasions as well as "great kings."

ure, which under a suspension of the rules could be passed as a concurrent resolution, could be passed as a concurrent resolution empowering the President to prohibit the exportation of munitions of war to Mexico. The House will be certain to concur, and in the meantime President Taft, anticipating the passage of the resolution, has issued orders to the War Department to peremptorily stop the exportation of arms and munitions of war into our sister republic. The border patrol will enforce the order both as to its letter and spirit. Our peace with Mexico, which was endangered, probably will be preserved, and we will be indebted for this to the vigilance, promptness, courage and learning of the great, patriotic, common-sense statesman whose name is William Howard Taft.

ERIN GO BRAGH.

This is "St. Patrick's Day in the morning." On this day many sons of Erin wear green neckties and pin shamrocks to the lapels of their coats. They elevate banners of emerald hue, on which golden harps are embroidered, and sing:

"How is ould Ireland, and how has she been?
'Tis the most distressful country that ever yet was seen.
They're hanging men and women for wearing of the green."

That was a hundred years and more ago. Today a Hibernian patriot might garb himself in a suit of billiard cloth, and march up and down the Strand in London singing "The harp that once through Tara's halls," and no uniformed British bobby would interfere with him.

Within the last quarter of a century the people of Ireland have emerged from the gloom of poverty into the sunlight of a just-dawning prosperity. The system inaugurated in Gladstone's day of purchasing the land of Ireland in large tracts from its owners, and selling it to the former tenant in small holdings and on long time, has proved of incalculable benefit to the Irish farmers. Ireland is admirably adapted for market gardening. The west winds carry the ocean clouds against the mountains of Erin. There they discharge their burden and make of Ireland the best watered country in Europe. This is not favorable to grain crops, and does not benefit root vegetables, but it causes pastures to be green and succulent, and makes of the Emerald Isle the best mutton, beef and dairy country in Europe, with a market at good prices across the channel in the great manufacturing and commercial cities of Europe for all that Ireland can produce. But a grazing and dairy country does not require the services of as many men as one where manufacturing industries are pursued, and the new land laws have not sensibly diminished the deportation of the surplus population of Ireland to the United States, Canada and Australia.

St. Patrick, whose day will be celebrated today with song and speech wherever the English language is spoken, was not an Irishman. He was born in France, and the legend that he banished bacteria from the bogs of Ireland lacks scientific authentification. But Irishmen accept his saintship in the same cheery and hopeful spirit as do the children who place their trust in Santa Claus. There are no better citizens or kinder or more generous friends than those of Hibernian origin. The Irishman is irrepressible, vivacious and optimistic. Poverty cannot engloom him. He jests through his rags and over them and at them. Imprison him, and his lark-like song will rise to heaven through the iron bars. He is ever enthusiastic and seldom thrifty. The warm-hearted peasant who desired to express his joy at O'Connell's liberation from prison, and who was too poor to send up rockets, or to illuminate his cabin with candles, and too proud and patriotic to allow his house to remain dark, set fire to the thatch and made a bonfire of his home.

Many of Britain's statesmen, soldiers, jurists and orators were of Irish birth. Their patriotic devotion to their native land did not, however, stand in the way of their accepting favors and offices from the British government. Ireland's sweet singer, Tom Moore, wrote:

"But oh, poor Ireland! if revenge be sweet
For centuries of wrong, for dark deceit
And withering insult—for the union thrown Into thy bitter cup, when that alone
Of slavery's draught was wanting—if for this
Revenge be sweet, etc., etc."

And afterward Moore "crooked the pregnant hinges of the knee" at the court of that incarnated moral rottenness, the Prince Regent—afterward George the Fourth. He dedicated the Odes of Anacreon to His Royal Highness. He declared himself to be "the grateful and devoted servant of the" Prince, and when asked what were really his politics, replied:

"A patriot I am that's a true story,
But, as a poet am-a-tory."

English politicians have been busy for forty years redressing Irish grievances until there is not now so much in English rule for Irishmen to complain of.

TOO MUCH JOHNSON.

The lot of the aggressive, these blustering March days, is far, far away from being a happy one. Everything was going as merry as a marriage bell, when the aggressive Governor, the most aggressive of all aggressives, ordered the rank and file, "Blanche, Tray and Sweetheart," to open their mouths wide and bark for Pompadour Bob La Follette. They barked loud and long as the inmates of the kennel baying the moon, and the next day it rained, hailed, froze and snowed, and the political winds blew conflicting hurricanes from all quarters of the horizon.

The aggressive Governor returned from his aggression over the East, and told every man jack engaged in working his political machine to shut up, brought the news that La Follette was a dead one, and having commanded silence and announced this already well-known fact, he said in the words of the Psalmist: "Open your mouths wide and I will fill them"—with the name of T. R.

Now this is disturbing, disgraceful and disgusting. The whole aggressive following had been doing their most aggressive stunts for the great insurecto Senator from Wisconsin. They had trumpeted his name abroad as greater than the greatest, and as the only man who could lead the chosen through the political wilderness and place them safely in the promised land of offices fat with honors and emoluments. They were committed before the world to La Follette as the only possible leader. To be ordered under these circumstances to break off the tune in the middle of a chord and start a new one at a moment's warning did not conduce to the maintenance of a high order of self-satisfaction.

So about five out of every seven threw down their golden fiddles and refused to take such sudden and unexpected orders from the aggressive Governor. About half of them are are out straight for Taft and the rest are sulking in their tents with a grouch bigger than ever afflicted Achilles, the first and greatest of aggressives. Too much Johnson!

A BAFFLED MOTHER-IN-LAW.

J. H. (Silent) Smith manipulated the New York stock market and retired a multi-millionaire. His widow, with her daughter by a former husband (Anita Stewart,) hied her to Europe in search of a titled husband for her offspring. Prince Miguel, a highly-connected but totally busted scion of the Braganza family, became a suitor for the hand of the American millionairess. But, as the Prince was in the line of succession for the throne of Portugal, he could not legally contract other than a morganatic marriage with an untitled bride. Complaisant old Franz Josef, Emperor of Austria, helped the lovers out of trouble by creating Miss Anita Stewart a Princess of the Austrian throne. Anita and Miguel were wedded and Mrs. Smith became the mother-in-law of a Prince. She was not satisfied. She yearned to be the mother-in-law of a King. Prince Miguel was the next in succession to the throne of Portugal and when King Manuel was fired from his kingship on account of his affinity for a dancing girl Prince Miguel stood next in line for the crown, and Mrs. Smith became exultant.

But "the best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley." Under the Portuguese Salic law the marriage of Miguel to an American girl who was only a Princess by creation, and not a Princess by birth, cut him off from the right of succession to the throne. If Manuel—now alienated from his girl, who is touring Europe with a vaudeville troupe at $500 per—shall succeed in regaining his throne and should eschew matrimony and die without a direct heir, the crown would go to Dom Alfonso Duke de Porto during the lifetime of Alfonso and, after his death, would go to Dom Miguel, the father of Prince Miguel. But on Dom Miguel's death the throne would go to Miguel Dom Duarte, a younger brother of Prince Miguel, and not to Prince Miguel, because, in marrying an American girl, he had violated the Salic law and, according to the decree, "had heeded more the voice of his heart than the interests of Portugal."

It is difficult for a wild and woolly westerner to understand how the interests of Portugal could be disastrously affected by a possible King taking an American instead of a Portuguese girl for his wife. It seems to The Times that the breed of Portuguese monarchs would be improved by a strain of Yankee blood.

The best thing that Mother-in-Law Smith can do under the circumstances is to take her titled son-in-law and her titled daughter and the millions which were made by Silent Smith back to New York City. There they will socially rule as the creme de la creme of the Four Hundred, whereas in Lisbon Miguel would be perpetually muttering—

"Hated is he of Gods and men accurst Content as second where he should be first."

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL HIGHWAY

By the conditions of its public highways one estimates fairly well the power and prosperity of a nation. America, that leads the world in commerce, enterprise and education, is still as a whole behind some of the European nations in this important respect. But every year we are raising the general standard of our roads and every year our people are giving greater attention to the advancement of this cause. Led by pushing and hard-working enthusiasts, California is well in the van of this movement. It is true that we have our hands fuller of large public enterprises than any other State in the Union, but on that account we are not going to let the grass grow beneath our feet along any of our State highways.

Any inhabitant who remembers the general condition of our roads five years ago and contrasts them with the many broad smooth boulevards that intersect our southern counties today will confess our progress in this respect to be nothing short of marvelous. But we are not content to rest on our laurels. The building of better highways is of national importance. In approaching a question like this our attitude is that of Daniel Webster and not of Robert Hayne. Our views are as broad and far reaching as we would have our thoroughfares. Nothing less than one matchless, unbroken highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific will satisfy our efforts or quiet our ambitions.

It is going to be built. The mobility of our military forces requires it. The consolidation of East and West demands it. The growing automobile industry and the great army of motorists call loudly for such a highway. Our national pride—"first in peace, first in war"—will allow no lesser goal.

As a business investment such a transcontinental highway for the advantage of the army, of business and of health and pleasure will repay a hundredfold every State and county, every city and town and hamlet financially interested in the undertaking. If we could inspire the whole country with the same public spirit that is animating our own leaders in the project, a speedy success would be assured. And if the present champions of the ocean-to-ocean highway continue their unceasing efforts and work in the future as they have been working in the present, all obstacles to this necessary and noble enterprise will vanish like mountain snow before summer sunshine.

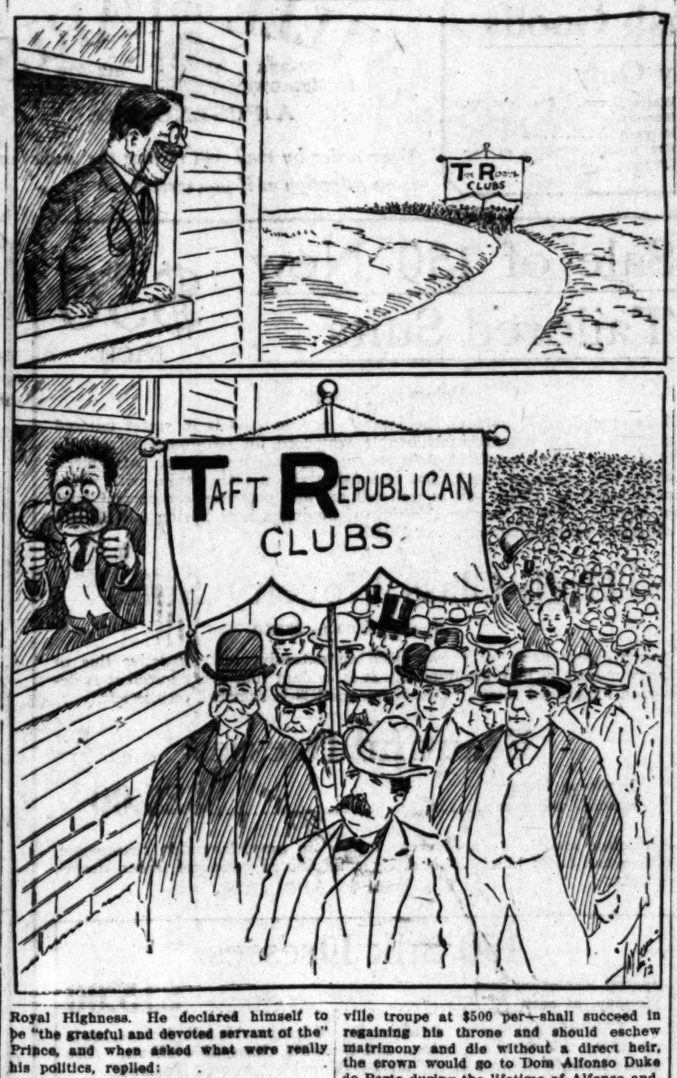
Dee-ceived!



AS THE AMERICAN PRESS SEES COL. ROOSEVELT.

Roosevelt's Recall Theory.

[Kansas City Journal:] Even the most devoted friends of Col. Roosevelt admit that the main point of difference between him and President Taft, so far as their political views are concerned, is that the colonel is an advocate of the initiative and referendum, the recall of judicial decisions and the election of Senators by direct vote. President Taft is opposed to all of these things.

The recall of judicial decisions would destroy the stability of law and leave the courts without power or settled jurisdiction. It would mean a rabid appeal to the crowd whenever a lawyer lost an important case. With such a provision the oratorical attorneys would not be obliged to try their cases according to rules of law and evidence, but could make popular campaigns where unfettered appeal to the thoughtless would weigh against truth and justice. Taft is opposed to that sort of thing, and so are nine-tenths of the thinking people of this country. On practically all important questions except those mentioned the President and Col. Roosevelt are in substantial agreement. Is this wild and extravagant, socialistic theory of the recall of decisions sufficient reason for deposing Taft and setting up Roosevelt? On such an issue the well poised and sound citizenship of the United States will exercise a recall once and for all that will bring the "progressive" rainbow chasers to a realization of their folly.

Tries on La Follette's Mantle.

[Cheyenne (Wyo.) State Leader:] Theodore Roosevelt's address before the constitutional convention of Ohio was a characteristic outbreak of the wordy Teddy. It was clearly a bid for the support of progressive sentiment in hopes of checking the power of President Taft. Taft has been lining up the political forces of the Republican party to such an alarming extent that Roosevelt was forced to emerge from his cave of silence, to try to stem the tide toward the President. He has always been a mere echo of William Jennings Bryan and of Robert M. La Follette, and in this speech he is trying to get closer to these eminent statesmen in hopes of getting the ear of the people.

Palming Off Platitudes.

[Richmond (Va.) Dispatch:] A comparison of their utterances as to the judicial recall delivered by the ex-President and by President Taft will reveal clearly the wide difference between the two men. In the Columbus speech Mr. Roosevelt not only misconstrued, but criticised unfavorably, the declaration of Mr. Taft that it is necessary to keep the judiciary "independent of the majority or of all the people." That statement Mr. Roosevelt twists into a contention that the people are not moral and intelligent enough to govern themselves, when it is plain to all that Mr. Taft simply stands for order as opposed to chaos and as against the ebbing and flowing of popular whim.

If the people of this country are so intelligent and so omniscient, why is it that Mr. Roosevelt persists in lecturing them from the First Reader and the Primer? Platitudes are not policies; verbosity can not conceal vacuity of thought.

End of the Constitution.

[Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin:] Evidently what is advocated by ex-President Roosevelt is a curious thing to propose to a constitutional convention, because in practice it would make written constitutions waste paper. If the electorate and not the courts is to decide disputes hinging on constitutional law, there will be no safeguard against revolutions overnight, for the fundamental law of the land will be subject to change at the caprice of the people, and the people's opinions, subject as they are now to fluctuations, under the influence of demagogues.

Of course the thing Col. Roosevelt proposes would not last very long if it were tried. The people of this country are accustomed to a stable government, and they will have it. In 1861 they showed what they thought of a proposition to tear up the Constitution. Patriotism is not dead in the United States at the present time, and neither is common sense.

Cannot Be Elected.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] Mr. Roosevelt's present endeavor to renounce his renunciation occupies much space, but only shows that he can deceive neither himself nor others, though both himself and some others may choose to insist that he is released from his volunteered word and that they are, too. They are not. He is not. They know that. He knows that. The great mass of Americans know that. The world abroad knows that and says so. The judgment of foreigners is the judgment of posterity.

A man can repudiate his word. But no repudiator has ever been named for or elected to the Presidency. We are certain that none ever will. The disillusionment of a people is hard to face and harder to survive. The Republican ex-President and the Republican people are at the parting of the ways.

Candidacy a False Alarm.

[New York World:] Mr. Roosevelt's earlier impression was correct. The movement to nominate him for President is "a genuine calamity." It is a calamity to his own reputation; it is a calamity to his party; it is a calamity to the cause of progressive government.

How Mr. Roosevelt's best friends feel about it is shown by the speech made by Secretary Stimson at Chicago last night. Mr. Stimson was appointed United States Attorney by Mr. Roosevelt. He was nominated for Governor of New York in 1910 by Mr. Roosevelt. Everything that he has achieved in politics he owes to Mr. Roosevelt, "and I now remain his sincere friend."

But as for Mr. Roosevelt's third-term candidacy, the Secretary of War bluntly declares that "those who are forcing him, contrary to his original intention, into the arena against Mr. Taft, are jeopardizing instead of helping the real cause of progress in the nation."

This is from the man whom Mr. Roosevelt used to refer to as "Our Harry" in the campaign of 1910.

Mr. Roosevelt's latest explanation of his candidacy is that he held back until he finally came to the conclusion "that there was a real demand among the people as a whole for my nomination." He yielded only "when I became convinced that this popular demand was real and was considerable."

Unquestionably Mr. Roosevelt did think there was a popular demand for his nomination, but he was lamentably mistaken. There was no such demand. Had it existed, the announcement of his candidacy would have aroused a whirlwind of popular enthusiasm.

Mr. Roosevelt was misled by the flattery and the shouting and the tumult of a noisy element in American politics that represented only itself. "The people" have not responded to his candidacy, and there is no evidence that they intend to respond. It was a false alarm.

A big drop in the price of pulp is reported, and now John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie will be able to indulge their favorite game. It was feared that the figure would be so high that they could not have the price.

Since some of the enemies of Champ Harmon charged that some years ago he had written a piece of poetry for the papers, we have not seen or heard a boom. On what a slender thread do times hang eternal things!

It seems just impossible to keep the money question out of the show. There is "Paid in Full," "Paid in Part," "Paid," and "Bought and Paid For," to speak of "Lend Me Five Shillings," which old Joe Jefferson used to sing.

COME TO THE WEST.

Come, O come, to the charming West,
Where rolls the Pacific, wild and prolific,
Whose valleys most charming lie to the farming,
With verdure and teeming fruit dressed.
Onward and westward the star is ming,
Onward and westward the sun is coming.

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the charming West.

Come, O come, to the giant Trees,
Whose spirit progressive is ever
sive,
Vast projects financing, all
hancing
Knowing no languor, seeking
Ever enlarging, ever advancing
Come to the land so strangely

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the giant Trees.

Come, O come to the fruit-bearing
Each kind in abundance, each redundance,
In May and December, in June
vember,
Pomona with lavish hand best:
Apples of gold in meshes of Wondrous in beauty, excelling

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the fruit-bearing West.

Come, O come to the Marvelous
Yosemite smiling, sublimely
Sequoias amazing, in altitude
Cloud-piercing, gigantic, quest.
Forests in crystal of every Earth's darkest secret clue.

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the Marvelous West.

Fly, O fly to the Winterless Where song-birds are their trilling.
Every breath is health-giving the living.
The land that is brightest and best.
Soil and the seasons so
Climate unrivaled, inspiring

Fly away, fly away,
Do not delay,
Fly to the Winterless West.

Pen Points: By the Staff.

The Kansas Democrats evidently believe in cheering for Champ Clark while the cheering is good.

It is quite possible that our ex-President is suffering from Dementia Presidentiana. He ought to have it pulled.

Lillian Russell declares that "beauty draws us with a single hair," but John Dryden said it first in his Ovid.

The Teddy Bear manufacturers are all for the colonel, but they will not be delegates to the Chicago convention.

The discovery of the South Pole has improved our knowledge of geography. We now know where Tasmania is.

The next time La Follette runs for anything he will see to it that his friends are chained to the seats of his band-wagon.

If the good roads movement becomes general in California it should afford some of the politicians we wot of improved travelling.

Father, have you commenced to figure on the cost of that Easter hat? It is none too soon, and they do say the prices are altitudinous.

It is a question if Capt. Amundsen did not do violence to the Monroe doctrine in taking possession of the South Pole in the name of Norway.

Down in Mobile a society has been organized for the prevention of cruelty to oysters. We have often noticed that oysters get a raw deal.

It will be noted that the Manchus are beginning to wear clothes like white men, but let it be said to their credit that they do not call them "pants."

Remember the old-fashioned woman who always insisted upon cleaning house about this time of year, and stuffed old papers in the stove in the parlor?

In any event, Woo Wai, the Chinese merchant of San Francisco who is charged with conspiracy to smuggle Chinese was willing to pay the freight. He was a pther.

"What shall we do with our ex-Presidents," is a well-known query. Watch the proceedings of the Chicago convention and prepare to see an explosion from the inside.

We are of the opinion that the man who can have an attack of la grippe and be good natured deserves well of his countrymen and would make an admirable candidate for President.

No one has stopped to inquire what T'dore Bell stands on the Presidential preference proposition. T'dore could transform himself into a hollow square and "come out" for somebody.

A big drop in the price of golf balls is reported, and now John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie will be able to continue their favorite game. It was feared that the figure would be so high they would not have the price.

Since some of the enemies of John Harmon charged that some years ago he had written a piece of poetry for the papers, we have not seen or heard of the boom. On what a slender thread sometimes hang eternal things!

It seems just impossible to keep the money question out of the show business. There is "Paid in Full," "The Price He Paid," and "Bought and Paid For," and to speak of "Lend Me Five Shillings" to which old Joe Jefferson used to appeal.

COME TO THE WEST.

Come, O come, to the charming "Out West,"
Where rolls the Pacific, with mild and prolific,
Whose valleys most charming lie ripe for the farming,
With verdure and teeming fruits heavily dressed.
Onward and westward the music is streaming,
Onward and westward the millions are coming.

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the charming "Out West."

Come, O come, to the giant Young West,
Whose spirit progressive is ever massive,
Vast projects financing, all values enhancing
Knowing no languor, seeking no rest,
Ever enlarging, ever advancing,
Come to the land so strangely entrancing.

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the giant Young West.

Come, O come to the fruit-bearing West,
Each kind in abundance, each season redundance,
In May and December, in June and November,
Pomona with lavish hand deals out her best:
Apples of gold in meshes of grass—
Wondrous in beauty, encnanting the gaze.

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the fruit-bearing West.

Come, O come to the Marvelous West,
Yosemite smiling, sublimely beguiling,
Sequoias amazing, in altitude dazing,
Cloud-piercing, gigantic, awaiting the quest.
Forests in crystal of every known hue,
Earth's darkest secret unsolved, every clue.

Come away, come away,
Do not delay,
Come to the Marvelous West.

Fly, O fly to the Winterless West,
Where song-birds are filling the air with their trilling.
Every breath is health-giving and life-saving to the living.
The land that is brightest and greenest and best,
Soil and the seasons so grandly provided,
Climate unrivaled, inspiring, decided.

Fly away, fly away,
Do not delay.
Fly to the Winterless West.

Los Angeles Times

SCOPE AND AIMS:

CIRCULATES REGULARLY more pages of news and other reading matter and a greater volume of advertising than any other paper extant.

GUIDING FEATURES: Independent—unpromised, unshackled, unpurchased, unafraid and unencumbered. THE LOS ANGELES TIMES is devoted to the great principles of Liberty under the Equal Rights in all fields of lawful endeavor, Industrial Freedom, and the upbuilding of Los Angeles, the State of California and the great Southwest.

FRIEND OF LABOR: The Times is the consistent friend of all honest toil—of unshackled law-abiding workingmen; and while never denying the right of workmen to organize lawfully, is the unyielding foe of lawless, arrogant, monopolistic and exclusive labor organizations, because they are the deadly enemies of their own class and of the entire industrial weal. Our position is unassailable and will be maintained.

ENDORSED: The Times as a journal, and its paymaster is unassailable. During the period between August 4, 1890, and December 26, 1911, there was paid to honest and well-satisfied non-union workmen in salaries and wages, the tellingly eloquent cash sum of $4,268,319.17—a fact worthy of skilled labor.

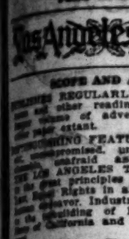
POLITICAL WATCHTOWER



Riverside insurgents, who were asked to arbitrate between former Mayor Samuel C. Evans and Francis Cuttle in their desire to be indorsed as Riverside's choice for the insurgent support of the new [illegible] District, have been led into [illegible] of dissension that is rapidly disgusting them all.

Evans and Cuttle are trying [illegible] as Roosevelt-third-term-Johnson candidates and the arbitration [illegible] proposed by that great trio [illegible] county insurgents, J. P. [illegible], R. E. Keech and E. R. [illegible], who are believed to represent themselves and Johnson. The [illegible] County Committee agreed [illegible] and adopted a postal [illegible] of the Republicans to [illegible]. To this the Cuttle supporters agreed. The canvass was to be [illegible] in Orange county.

Cuttle evidently saw a great [illegible] after this was agreed to, for [illegible] apparent that Evans would [illegible] Cuttle if this basis of decision was used. Hence, when Evans [illegible] Cuttle to discuss a joint appearance at meetings in a county [illegible] Cuttle handed him a letter [illegible] the Orange county trio in which [illegible] stated that the "Orange county [illegible]" would not abide by [illegible] if Evans won, that they [illegible] form a combination with Johnson [illegible] and defeat him unless [illegible] was confined to insurgency. Unfortunately Cuttle showed [illegible] letter to Evans before H. L. [illegible], chairman of the Riverside [illegible] Republican Committee, had [illegible] it and the whole proceeding [illegible] regarded as a big bluff to scare [illegible] out of the race.

Evans refuses to be scared. He declares he has withdrawn [illegible] participation with Cuttle in [illegible] and will make his race independent. As the letter of the [illegible] intimates that Cuttle had [illegible] and that Evans "butted [illegible] narrow last" an insurgent [illegible] standing as Cuttle, he [illegible] unsatisfied.

[illegible] presence of the Orange trio, [illegible] to impress all with the possibility of ejection by the Johnson [illegible] is not the only strange feature [illegible] the work. It is the shifty [illegible] in which the Johnson machine [illegible] reverse power on the "get [illegible] back to the people." [illegible] law is to determine the [illegible] Hiram says so. Yet [illegible] the machine insurgents of [illegible] and Orange trying to trap [illegible] so that Cuttle can win [illegible] the only one on whom the [illegible] can make a "choice."

[illegible] against his Columbian [illegible] became apparent at once [illegible] demand for primaries is accordingly preparing a place for the [illegible] when it comes.

[illegible] what of the insurgents? [illegible] stated La Follette, before [illegible] condemned him and set [illegible]. If Roosevelt ever is [illegible] a minute that the people [illegible] enthusiastic in their choice [illegible] he will abandon the insurgents as quickly or more so, than the [illegible] ceremony, than the [illegible] La Follette.

A. Pinkerton, newly appointed [illegible] to the State Railroad [illegible] has returned from San [illegible] where at 2:05 o'clock on [illegible] Friday, March 15, he hopped on the State pay roll. Edgerton is a radical Democrat, a Wilson boomer and so far has kept his allignment outside of the Johnson machine, but he has supported the regime in its legislative reforms. There is hope that the commission will open an office in Los Angeles soon and if it does Edgerton may take charge of it. It is an onerous burden on the South to visit San Francisco every time a transportation question must be discussed.

Fullerton has organized a Taft Club with nearly 100 members and with W. J. Wickersham as temporary chairman. Writing chairman Stanton of the Taft Republicans yesterday Wickersham says the club was organized under unfavorable circumstances, principally the rain, and that when permanent organization is made it will have 200 or more members.

THE WATCHMAN.

NEGRO INVADES HOUSE.

Compels Woman at Pistol's Point to Collect for Him All the Money She Has.

A well-dressed mulatto forced his way into the Reed residence, No. 1613 Harvard boulevard, about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and at the point of a revolver compelled Mrs. Marion S. Reed, who was only partially dressed, to search through her personal effects until she found some money and after thanking her he fled.

The man first rang the front doorbell. Mrs. Reed could not answer the summons and Miss Ethel Reed, her daughter, was bathing. Thinking no one was at home the negro went to the rear door, cut the screen, and forced an entrance. He was quite taken back when he walked into Mrs. Reeds room and found her dressing, but he quickly covered her with a revolver and cautioned her not to scream. After assuring her he did not intend to harm her, he commanded:

"Get all the money you have in the house."

"I haven't any," nervously replied the woman.

"Well, get some anyway," he demanded showing a bit of irritation.

While Mrs. Reed wen from one part of the room to the other in search of money, the negro followed her, keeping the gun close to her head. Finally Mrs. Reed found $2.50, and handing it to th man said:

"That's all I have."

"Thank you," he replied, as he placed the coins in his pocket. Then he left the house by the rear door.

MORE GOODS RECOVERED.

Robbers Assorted Loot Under Pepper Tree and Discarded Cumbersome Articles.

The thievings of W. Wallace, E. Dempsey and R. Harris, arrested some days ago by Detectives Murphy and Hawley, grow in magnitude as investigations proceed. Additional quantities of loot have been recovered by University Police Station officers and the detectives who made the arrests.

It has been ascertained that Wallace(Dempsey and Harris looted the apartments of Mrs. M. M. Sugarman, No. 145 West Fifteenth street, taking, among other things, a valuable sealskin cloak. It was found in a local pawnshop. In another shop was located the Sugarman dress suitcase filled with minor articles.

The men assorted their loot under a large pepper tree on Tenth avenue, near Washington. The trio discarded the cheaper article and dress suitcases. In one grip, found under the tree, was an electric fan and a suit of clothes. The other grips and valises were filled with stuff the thieves did not want.

A quantity of cheap silverware and jewelry was taken from a man living on Maple avenue near Fifth street. The burglars threw it under a palm in the yard, not considering it worth carrying away.

Wallace, Dempsey and Harris, arraigned before a Pasadena justice, were held under $2000 bail to answer to the Superior Court. The complaint was made by A. Brown, of Pasadena.

SWITCHED THE DIAMOND.

Jeweler Complains of Being Hoodwinked—Pickpockets Get Busy On Cars and Streets.

Frank Brown, a jeweler at Twelfth street and Central avenue, has asked the police to assist him in locating a man who "switched" a half-carat diamond ring on him yesterday. Brown was asked to lay the ring to one side while the man went out to get some money. Brown found that while he wasn't looking the man substituted a glass imitation.

Pickpockets had a profitable day of it Friday, according to reports made to the police, yesterday. Malkola Maisgila, who lives on Alosta street, was robbed of $30 while riding on a Stephenson avenue car. A fellow passenger saw the pickpocket at work and raised an alarm but the man got away.

Emery Albtson, No. 144 North Painter avenue, Whittier, while entering the Land Show, was robbed of $55. A Mexican, walking up beside Mrs. Laura Heines, of No. 817 West Twenty-third street, grabbed her pocketbook and fled.

When Dr. H. K. Emerson returned home to No. 1056 East Twenty-fourth street he found the house had been ransacked. Nothing was missed.

A thief entered the W. C. Jones residence, No. 1843 East Washington street, and took $10 from a trunk and $5 from a bed room.

ENTERPRISING AUSTRALIANS.

Government of Victoria Sends Representative to Southern California to Secure Settlers.

William Cattanach, official representative of the government of Victoria, Australia, arrived in this city yesterday, in quest of settlers for that wonderland of the South Seas. The government has divided large areas of land into tracts of from two to 200 acres, and put the whole under irrigation. These lands will be sold to settlers at from $35 to $85 an acre, with thirty-one years in which to make the payments. hey grow all the fruits that are grown in California, or anywhere else, and the government is so anxious to secure permanent settlers from among the fruitgorwers of California, that it has sent its representative here for that purpose. A land-seekers excursion will sail from San Francisco on April 3, the rates having been so arranged that a man may make the trip to Australia and back in three months, at an expense of $200. Mr. Cattanach will be at the office of the Peck-Judah Company until Monday evening.

New Milk Inspector.

Health Commissioner Powers yesterday appointed N. Howard Sawyer to be milk inspector, the appointment to take effect next Monday. Sawyer's name was submitted by the Civil Service Commission.

Dr. J. M. Peebles,

Ex-United States Consul to Asiatic Turkey, who will celebrate his ninetieth birthday with a reception and banquet next Saturday.

FOUR-SCORE-AND-TEN.

Ex-Consul to Asiatic Turkey to Celebrate Ninetieth Birthday With Banquet Among Intimates.

Dr. J. M. Peebles of No. 519 Fayette street, ex-United States Consul to Asiatic Turkey, and a lifelong globe-trotter, will celebrate his ninetieth birthday anniversary next Saturday. In honor of the event a number of friends have arranged for a reception and banquet at the hall at twenty-third street and Stanford avenue in the afternoon and evening.

The afternoon will be devoted to a musical and literary programme, a social reception and speeches by friends of Dr. Peebles. The banquet, an oriental affair, will be served at 6 o'clock.

In spite of his advanced age, Dr. Peebles is healthy and active. He attributes this fact to a sixty-year abstinence from any kind of meat. He expects to reach 100 years on his diet of wheat, corn, rice, barley, eggs, cream, butter, nuts and fruit.

"Dying early is a bad habit," he says.

TREASURY'S STAND.

Use of Title of "United States Depository" for Advertising Purposes Still in Doubt.

The designation by the trustees of the Postal Savings System of a great number of State banks, as well as national banking associations, as depositories for postal savings funds resulted in so many inquiries being addressed to the Treasury Department regarding the use for advertising purposes of the title of "United States Depository" that the Secretary of the Treasury recently sent out a form letter in which it is pointed out that there is no law restricting the use of the title to those banks which have been designated by the Secretary of the Treasury as depositories of public moneys.

Some banks having on deposit special funds but not designated by the Secretary of the Treasury as depositories of the United States have construed the Secretary's letter as authorizing the use of the title. The Secretary of the Treasury has refused to commit himself further in the matter, notwithstanding the fact that he is being deluged with communications from bankers all over the country.

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

The East Los Angeles Congregational Church will commence the celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary today at 11 o'clock this morning. Rev. Thomas J. Brown will preach an anniversary sermon, and a "Silver Wedding" programme will be given this evening. A "Home Gathering" dinner and social will be given on Wednesday, to which all former pastors and members have been invited. The church was organized by Rev. J. H. Phillips on March 20, 1887, and is still worshiping in the same building on Daly street. The present membership in 225 and among these are fourteen of the original thirty-three charter members.

BOYS' ENTERTAINMENT.

A St. Patrick's entertainment will be given tomorrow evening in St. Agnes parish hall, Adams street and Vermont avenue, by the boys of the Holy Name Society. There will be a good musical programme and a farce, "Smyther vs. Smith," which is announced to be a "shrieker."

EVENING CITY CLUB.

At the meeting of the Evening City Club, to be held at the rooms of the Federation Club, Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, an address will be delivered by James E. Sprunger, State secretary of the Y.M.C.A., on "California's Immigration Problems."

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Judge Willis of the Superior Court has prepared a report on the probation system that shows a small percentage of men placed on probation commit further offenses, but rather become honest wage earners. The report demonstrates a great annual saving to the State.

At the City Hall.

DELEGATION NOW FOR WASHINGTON

CITY'S BIG MEN TO BACK UP FIGHT IN CONGRESS.

Four from Chamber of Commerce to Lay Facts Before Committee. Conference Presided Over by the Mayor Decides to Neglect No Chances for Outer Harbor.

Four leading business men of Los Angeles, members of the Chamber of Commerce, will leave for Washington early next week to support the argument of Congressman Stephens before the Rivers and Harbors Committee in favor of an appropriation for dredging the outer harbor to a uniform depth of thirty-six feet. This was decided yesterday morning at a conference presided over by Mayor Alexander, and at which there were present all the members of the Harbor Commission, Special Counsel Leslie R. Hewitt, Assistant Chief Harbor Engineer Vincent, Chairman Willis Booth of the Chamber of Commerce Harbor Committee, and Chairman Reed of the Harbor Committee of the City Council.

The Mayor is enthusiastic over the prospects and thinks no stone should be left unturned to lay the claims of this city before Congress. "We are certainly making some progress now with the harbor work," he said, beaming with pleasure at the outcome of the conference. "It looks as if we would have the aqueduct and the harbor finished by the same time—both great works, carried successfully to completion, and that will be a big thing for Los Angeles."

To pay the expense of the delegation, the Council will be asked on Tuesday to provide an emergency appropriation and the Mayor prepared a message at noon, urging that such action be taken. The Council is to appoint the four citizens who are to represent the city. The Mayor asks for $1500 for the expense of the trip, to come out of the harbor fund.

At the conference the Harbor Commission announced to Councilman Reed that it had considered his suggestion with regard to using the area belonging to the city on the Miner concession and that the space would be put into condition to care for shipping before the opening of the Panama Canal.

"That is all I wanted to know," said Reed. "If the commission will undertake to do this work, the Council will aid it in every way."

It is stated that, anticipating the outcome at Washington, plans have been ready for some time and will be presented by the committee, which will take along photographs of the outer harbor and inner harbor, showing the work already accomplished and also the specifications for the Huntington fill, contracts for filling which are ready to be let.

CHANNEL FAVORED.
TO BREAK BIG AREA.

John T. Gaffey told the Harbor Commission yesterday morning that it would be far better for the city to run a channel from deep water up through the 573 acres proposed to be reclaimed than to have the land kept as one unbroken area. This is the land that will be embraced within the 10,500 foot bulkhead that the city has announced its intention of constructing to the east of Termial Island.

This area is not to cover the proposed site of the fisherman's wharf and safety basin, as has been feared. The fishermen's quarters are to the immediate north of Deadman's Island and just south of the Pacific Wharf and Storage Company's property. The bulkhead proposed will enclose the greater part of the latter company's frontage, however, leaving it with a comparatively short strip on deep water.

The commission considers Gaffey's idea to be a good one and the City Engineer's chart of the work will include such a channel as Gaffey thinks desirable.

READY TO FIGHT.
EAGLE ROCK RESIDENTS ANGRY.

Residents along the Eagle Rock branch of the Los Angeles Railway sent a delegation to the City Hall yesterday morning armed with arguments cap-a-pie and looking for some one to talk to about the 10-cent fare they say the railway is still charging them, instead of five cents. The delegation was composed of men who were angry clear through, and they asserted that the whole community in that part of the annexed section is in a state that makes the Mexican insurrection look like a wash-basin bubble. The conductors who follow the company's orders in collecting the fare are said to have got into fights and warrants are out for their arrest.

"The people out that way," said John M. Steele, who circulated the annexation petition, "feel that an injustice is being done to them and they declare that they will not pay 10 cents for a 5-cent service."

A petition has been signed by many residents to the City Council and it will be sent to the Board of Public Utilities at an early day this week, in which they state their grievances. "Since early in February," the petition says, "we have been residents of Los Angeles. The Los Angeles Railway Company is attempting to enforce the collection still of a 10-cent fare from us for a ride of only one mile beyond the former city boundaries, on a short and easy haul, and for a service half hourly during the greater part of the day and hourly at nights."

The petition alleges that the company crosses several streets over which it has not a franchise. It asks the Council to investigate and it requests the railway company to be "broad minded," and, by giving a reduce fare to help build up that district.

"We do not intend to wait meekly for the car company to give us our rights in its own time," says the petition, "but will fight with every weapon at our disposal to gain justice, if a 5-cent fare cannot be secured amicably. To this end we pledge ourselves either to refuse to pay the extra nickel demanded or to pay the same under protest and to sue in the proper courts for adequate damages if this rank extortion be continued by the railway company."

THIS CITY MAY ADOPT POLICE LIFE SAVER.

How the Police May Become Bullet-Proof.

Lieut. Butler of the Traffic Squad firing a thirty-eight-caliber revolver yesterday at the silk from which protecting vests are made, and the bullet which penetrated just enough to hang by a thread. The point flattened against the silk, and though it hit in a spot slightly torn it made practically no impression.

THE Police Department is seriously contemplating the purchase of silk cloth bullet-proof vests for officers as the result of interesting experiments conducted yesterday afternoon. A piece of finely-woven cloth was given a thorough test, and found absolutely bullet-proof.

The unique texture test was held at the police revolver range in the basement of the Temple Block building owned by the city. Lieut. Butler of the Traffic Squad had charge.

The piece of silk cloth, about a quarter of an inch thick, was pinned to an old mattress and from a distance of five paces Lieut. Butler with a 38-caliber revolver loaded with steel-jacketed soft-nosed bullets, fired at it. The bullets hit the cloth but did not go through, merely penetrating enough to hang to the silken fiber without even breaking the thread on the other side. That the cloth is bullet-proof was fully demonstrated.

"Well, that beats me," remarked the lieutenant in amazement. "I thought that the bullet would bore a hole through that stuff and keep on going until it struck the concrete wall in the rear. I have often heard of bullet-proof vests but never saw one that stood the test like this one. It certainly is a marvelous creation and would protect an officer's body from any size bullet. The vest is not the least bit bulky and could be worn in comfort at all seasons. I have always been skeptical about these bullet-proof vests, but this test certainly opened my eyes, and I have no hesitancy in saying that this one was weighed in the balance and not found wanting. The Police Department will make no mistake if it outfits the patrolmen with them."

After the test Lieut. Butler went to the Central Station and made a report to Capt. Murray on the results of the test and showed him the uninjured cloth and flattened bullets of lead.

"Well, well, that is certainly all right," said Murray, as he felt of the silk texture and examined the bullets. "I'm going to have a whole suit of that stuff," he added with a smile.

"Why not a pair of bullet-proof socks, too?" inquired Butler.

"It certainly is bullet-proof," said Murray, "and the finest thing of its kind I have ever seen."

Capt. Murray and Lieut. Butler will file a report of the remarkable test with Chief Sebastian. It is not at all improbable that an order will be given for the so-called vests, if not by the department, perhaps by individual members. The lives of several officers who have been killed in the past few years might have been saved had they been equipped with such a vest, according to Lieut. Butler. Some of the eastern police are wearing them as a protection against criminals who shoot when apprehended.

Lieut. Butler was assisted in the experiment by Jack Schultz and Joseph S. Barry of a large local clothing house.

OIL PIPE LINE.
FRANCHISE HELD UP.

Oil as a factor in fixing insurance rates formed the subject of half an hour's discussion before the Harbor Commission yesterday morning, growing out of the Esperanza Oil Company's petition for a pipe line franchise to carry its oil to the breakwater and along that structure at the harbor. President Gibbon of the commission said the rates at San Pedro were already high for insurance and that the oil question would complicate the matter. He intimated that the matter of transporting oil was one, too, that would have to be taken up by the commission as involving some of the city's rights.

Finally Secretary Fleming was directed to write to Col. McKinstry, engineer in charge, asking that the petition of the Esperanza company so far as running the pipe line out on the break-water is concerned, be held up for sixty days. The question of whether the city or the Federal government has jurisdiction over the break-water will be settled by that time, it is expected, and Special Counsel Hewitt is now looking into the matter.

CITY FACES SUIT.
WATER FOR WHARVES.

The city is threatened with a law suit if it shall not be ready to pipe water to the acreage of the Pacific Wharf and Storage Company by May 1. The company owns and has improved the property lying to the east of Terminal Island, south of the Salt Lake reservation on the island. In a formal communication to the Harbor Commission yesterday, the company announced that on May 1 it would be ready to accommodate deep-water ships at its wharves. To the present time it has been buying water delivered by barges by the Banning Company, it stated, but this service would be grossly inadequate after May 1 and it must have water delivered by pipe.

When the company's representative was asked what would be done if the pipe line was not ready by that date, he said the company would commence an action against the Board of Public Service Commissioners to compel the establishment of the service.

The Harbor Commission decided that the company's demand was just and Secretary Fleming was directed to write a letter to the Public Service Commission stating the facts and requesting that action be taken immediately.

City Hall Notes.

The shamrock, slips of it and pots of it, was distributed yesterday morning as long as the supply lasted to throngs who wished to obtain a bit of the Irish emblem. Superintendent Shearer of the park system directed the distribution with a merry quip for all applicants. Over five hundred persons called and went away with a bit of the green.

The Harbor Commission has directed the City Engineer to draw up specifications for a fire boat at the harbor, and bids will be asked for it at an early date. The question of whether the Harbor Commission or the Fire Commission is to have control of the vessel will have to be fought out this week. In San Francisco the Harbor Commission has control of the fire boats, but the Los Angeles Fire Commission contends that here it is different for here the city controls the harbor while in San Francisco it is under the direction of State officials.

No more blank bonds have arrived. "I guess they are held back by the snow in the East," said the Mayor yesterday morning. He is not worrying over them and says they will be delivered to Speyer and Company on April 5, as required. He says there is no need of his going East to sign the bonds in New York, as has been suggested, and he has no intention of making the trip.

PROBATION LAW WORKS ECONOMY.

JUDGE PREPARES REPORT THAT SHOWS THE BENEFITS.

Less Than Ten Per Cent. of Offenders During Past Three Years Have Been Returned for Violation of Parole—State Realizes Great Annual Saving.

Observations covering several years are embodied in a report prepared by Judge Willis in the probation and parole systems which will form a part of the annual report of the probation office. This report will be issued shortly.

The probation law which gives to the Superior Court the power to suspend proceedings in a criminal case prior to sentence or to suspend the execution of a judgment after it has been pronounced, writes Judge Willis, marks a step forward in the economic and humane treatment of criminals. His conclusions are that laws enacted for the purpose of allowing defendants to regain their reputation and standing in society without the intervention of a term in State's prson, are proven highly beneficial, both to the general public and to the criminal.

It is now conceded by sociologists that the best interests of society are served by reforming the criminal instead of removng him for a period from his family, friends and business interests.

In this county with more than 300 adult offenders placed on probation within the last three years, less than 10 per cent. have been returned to the court for a violation of the conditions imposed on them. There are now about 300 adult probationers earning on an average of $15 a week, aggregating a total of about $4500 a week, or $180,000 a year.

This money is used for the support of the probationers and their families, saving to the State at least $75,000 a year. Heretofore, thousands of dollars were spent on the trial of criminal cases, in which defendants now plead guilty, depending upon a previous good record and the promise of friends to obtain for them such assistance and environment as will aid them in their future reformation.

Judge Willis concludes that he is satisfied that the adult probation system as well as the parole system are proving satisfactory, and that in the near future they will become universal in every county and State. From this will result economy and decrease in the expense of penal institutions.

FIXING LAND VALUES.
JURY CUTS OWNERS' FIGURES.

A jury in Judge Craig's court yesterday made awards in the condemnation suit of the city against Annie Allen and others for six lots which are desired for Agricultural Park. These lots are on Hoover street, Menlo avenue, Thirty-ninth street and Santa Monica avenue. The values fixed by their owners ran as high as $12,000.

The jury awarded $5750 each for four lots on Hoover street, one of which contains an improvement the jury valued at $1750, and $3750 each for the other two lots. There is an improvement worth $1150 on one of these lots. Judge Craig will pass on the value of thirty-two lots which the city seeks to condemn.

How to Cure Rheumatism
Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Easily Mixed at Home.

This simple and harmless formula has worked wonders for all who have tried it, quickly curing chronic and acute rheumatism and back-ache. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them in a half pint of good whisky. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." Good results come after the first few doses. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it for you in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take a patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original, one ounce, sealed, yellow package. This was published here last winter and hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it in a short time.

What the "Fashion Show" Revealed at the "California"

Now that the "Fashion Show" has come and gone—one impression stands out clear and strong—the demonstrated supremacy of the "California" as a home furnishing institution.

This store had the pleasure of entertaining many appreciative "Fashion Show" visitors. From their unsolicited expressions, we feel justified in saying that the entire "Fashion Show" did not afford another such home furnishing exhibit as was witnessed at the "California."

The "Fashion Show" offered an excellent opportunity for comparison—and people did compare. And those who compared, found at the "California" the worthiest home furnishings shown in Los Angeles—they found here the absolute exclusion of the ordinary—they found here the newest suggestions the world of home furnishings affords—they found here sterling furniture values that no store in Los Angeles can surpass—they found here the same extensive and critical selections—the same superior values in furnishings—for the modest bungalow as for the finest home.

If you were not a "Fashion Show" visitor at the "California"—we invite you to come now and get the same revelations.

Back to the Kitchen.

WOMEN SADLY OUT OF PLACE.

Society Leader Would Begin All Over Again.

Romance of the Dish-pan to be Written Anew.

Association Formed to Bring Back the Old Days.

Back to the kitchen, the sewing-machine and the cradle is the slogan of a society called the Camp-fire Girls, formed recently in New York, which is to have a branch here.

The leaders of the association hope to bring back the old-fashioned woman who delights in cooking, sewing, tending the baby, and doing just sufficient of her own work to make her healthy and keep her happy and free from worries.

Scientific motherhood, cooking by machinery, sweat-shop clothing are denounced as mechanical means for existence, and the Camp-fire Girls want to have none of them. The romance of the dish-pan, the creak of the cradle and the hum of the sewing machine are what they believe will give them happiness and contentment.

Mrs. Luther Gulick, who is visiting in Los Angeles to arrange for the organization of the branch here, is the originator of the idea and has been the leading spirit of the organization. "Work, Health, and Love," are considered by her the cardinal virtues of home life, and from these words she has arranged the motto "Wohelo," which includes the first two letters of each.

In a few weeks, at most, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Citizen, don't be mystified if two women greet each other on the street with an effusive "Wohelo," instead of "Hello" or "Good Afternoon," for you may surmise they are the new old-fashioned women; expert biscuit shooters, no doubt, and queens of the dining-room and nursery.

Epitomized, the gist of the Camp-fire Girls' idea includes:

To restore romance to girls' existence, and make life once more interesting.

It is believed by some of the Nation's greatest thinkers to be a necessity of girls' development in the changed conditions of our modern life.

It is designed to supply the now missing elements of poetry, adventure, and emulation as a stimulant to achievement.

The modern girl is not given an opportunity to develop her best womanhood.

The old-time home was a laboratory; the modern home is ready-to-wear.

Responsibility must be restored to girls in order to make happy women and good wives and mothers of them.

Better for girls to do their experimenting in their parents' homes before they marry, than in their husbands' homes after they have married.

Their two greatest pleasures, cooking and dressmaking, have been taken from them, women's lives having almost lost creative joys.

The discipline of piano practice removed by the piano player and the phonograph.

Girls can't even play with baby or take it in its carriage riding on the street in these days—something must be substituted.

For efficiency in all household tasks the new organization offers honors, and this, its founders think, may help the nation.

Boys have always known how to work together; girls, now, must learn.

The new movement, it is believed, will not only help the girl while she is a girl, but will prepare her rightly for her womanhood, wifehood, and motherhood.

Mothers have lost the habit of participation in their daughters' lives, and this will help restore it.

System, the value of money, many useful things will be taught interestingly by the Camp-fire Girls.

EXPLAINS THE CASE.

Mrs. Gulick, in discussing her society and its motives, said:

"Most of the existing organizations which are open to the membership of girls, are based largely on utility. But mere utility will never do the things which must be done if we are to achieve the best results in character building among girls. We must supply that, certainly, but we must also supply poetry, adventure, emulation as a stimulant to achievement.

"The modern girl, as things are now, is not given a fair chance. The old home life is gone; a very large proportion of her old activities have been removed; she is not given an opportunity to make herself into an ideal wife or ideal mother; schools have not filled that gap.

"Romance and adventure, which of one sort or another we all crave, especially in youth, have been eliminated from our lives—and romance and adventure may very well, and should, form parts of everyday existence. They will help girls learn to cook, to read, to dress properly, to care for the baby, to study, and, above everything, will help girls to find proper recreation of a healthful and constructive sort.

"Cooking, gardening, making hats and sweeping are all tasks worth doing well, and for those who do them well the new movement gives distinctions.

"And above all the plan endeavors to encourage the right care of health.

"Nothing is more important to the welfare of the nation—to the welfare of the race, in fact—than the organization and measurement of domestic work. That this has never been achieved in past days has been one of woman's greatest handicaps, and the need for something which shall really accomplish a correction of this situation is particularly vivid now.

"The development of modern life has taken from the home some of the best things which were in it. The women of the old days knew the fine delights, which are the chief rewards of the discoverer. The old-time homes were laboratories in which women were continually confronted by the need for really creative work. Such work had its excitements. It was adventurous.

"Responsibility is the great character builder that has been acknowledged in all ages, and there is less responsibility for girls now than there used to be. We are gathering in cities where everything is done for us by wholesale. The schools teaching theory not practice take almost the whole time of the average girl. Preparation for life consists now more of learning how than of actually doing. This has its drawbacks, for if we do not, how shall we be sure we have really learned how to do?

"It is better for girls to do their experimenting in their parents' homes before they marry, than in their young husbands' homes in the years immediately following marriage. Experimentation of this sort, which will help to make girls into competent wives, might do something toward the solution of our great matrimonial puzzle.

"Many modern girls do not learn how to cook at all; boarding-house and hotel life make it seem unnecessary; they do not learn how to sew; dressmakers, and, more especially, ready-to-wear clothing, supply their needs.

"Player-pianos and phonographs have even taken away the need for practice upon musical instruments. Better music can be produced on these machines than by the average amateur of the old days. Thus we have lost the pleasure of execution and the discipline of that musical 'practicing' which was once almost universal among girls. We know more about music, but the individual girl knows less about it than she used to.

"Scientific motherhood has been a fine thing for the scientifically mothered infants; but it has robbed girlhood, it has left one less developing, character-building delight for girls to know. We are learning that we ought not to take baby out upon the street in a perambulator; that it is much better for the soft, sweet thing to get its sleep without being jounced in baby carriages, and that, especially, the air is purer in a crib placed by an open window at the back of the house than it can be upon the dusty sidewalk. Therefore the modern girl is losing the real joy and helpful discipline of taking baby for an airing in his carriage.

"It is the loss of such things which in the past have been absorbing interests, which make an organization like the Campfire girls a real necessity of girl life at this time.

"The demands of modern life all favor organization. Fathers belong to clubs, mothers now belong to clubs —even a girl's small brother has his definite organization, such as the Boy Scouts, in addition to the group or 'gang,' which boys instinctively create. The girl till now has not had anything.

"The new movement, therefore, will not only help the girl while she remains a girl, but will prepare her better than girls recently have been prepared for womanhood by helping to bring back to women—and it is the first effort which has aimed at that—real interest in the everyday affairs that used to fascinate the sex, efficiency in the helpful and homely tasks which used to occupy a woman's mind and hands, and by thus occupying them make her happier and enormously effect the family life for good.

'As the Camp-Fire Girls Are Taught.

The new idea, catching on in Los Angeles, should make them more able to help themselves and each other. The girl starting a fire is in the ceremonial costume. These are made by the wearers, and the goods, galatea, costs sixty cents. The beads are honors won.

THE COST OF LIVING.

Delivery System of the Stores Is a Considerable Factor in the Retail Price of Goods.

[Hartford Courant:] Those who study the cost-of-living problem, if they do it intelligently, must give full consideration to the increase of what in general terms may be called desire for ease. What has become, for example, of that traditional household article known as the market basket? In old days it went with the head of the house (him or her as it might be,) carried in the carriage or on the arm of self or servant, and came back home full of the things wanted. Today all that simplicity has gone. We just leave word to send along what is wanted. See what a cost that adds. Everybody who sets up a store must establish at the same time a livery stable. Calls may be for a barrel of flour or only for a cake of yeast, but they must be answered. Did you ever sit down and calculate how much additional cost of living is caused by the multiplicity of delivery vehicles? From the milkman in the early morning to the last delivery at evening from department stores and markets, vehicles are crossing and recrossing each other's tracks all day and each one of these costs money. Suppose we had a central market, with stalls rented at small charges, and that each customer bought and paid for his goods on the spot, and then saw to it that they were taken to his home. That would reduce enormously the local cost of living.

A TECHNICALITY HALTS BIG JOB.

SIXTEENTH STREET OPENING IS FOUND INVALID.

Court Says Notices of Intention Were Not Posted on Certain Streets and Proceedings Are Illegal—Task of Four Years Undone. Proof Lacking.

Because it was found that there was not sufficient posting of the ordinance of intention in the assessment district for the opening of Sixteenth street from Pacific avenue to Normandie avenue, Judge Bordwell decided yesterday, that the city's proceedings are illegal, and gave judgment for M. A. Goldman, a property owner, who had brought suit on this technical ground.

Steps to form an assessment district were taken four years ago, the city seeking to condemn a strip eighty feet wide, where there was no street. In round numbers, the assessment levied was $300,000, and comprised 1600 property owners, the assessments ranging from a small sum to $100. The City Attorney instituted condemnation proceedings, the damages were fixed and the referees made their report.

An exception was taken by the property owners, who alleged that the award of damages was too small. A hearing by the court was had on these exceptions and a decision rendered and judgment taken. Goldman is one of the property owners affected. Represented by Attorney Loucks, he charged that the whole proceedings were void on the ground stated.

In his decision, Judge Bordwell points out that on other occasions involving the validity of street extensions, he had called attention to the necessity of the city being able to make proof that the notices had been posted and stating the exact point upon each street where they had been posted.

Four years ago the notices were posted under the supervision of the Street Department. This work is now done through the City Engineer's office. Unless the city appeals from Judge Bordwell's ruling, the assessments already collected, which represent a large sum, will have to be returned to the property owners.

Judge Bordwell says:

"The opening of West Sixteenth street is a public improvement of very great importance, and it must so appear to the plaintiff and other persons similarly situated, as well as to the citizens of the community generally. One might well be excused for entertaining the suspicion that the real complaint of the plaintiff and of others, as I have reason to believe, is because of what he believes to be an inequitable or over award of damages to the owners of the property taken for the opening.

"This court has no power to review the court proceedings heretofore had. They are conclusively presumed to be just and fair. And there are certain matters committed by law to the judgment and discretion of the City Council, their action upon which is conclusive and not subject to review by this court.

"It would be most difficult to present a convincing argument to the effect that the citizens and property owners should not freely accept the judgment in good faith rendered by those whom the law has empowered to finally act upon matter submitted to them.

"It is deplorable if all this work for a period covering about four years to accomplish a most needed public improvement shall go for naught, because of some technical public omission which does not affect the real merits of the controversy.

"The question of fact here submitted for determination and upon which this case and perhaps the outcome of the entire proceedings hinges, is whether or not the posting of the notices of intention along all the streets within the boundaries of the assessment district was made as required by law. It cannot be known with certainty whether the notices were so posted or not. He to whom the Board of Public Works committed the work of posting the notices has filed the usual affidavit in the office of the street department showing that the posting was done, the statement being in the general language of the statute. And he and his assistant or assistants in doing the work of posting have testified in open court that the work was done in the manner required by statute.

"When questioned with respect to certain streets and asked to locate the exact point of such posting, they could not make answer. This is not surprising, in view of the fact that no memorandum of the detail of the work of posting was made.

"I have on other occasions, particularly in a similar action involving the validity of the proceedings for the extension of Grand avenue from Temple street north, called attention to the urgent necessity for making a detailed memorandum or what would perhaps be better, a detailed statement in the affidavit filed in the office of the Street Department, locating the exact point on each street where each notice was posted.

"In view of the fact that the validity of the entire proceedings depends upon exact compliance with the law in the matter of each posting, it is readily understood how vital is the matter. There is no reason for doubting the good faith of those to whom was committed the duty of posting the notices of the Council's intention to order the improvement.

"I feel satisfied that they are and always have been in good faith, yet the evidence presented with respect to posting or no posting on certain streets is such that I am compelled to find that the [illegible] from certain streets [illegible] of.

"Because it must be the evidence presented no sufficient posting of ordinance of intention by law, it must be said proceedings are void ment to that effect."

FIGHT AGAINST HOOKWORM.

Over a Hundred and Forty Thousand Persons Have Been Treated for the Disease in the South Alone.

[Washington Star:] At an average cost of $1.27, according to the annual report of the Rockefeller sanitary commission, more than 140,000 persons afflicted with the hookworm were treated in nine States of the South during the past year. Considering the assured results in personal health of such a work, it was an astonishingly small price to pay. But, as the report says, the particular value of this enterprise was not in the number of persons restored to health, but in the educational effect of the work in sanitation. In other words, this is a preventive as well as a curative undertaking, and it is certain to lead to vitally important results throughout the South if it is continued even for a few years. There is no possible way of reckoning, but it is assured that millions of dollars have been lost to the South as a result of this disease, through the lowered vitality of the people, the lessening of their agricultural and industrial energies, their failure to do a proper share of work when employed and the necessity of providing for their needs through charitable works when they fail to meet their own necessities. In Porto Rico the United States government has already demonstrated the economic value of hookworm eradication, increasing the efficiency of the people by a large percentage through the systematic sanitary works carried on there since the American occupation. This, however, was before the full discovery of the hookworm disease in all its characteristics and effects, and doubtless the Rockefeller commission's work in the southern States will be the more thorough because of more complete knowledge of the nature of the disease and the means of its transmission.

HOW TREASURER COMPLIES WITH THE BOND LAW.

Millions Must be Deposited in City Treasury Day Documents Are Delivered and Several Men Are Kept on Jump—Millions Transferred Without Expense.

The millions of dollars that have come into the possession of the city of Los Angeles this month have been paid in New York and have been placed the same day in the treasury in this city, and it has not cost the city a cent for commissions or tolls.

On the 31st inst., $2,500,000 more will be paid to Los Angeles in New York and on April 5, nearly $4,000,000 more, and all of it will be placed the same day of the payment in the city treasury. Those amounts will cost the city nothing for the transfer, either.

How is it done? By exchange. If Tom Jones or John Smith were to send such amounts across the continent, it would take days and perhaps a week to make the transfer and would cost in itself a fortune. With the city government, however, it is different.

Senor Los Angeles is a great financier. The municipality deals in millions of dollars and any corporation that engages in enterprises involving such amounts passes into a class apart from the ordinary individual; it becomes a "big business" all in itself. Like the Standard Oil Company, great banks, powerful railways and dominating financial interests, Senor Los Angeles, multi-millionaire, can do things that the less favored corporation or individual cannot do.

So $4,000,000 or so may be paid in the morning in New York to City Treasurer Hance, who is there now, and in the afternoon it is locked up in the big vaults of the city on this side of the continent in shining gold coin.

"How is it done?" was asked of Chief Deputy Treasurer Powell.

"That is simple. The money is paid to Capt. Hance in $1000 bills. Then the treasurer, usually accompanied by two or three detectives, goes to the banks and makes the deposit in New York to the credit of the city, the banks having correspondents here. It will not all go into one bank, perhaps, or even into two or three banks.

"That afternoon I will receive several dispatches and several local messages. The local messages will be from the correspondents of the New York banks and will be to the effect that the money has arrived. That is, it has been placed to their deposit account in New York. Then I hear from New York and Capt. Hance notifies me that the money has all been deposited. By 2 o'clock the transaction is over. We have the money and it is to our credit; it has been drawn and deposited in the city treasury.

"If the money were sent by express or transferred by mail it would take a week or five days at the least. It has to be done in a few hours, for the law requires that the bonds shall be delivered and the money paid into the city treasury all on the same day. This method of doing business, too, saves the city an enormous expense. Instead of $500,000 that it would cost at a conservative estimate to transfer the money through the express or by telegraph, it costs us not one cent. It is all done by the system of exchange."

THE SUPREME COURT.

Has Been the Bulwark of the Country Against the Encroachments of the Trusts.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] With the prospect that the courts of this country, both Federal and State, will cut a large figure in the political campaign this year, their friends and their critics are at work gathering ammunition. Not the least effective material, perhaps, so far as the United States Supreme Court is concerned, is the result of the investigations of a man who is a friend of that great tribunal.

He has undertaken to show that the Supreme Court, rather than begin a friend of the corporations and big business, has been the bulwark of the country against the depredations of the "interests." Its decisions during its whole career, according to his research, have revealed a consistent tendency to curb the corporation as against the individual or the general public.

Since the foundation of the court it has decided 194 cases where corporations contended that the actions of various States had impaired their charter contracts with those States. In 152 of these cases the Supreme Court held against the corporations, while it decided in their favor forty-two times.

Since the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution the court has ruled under it, in 123 cases, against corporations which made claims that States had deprived them of the equal protection of the law and of due process of law.

The court has also, in 121 cases, decided against the contention of corporations to the effect that States had interfered with some corporate rights concerning the interstate commerce law.

In the latter two classes of decisions rulings which were in favor of corporations have not been reduced to exact figures, but the Eagle's informant says that the proportion of anti-corporation decisions is about seven or eight to one.

The contention is made that since 1834 the Supreme Court has consistently adhered to the doctrine that the charter of a corporation grants to it no implied powers whatsoever; that that which is not written in the bond cannot be read into it. While individuals or governments have implied rights, it has been held time and again that a corporation cannot exercise a single function which is not specifically prescribed in its charter, but is limited strictly to the terms of its contract.

This same friend of the Supreme Court, in speaking of the relations of various governmental branches to the big corporations, declares that over and over again the court, through its decisions, has protected the people against an invasion of their rights by corporations, when legislative bodies and executive officials have permitted those rights to be usurped.

BUTTER BY THE YARD.

Dairymen of Cambridgeshire, England, Roll Their Butter Into Three-Foot Lengths Weighing One Pound.

[Harper's Weekly:] There is at least one place in the world, Cambridge, Eng., where butter is sold, not by the pound, but by the yard. From time immemorial the dairymen of Cambridgeshire have rolled their butter into lengths, a length being a yard and weighing one pound. Neatly wrapped in strips of clean white cloth, the cylindrical rolls of butter are packed in long, narrow baskets made for the purpose and so conveyed to market.

It follows, therefore, that the Cambridge butter dealers have no need, as they preside over their stalls, of weights or scales for determining the quantity of their wares. Constant practice and an experienced eye enable them with a stroke of the knife to divide the butter into halves or quarters with almost mathematical precision.

This curiously-shaped butter finds its chief purchasers among the people of Cambridge University. It is claimed that the "yard butter" is ...inently adapted for the peculiar needs of the students in the daily commons. Cut into convenient-sized pieces and accompanied by a loaf of wheaten bread, a stated portion is sent every morning to the rooms of the undergraduates for use at breakfast and tea.

Reducing the Waist Line in Both Sexes.
Men and women with heavy pendulous abdomens who wish to reduce them quickly and safely are usually advised to go in for certain tiresome twisting and bending exercises that, as a matter of fact, they should carefully avoid as being dangerous rather than beneficial.
A far better plan is to use the following three simple household remedies which can be obtained of any druggist at small cost, viz.: ½ oz. Magnesia, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 3½ ozs. Peppermint Water. These are mixed together at home and taken a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.
These three make a mixture that is not only perfectly harmless but actually quite beneficial to the system, regulating the digestion, purifying the blood, and clearing the complexion of pimples and blotches. Its chief and surprising benefit is in the rapid, natural manner in which it reduces the fat person to the normal, beautiful lines of a fine physique, it having been known to cause the reabsorption of as much as a pound of fat a day. Moreover, it does it so symmetrically, so that no wrinkles or flabby skin are left behind. Strange to say neither dieting or excercise are advised when this simple home recipe is being used, for it will produce results independently of either and as the patient is instructed to eat whatever he or she fancies and is also permitted to take things easy.

OUR AMI[illegible]

N SONGS AND SONG WRITERS.

Our National Hym[illegible]

Minstrelsy and Songs of the Civil War—American ties of Nottime Music—The Calami-

BY [illegible]erican Minstrels.

SONGS that appeal forcibly to some pronounced sentiment or some stirring patriotic passion are apt to enjoy a vast sale, and once in a while a number of them possess long staying qualities; hence the Civil War of 1861-'65 afforded splendid opportunities to many new song writers, of which they were not slow in availing themselves, and a great number of songs and hymns were sung and played in the fields and at the homes on both sides, from the beginning until the magnificent and triumphant cessation of hostilities.

The first great Civil War song produced was by Dr. George F. Root of Chicago; it was also one of the most popular and was sung by Union soldiers in the fields and by their loving, loyal women throughout the North from the time of President Lincoln's second call for troops and was entitled "We'll Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys." Dr. Root, however, had composed "The First Gun is Fired; May God Protect the Right," a few days after the Confederate attack on Ft. Sumter. Dr. Root's most popular song came out in 1864 and was entitled "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," it had a great sale and was sung and played all through our army and everywhere in the North every day for more than a year. He also wrote, about the same time: "Who Will Care for Mother Now?" and "When This Cruel War is Over." Dr. Root's first musical success was "Hazel Dell," written in 1852, and was sung by all minstrel bands for ten or more years, and later he composed music and words, "The Shining Shore," "The Vacant Chair," "Rosalie, The Prairie Flower," "There's Music in the Air," (very beautiful;) "A Hundred Years Ago," "The Old Folks Are Gone," and many sacred songs, away back, from 1840 to 1860, all of which were good, but have never come down to the present generation, which is also the fate of his splendid war songs.

MOST SUNG.

The song most sung by Union soldiers, to various verses, was "John Brown's Body," the music being from an old Georgia camp meeting refain entitled "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah." This was sung all over the North and in the army and played by all the bands from the firing on Sumter, until the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. It was a great marching tune and the words were full of fire, ridicule and humor. The music is seldom played nowadays and the words are never heard in these times of good feeling and perfect reconstruction. "The Battle Cry of Freedom," Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and "Vive l'America," came out early, but were too serious and too dignified to occupy a good or an acceptable place among camp ditties. The most dashing and most popular (words and music) of all Union war songs, was "Marching Through Georgia," composed by Henry C. Work in 1864. The music is still played and sung throughout the North and at all Loyal Legion banquets (to other than the original words,) and is seemingly imperishable. Work also wrote "My Grandfather's Clock" and "Father, Dear Father, Come Home With Me Now," "Don't You See Dem Black Clouds Risin' Ober Yonder?" was a jolly piece of music to "nigger" words, author unknown. "Tenting On the Old Camp Ground," was a lovely song, written in 1864 by a drafted New Hampshire soldier named Walter Kittredge, who was still living in 1898 at Reed's Ferry, N. H.

"MARYLAND."

The most beautiful and most impressive song of the South during the Civil War was "Maryland, My Maryland." The words were by James R. Randall, a native of Maryland, and the music was from an old German lyric entitled "O Tannenbaum, O Tannenbaum," or translated by Longfellow, "Hemlock Tree, O, Hemlock Tree." Randall was quite a young man when he gave this remarkably fine song to the gallant Confederates, as he was born in Baltimore in 1839. He was a graduate from Georgetown College, and was an editor of various newspapers during the war. He wrote other poems and songs, but nothing to compare at all with his masterpiece, although his "The Dead Cannonier" was a brilliant second. Randall died only a year or more ago. The leading camp song of the Confederates for a long time was "The Bonnie Blue Flag," claimed by several writers. But the greatest of all the songs vociferated by the southern soldiers was "Dixie," which had been written and sung by a negro minstrel at Bryant's in Broadway, New York, in 1859, named Daniel Decatur Emmett, who died in Mt. Vernon, O., not long ago at the age of 89. It had been whistled and played and sung all the way up and down the Mississippi River by negroes and whites and by minstrels in southern cities a year before the secession of South Carolina, but was taken up by the Confederate soldiers as their own song just before the first battle of Bull Run, and at once many southerners claimed authorship, Emmett's original title was "I Wish I Was in Dixie Land," but it was not published until 1861, when Firth & Pond brought it out in sheet form and entitled it "Way Down South in Dixie." It is at present the most popular tune in the United States. I employ the word "tune," because the "Dixie" verses are nearly as unknown to the present generation and quite as unused as are those of "Marching Through Georgia." And in this connection I call to mind that at the conclusion of Mr. Lincoln's remarks to the people of Richmond, a few days after the surrender, he called on the band to play "Dixie," saying: "Dixie does not belong wholly to the South, nor to the North; it belongs to the entire country." And since that time whenever a band or orchestra plays a medley of American airs, North or South, in vaudeville or concert, in hall or home, the moment "Dixie" is reached every listener throws up his hands and shouts to his heart's content. The words are really empty and undignified, and there are no rules of them. But every human being in the United States knows the music, which will last forever—and, thus it is the most popular tune of the nation.

OTHER WAR SONGS.

Other songs of the Civil War that I remember were "Ellsworth's Funeral March," by Septimus Winner, who also wrote "What Is Home Without a Mother," "Carry Me Back to Tennessee," and some others; "When You and I Were Soldier Boys," by James G. Clarke; "We've Drank from the Same Canteen," by Charles G. Halpine;" "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," "Good News from Home," and "Freedom on the Old Plantation," Mother I've Come. TRUMAN.
Care for Mother.
Would Comfort ye; "Dear Here," "Call Me Not Who Will Echoless Shore," "Mother Dixie," "Coming Home Were Cruel War Is Over," and That roll Sawyer; "Let Me Kiss in His Mother," J. P. Ordway; The J. P. Webster; "Mother Kiss My Dreams," J. R. Thomas; ing Along," William R. Brad "Flag of the Free," Harrison Mill "Her Bright Smile Haunts Me Sti W. T. Wrighton; "Two Pickets" and "We Are Coming, Father Abraham, Six Hundred Thousand More," by David A. Warden; "Babylon Fallen," and others, not published or authors unknown. Nearly all these songs and scores of others were parodied or paraphrased shortly after they were published, especially by the boys in the field. Thus, "Dear Mother, I've Come Home to Die" became "Dear Mother, I've Come Home to Eat;" "Be My Mother Till I Die" was tuned into "Hand Me Down a Hunk of Pie;" "Let Me Kiss Him for His Mother" suggested "Let Me Lick Him for Brother;" "Brother's Fainting at the Door" became "Mickey's Dead Drunk on the Floor," and many others that I do not readily call to mind; and although some soldier would occasionally shout "Hail Columbia's Happy Land, if I 'aint happy I'll be damned!" "The Star Spangled Banner," Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," and "The Flag of the Free" were never parodied nor paraphrased.

Prior to the Civil War exclusive of Foster's imperishable productions and our national lyrics, and a few comic and sentimental songs composed for or by negro minstrels, not much American music was really produced in the United States. Indeed, four-fifths of our song verses were set to music abstracted from old English, Irish and Scotch ballads, and from old English operas. There were some notable exceptions, however, such as "The Arkansas Traveler," "The Old Oaken Bucket," "What Will You Do, Love, When I Am Going?" "A Life on the Ocean Wave," "On Long Island's Sea-girt Shore," "Stars of a Summer Night," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," "The Lone, Starry Hours," "Ben Bolt," "Woodman, Spare That Tree," "Down in a Coal Mine," "Shells of the Ocean," "Juanita," "How Can I Leave Thee?" and, of course, quite a number of others, including many college songs. David Braham composed many songs in the late 50's and early 60's for minstrel bands. I knew Braham well, and many a time when I have been in New York, especially in the 80's and 90's, have we discussed a double Welsh rarebit and a pewter mug or two of Bass's ale after theater hours. He was English born, but came to America in 1854, at the age of 16. He had been educated as a violinist, and was a song writer and orchestra leader at the age of 21. He created a school of his own, and like the author of Jimmy Fadden, made all New York merry. Braham composed the music of some of the most popular songs ever known in America. In the late '70's and the '80's they were whistled and sung from the Battery to the Golden Gate. Many of his songs, introduced by Harrigan and Hart, sprang into popularity over night. They numbered more than 200 and included "The Little Widow Dunn," "Maggie Murphy's Home," "Dad's Dinner Pail," "The Mulligan Guards," "Paddy Duffy's Cart," and the like. Pat Gilmore, himself a composer of many delightful tunes, said he considered Braham's productions the best and jolliest whistling music in the world.

One of the most beautiful and best and one of the most long-lifed of all our American songs is the "Old Oaken Bucket," written by Samuel Woodworth, a printer, on the New York Mirror, in the 30's, and 40's of the last century. Forty and fifty years ago John B Gough, the greatest of all temperance lectures and crusaders, attempted to make thousands of his listeners believe that Woodworth was a tee-totaler, like himself, and that his great song was composed at his home, while the author and his wife were quaffing water from their old oaken bucket. This statement was strictly untrue; for, as a circumstance of absolute fact, Woodworth, who had been with three other printers, drinking brandy at a place known as "Mallory's," on Chambers street, New York, in 1838, for an hour or more, at last caught up a glass of water and exclaimed: "Boys, Mallory's brandy is mighty good; but this is the purest and best of all drinkables, especially as I remember taking it from the old oaken bucket at my dear old home in Scituate, Mass." And then the printer, who was well stimulated from half a dozen glasses of "Mallory's best," took from his pocket a pencil and right then and there wrote the imperishable verses that were later set to music by a fiddler of the Chatom-Street Theater. Woodworth had become a printer-editor, but still associated entirely with his brother typos on Saturdays, after receiving their week's pay, and regularly spent an hour or two playing dominoes for the drinks. I went to New York in 1854, and one of the first things shown me by some Times printers was the old table in a Chamber's-street saloon, "where Woodworth wrote the 'Old Oaken Bucket.'" And that table is still in a good state of preservation in a New York barroom.

Some years ago a writer for a New York paper published a description of Woodworth, and the conditions under which his song was inspired, the closing portion of which follows, and which is substantially similar to my own statement:

BAR AND "BUCKET."

With some brother printers Woodworth dropped in one day at a well-known place kept by one Mallory, and after draining his glass declared, with marked enthusiasm, that Mallory's brandy was "superior to any drink that he had ever tasted." Most of the company agreed with Woodworth, but from one of his comrades came a spirited protest. "You are mistaken," said this person; "there certainly was one thing that far surpassed this brandy in the way of drinking, as you, too, will readily acknowledge." "And pray what was that?" inquired Woodworth, the light of a deep surprise in his eyes at the suggestion that there might be anything finer than his favorite cognac. "Well," replied the other man, "it was the pure, sparkling water that we used to get from the old oaken bucket that hung in the well, after our return from the work on the farm on a hot, sultry summer day."

There was silence, it is said, for some minutes. Each man in the party there in the grogshop was doing some real serious thinking. Woodworth among the rest.

Then Woodworth, his eyes filled with tears, and sobs in his voice, exclaimed as best he could: "True, true," and rushed out of the place in hot haste.

From the barroom he went straight to his office, and within half an hour he had produced the song that was to make him immortal.

While stars shine and waters run, while the human heart remains human and childhood's charm conto hold us in its spell, "The aken Bucket" will live, and with it the name of the printer-woodworth.

"Home, Sweet Home" will Americin secure as one of the America and impressive home ered as h world, and also as an English tha because written by an thor, was an perhaps more an den, London, is merican produce the verses, which Payne, the au from a Sicilian Covent Gar Bishop, and after en he wrote verses and music, by Henry R. opera of "Anna Bolembedied, Sweet Home," was writ in his fair, an aristocratic place Home, don, for Payne, himself, h May During the first year of its on 100,000 copies were sold o don, alone, and 1,000,000 it years afterward; and it has been timated that since then 40,000,000 copies have been sold.

STEPHEN C. FOSTER.

The sweetest and most original of all American song writers was Stephen C. Foster, who composed both the music and verses to all his songs, many of which are known throughout the music-loving world. His greatest production was "Old Folks at Home," or "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," which he composed in the barroom of a corner grocery on Hester street, near the Bowery, New York. The music of "Old Folks at Home" is played by all bands and orchestras in America and Europe; it enters as a part of all medleys; is the piece de resistance of all graphophones, and is sung and whistled by at least fifty millions of the people of the United States. It is sung and played more than any other song that has ever been written.

Besides his "Home, Sweet Home" Payne wrote eight tragedies, six comedies, nineteen dramas, six farces and seventeen poems, and songs—nearly all of these while in London, where at one time, he was manager of Sadler's-Wells Theater. He was also once the manager of a theater in New York, and for several years the "critic" of the Thespian Mirror of that city. His tragedy of "Brutus" was played by Edmund Kean many years. His first appearance on the stage was as "Young Norval," at the old Park Theater in New York. In 1813 he spent some time in an English prison in Liverpool. In 1841 he was Consul at Tunios under President Tyler, and again under Fillmore in 1849, where he died. His remains were disinterred forty-five years afterward and brought back to his native country by Corcoran, the rich Washington banker.

Foster's first song was "Susannah, Don't You Cry," which he sold to a band of minstrels in 1846, for $2. His "Open the Lattice, Love" followed, for $2. In the late 40's and early 50's he composed "My Old Kentucky Home," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," "Willie, We Have Missed You," "Come Where My Loves Lies Dreaming," and thirty-four others, all of them selling at the time for a few dollars each. "Old Dog Tray" brought him $5, and his greatest song of all, "Old Folks at Home," he sold to E. P. Christy for $10, and then received an additional $5 from Christy, to allow the latter to put his own name on it as author. I used to often meet Foster Saturdays from 1854 to 1859, at the old corner grocery, near the Bowery, on Hester street; and treat him to a mug of old Burton ale, which then sold for 4 cents. He composed 116 songs in all, music and verse.

There came a great lull in song writing for nearly ten years after the close of the Civil War, only broken occasionally by Will S. Hayes of Louisville, Ky., who easily ranked second to Stephen C. Foster, and who like Foster wrote both the words and music to all of his songs, and for many years the sales from and staying qualities of many of Hayes's compositions remained next to those of Foster's, and the words to his negro songs even excelled those of the master in "nigger" dialect. Hayes first became generally known during the closing year of the Civil War through his "Write Me a Letter From Home," which was sung fro mone end of the United States to the other. Then came "We Parted by the River Side," which was sung from one end of the our country where there was a piano. Then followed in rapid succession "Beautiful Dreamer," "Nora O'Neil," "Driven From Home," and "Mollie Darling," the latter making a fortune for its publisher, J. L. Peters, and $28,000 for Hayes. His next productions were "I'll Remember You, Love, in My Prayers," "The Moon Is Out Tonight, Love" and "Genevieve," all but "Mollie Darling" being unknown, however, at present; while all or nearly all of Foster's songs are sung and played throughout our land and many of them in Europe and other countries millions of times annually. Hayes composed 300 songs in all.

GREAT SUCCESSES.

In 1868 came "The Sweet By and By," the joint work of S. M. Bennett of Richmond, Ill., and J. F. Webster of Elkhorn, Wis. It was one of the most popular songs (a hymn song, really,) that has ever been written and had a tremendous sale for a quarter of a century, and while it is still on the book shelves of all music stores in the United States, it is seldom called for and little known by the young people of the present time.

By the way, there are two different kinds of successes, at least, which a popular song may achieve. One may spring at once into general favor and become so catchy and so widely known as to be played and sung in every family and vaudeville theater and whistled on every street car and by every newsboy and hummed by every domestic and department-store girl. Then it soon becomes so hackneyed that every one tires of it and its sale ceases as suddenly as it began. Then, again, on the contrary, it may be of a little more meritorious quality, although it may not so swiftly catch the ear. Its popularity is, therefore, of a slower growth, but is all the more lasting for that reason, and when once firmly established as a pronounced favorite it may continue to enjoy a steady, profitable sale for many years and in the end have become far more advantageous to author and publisher than one of those songs of which hundreds of thousands of copies are sold in a few months or years. In this connection, no one who was an adult at the time and is now living can forget the tremendous hit of "After the Ball," by Charles K. Harris, of which there were 600,000 copies sold in 1893 and 1894, and it was sung and played more generally during those two years throughout the United States than any song that had preceded it, but in 1895 it went out of existence like a flash and its sales ceased as if by magic, although its author had cleared $36,000.

"Sweet Marie" came in 1894 and departed in 1896, notwithstanding its sweetness of music and verse, but it earned, in a little more than a year and a half, $75,000 for its publishers and $22,000 in royalties for its two authors. "Ma Angeline," "Two Little Girls in Blue," "Sidewalks of New York," "Tell Them That You Saw Me," "Alabama Coon," "My Honolulu Lady," "In the Bowery," "Sweet Violets," "When the Robins Nest Again," "Only a Pansy Blossom" and other delightful lyrics, which came out about the same time, or later, and many since, had only a short tenure of sales and popularity.

DRESSER'S SONGS.

One of the most popular of the newer songs, and which had a big run for about two years, was "On the Banks of the Wabash," by Paul Dresser, from which he received $33,000 in royalties. The next best of Dresser's songs was "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me," which earned him $29,000. "Hiawatha," by O'Dea and Moret had just a year of success and made the authors $9000 each, and then went the way of "Asleep in the Deep," which made $11,000 for H. W. Petrie, its author. Not many call to mind that in 1900 two songs, entitled "The Girl I Loved in Tennessee" and "She Was Bred in Old Kentucky," by raisted and Carter, made quite a hit one lone year, and then went with the other dead ones, but for the authors $25,000. "Bend and "Always," by Horwits and sold came out about the same sheiv 300,000 copies of each were Time, then removed from the only two the Good Old Summer $10,000 Evans and Blake, lasted author s ons, but made nearly Flower" a joint composers. The ties, although Knighthood Was in years. "How $30,000 in royalthe Iceman?" wasn't died in two the above in mel You Like to Be for its authors. Helmund to any of each. "Only Me," by it earned ton, gave its authors self, $4000 Sweetest Flower That Grow Bratnessee" was quite pretty, b "The lived a year and paid but $ Geo-George Evans and Ben Shields Tilzer and Lamb brought out in single year "The Bird in a Gilded Cage" and "Down on the Farm," and made $3000 each. "Bedella," a very pretty and fetching vaudeville (and a bit ragtime,) song, made a fine hit about twelve years ago and $20,000 for Jerome and Schwartz, its authors.

"STAR-SPANGLED BANNER."

Regarding our old national songs, "The Star Spangled Banner," words by Francis Scott Key, stands first in the American heart. Key, who was a young lawyer of Georgetown, D. C., was a prisoner in British hands during the War of 1812, and witnessed the unsuccessful bombardment of Fort McHenry on the Chesapeake on September 12, 1814, which had been kept up all the day and far into the night. Key's original title to his verses was "The Defense of Fort McHenry." The music was taken from an old English hymn-song entitled "Anacreon in Heaven." "America," which is regarded by many as a good second to Key's impressive and emotional words, was written in 1832 by Rev. Samuel Francis Smith; its music, too, is English, and belongs, really, to "God Save The King." In 1800, Robert Treat Paine wrote a patriotic song to English music, called "Ye Sons of Columbia." "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean" was written in 1830 by an English actor named Thomas A. Beckett, and these words also were set to the music of an old English hymn known as "Britannia, the Pride of the Ocean." "Hail Columbia" was written by Joseph Hopkinson in 1832. Hopkinson was 27 years old at the time, and was taking music lessons in Philadelphia from an old German named Roth, who adapted to the verses the music from an old German song. In 1819, at the age of 23, Joseph Rodman Drake wrote "The American Flag," which some years afterward was supplied by music from some forgotten English or German song. But, then, one of our most exhilarating songs, and a pretty close companion to "Dixie," at least throughout the northern States, ("Yankee Doodle,") originated with nothing American about it, the music being English of Queen Anne's time, and the words taken from the Dutch. But the "Red, White and Blue" is thoroughly American, the words and music having been composed in San Francisco in 1854 by a naturalized citizen named John W. De Frewer, and for which he received $100 from the San Francisco minstrels.

RAG TIME.

What is known as rag-time music—especially in contradistinction to various kinds of negro minstrel songs and jigs—came first about twenty odd years ago, or say about 1890. It was a new kind of American melody, and much of it was very breezy and catchy, and some of it sweet and fetching. The words of all of it, nearly were suggestive of the "Levee," of Chicago, such as "Bring Dem Presents Back," and the like, and are seldom used or even permitted in high-class vaudeville nowaday, where the majority of patrons are women and girls. The general character of the words knocked out a good deal of delightful melody and pulled a good deal of rag-time music from the stage. And, then, again, many bands would never play it, and few teachers gave it a word of praise, or would permit their pupils to even hum it. One of the originators of rag-time music was a negro minstrel named Ernest Hogan, who write "All Coons Look Alike to Me," which made an instantaneous and tremendous hit, and cleared for the author, $45,000, in nine months. Hogan also wrote "The Oyster Man," and two hundred other songs, nearly all of which are as dead as Hogan himself, who died in New York a few years ago of tuberculosis, leaving an estate of about $30,000. If I may use the term properly, there were some classics of rag-time music such as "Goo-Goo Eyes," "Aint That a Shame?" "Bill Bailey," and others written by Hugh Cannon, who died in the poorhouse at Detroit, at the age of 36, some three or four years ago. The poor fellow died from an excessive use of morphine and liquor for nearly twenty years; indeed, I quote his last words: "I commenced to booze when I was 17, and have been in pickle most of the time ever since." May Irwin, in particular, made a desperate attempt to make coon songs a success, but at last abandoned them. She once said: "There is much delightful color and go in rag-time, but the words are vulgar and atrocious." The singer, who first rendered "Mother, Pin a Rose On Me," in Chester, Penn., was arrested and locked up for the night. The most acceptable coon song ever sung was by Josephine Sabel, and written by her father, entitled "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," which came out during the Spanish-American War. The publishers made $50,000 from it, but Sabel had sold it for $25.

CALAMITIES OF GENIUS.

The calamities of genius seem to have overtaken our song writers proportionately more than any other class. Samuel Woodworth, the author of "The Old Oaken Bucket," never received a cent for his song. Kneass, who set "Ben Bolt" to music, only received a few drinks for his adaptation. Foster, the greatest of all American song writers, who was paid next to nothing for most of his productions, fell down in the Bowery one night in 1864 after having pressed his cordial too freely at a corner grocery, was taken to a hotel on the corner of Broome street, and died at a hospital a short time afterward. Charles Fenno Hoffman, author of "Sparkling and Bright," was another convivial one who died in a public hospital. Alfred H. Pease, author of "Stars of Summer Night," came to a sad death in St. Louis, about twenty years ago. Scanlan, the author and sweet singer of "Peek-a-Boo," never went upon the stage strictly sober, and once pawned himself to a Philadelphia saloon-keeper for two drinks of liquor and had himself labeled and laid upon a shelf behind the bar. Charles Dibdin, the author of "Poor Jack," in 1853, went to bed many a night without supper, although his novel, "The Lamplighter," made $25,000 for the publishers. Charlie Pratt, who was a writer of many songs, sold his "Champagne Charlie," which made a tremendous hit in 1863-4, and $24,000 for its publishers, for $10. Paul Barnes, who wrote "Good-By Dolly Gray" in 1900, was given a check for $14,000 royalty money, but before he presented the check its publishers had gone into bankruptcy; but Barnes did forge out ahead on his "Skiddoo," "Swinging There Alone," "I've Looked You Over Carefully, But You Won't Do." T. Brigham Bishop, an elderly negro minstrel, but afterwards a captain in the Union army, received no money from his "Shoo Fly! Don't Bodder Me!"

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE.

John Howard Payne, who gave to the world "Home, Sweet Home," had no home when he wrote those verses in London, that will never become unknown. Like many another he was improvident and at times intemperate and burned his candle at both ends. Here is what Payne said of himself: "Under those windows in Mayfair I composed 'Home, Sweet Home,' as I wandered about without food or a semblance of shelter I could call my own. Many a night since I wrote those words, that issued out of my heart by absolute want of a home, have I passed and repassed, but in this locality, and heard a siren voice coming from within those gilded walls, in the depth of a dim, cold London winter, warbling 'Home, Sweet Home,' while I, the author, knew no bed to call my own. I have been in the heart of Paris, of Berlin, or of some other city, and have heard people singing my song, without a penny to purchase a meal or a place to put my head. The world has literally sung my song until every heart is familiar with its melody. And now my country has turned me ruthlessly from office, and in my old age I am compelled to submit to humiliation for bread."

The words of "Kathleen Mavourneen" were written by an Irish lady named Crawford, about 120 years ago. But some fifty odd years afterward a necessitous vocal teacher of Boston named Crouch, set the verses to music so sweet and tender as to give the song immortality. Crouch, who was an American of English-Irish parentage, was paid $25 for his composition, from which the publishers netted $20,000. Crouch was at all times an immoderate drinker and at last became a common drunkard and ragged tramp. One of the closing incidents of his life was the sensation he created one night when Mme. Anna Bishop rendered "Kathleen Mavourneen" as an encore—when the ragged, dirty, partly inebriated Crouch, after listening to his beautiful music, with tears in his eyes and punctures of the heart, rushed toward the stage and cried out: "O, Madame! I thank you. That is my song, and no one has ever sung it before." There was great excitement, but the famous singer had him brought into her dressing-room, surveyed the sobbing outcast, and then placed some coins in his hands; and in a few days afterwards, he died of delirium tremens in a city hospital. [And the list could be extended.]

MOTOR TRUCK FOR ARMY.

Trailer in Use in Germany Proves An Excellent Means of Moving Many Troops.

After a trial of an army motor truck, with trailer, for the German army, certain modifications have been proposed by the trial commission and will probably be adopted by the ministry of war. The accelerator is to be dispensed with; a self-starter is to be secured to the dash, and must be actuated by electromagnetic or equivalent means.

The gear speeds must be 3 to 5 kilometers per hour for the reverse and the slow speed, 5 to 8 for the second, 9 to 13 for the third and not higher than 16 kilometers on the high. The brake for the trailer must be operated from the driver's seat, the action being transmitted from a rotary shaft through a system of tension rods extending under the middle line of the truck to the trailer, but not by compression rods or wires. The coupling on the trailer for attaching another trailer is to be abolished.

A cut-out is again to be provided for the exhaust muffler (it had been abolished before,) as it has been found that the gain in power which may be secured by its use may be valuable in time of war, but it is to be screwed down tight in time of peace, so as to obviate breach of the police regulation

SUNDAY MORNING. Los Angeles Sunday Times. MARCH 17, 1912. [PART II.] 11

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

(Times Correspondence of The Times.)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 15.—An interesting gentleman has compiled a book of the country's social leaders. In it he has given place to only three San Franciscans. Six of these belong to the Crocker family. One may search the volume in vain for the name of "Ned" Greenway. This is a genuine surprise to him, as well as to the rest of us. Perhaps the author will entertain a motion to amend by inserting the name Greenway in the preamble, at least.

Temperamental inharmonies is said to be the reason for the impending divorce between Richard Walton Tully, playwright, and his wife, Eleanor Gates, novelist. This may be good statutory grounds for a separation, but it will hardly hold good in a court of law. It will be much safer for Mrs. Tully to prove that Richard drinks a little too much, or that he has other or that he deserted her.

Convicted of murder in the first degree and waiting the death sentence, Lon A. Rogers wrote some bad poetry and then tried to break jail. From this it would seem as though he was incorrigible. The sooner he is disposed of the better for the community. The supply of bad poetry is already in excess of the demand.

Now the Southern Pacific has electrified Alameda, the Encinal City is busily striving for fame. Its latest candidate is an Anti Thin Society. Miss Emma J. Wiegandt of No. 1735 Santa Clara avenue belongs to it. She has put on five pounds and obeying the rules of the society, she promptly advertised for their return, offering a fat reward.

Chris McNab is big, resourceful and consummate. The latter quality got him in hot water with the police when he said that their chief task was to do nothing, prevent the police force from doing anything, to encourage and to collect big graft. They are hot on his trail and Chris as well as his resourcefulness would bring him in good stead. He has not uttered a word. After the attorney-general Gavin will let fly a writ which will blow his opponents into legal limbo.

In the small elections across the bay there is something space. The Berkeley Socialists wish to recall a Socialist Councilman, and the Oakland Socialists to recall Mayor Mott and Councilman Turner. It is a case of tit for tat, but it might be more equal if a Mott for Frank. Mayor Rolph of Oakland has promised that he would do something before his term was over to recall, or course, if he escaped the recall.

The Oregonians here on a mission to select the site for their fair building have a jolly lot. They seem to be getting over the task imposed on them. Many attentions have been showered on them by the exposition directors, but it has not turned their head. They are proud of the fact that they were the first to come to California in the matter of choosing a site.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the city authorities to carry the election for a whole century and Civic Hall. Meetings are being held all over the town. The papers are unanimously in favor of the project. All outward appearances favorable, but underneath there is a feeling of uneasiness that it requires a two-thirds vote to carry.

Some may not know it, but the man who stands between them and the mumia is Mayor Rolph. The mummies have practically decided that the canines must be mummied. Rover, who owns dogs, and hates to see them unnecessarily tortured, is in doubt what to do, and the only ray of hope is even that he will veto the measure.

COINS NEW PHRASE.

JUDGE EXPRESSES CONTEMPT.

Instead of being sent to Whittier as Probation Officer Dodds recommended, Judge Cabaniss yesterday placed G. Fleischman on probation for two years. Incidentally the court coined a new term for youths in Fleischman's class.

Fleischman, because of his lavish use of money which he realized from cashing fictitious checks, was presumed to be the son of a millionaire. When Capt. Dodd's report was read adversely to probation, Judge Cabaniss remarked:

"Oh, a puppy dog millionaire who cashes checks and spends the money chasing chorus girls! A term in Whittier would have little effect. I will put him on two years' probation."

Fleischman's attorney guaranteed that Fleischman will be given employment as a stenographer, and will not violate his probation.

REFUSES TO CUT KNOT.

LIVE APART, THOUGH MARRIED.

Judge Monroe declined yesterday to sever the ties which bind Francis L. Daugherty and Rosa A., notwithstanding the strenuous endeavor of the father-in-law, Charles E. Daugherty. He later asked for an annulment on the ground that his boy was not of age at the time he ran away with Rosa, who is the daughter of Bert Franklin, the detective.

It was shown that the marriage was performed at Santa Ana on February 2, 1911, but that they never lived together. Francis told Judge Monroe that he gave his age as 21, when he obtained the license, although he is only 20, and that Rosa is now only 17.

NEW FACES ON BENCH.

SUPERIOR JUDGES CHANGE.

There will be two new judges sitting in the Superior Court tomorrow. Judge Fred V. Wood comes from Amador county, and Judge Franklin J. Cole from Imperial. They succeed Judges Dooling and Murphey, who have returned to their own courts.

Judge Hutton will make his monthly visit to Patton tomorrow and later he will go to Imperial county to try a case. Judge Craig of Department Seven, will act as presiding judge this week. Judge Wood, who has been busy preparing decisions on submitted cases, will return to Department One tomorrow, and Judge Willis, who has been trying cases in San Francisco, will take his bench in Department Eleven. Judge Cabaniss, who has been sitting there, will return to that city.

POPULATION INDEX.

MANY JUVENILE COURT CASES.

The work of the Juvenile Court has increased as the city grows, and the rapid growth of the city is evidenced by the increase of cases since the court was established in 1903.

There have been 15,000 hearings in all. This year will probably total 5000, which will be an increase of 2000 over 1911. Already this year 500 hearings have been held.

More than 1000 children passed through the Detention Home last year and 300 children through the Parental Home. The Juvenile Court has a separate file for its cases, and tomorrow when No. 4000, referring to children, is filed, there will be a little extra ceremony in commemoration of the high-water mark.

HIS OTHER WIFE.

ANNULMENT SUIT HALTS.

The suit of Mabel M. Wainwright to annul her marriage with Harry Wainwright, was halted in Judge Monroe's court yesterday, until depositions can be taken in Chicago tending to show that Wainwright had a wife when he married Mabel. In her complaint Mabel states that Wainwright, whose other name, she alleges is Frederick, was married to Effie F. McKinley in Chicago, February 12, 1894.

The discovery that Wainwright was not single when she married him was made by Mabel, who read in a newspaper that he had been sued for divorce. This started a still-hunt for proof of the alleged perfidy of her lord and master.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

The ownership of a five-foot strip forming half of an alley on Olive street was awarded to E. R. Brainerd by Judge Houser yesterday. This strip was claimed by R. A. Hewitt, who had received a deed from Brainerd for forty-five feet he sold in 1907 for $40,000. A search of the deed, however, failed to show that Brainerd intended to convey the strip, and judgment was given accordingly.

GAMBLING IN GRAVEYARDS.

Old-Time Practice in England Is Still Indulged in at Least One Place in the United Kingdom.

[Baltimore American:] There is a churchyard in the Borough of St. Marylebone, London, in which a tombstone is pointed out to visitors as the one on which Hogarth's "idle apprentice" threw dice. Attention has just been called to the fact that this practice of gambling on tombstones has come down to the present day in at least one graveyard in the United Kingdom.

A lawsuit just decided has stopped the practice in the churchyard of Dungarvan, an Irish village, where some of the inhabitants were in the habit of playing cards on the slabs placed over graves and of dancing to the music of an accordion. The representative church body was the complainant in the case. It sought and obtained an injunction against sixteen persons, restraining them from trespassing upon the burial-ground and premises adjacent to the Church of St. Mary. The master of rolls, who heard the case, held that this privilege was one of permission, and not a right, and that a churchyard was dedicated to the service of God, and not to the recreation of man.

In the days before the Reformation, authorities say, the parish churchyard was used as a public playground. Games and revels were commonly held there on Sundays and holidays. At Whitsuntide there was a sort of church fair, held in graveyards, at which ale brewed by the church wardens was served, while dice-throwing, card-playing and bowls were permitted. Cock-fighting in churchyards did not cease until the eighteenth century. There is a story told that a wealthy man in Hurstbourne Tarrant, a village of Hampshire, ordered that a flat tombstone, large enough to enable the boys to play marbles on it, should be placed over his grave.

Had a Bad Name.

[Washington Star:] Mayor Brand Whitlock of Toledo, who recently refused a five-hundred-dollar increase in salary, was talking about a certain trust magnate.

"He's got a bad name," said the Mayor-novelist. "Hence he can't get a square deal. He's got as bad a name for a lawsuit as Dodgin had for a manager.

"Dodgin was the new manager of a biscuit concern. There was a workman at the concern who liked to sneak off to a shed at about 3 in the afternoon and smoke a pipe and look over the afternoon paper for half an hour or so. Well, one day as the workman sat reading and smoking in the shed, Dodgin appeared.

"'Who are you?' Dodgin asked sternly, frowning at the idle workman.

"The workman frowned back.

"'Huh, who are you?' said he.

"'I'm Dodgin, the new manager,' was the reply.

"At this the workman smiled.

"'So am I,' he said, heartily. 'Come in and have a smoke.'"

She Had Consumption, Was Dying; Now Well.

Eckman's Alterative is being used with success in the treatment of Tuberculosis. Persons who have taken it improved, gained weight, exhausting night sweats stopped, fever diminished, and many recovered. If you are interested to know more about it, we will put you in touch with some who are now well. You can investigate and judge yourself. Read of Mrs. Govert's recovery: Griffith, Ind.

"Gentlemen: Thinking that perhaps a short history of the remarkable cure of my mother-in-law, (Mrs. Anna Govert) might benefit some other sufferers, I hereby give the following testimonial: About September 30, 1908, she was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, and continually grew worse, requiring a trained nurse. Night sweats were so bad that it was necessary to change her clothing once or twice every night; her cough increased and got so bad that everybody expected that she would not live much longer. The trained nurse (Miss Anna Trinen) informed me that she had Tuberculosis and nothing could be done for her. In January, when Rev. Wm. Berg, of St. Michael's Church, at Shererville, Ind., prepared for her death, he recommended that I get some Eckman's Alterative and see if it would not give her some relief. I then requested the attending physician to give his diagnosis, and he informed me that she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. When I asked if he thought that it was useless to try the Alterative, he replied that 'No physician could help her any and I could suit myself about it.' So I immediately had Rev. Wm. Berg to send for a bottle. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. At the end of the first week's treatment, she got so bad that she refused to take any more of it, but the doctor advised her to keep on taking it, as it was the only thing that might help her. I am glad to say now that she kept on and soon began to improve. Now, she works as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick and is in good health. She frankly says she owes her life and health to Eckman's Alterative. We keep it on hand at all times and recommend it highly.

("Signed Affidavit.) JOS. GRIMMER."

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Trouble, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For Sale by the Owl Drug Co.'s Stores, and other leadings druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

Cure Yourself With 2c Turkish Bath

Remarkable Results of Robinson "Thermal" for Rheumatism, Nervous Breakdown, Kidney Trouble, Skin and Other Diseases.

Does What No Drug on Earth Can Do.

The results produced by a Robinson "Thermal" Bath inside of 30 minutes are almost beyond belief. Physicians everywhere are changing from drugs to Thermal Baths in the treatment of many diseases.

It has been found, for instance, in the case of rheumatism, that uric acid in the blood can be extracted form the system completely in a few days' time.

Eczema can be completely cured within a week.

After one or two Thermal Baths, nervous wrecks find the change to strength and vigor hard to realize.

Similar results are obtained in cases of kidney trouble, neuralgia, pimples, all skin diseases, throat and lung trouble, insomnia, constipation, lumbago and bad colds.

I suffered terribly from rheumatism, heart and stomach trouble — physicians pronounced me incurable—until I got a Robinson Bath Cabinet. My skin was yellow. I had lost sixty pounds weight. One doctor said I had consumption. Had severe hemorrhages. But today I am well—enjoying good health — and cannot be grateful enough for Robinson's Thermal Bath Cabinet.—Mrs. A. Blanchard, 628 Ashwood Street, Toledo, Ohio.

It is now possible for any man or woman to have Robinson Thermal Baths at home with hardly any trouble at all, and at a cost of only a few cents.

Whatever your disease or ailment, get a Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, and you will not only cure yourself quickly, but realize as you never did before, what real vigor and health are.

The Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets are on exhibition and for sale in Los Angeles at Broadway Department Store.

Go and examine them. Ask the dealer also for the book of the century, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," price two dollars, but given away free for a limited time. If you cannot go and see these wonderful Cabinets, send your name and address to the Robinson Mfg. Co., Suite 77, Robinson Bldg., Toledo, Ohio, for full illustrated information free.

—THE THIRD WEEK of Inauguration Month will start Monday, March 18. This is significant, not so much because it is THE THIRD WEEK of Inauguration Month, but because it is unusual for most merchandising events to hold interest over one week, WHILE THE ENTHUSIASM OVER INAUGURATION MONTH AND ITS VALUES WAS GREATER THIS WEEK THAN IT WAS THE FIRST, AND SHOULD, COMMENCING MONDAY, BE EVEN GREATER YET——For Inauguration Month is not like ordinary sales. IT DOES NOT "PETER OUT." It is the First Month of Bullock's New Year—a month set aside to emphasize—in a great, practical way—the kind of business we are building here—the earnestness with which we are striving to secure "THE SATISFACTION OF EVERY CUSTOMER."

—It's the month that "sets the mark"—in which every unit of the organization, with pride in itself and in the business as a whole, exerts itself to the utmost to make its "best" of the past, a "better best" for the "Now" and for the future—

—So stocks have been provided that show extraordinary strength in varieties, and values, but most of all in the splendid "quality" that is evident everywhere—

—And the efficiency of Service has been intensified, because everyone has been imbued anew with the spirit that controls the business, and directs the activities of the Month—

—This Third Week should be even more advantageous, even busier than either of the first two—because they have done their part well in spreading the news of the month and of its "difference"— —and because every department is concerned, determined and equipped to make the coming week superlatively attractive from a shopping standpoint.

—Inauguration Month is going to make still more clear to THE MANY what we are doing to make Bullock's "the best that a store can be"—

—And the best Advertising for the Month will be ITS MERCHANDISE—ITS VALUES—ITS SERVICE—

SOCIETY.

the school, and a few others. The invited guests for the evening included Messrs. and Mmes. Merton E. Hill, Fletcher H. Manker, Frederick L. Wing, Harry C. Kennedy, LeRoy Bradley, Edward C. Harwood, George E. Gregg, Thomas W. Nisbet, Edward A. Bowen, William C. Reynolds, Mrs. Helen Mahurin, Mrs. C. A. Dial, Miss Bertha Watson, Miss Bertha Davenport, Miss Fannie Noe, and Messrs. Ernest Fischer and M. A. Garber. A pleasing two-course luncheon was served the guests, later in the evening, by the hostess, assisted by her daughter, Miss Marjorie, and by Miss Bertha Davenport.

Mrs. G. B. West entertained delightfully on Tuesday evening, at her home on North Euclid avenue, the occasion being a birthday party in honor of the seventeenth anniversary of her daughter, Edna. The home was prettily decorated, violets and poppies in profusion being used. After an evening of social games, a four-course dinner was served by Mrs. West, assisted by Mrs. J. M. Deeds, of Claremont. Among the guests of the evening were, Miss Irene Smith, Miss Beatrice Smith, Miss Viola Manker, Miss Edna West; Messrs. Herbert McCulloch, Bradford Manker and Allan Couch.

The "Merry Wives" Club was pleasantly entertained Friday at the home of Mrs. George E. Gregg, on East Tenth street. The afternoon was spent in needlework, and delightful refreshments were served to the following guests: Mmes. William C. Cline, Frank Cushing, H. Walter Slugg, Denoyer D. Crew, William Basil Duncan, G. Aaron Brest, Evert B. Reynolds, William L. Brown, Frederick L. Wing, W. H. Spicer, Charles Roberts, R. R. Wiseley and daughter, Miss Rosa, all of Upland, and Mrs. H. G. Blazer, of Ontario.

Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the residence of Rev. H. P. Lane, at South Pasadena, occurred the marriage of Miss Margene Wilson and Gordon McCain, both well-known young people of Upland. Miss Wilson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wilson, of Upland, and both she and her husband have a host of friends here who will tender them congratulations. Rev. Lane was formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Upland, and since his removal to South Pasadena, now several months ago, his home is proving a veritable "Gretna Green" for a number of the local lads and lassies, who have a warm place in their heart for the former pastor here.

—o—

Manhattan Beach.

MRS. MARY STORM, Mrs. Annie Barton and Miss Alice Lowthers of Westmoreland, Eng., were house guests the past week in the home of William Smith.

Clarke Irvine is at home from the U.S.N. training station at San Francisco, enjoying a brief furlough before sailing with the battleships for an Asiatic cruise. He had just been graduated from the yeoman school and took advantage of this opportunity to visit at home before going to the Orient.

Mrs. L. Pfeiffer and family have arrived from Colorado Springs, Colo., and will pass a season at the seaside.

Mrs. A. McPherron and children of Pasadena have come to the beach for a long visit with relatives.

O. O. Mattox of Torreon, Mex., is spending some time here, having been called by the illness of his wife. She came to the seaside early in the season when conditions in Mexico became unsettled by reason of the insurrection.

Mrs. L. F. Bangart of Detroit, Mich., has been visiting with beach friends for a few days.

One of the social events of the week was a benefit given Wednesday night at Starland Theater for the Donatelli Band. The programme was participated in by vocalists and readers, while the band rendered several selections and Sig. Donatelli for the first time favored the beach with a bassoon solo.

—o—

Brawley.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK BIRKHAUSER, who but recently returned from their honeymoon trip, were most pleasantly surprised by a coterie of their Brawley friends, who arrived at their home Wednesday evening, laden with many beautiful wedding presents, flowers, congratulations and quantities of spice. Cards and music were enjoyed, after which dainty refreshments were served.

A musicale was given by the students of the Brawley Union High School Friday, which proved a most delightful social event. Judge Franklin Cole of the Superior Court of Imperial county delivered an address following the musicale. The motif of this patriotic entertainment was to secure funds for adequate athletic apparatus.

N. A. Cobb and wife of Washington, D. C., are registered at the Huntington Inn and will be here at intervals for some time. Mr. Cobb is connected with the bureau of plant industry in the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

Miss Clara Clark of Pasadena was an over-Sunday guest here at the home of John H. Eader on Main street.

Mrs. Frank B. Kendrick of Boston, a daughter of Mrs. J. B. Reed of this city, was her guest last Sunday at the Reed home on Twentieth street.

Miss Flora Lossing of Compton was here this week visiting at the home of W. D. Seely.

—o—

Rialto.

SEVERAL important social events enlivened Rialto last week, among the most conspicuously noteworthy was the annual violet tea given Tuesday afternoon by the Ladies of the Maccabees. The decorations were elaborate. From ropes of smilax were suspended pretty baskets filled with fragrant violets, above which was a canopy formed of violet paper garlands. Sprays of pepper branches were used on the stage railing and about the windows. Curtains were drawn and lights were shaded with huge paper violets. Many rugs and rockers added to the pleasant scene. From the attractively-laid and violet-decorated small tables tea and wafers were served. Mrs. Nannie Davies sang very beautifully, "Message of Violets." Mmes. Claude Keisinger and Armetrout entertained with readings and Miss Cottcamp contributed piano solos. Bell's orchestra furnished music during the afternoon. Mrs. A. B. Dale of Hollywood, held the lucky number which drew the violet quilt. More than a hundred guests were present, nearly a score of ladies from San Bernardino attending.

Another party which proved one of the successes of the season, was the Chamber of Commerce, St. Patrick's Day ball, which was held at Crowder's Hall Friday evening. A committee composed of local Elks had charge of the arrangements of the pleasant affair, and the proceds were for the library building fund of the Rialto Woman's Club.

The Afternoon Bridge Club enjoyed a delightful gathering, Thursday, when Mrs. Harry MacRae entertained with a 1 o'clock luncheon followed by bridge. The Misses Harriette and Erma Dunbar entertained the Music Study Club in a most charming manner last Thursday evening at their beautiful new home on South Almansor street. Each guest was presented with a dainty programme, which was especially well suited for the club, for it bore the old English letters, M. S.C. artistically done in gold, and at the same time was happily symbolic of the coming St. Patrick's Day, being tied with green ribbon, the letters also being edged with green. The evening was devoted to the life and compositions of Mrs. H. H. A. Beach. Incidents in her life were read in a very interesting way by Miss Bertha Buchtel, and a paper on the orchestration work of Mrs. Beach was well given by Miss Ruth Knesel. Miss Florence Knesel sang "Silent Love" most admirably, and the soft dainty lullaby "Hush, Baby Dear," was sweetly sung by Miss Erma Dunbar. Miss Ruth Waring sang one of Mrs. Beach's better known songs, "Ecstacy," and the only piano number on the programme, "Danse des Fleurs," was well rendered by Miss Harriette Dunbar. The programme closed with two songs by Miss Gladys Knesel, in her delightful way, "The Years at the Spring," and "June." Plans for the coming month were discussed, and a delightful social hour followed, during which delicious refreshments were served: St. Patrick's Day being further carried out by the dainty silk shamrocks. The members of the club who enjoyed the evening were: Miss Lulu Travis, Miss Ruth Knesel, Miss Bertha Buchter, Miss Florence Knesel, Miss Gladys Knesel, Miss Ruth Waring, Miss Harriette Dunbar and Miss Erma Dunbar. The club will be entertained next week by Miss Lulu Travis, No. 406 South Garfield avenue.

Despite the downpour of rain, a number of women attended the missionary tea given at the home of Mrs. F. B. Matthews Wednesday afternoon by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church. A short programme was given, the remainder of the afternoon being spent in a social way. The topic for discussion was "The Church and the Social Problem," with Mrs. Westerbrook as the leader. Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Mable gave an interesting discussion of the subject.

Claremont.

ON SATURDAY evening the annual Dove ball took place in the Renwick gymnasium, the girls of the sophomore class being in charge of it. The gymnasium was beautifully decorated in yellow acacias. A huge Japanese parasol was suspended in the center of the hall and yellow streamers from it formed an overhead canopy. Music was furnished by a college orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Robert M. Staples, and over two hundred girls enjoyed the dances. Punch was served in the alcoves. Miss Grace E. Berry, dean of women, was the chaperone.

Miss Mary Stoddard Roof was the hostess on Monday of a luncheon given at the Claremont Inn in honor of Marjorie Maynard, whose wedding to Roland S. Vaile of Santa Paula occurs next Monday evening. Miss Phebe E. Spalding entertained on Tuesday afternoon at a ministerial tea. The afternoon was spent in conversation and the following ladies assisted Miss Spalding in serving: Mrs. Mary Daniels, Mrs. P. D. Daggs, Miss Mary Daniels and Miss Edith Kingman. The following guests were present: Prof. and Mrs. D. H. Colcord, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Vaile, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Churchill, Mrs. Powelson, Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Rich, Dr. C. B. Sumner, Dr. Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Norton, Mrs. O. H. Kendall, Mrs. J. A. Blaisdell, Mrs. S. A. Lockridge, Mrs. M. Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kingman, Mr. and Mrs. George Irving, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Jewell, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Bissell, Mr. and Mrs. Merritt, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ford Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Woodford entertained at five hundred on Thursday evening. The decorations and refreshments carried out the St. Patrick's Day motif that was evidenced on the score cards. White carnations were used and the two prizes, which were symbolic of the patron saint of Ireland, were won by Frank Harwood and Mrs. R. J. Shoemaker. The guests who played were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Condit, Dr. and Mrs. R. P. Myer, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Shoemaker, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Beach, Miss Mary King, Mr. and Mrs J. E. Hundley, Miss Clyde Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cowan, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Harwood, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Stokes and Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Belcher.

Bandits.

In wild and bloody days of old
When murder ruled the land
The bandits all were brave and bold
And slew with ruthless hand.

The helpless traveler they found
Upon a lonely road
They deftly swatted to the ground
And eased him of his load.

The weak, the strong, the old, the young
Were forced to pay the toll.
Whoever came their way was stung
And parted with his roll.

The bandit has no gun today,
Nor does he stoop to stab;
He has a more effective way—
He drives a taxicab.

THE LOCAL DRAMA.

contribute much merriment to the performance of "Seven Days."

Following "Seven Days," the Burbank company will offer for the first time on any stage, Charles T. Dazey's new play, "Captain Lafitte," the success of which great managerial prophesies are made.

Belasco.

No play of recent years has precipitated so much discussion and heated argument as has the comedy by Austin Adams, which the Belasco Theater Company will produce tomorrow night. This discussion is no doubt due in part to the fact that for the first time in the history of the American drama the ticklish question of Socialism is handled on the stage, handled, too, under the name of Socialism, and with the most amazing frankness. But this fact cannot account for the grip which "The Landslide" gets upon all classes of people who see it, nor for the fact that millionaires and other capitalists and conservatives go back to see the play time after time.

The probable reason for this unwonted interest is that Austin Adams is the first American playwright who has ventured to invade the field dominated by Bernard Shaw, Brieux, Wedekind and the other moderns in Europe, the field of dramatic discussion of serious issues by means of comedy so light and brilliant that whatever of bitterness there may be in the statement of ugly facts is melted into laughter by the sheer wit of the lines and the humor of the situation.

Evidently Adams believes that people are never so really funny as when they take themselves seriously. At all events, in "The Landslide," a little coterie of delightful and lovable people—of the multi-millionaire class—thresh out most of the burning questions advocated by "advanced" people, in a way that keeps an audience convulsed, and which sets up no end of thinking but absolutely no bad feeling.

"The Landslide" is a significant new departure in American drama. It is a play without a villian, without a hero, without any of the immemorial stage properties and "types," a play which revolves about a central situation so deliciously funny that even the most intense scenes and the most impassioned lines are relieved by a running obligato of comedy so fine and so racy that every qualified critic who has seen "The Landslide" places Austin Adams at the very front of the coming dramatists.

The Durbar in Kinemacolor.

At the Auditorium Theater, starting Monday evening, the natural-color motion-picture production, "The Durbar in Kinemacolor," will be presented, recording every incident of the recent visit of King George V and Queen Mary of England to India, where they were proclaimed Emperor and Empress of India and rulers of more than 400,000,000 people in the Land of Mystery.

In viewing the Kinemacolor pictures of the great Durbar, one is impressed not only with the fidelity of motion and action, but chiefly by the accuracy with which the colors are reproduced. The climate of India, to a marked degree, lends itself to photography and these pictures have been acclaimed as a triumph of cinematographic art.

Like scenes from the Arabian nights the gorgeous spectacle of the Durbar is presented with its hosts of distinguished personages, King and Emperor, Queen and Empress, princes and rajahs of India, chieftains and officials, thousands of British and Indian soldiers and hundreds of thousands of people of that mighty empire, all attired in glowing colors of kaleidoscopic hues. Horses, elephants, camels, sacred cattle and oxen help to make the pageant the most pretentious spectacle in the world's history.

There are about 14,000 feet of film depicting the following subjects: "The Arrival of the King and Queen at Bombay," "The Grand Entry Into Bombay," "Preparing for the Coronation Durbar," "The Royal Arrival at Delhi," "The State Entry Into Delhi," "Rehearsing the Calcutta Pageant," "The Coronation Durbar Ceremony," "The Camp of the King and the Reception to the Princes on the Delhi Plain," "Within the Elephant Stockade," "Preparing the Elephants for the Parade," "The State Garden Party" and "The Grand Review by the King-Emperor of Fifty Thousand British and Indian Troops."

An augmented orchestra and an explanatory lecture are important features of the production. Daily matinees at 2:30 and evenings at 8:20 o'clock except Sunday.

Orpheum.

This will be a sort of dramatic week at the Orpheum opening Monday matinee, though the headline act will be a ballet. However, three sketches are on the bill, each unusual in its way, and the result is that lovers of this form of vaudeville will be eminently satisfied.

The topline position is given to one of the most beautiful acts ever staged—Pouchet's aerial ballet, a little group of girls who, by means of attached wires and special mechanism, are sent flying through the air and away out over the audience, practically to the gallery line, while at one point in the display scores of doves are released, to flutter about the human birds, settle down upon them, making a picture superb in its beauty. During their elevation the members of the ballet do not simply swing at the ends of wires, but in midair they execute the most intricate dance figures, manipulating their gorgeous wings almost as if they were in reality birds and not human beings.

The act is a costly one, heavy to handle, as it comes a week ahead for installation, and its mechanism is covered by patents so there can be no possible duplication of it.

One of the new sketches is "In Old New York," a bit of Gotham's East side, given by Harry Beresford and his excellent company. Mr. Beresford played "The Professor's Love Story" and is recognized as an actor of parts. In this play he is an old sign painter of the tenements, and the play has a pretty story, rounding to a bit of pathos at the finale which breaks into humor at the very tag. It is artistic and is, of course, very cleverly done.

Julius Tanne, the "Chatterbox," comes again on his regular rounds with a new line of stories and chatter, and Ida O'Day and her company in "Betty's Bet" makes the second of the playlet offerings. Miss O'Day was last here with the road show playing "Old Chelsea" and "Cinders." In her present vehicle she has a lighter sort of play and it gives her a chance to play the banjo, in which line she first won recognition.

The other play, of course, is "Blackmail," Walter Hampden's virile story by Richard Harding Davis, which caused so much talk during its first week. It holds over, as do Burnham and Greenwood, the oddest girl act ever given here, Thurber and Madison and Millet's Models. The music and the world's news in motion views complete an excellent bill.

Pantages.

Fred Wyckoff, the jovial Mayor of Tanktown, with his quaint jokes about the rube city from which he takes his name, and his homely songs about the Mayor and the Mayor's wife, will be welcomed by Pantages audiences. Wyckoff is a general favorite with the Pantages circuit and spends most of his time along the Pantages line.

The headlined number is "A Doctored Widow." This is a nautical comedy in which the good ship "Neptune," a bachelor tourist, a sea-sick widow, a negro porter and a custard pie have stellar roles. The piece is designed simply and solely for laughing purposes. Tom Kyle and company are its instigators.

Comedy also, but only in the technical sense of the term, is "The Lunatic and the Prima Donna." The title gives a safe clue to the character of this number. McGrath and Yeoman are the principals, the man being an actor of reputation in eccentric roles, and the woman properly entitled to fill the title role as the prima donna.

"Fun in a Swimming-pool" will be contributed by the Emersons. These three comedians combine clever acrobatics with their comedy routine. They have been regularly headlined by the eastern vaudeville circuits and merit the honor.

Singing and dancing specialities interspersed with clever repartee will be associated with the names of Elmore and Raymond. The acrobatic number will be supplied by the Five Merkels. These performers are recognized masters of their art and their act furnishes many sensational features.

—o—

Empress.

What the management of the Empress confidently believes will prove the biggest and best bill that Sullivan and Considine have ever offered the patrons of popular priced vaudeville is the new seven act programme opening with the usual matinee tomorrow.

The new bill contains three notably fine feature acts, these being Cliff Berzac's famous "Comedy Circus;" Harry Van Fossen, the "modern" minstrel man, and the Baseball Four, an aggregation of baseball players from some of America's leading organizations in a musical skit entitled "Twenty Minutes in the Clubhouse."

The Cliff Berzac Comedy Circus is unquestionably one of the best known animal acts in America. It has trained to the minute horses, beautiful shetland ponies and many other attractive features to commend it to the amusement loving public, but the one big hit of this act that has made millions laugh is "Maud" the unrideable mule.

"Maud" has defied everyone who has ever attempted to stay on her back for as long as a minute, but there are always many persons in the audience who furnish shrieks of laughter by attempting the feat, which results in nothing but a series of the most riotously funny acrobatic stunts and falls.

Harry Van Fossen needs little introduction to Empress audiences for he has scored heavily at this house before. Like Frank Tinney, Al Jolson and the few others of this class, Van Fossen is a thoroughly up-to-date minstrel man with a wealth of brand new "burnt cork" stories and songs.

George Crable, of the Brooklyn National League, William Gleason, third baseman of Dallas, Tex., George Robinson, left fielder for San Antonio and Thomas Dillon, also of the San Antonio team, are four baseball players who are offering one of the most successful baseball acts that has yet come to the vaudeville stage. The offering is known as "Twenty Minutes in the Clubhouse" on the day of a double-header and it is full of baseball slang, baseball songs and a baseball atmosphere that is bound to delight everyone, and especially every fan.

Albert Donnelly, the silent silhouette humorist, will furnish much good fun with his amusing shadowgraphs, something quite out of the ordinary on the vaudeville stage, and the Princess Luba Miroff should prove one of the popular bits of the new bill with her Russian songs and dances and really wonderful display of native Russian dress.

Kitty Ross, the fascinating firefly of vaudeville, is also a welcome addition to the new bill with her repertoire of catchy new songs and clever stories, while the new comedy pictures will complete the bill.

—o—

Kinemacolor.

Naturally, in view of the weather and the immense interest in the film of Niagara, shown at the Kinemacolor Theater last week, its continuance for another week is more than wise—it is imperative. Hence, this, the first of all American films shown by Kinemacolor, and hence destined to be historic, goes on for the coming week. It is by far the most interesting, because the best known and loved, spot yet portrayed by Kinemacolor, and to see it is just like a vitis to the famed falls. Another intensely interesting film, new and, like Niagara, all in color, depicts the birth of spring flowers. Everyone who saw the Buds and Blossoms film will be eager for this, along the same line, giving the series of views of the unfolding of spring blossoms from bud to the full bloom. A trip up the Nile in a Cook steamer will show this country at its best; a tour through Algeria will prove immensely interesting, and some pageantry episodes will give bits of parades and color schemes that are fascinating.

Feeding poultry is a practical demonstration which will be of value to all who keep fowls. Mlle. Blanquette will sing and the lecturer will explain in detail the various films, all being in color the coming week.

—o—

The joys of "A Night in Chinatown" are to be humorously featured in next week's musical comedy offering at the Princess Theater, when Charles Le Roy and Edmund Flynn will present the characters of two jolly sons of the old sod, who seek a good time in the Celestial region. They rely upon Deacon Smith to explain satisfactorily to their wives, but the deacon, to be played by Donald Stewart, allows the truth to interfere. Complications result. Mrs. Casey, in the person of Miss Elsmore, meets her husband in a chop suey restaurant where Miss Eleanor Courtan, as a gay lassie, keeps a tryst. Oliver Bundy, as an almond-eyed party with a pig-tail, will have some clever lines.

The principals, aided by a well-costumed and pretty chorus, will interpolate some excellent song features, including "Ching-a-ling," a Chinese specialty; "Since Texas Tommy Killed the Grizzly Bear," by Mr. Bundy; "Casey," by Miss Richmond; "I Feel Like Loving You," by Miss Florence Finn, who will have a soubrette part; and "Girls, Girls, Girls," by Mr. Le Roy.

Adolphus.

In accordance with the new policy established at the Adolphus Theater, the bill beginning with Monday's matinee will consist of twenty-two stellar features. A continuous performance will be given daily from 1 o'clock to 11 o'clock, with no intermission.

Among the twenty-two features picked by Manager Riggs for the introduction of the new policy, will be Happy Harrison and his unridable mule, "Dynamite." "Dynamite" is a small package of energy, and so far no one has been able to ride him. Happy Harrison has a standing offer of $1 a minute to any person who can ride his mule. "Dynamite," and next week will no doubt see many riders try for the reward.

Winnie Baldwin, the winsome Californin soubrette, is scheduled for a ten-minute appearance. With her immense wardrobe and her repertoire of latest popular songs, Winnie will no doubt be a strong contender for the headline honors. Bartlett and Collins, those versatile character comedians, who can really "comede," will appear, and Livingstone and Vaux are comedy change artists who are just a bit better than the average of their clan.

The Two Joers present the sketch, "The German Professor and the News Girl." This number is in itself a treat. Hen Parker, the "Silly Willy—The Boneless Wonder," is a contortionist par excellence. The Imperial Trio, vocalists and instrumentalists, will furnish the only musical act on the whole bill.

The one act which will be the headliner feature is Ybur, the handcuff queen. Ybur guarantees to free herself from any kind of a handcuff ever made, or any kind of a jail. She is sealed tight in a water-filled milk can, yet makes her escape within three minutes. The rest of the bill is filled in by the Adolphus orchestra and other high-class features, which total twenty-two numbers.

Success Assured.

PAGEANT KING TAKES CHARGE.

"MISSION PLAY" WILL HAVE ARTIST AS PRODUCER.

Henry Kaibierske, Life-Long Student of Arts and Crafts Has Created Many of the Greatest Progress Pictures of the Day Which Were Historically Perfect.

Henry Kabierske, who is in full charge of all the details of the production of the "Mission Play" at San Gabriel, is probably the foremost authority on pageants, historical representations and pantomime in America at the present time.

Locally, Mr. Kabierske's remarkable staging of the mission pageant in San Diego last year will be remembered. It was acclaimed the most successful and complete event of its kind ever held on the Pacific Coast.

Originally, Mr. Kabierske came from Munich. Studying art, he progressed through the studios of Berlin, the ateliers of Paris and the galleries of Vienna. He took art as he found it, and then went further, conceiving ideas of his own, and imagining a representative field for real art which was not to be found upon canvas or in marble—a field and place which would make art live.

H returned to his German home. King Humbert of Italy—the world-famous and world-loved "Umberto il Re"—was coming to Teutonic confines, and the German government planned a great pageant which would represent German art, craft and the products of the soils. Among the scores of schemes submitted to the committee in charge of this representation was Kabierske's. It was seized upon by the committee, he was given full charge of the affair, and it was pronounced, both by the visiting monarch and the German press, the most successful affair of its kind, as well as the most historically and artistically correct, ever given.

Kabierske's biggest undertaking in the United States was the pageant in Philadelphia four years ago, representing the progress of American history.

In all probability this Philadelphia pageant was more stupendous than any other single, undivided event of its character which has ever been undertaken on the American continent. The costumes, floats and other details of the representation cost—the money being spent exclusively under Kabierske's direction—$137,000. In the representation there were concerned no less than 4868 persons, all in correct costuming, made especially for the occasion.

In Munich, Bavaria, Mr. Kabierske created and directed the huge "Pageant of the Reformation," a pictorial allegory of Martin Luther's life, engaging more than 400 persons for speaking roles, and fully 1500 supernumeraries.

Author John McGroarty will thus have the collaboration of a man whose life-long business it has been to realize, for the eye and ear, the pale, far fruit of imagination. Kabierske has spent months of time and is spending thousands of dollars to have the atmosphere and all surroundings of the "Mission play "exact—and not merely as our comfortable and prosaic travelers of today think they were, but as they actually were.

Kabierske is assuming full charge of all the details, even to the building of the theater—which is now nearing completion—and the preparation of the stage for the novel drops, lights and properties with which he proposes to embellish it.

He spends his entire days at San Gabriel, arising at 5:30 o'clock each morning, reaching the gray old mission with his car at 7 o'clock, greeting the first laborer, and bidding good-night to the last one on his way home.

Kabierske is a rather short, dark man of powerful figure, decidedly European countenance, and the air of an intensely earnest, artistic zealot.

Those who know him feel that he will certainly "make good" once more.

Australia Aids Its Settlers

The State of Victoria, Australia, Offers Unusual Inducements to Settlers.

If one who is interested in Agriculture or Horticulture will read the literature put out by the Victoria, Australia, government, exploiting its lands, he will marvel at the showing made by colonists who have purchased acreage in the irrigated acres of Victoria.

The Government is anxious to secure real settlers and to that class it is making unparalleled inducements: The Government sells its lands at prices ranging from $40 to $75 per acre and allows a period of 31½ years for payment.

The lands are adapted for all kinds of agriculture and horticulture pursuits.

The climate is like that of California.

The markets are near at hand and prices secured for products being in par with any other part of the world.

The Government owns the railways and aids the colonists in every way possible in the freight tariffs to markets.

The new steamship Tahiti will leave San Francisco on April 3d, with a special excursion bound direct to Melbourne. A very low one way and round trip rate has been made and any information, folders, booklets, etc., regarding this section, can be had by addressing The Peck-Judah Co., U. S. Agents of the Land Dept. of the Victorian Government, 687 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

SHAMROCK AND ROSES.

BY JOHN KIRK ADAMS.

Ann Burns passed the little flower shop twice a day when she went to and from her work in the wholesale millinery house downtown. It was florist's business to sell artificial flowers to the country buyers who were customers of the place, but the masses of cheap silk and cotton blossoms were but a mockery to her flower-loving nature. She yearned for the living, natural blooms.

The little florist shop was tucked away between two tall buildings and there was but one window in which to display the flowers. Against a changing background of ferns or palms there appeared bunches of dark blue violets in imitation cut glass vases, or tall jars of roses, golden-headed chrysanthemums, waxen lilies, and many other flower in its season—but always roses and violets.

Ann's blue eyes peered wistfully through the window and vied with the hue of the violets there. Her pretty nose tried to sniff the fragrance of the blossoms and when the door of the shop opened and closed again she usually did get a whiff of the fragrance from within.

"Oh, dear," sighed Ann, "I do wish there might be money to spare for flowers some times. There's granny lying helpless with rheumatism and only me to take care of her, and the money melts like the dew on the shamrock in Carrickglen—ah, 'tis my old ma had never come to this cold, inclimit country!"

The tears blurred her eyes and she turned on her way up the street toward home where Granny Burns would be awaiting her coming with impatience. All the way to the upper East side, to gain which the elevated train greedily gobbled one of her precious nickels, Ann's thoughts were busy with the old times in Ireland.

She remembered vividly the exciting day when her father announced that he had sold the tiny farm and that they were to emigrate to America to seek better fortune would attend their efforts. There was only Granny, then young and alert, and the motherless Ann and the youthful, ambitious father, Patrick Burns. Granny had gone ruthlessly into the new world which had received her and hers so coldly and dealt them nothing but pain and suffering.

First, Patrick had found work as a driver and they lived comfortably; then came one awful day when Patrick Burns was brought home stark and cold, the result of a premature blast of powder.

After that, it was a pitiful struggle for Ann and her grandmother to gain a livelihood. They moved into one room and Granny went forth to do washing and cleaning while Ann obtained a position as cash girl in a department store. Several years passed as Ann grew up and obtained the position in the wholesale house. Granny contracted rheumatism and took to her bed, lamenting sadly over their unhappy condition. During the long hours which she spent alone she worried much over Ann's future. What would become of the beautiful young girl when Granny died?

She managed to hobble around and prepare a hot supper for her devoted daughter and when Ann arrived Granny was sitting in the old arm chair beside the table waiting for her.

"Ah, Granny dear!" cried the girl, pressing her cold cheek next the ancient and withered one. "'Tis a mind Ann to punish you for the reckless! No, don't stir a step! I'm a bit tired and I'll be having the tea dished before you can say 'Jack!' She tossed off her cloak and flew to the wash-basin in the corner.

"Now, dearie, ye'll wear yerself to a shadow all the flurry av waitin' on a good-fer-nothin' like me—" protested Granny as Ann poured the tea.

"Nonsense," Ann's voice was reassuring. "I don't believe you made yourself a cup of tea this noon—now, have you?"

The old woman's wrinkled face broke into a sly smile. "I'm afraid not, dearie," she croaked, sipping eagerly at the strong decoction. "Only a day's enough for any one."

"Two cups of tea are too much for you, Granny Burns," declared Ann firmly, "then a strong, able girl like me can get along with none! Unless you promise to have that cup at once I'll never drink another drop of tea while I live!"

Granny had held her own cup over the fire.

"Shall I throw it away, Granny, or will you mind me?" she asked.

"I'll mind, dearie," promised Granny meekly; "only I hate to drink up what you worruk so harrd to get. Now, there's a foine stew in th' pot—"

Ann dished up the stew into two plates and by coaxing and persuasion prevailed upon Granny to eat instead of secreting it for later.

"To-morrow I get my job, Granny, and then, God—we can have enough to eat and medicine for you. Only I wish I could bring you a flower or something like that to brighten the room." She told Granny that she had been in the florist's shop that day and Granny listened eagerly.

"Flowers? Did yez say pots of flowers from th' ould country?"

"No, Granny, something more. I saw a pan with a great square cut in it—and shamrock and roses and weany little flowers, and I wanted to buy that for you, to remind you like a bit of Carrickglen in the days." Ann's eyes were blue violets and Granny's, and none been like Ann's, save the hue of faded blue wet with tears.

"Now, mind, dearie," the old woman replied like the young one, "yer day will come and yer'll bring yer arrums full of posies to Granny. Meantimes I'll dhrame av th' ould sod and the shamrock in Carrickglen medders looked loike."

That night Ann carried out a resolve. It was the 17th of March, St. Patrick's Day. She left Granny murmuring prayers over her beads and lamenting the fact that she was not able to go to church.

Ann walked all the way down to Broadway and saved ten cents. She was so much heartened by this that she decided to walk home and thus save ten cents more would have accumulated twenty cents which she resolved to spend upon flowers for Granny.

The florist shop was still open when Ann came around the corner and she paused before the narrow window for several days many tiny pots of flowers had gladdened her eyes. To-night the pots had disappeared and there remained nothing but a few square feet of turf green with the young trefoil.

Ann felt the fatigue of her day in the morning and half faint at noon. Ann crossed to the florist shop and stood at the counter. The air was heavy and fragrant with a multitude of odors threaded with the scent of the fresh turf.

A fat man was talking to the tall, black-eyed young Irishman behind the counter.

"I counted on your havin' some shamrock saved for me, Timmy," he complained.

"I've sold every pot of the stuff," explained Timmy with a glance toward Ann. She looked so pale and tired that he came around the counter and gave her a chair. She thanked him with a timid little smile.

"How about the bit of sod in the window, Timmy?" asked the customer persuasively.

"'Tis not for the likes of you, Sullivan," laughed the florist good-naturedly. "Your money can't buy that. Why 'twas sent to me direct from my old home in Carrickglen and I've got to keep it."

The fat man frowned and moved toward the door. "You'll never succeed in business, Timmy Hagan—a merchant should sell everything and anything in his store—down to his immortal sowl if necessary to turrn a dollar."

"Well, my soul ain't for sale today, Sullivan," laughed the youth, and as the door slammed behind the man he turned to Ann, with a glance of mingled admiration and respect. "What can I do for you, Miss?" he asked.

"I wanted some shamrock," she faltered, "but you said you didn't have any."

"No more I haven't," he said regretfully, "except this here from old Carrickglen. 'Twas sent to me by my cousin." He reached into the window and brought forth the pan of sod. "Maybe you'd like a sniff at it." He placed it on the counter.

Ann looked at it with longing eyes. All the pent up sorrow of the past three years broke bounds at once and with a little sob her face dropped down on the bit of Carrickglen sod. "Oh, dear, dear," she cried.

Timmy Hagan stared aghast at her lovely pale face tearfully pressed against the green turf.

"Ah, you're Irish, too," he cried impulsively, "tell me all about the trouble."

Ann told him everything from the beginning, and the eyes of the florist never left her face in the telling. When she had concluded he grasped the pan of sod, whipped it into a box, stuffed the corners with tissue paper, tied the package and proceeded to get into his overcoat.

"I hope you'll not take offense but this sod is for your Granny and I'm going to see you home and see that you get there all right, all right. Mike'll tend to the shop," He yelled down a speaking tube into the cellar and a shock-headed boy appeared to grin appreciatively at the sight of his employer leaving the shop in company of a pretty girl. Timmy snatched a bunch of violets and pressed them into Ann's hand. "Smell of 'em—sweet, ain't they?" he asked.

"Lovely," murmured Ann, who was walking in a dream.

Going uptown in the train she suddenly turned grateful eyes to his. "I can never, never pay you, Mr. Hagan," she said timidly.

"Some day you can," he said enigmatically. "I'm a florist, you know, and I'm interested at present in turning white roses to pink ones—you might help me some."

He looked down at her and as their glance met the transformation took place—for under the magic of his awakening love, Ann's pale cheeks turned to richest rose color.

WORLD'S PROGRESS MORALLY.

London's Gloomy Dean Says We Are Not Growing Better Despite Many Evidences to the Contrary.

[Chicago Record Herald:] London has a "gloomy dean," Dr. Inge, who denies that civilized nations are progressing morally in our era. It seems that there are other moralists who share Dr. Inge's grave misgivings. A correspondent, disturbed by these, asks for the Record-Herald's view of the subject. That view has been presented many times, but it will bear further reiteration, and a new year makes such an expression appropriate.

Frankly, we find it difficult to account for the attitude or mood of those who see no evidence of moral progress, or even see evidence of moral retrogression. Everything in politics, legislation, social relations seems to us to attest genuine and substantial moral progress. What are the "tests" given by historians of civilization, by philosophical teachers of ethics? They are well-known—the position of woman, the treatment of the unfortunate, the criminal, the insane, the unemployed; the general ideals and ideas of society; the distribution of wealth, opportunity and means of culture and education. Judged by these tests, can our era be declared wanting, reactionary?

Woman's position has vastly improved. Who will now seriously defend the "subjection" of woman? Women are emancipated industrially and are gradually acquiring all political rights and privileges.

Charity never was more humane, broad, far-sighted than now. Charity concerns itself with causes of misery and idleness; it not only relieves, but seeks to redeem and reclaim. Charity is being raised to a scientific plane.

As to labor, wages, hours, unemployment, industrial accidents and disease, when did these questions receive more earnest or general attention than they are receiving today? The trend in child labor legislation, in insurance legislation, in factory legislation is too manifest to require elaboration.

Prisons, asylums and poorhouses are being reformed and humanized.

Social and political ideals are high and noble. Equality of opportunity, justice, honesty, democracy underlie all our agitations and movements. Education was never more popular, never more vital, never more democratic than now. We complain of and denounce our schools, but only because our educational ideals have outstripped our achievements.

Privilege, snobbery, caste are disappearing. Thrift and sobriety are increasing. Dreaded diseases are being attacked and the general health fostered by measures of prevention, instruction and cure. Art and beauty are being democratized.

If all this is not evidence of moral advance, what is moral advance? The indictment of our age on moral grounds is, in our judgment, most superficial.

Princess Christian of Schelswig-Holstein, an aunt of the King of England, is in Paris inquiring into the sea-water treatment of Dr. Rene Quinton. She has heard of many remarkable cures, especially in children's cases, attributed to this treatment, and if she is satisfied that it is as efficient as it is represented to be she will have it introduced into the London dispensaries for the benefit of the poor.

Famous "Pint of Cough Syrup" Receipt

No Better Remedy at Any Price. Fully Guaranteed.

Make a plain syrup by mixing one pint of granulated sugar and ½ pint of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of pure Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup. This gives you a family supply of the best cough syrup at a saving of $2. It never spoils. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

The effectiveness of this simple remedy is surprising. It seems to take hold instantly, and will usually stop the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. It tones up the jaded appetite and is just laxative enough to be helpful in a cough, and has a pleasing taste. Also excellent for bronchial trouble, throat tickle, sore lungs and asthma, and an unequaled remedy for whooping cough and croup.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) is a prime favorite in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, though never successfully. If you try it, use only genuine Pinex, which is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this recipe.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MISMANAGEMENT OF GERMANY'S THEATERS.

Millions Are Spent to No Good End and the Teutonic Taxpayer is Beginning to Wonder Why Other Nations Talk of Subsidized Drama—Kaiser Wilhelm Is Himself Largely Responsible.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—Kaiser Wilhelm has decreed that no more Hohenzollern Princes shall be represented on the stage of Prussia's royal theaters. Hitherto the House of Brandenburg has appeared on the stage always in heoric measure, outtowering base humanity in spirit as in physique, but of late the fount of such apatheosizing plays has run dry and the Kaiser swears that sooner than tolerate stage Hohenzollerns with inches, and wisdom, like those of ordinary mortals, he will tolerate none at all.

Thereby he has set Germans asking whether the system of state, court or royal theaters, run at enormous cost to the taxpayer, is really worth the money. How is it, they ask, that Englishmen and Americans sign for the splendors of a state-supported stage, while Germans who have it damn it as a nuisance, and yearn for the free theatrical competition of America and England? The explanation is that, during the present reign, Prussia's state theaters have fallen into grievous decay; have mostly ceased to serve true art, and have learned only to serve the Kaiser, who, when he celebrated his tenth accession anniversary in 1898, made a speech to the royal theater staff in which he said: "The stage is one of my weapons." He meant that he was trying to use the theater for political aims. "Weapons' is the right word," exclaimed Germany's angry playwrights, whose works had been rejected because their politics or sociology displeased the Kaiser. "His Majesty uses the weapon over our unlucky heads!"

The well-known critic Walter Turszinsky, says that "the absolute exclusion of the royal theaters from the domain of art results from the fact that they depend exclusively upon one man's taste, and that man is Germany's Kaiser." This principle has applied only during the present reign. The first Wilhelm and his predecessors left the theater entirely to their "intendants." Wilhelm II. became his own intendant. When his nominal intendants, Hochberg, Max Grube, Ludwig Barnay and Huelsen-Haesler told him frankly that he was killing stage art, he made them submit or go.

BAD TO WORSE.

When Count Huelsen-Haesler, the the present able intendant, arrived from Wiesbaden in 1903, he told Kaiser Wilhelm plainly that he must modernize the theaters and authorize the production of new plays with modern tendencies. Wilhelm II. refused and since then his theaters have gone from bad to worse; so that today it is a good advertisement for a young author to have his play rejected by the royal theaters; whereas if it is accepted and produced he usually has trouble in getting it looked at by other managers.

Kaiser Wilhelm is dissatisfied. Ten pounds of Hohenzollernism, one pound of pathos, one of bathos, one of magnificent commonplace, and a ton of eloquent patriotic rhodomontade is his recipe for a good play. There exists already a few good Hohenzollern plays like Kleist's "Prince Friedrich von Homburg," and—on a lower level—one or two good Wildenbruch plays. But the supply is limited and for good plays of modern life Wilhelm II. has no tolerance. He has ostracized Germany's best authors. Hauptmann was expelled for his "Hannele." Fulda for his "Herostrat," and even the favorite Wildenbruch produced certain love passages which were too "temperamental" for Kaiser Wilhelm. Wildenbruch's plays, nevertheless, are after the Kaiser's heart. The playwright was a kinsman of the Hohenzollerns, and the Hohenzollern spirit was in his blood. The other modern German romanticists ignore the Hohenzollerns altogether, and go farther back to the older Hohenstaufen dynasty, which they find more picturesque. And this also annoys the Kaiser.

The rule hitherto has been that plays dealing with Hohenzollerns up to and including Friedrich the Great could be produced by the theater intendant on his own judgment; but that all plays dealing with late Hohenzollerns must first be approved of by the sovereign himself. For twenty years this policy has been pursued, plays being accepted or rejected according as they painted the Brandenburg dynasty as a succession of heroes and saints, or not. When Ernst Wichert's drama "Aus Eigenem Recht" was rejected, the author revenged himself by writing in his reminiscences that "The Hohenzollerns are allowed to appear on the stage only in a halo of heroic infallibility," and that was the truth. Of late Kaiser Wilhelm has insisted on seeing all Hohenzollern plays irrespective of epoch; and he has been displeased by the thinness of the incense burnt at the ancestral shrine. Hence the absolute forbidding of Hohenzollern pieces in future, a prohibition which has much annoyed several mediocre authors who have lately been cramming up history with the intention of writing laudatory plays about the house of Brandenburg.

HEAVY LOSSES.

The decline of the Prussian royal theaters thus is mainly due to Kaiser Wilhelm himself. But apart from that, the management is attacked. The Berlin opera, the Berlin royal theater and the two royal theaters at Hanover and Wiesbaden swallow about $500,000 a year, more than they take in receipts. When two years ago Kaiser Wilhelm asked the Landtag to raise his civil list from $3,750,000 to $4,500,000 one of his pleas was that his theaters cost him annually more and more. The theaters are always full, and their prices are higher than those of Munich and Dresden, where the productions are infinitely better, yet there is a heavy loss. The management is further attacked for its attitude to native talent. Althought the royal theater persists in producing worthless "patriotic" pieces, the royal opera is thronged with foreigners, including Americans like Geraldine Farrar and Putnam Griswold; and, leaving Wagner aside, two-thirds of the operas produced are by foreign composers.

If the Kaiser condescended to study foreigners he would learn how to improve the royal theaters by looking to Russia. The Russian imperial theaters which for size, costliness and splendor far excel Germany's, also excel them in an artistic sense, because they have complete artistic freedom.

Royal Operahouse, Berlin,

Which with three other of the Kaiser's theaters shows a deficit of $500,000 a year.

Although Russia is practically an unqualified despotism, the State theaters, by some freak of politics, are emancipated. They do not concentrate on the classical, the romantic and the dynastic, but produce ultra-modern and even semi-socialistic plays by Maxim Gorky, Andreyeff, Kupoin, Yushkevitch, and other playwrights of the advanced school. Likewise the Russian opera is far better than the Prussian, and the Russian ballet is the best on earth.

Russia he sfive imperial theaters. In St. Petersburg are the Marya, for the ballet and opera, the Alexander for the drama, and the French Theater Michel. The Theater Michel exists mainly for the benefit of the embassies and legations. It is in close relation with the Comedie Francaise. Gabrielle Robinne, Cecile Sorel, Marie Louise Derval, and many other well known Parisian actresses got their training on its stage. In Moscow are the Grand and the Little Theaters. The Grand claims to be the biggest theater in Europe. These five theaters cost the Russian taxpayers $1,050,000 a year. They are managed by M. Teliakowsky, who draws a big salary; and by a multitudinous chancellery of bureaucrats. That explains the deficit. With good management the Russian theaters ought to pay, as they are always filled at high prices.

The Duma last year examined their accounts and thereby threw an amusing light on State theater management. It was noticed that the sum of $3843 was charged during the last twenty-one years under the puzzling heading, "candles in box." As the boxes are lighted only by electricity this required an explanation. The explanation was that on an evening of 1889, when the Emperor Alexander III, and a party were in the imperial box the electricity failed. Candles were brought immediately, and half a dollar was entered up for them next day. On the following day "by mistake" another half a dollar for candles was entered up; and this went on for twenty-one years, with the result that nearly $4000 slipped into someone's pocket.

RUSSIAN SALARIES.

The Russian imperial theaters pay their artistes badly. Savina, Russia's best actress, who plays in the Alexander Theater, gets $6000 a year; and that is the salary paid to the singers Tamara, Schouvaloff, and Tcherkasskaya, who play first-class operatic, and even main Wagnerian roles. Schaliapine, before America discovered him, got $20,000 a year. This was a record. The ballerinas get much less. Pavlowa's salary—also before discovered—was $3000 a year; Lydia Kyasht, London's favorite, got $900 a year; and several other ballet dancers, whose names are now known throughout two continents, were earning $25 a month when their merits were realized by foreigners.

One reason for these low wages is that the Russian Imperial theaters treat all employees as officials. After twenty years' service they can retire on pensions. These conditions have changed radically during the past four years, especially in the ballet. Nowadays, the ballerinas return to St. Petersburg "spoiled." The State cannot afford to pay them the salaries they demand; and their high and mighty pretensions, learned abroad, create envious amazement among the meek artistes who stay at home. The "St. Petersburgskaya Gazeta" prints a cartoon on this subject, headed, "After the American Tour." It shows Pavlowa arriving at the Maya Theater pay-box, and holding out an enormous empty sack.

"I beg your pardon, madame," says the surprised cashier. "Have you brought that sack for a load of hay?"

"Not likely," says the imperturbable Pavlowa. "I've brought it for my salary."

When Kyasht returned to St. Petersburg for a few days she demanded a salary of $30,000 a year. Peopls were a bit surprised, but the fascinating Lydia replied with the remark of Warren Hastings when he helped himself to the treasures of India, "I am surprised at my own moderation."

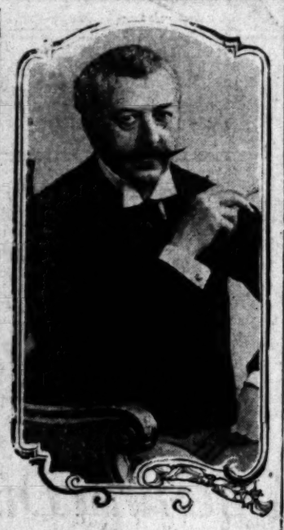
Nicholas II. has a passion for the ballet. A whole army of ballet dancers is imported annually from St. Petersburg to Krasnoe Selo for the army maneuvers, where the foreign military attaches do not know which to admire most, the ballerinas' pretty faces or the imperial spirit which brinks them to a field of serious war-training. Some suspect that the ballet is more important than the battalions. When in 1907 Pavlova danced before the Czar, a certain Col. Verigin led his cavalry squadron full tilt into the marquee in which Czar Nicholas sat staring at the premiere danseuse's gyrations; and thereby nearly smothered Czar, dancer and all. As Verigin had obeyed orders, and from the military point of view had performed a brilliant feat, he could not be court-martialed. He was left in command of his squadron for a year, and then retired without pension.

IN VIENNA.

The management of the Vienna court theaters is still worse than that of the Russian houses. The court opera registers an annual loss of $400,000. The Austrian court stage, like the Prussian, was for many years a citadel of reaction in art—which meant no art at all. Today it is free. Kaiser Franz Josef is an indifferent judge of things theatrical. His favorite play is Grillparzer's "Hapsburg Family Quarrel," the hero of which is the Hamlet-like Josef II, Kaiser of the Holy Roman Empire. But Franz Josef has no objections to Hapsburgs being treated as mortal men.

People cite the mismanagement, heavy deficits and artistic infertility of Europe's State theaters as an argument against royal or State patronage of the stage, but the truth is that in bad hands State theaters are worse than private, since they lack the saving spur of competition, whereas in competent hands, a State theater has advantages which no private theater possesses. This is shown by the extraordinary brilliancy and success of the Meiningen court theater. The Meiningen Theater is the creation of the veteran Duke George II, aided by his wife, formerly pretty Ellen Franz, the actress, whom he married in 1873, and created Baroness von Heldburg. The duke has led the classical drama to extraordinary heights. His principles are perfect staging, the influencing of the eye as well as the ear, and the creation of a poetical coloring and atmosphere independently of mechanical aids. He enforces discipline with a Prussian drill-sergeant's rigor; tolerates no starring and no virtuosity; designs his own scenes and costumes, and spends vast sums on preparation of every play. As result of unremitting labor and tremendous outlay, he evolved the finest stock company in Europe. For sixteen years it toured Austria, Russia, England, Sweden and Europe's minor States, under the management of Herr Kroenegk, and today Meiningen is looked up to by Germans as the court stage which best of all shows what may be done when theaters are taken in hand by a progressive ruler, who has time and ability to concentrate on them alone.

RUDOLPH VON ELPHBERG.



Count Von Huelsen-Haesler,

Intendant of the Kaiser's theater. Because Wilhelm has refused to take the Count's advice his playhouses are in a bad way.

"GREASED LIGHTNING."

[Literary Digest:] Wheels are the obstacle to speed, believed Tom L. Johnson, late Mayor of Cleveland and street-railway magnate, so he welcomed the invention of a car that was to have no wheels at all, and if he had lived, he might have sent passengers sliding from New York to Chicago by the Greased Lightning Railway. The name may seem fanciful, but as the road was to be operated by electricity and outdo all previous speed records, it is pretty accurate. Frederic C. Howe had the story of it from Mayor Johnson's own lips, and it is printed in the introduction to his autobiography, which is entitled "My Story" (Huebsch.) Says Mr. Howe:

Mr. Johnson's most titanic recreative exploit was what his friends called "Greased Lightning" or "Slip-slide." One day in the midst of a conference at the City Hall a man waited to see the Mayor. When his turn came he said: "Mr. Johnson, I have an invention out in Chicago—a street railway operated by magnets laid between the rails. It does away with the trolley." Mr. Johnson replied: "That interests me. For years I have been thinking of a railway operated by magnets between the rails; but that does not interest me so much. What I want to do is to get rid of the wheels. They are the obstacle to speed. You can not go much faster than the present rate of speed because when you do the wheels fly asunder from the rapidity of the revolutions. Now, there must be a way of running a train without wheels, and that is what I am most interested in. We ought to be able to travel three or four hundred miles an hour, but we can't do it as long as we are dependent on wheels."

He finally went to Chicago and saw the invention. Shortly after his return trucks loaded with great square timbers and pieces of steel drew up in front of his mansion on Euclid avenue. The area ways to the basement floor were opened up and the unwieldy freight was pushed into the basement. Electrical machinery followed. Then Mr. Johnson picked out the best electrician he could find in the city and explained his idea. It seemed too absurd for trial, but they went to work. Day after day and month after month in the early morning and late at night he worked in the cellar with these strange appliances for solving the problem of rapid locomotion. He jokingly told his friends what he was planning to do. They laughed at his monster plaything which covered the floor of the cellar and extended as a track for ninety feet from one end to the other. It was given the derisive name of "Greased Lightning." There were no wheels above the tracks only a rough car on steel shoes like flat-bottomed skates. Below and between the tracks were steel magnets. That was all with the exception of powerful electrical devices connected with similar machinery in the back yard. The underlying idea in nontechnical terms was to propel the car by a series of magnets laid between the tracks which would act in succession, the current being cut off as the car passed over the one below it. This was the propelling power. But this power was downward. There was nothing to relieve the friction of the shoes on the tracks, nothing to lift the car so that the forward movement would be possible. Finally the day was set for the trial. Powerful currents were turned on and by the carefully studied electrical formulas the car should have moved forward. Instead of that the magnetic power under the car was so strong that it crushed the structure to the earth. "Greased Lightning" failed to move.

For weeks Mr. Johnson studied the problem. He went over his calculations. They were theoretically correct. Of that he was sure. He had his processes proved up by his mechanician. Then he threw away the road-bed, the car, and the appliances which had cost thousands of dollars, and reversed the arrangement.

A structure was built across the top of the cellar and consisted of a series of magnets that were energized at the propertime to lift the car and carry it forward. At the top of the car were shoes which were made to fit loosely between upper and lower tracks located on the elevated structure. To the shoes were attached light contact-fingers made of a spring bronze which touched the tracks slightly in advance of the shoes. The car when not in motion would hang by the shoes upon the lower track. The contact-fingers would be in tight contact with the same. The instant the controller was turned on, the current would pass through the contact-fingers, energizing lifting-magnets sufficiently to lift the car and the shoes from the bottom track. If, however, it were lifted sufficiently for the contact-fingers to touch the top track, the current in the lifting-magnet would be reduced so as to float the car practically half-way between the two tracks. Thus the car theoretically would float in the air and when the magnets designed for forward propulsion were energized it would move forward in proportion to the speed at which these magnets were energized.

This is a description of what he planned to do as explained to my nontechnical mind. It was finally completed, after many delays, and the current turned on. "Greased Lightning" actually moved. The car was propelled forward and backward as rapidly as it was safe to permit in the short ninety feet of track in the cellar. It was interesting to watch the loading of the car, for as each additional passenger stepped on there would be a slight downward movement until the contact-finger touched the lower rail, when it would immediately resume its former position.

The car in motion was necessarily absolutely noiseless and without the least vibration. With eyes closed, at the slight rate of speed at which it was necessary to move in the cellar, the occupant could not tell whether the car was in motion or not. Had the speed been greater, the only difference would have been the feeling of the air current.

Mr. Johnson was satisfied that he had demonstrated the correctness of his long study of the subject. If the device was theoretically correct it must be practically correct, he argued. But he had no time and not sufficient money to build a large model. That would require hundreds of thousands of dollars. It would also revolutionize locomotion and scrap the railroads of the country. For, as he said, with "slip-slide" one could go from Chicago to New York in four or five hours; from New York to Philadelphia in half an hour. There was an end of space; an end of the tenement and the slum. Here was a means of making the ends of America touch one another.

He went to Schenectady, and interested the General Electric Company. They were incredulous. But they sent three expert electricians to Cleveland. They spent weeks there studying the device. They checked up every process in the reasoning and finally reported that the project was scientifically sound and correct. The General electric was still unconvinced, so they sent their chief electrician to Cleveland. After investigation he, too, was convinced that space was annihilated. He so reported to the company. Then there were conferences between Mr. Johnson and the company. Contracts were drawn for the building of a model, and the trial of the project.

It was practically agreed that the General Electric was to furnish the money for an experiment on a large scale; a two-mile track was to be built at Schnectady. The General Electric was to have certain rights of manufacture, and Mr. Johnson certain selling rights, but before the contract was signed it was found that the proposed experiment would cost at least half a million dollars. The company decided that it would not be justified in expending so large an amount on an experiment, and it was then proposed that a number of individuals join in financing the experiment on some equitable basis of division of final profits. This arrangement was never completed, for at about that time the panic of 1907 interfered, and Mr. Johnson was immersed in his political fight to the exclusion of all interests of a personal nature. Negotiations were stopped; no further progress was made on the invention which Mr. Johnson fully believed would have practically annihilated space and joined the two sides of the continent more closely together than Boston and New York now are.

Henry Labouchere's biography will be written by his nephew, Algar Thorold, whose literary work is already known.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

"WE move precisely at 8:15. If you're not here, we move without you," was the clear and concise direction given by Dr. Arnold, alias Miss Helen Louise Kimball, author, publisher and playwright of the latest modern edition of Dickens extant. It was at the final rehearsal of the eighty characters who will appear in the guest programme to be given by the Friday Morning Club next Tuesday evening at the Woman's Clubhouse.

"The last time I waited twenty minutes for Oliver Twist," continued Dr. Arnold, "but this time the procession will wait for no one—not even the Micawber twins or Dora's dog."

It behooves the audience, as well as the entertainers to be on hand promptly, too, or they will take a chance on getting left. Such a demand for tickets as never was—and considerable grumbling, too, because only one ticket is given to each club member—but then, what are you going to do about it, for the auditorium will not stretch or India rubber and there are only just so many seats—so there you are.

The edition of Dickens will be larger than the previous one given by the club—an edition de luxe, as it were. Instead of instrumental music to illustrate certain scenes, Miss Edith Lee, who is a pupil of Mrs. Estelle Evarts-Dreyfus, and the possessor of a very beautiful voice, will sing snatches of song appropriate to the characters and scenes. She will impersonate Lucy Skimpole—she who sang, but as you play, you will remember—and "Jogues Dull Care," will be one of her selections. Then there will be seven-year-old Hildegrade Stivers, who, as Little Jane Pocket, will sing "The Ivy Green," the words of which you recall were written by Dickens.

There will be a little of a scene between Oliver Twist and Nancy Sykes, and Mr. Pickwick and Mrs. Bardell will regale the audience with a bit of dialogue so that, altogether the entertainment promises to excel, if possible, the initial presentation given before the club last month.

George Junior Republic.

Miss Ruby M. King, field secretary of the California George Junior Republic, addressed the women of the First Congregational Church Thursday afternoon concerning the work of the institution.

"Nothing without labor," is the motto under which the citizens of the republic live and self support and self government are the first lessons learned. When a boy becomes a citizen he is allowed to choose the sort of work that appeals to him—farming, printing, carpentering, poultry raising, printing or whatever feature of the industrial life of the Republic, which corresponds to that of a village community, seems best to fit his mind and inclination. There's not a boy in the hive of fifty-two boys, who are paid in the aluminum money of the Republic and in turn pay for their board and lodging, their clothing etc. Thus they are taught, first of all, the dignity of labor and the value of living. Last year the boys built a barn—not one of them over fifteen years of age.

The boy who commits a wrong and is sent to jail by his boy judge in the republic court is not permitted to loaf in his confinement but is sentenced to dig inches in the hard adobe soil, and he gets no pie in his daily menu. Real life at the Republic is highly exciting, for there's "something doing" every minute.

Miss King struck a pathetic note when she observed that, at the regular Sunday evening song service the boys have unanimously call for "No. 162" as the hymnal. "Tell Mother I'll be Home." She described the methods of dealing with these boys, most of whom have in them the making of good citizens, if only tact and wisdom are used in directing them.

Of course no boy in the institution is allowed to the five hours a day allotted to him to earn his living expenses—for no good, hard, American dollar—though in the aluminum money of the realm" he is required to buy what he has. There is a small tuition fee of $12.50 per month although the exact cost of keeping a boy runs up to something like $30. The Fowlers of Pasadena are large benefactors of the Republic and other voluntary gifts help to keep it going.

Just arrival this week in Southern California of "Daddy" George, as he is affectionately known by Republic citizens, is eagerly anticipated and next Sunday he will be the guest of the institution which, at that time, will be open to the public for inspection.

The Greatest Gift.

The women sat down to the luncheon served in the parlors of the First Congregational church Thursday on the occasion of the regular monthly all-day meeting of the missionary and women's societies. Rev. Ralph B. Larkin, missionary Superintendent of Southern California Congregational conference, which includes within its bounds some ninety churches, was the speaker at the occasion, and his reports of the field were deeply interesting. The placing of just the right man in the right place at the right time is somewhat delicate task for a missionary superintendent. It is a problem of personality and one knows that you cannot buy character. The man who GIVES of himself is not to be placed in the same class with the man who gives money.

In the back country, the sparsely settled districts of Southern California, churches are being planted and the task is to find men to fill these fields—to come into immediate contact with the community as leaven. Mr. Larkin made mention of some of these districts, and the types of men who are projecting their personality into these places.

In the back country of San Diego county, for instance, there is a young man of such splendid sterling worth that he is making good. Out in the Imperial district is another—a man who has solved this problem that the whole countryside is devoted to him. In the Ynezitas Valley there was organized the other day, a Congregational church with some fifty members, the result of the strong personality of Rev. J. Seaman, a young preacher who has drawn a score of other young men of that community within the radius of his influence.

Three churches have recently been built in the San Diego district, one of which made the astonishing record of becoming entirely self-supporting in six months from the date of the arrival of the young minister who went there to man the pulpit. Even the Congregationalists of Southern California contributed $18,000 to the work of extending its influence. This year there is a call for $4000, which is rather a far cry from the $4000 given for this purpose six years ago. There isn't any reason under the sun but the church should rise to the occasion and put the money into the hands of the society this year, for Congregationalists are as famous for giving liberally as are Methodists for taking up collections.

At the close of Mr. Larkin's address, the president of the missionary societies, Mrs. Mary Porter Haines, called the attention of members to the fact that the fiscal year for missionary offerings closes this month and asked for a generous contribution, suggesting that the method followed in the rally meetings down south during the jubilee movement be followed and the members march in procession leaving their contributions in the baskets as they passed. So it happened that a procession of 200 women, singing as they marched, left in those baskets almost $300, which brings up the offering of the year to some $2000.

And Now, A Dickens Club.

Mrs. Charles H. Eager, president of the Inglewood Dickens Club, which has hitherto enjoyed the distinction of being the only Dickens Club in Southern California, has been made president of a recently organized Dickens Fellowship, which is a branch of the parent organization in London, which numbers some 20,000 members all over the English-speaking world. The centenary of the birth of Charles Dickens, and the many celebrations in consequence, has quickened the appreciation of admirers of this well-loved novelist and now we may expect to see a revival of Dickens clubs all over the country.

This Los Angeles branch held its first meeting last Friday afternoon at the Women's Clubhouse. Miss Annie Bock is secretary of the club.

Congregationalists at Claremont.

Congregational women are planning to attend in large numbers the annual missionary meeting which comes off at Claremont next month—on the 9th and 10th. Los Angeles First Church, by reason of its large membership, is entitled to thirty-six delegates. A dozen or more members of the Young Women's Guild of this church will take part in the programme.

The Stone Throwing Sisterhood.

Commenting on the recent reign of terror in London caused by the rampant suffragettes, the Washington Post remarks editorially, "The window-smashing exploits have cost the suffragettes what remained of the spirit of tolerance so long displayed by the authorities and populace of London. Nobody would have quarreled with the people had they risen long ago and wrathfully decreed that such things no longer could be. Nowhere else would such demonstrations have met with mollycoddle patience and lenity. The demonstrants are destined to pay heavier penalties for their fun than ever before. When they finally emerge from Holloway Prison their claim on martyrdom will receive no recognition. The 'votes-for-women' cry in the great metropolis is stilled, as it would have been long ago in any other center of population in the world.

"The lesson ought not to be lost on the contingent of American suffragists who offered up incense to Emmeline Pankhurst, the leader of the riotous element, during her recent visit to this country. The ballot cannot be won through the feminine imitation of terrorism."

Congregational Women Preside.

Congregational women will be hostesses at the monthly afternoon tea at the Y.W.C.A. next Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock, and, under the leadership of Miss Sadie Lee, are planning an unusually delightful entertainment.

In observation of St. Patrick's Day, there will be a tinge of green in evidence—in the caps and aprons worn by the young women who serve at the tea tables, which will be decorated with real Irish shamrock brought from Killarney. Out of consideration for this function the Thimble Club of the First Congregational Church has postponed its meeting for a week. The following women will be on the reception committee and will serve tea: Mmes. H. G. Brainerd, S. W. Mudd, Dwight Satterlee, Charles G. Stivers, S. W. Hastings, D. M. Thompson, C. E. Wood, Durant, Misses C. L. Lowman, H. B. Freeman, Elizabeth Atsatt and Durfee.

Cosmos Club's Celtic Day.

Green was the fashionable color at the Cosmos Club last Wednesday, when St. Patrick's Day was celebrated with a genuine Irish programme. Every member of the club wore a vivid green badge of some sort—a knot of ribbon, a shamrock, a hat or a fancy paper cap of crinkled tissue paper—and the young women, who passed about the refreshments at the Irish tea, which followed the programme, wore natty little green aprons.

There was a very large attendance, many guests being present, and the entertainment provided by the Programme Committee, of which Mrs. C. W. Murray is chairman, was delightfully in keeping with the occasion. Of course no programme commemorative of St. Patrick's Day would be complete without Tom Moore's "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and, as played by Miss Ada Henrietta Street it made a happy introduction for all that followed.

The Irish dialect recitations by Mrs. J. T. Seamans, who is a Cumnock graduate of the class of '08, were very well received and her rendition of "The Hourglass," which brought out an entirely different type of talent, was splendidly interpreted. Mrs. Nanno Woods of Glendale, who is a native of the Emerald Isle, sang some songs of her own composition and gave several humorous recitations in costume which pleased the audience. Her recitation of the dramatic poem "Shamus O'Brien" was especially effective. Dressed in the costume of an Irish peasant girl, she related in vivid style the sensational escape from execution of the young patriot of the Irish rebellion. Mrs. E. R. Northmore contributed several songs to the programme also.

She Catalogued Him.

The Prince of India concluded his series of lectures here last Friday evening, and will spend the balance of the month in this vicinity appearing before various clubs in Southern California. Mrs. C. L. Michod, recording secretary of the Friday Morning Club, expressed in her record, read before the club at its last meeting, the status of the prince as "one of that most interesting and high-bred type of nobility of the East, who has absorbed our manners, education and, to some extent, our viewpoint. As a consequence, he will do much to usher in a truer understanding and development and a closer sense of kinship between the Orient and the Occident."

Here and There in Clubdom.

Miss Edith Rice and Miss Helen Louise Kimball will give a programme of music and miscellaneous readings before the Hollywood Woman's Club on April 3. Robert Watchorn will be the speaker at the April meetings of the Young Woman's Guild of the First Congregational Church, which will meet on the evening of the 25th of next month at the home of Mrs. Seeley W. Mudd, on Harvard boulevard.

Andrew J. Copp, Jr., chairman of the Committee on Army and Navy Affairs, of the Chamber of Commerce will be the speaker, next Wednesday, at the Alhambra Woman's Club.

Norwegian songs in costume will be the feature of the Matinee Musical Club programme this week, under the direction of George A. Anderson, assisted by Miss Vida Smith. Mrs. E. M. Coleman and daughter, Miss Ethel, will be hostesses.

William R. George, founder of the George Junior Republic, will be the speaker at the Woman's City Club tomorrow.

Mrs. Bertha Hirsch Baruch, member of the League of American Pen Women of Washington, D. C., has been elected to represent the national organization at the Biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in San Francisco, next June.

Hollywood Woman's Club.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wilton Young, a reader popular in club circles, entertained the Woman's Club of Hollywood Wednesday afternoon, with selections from Booth Tarkinton's "The Gentleman from Indiana," recited entirely from memory and with dramatic effect. Miss Young's extracts were well chosen, and gave her hearers the whole purport of this thrilling story of politics as done in books.

Mrs. B. W. Harper is chairman of the literary department of this club, and Mrs. Calvin Smith is president. To offer greetings at the door and assist in the tea room were the hostesses of the day, Mrs. Rodney P. Cassel, Mrs. James H. Brown, Mrs. C. T. Jones and Mrs. Philo Beveridge.

March 20 is music day when the attendance of members and guests is always large. "Songs by American Composers" rendered by Mr. Edwin House, baritone, is the treat in store.

Ruskin Art Club.

At the regular session of the Ruskin Art Club, on Wednesday, the thread of Dutch history was resumed—the lesson being in charge of Mrs. C. J. Beers. Miss Belle Smith told of the brilliant career and tragic end of John de Witt, and of the progress of Dutch affairs under his administration. Mrs. C. E. Day explained the chain of events which led to the planting of the House of Orange on the throne of England; and Mrs. C. J. Beers carried the story of the brave little republic through the struggles and intricacies of the eighteenth century down to the time of its formation as a kingdom in 1815.

Philanthropic Work of Club.

The Sierra Madre Women's Club, through its Philanthropy Committee, is making an effort to send oranges to the charitable institutions in the city where fruit is welcome. Culls, or oranges blown from the trees, are put into sacks and shipped to Mrs. Baurhyte, who apportions them to the penny kitchens and similar places.

The Music Committee of this club is co-operating with the school teachers in training the children in chorus singing and this work, together with folk dances and songs by the little ones, will be featured at the Spring Flower Show, to be held at the clubhouse April 18-20.

Some Section Work.

Rev. Charles Pease of Oneonta Park will address the Ebell Department of Expression Tuesday morning on Emerson's "Conduct of Life."

The April programme in the drama section will includ, on April 11, a discussion of Israel Zangwill's play "The Melting Pot," led by Mrs. Ilot Johnson. Other participants will be Mrs. James Hale, who will consider Zangwill as a dramatist and humorist; Mrs. N. O. Anderson, who will discuss "Zionism," and Miss E. A. Lamb, who will give some impressions of the play. Mrs. Charles Hall will give a reading.

Girls Make a Hit.

Young women of the senior class of Cumnock made a great hit with the play "The Amazons," which was given last week and was repeated, in response to many requests. The play, a clever satire on modern English society, abounds in brilliant lines and laughable situations. The characters were especially well cast, and the humorous incidents well brought out.

Clever work was done by Miss Price as the Earl of Tweenwayes, Miss Kittle as Count de Grival, Miss Hampton as Viscount Litterly, and by Misses Green, Harris and Wilhelm as the sprightly daughters of the Marchioness of Castlejordan, who was admirably presented by Mrs. Chambers.

Talk on Vital Topics.

Three vital topics were under discussion at the round table talk of the West Vernon Avenue Parent-Teacher Circle last week when "The Corner Store," "Children's Dress" and "Children's Books" occupied the attention of the mothers. Mmes. J. J. Whitehead, F. J. Hamilton and F. K. Jones led the discussions. The boys' glee club of the school sang several numbers and Mrs. C. H. Masson contributed some piano solos.

The Dearth of Song.

The darkness deepens on the dim-lit shore;
The mountains hide their glory in the shade;
The notes we heard are mute, and nevermore
Pipe the glad voices thro' the forest glade;
The pall of silence on the earth is laid:
No longer do we hear the songs of yore;
We list no carolling of man or maid:
Yet shall some future day our joy restore.

Soon, soon the night shall pass, and on the wing
The lark soar upward thro' the golden air;
Soon shall the throstle and the mavis sing,
Warbling their love-notes from each leafy lair;
And while amid the pines the light winds sigh,
Spirit of Poesy, thou shalt not die.
—[Samuel Waddington in the Living Age.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Dr. Mabel Howe Otis of the Battle Creek Sanatorium staff advises every girl to stand on her head at least twice a day. She made this remark while addressing a class of Y.W.C.A. girls, and to prove that she took her own medicine, she flopped over, stuck her feet in the air and stood on her head to show how easily it should be done. Standing on your head, she said, is a preventative if not a cure. It gets the weight off your feet and puts more brain in your head. It is better than medicine, and if followed up will keep girls well, strong and clear-minded.

Mrs. Patrick Mackin of Philadelphia was given the privilege by Magistrate Morris of serving as judge and jury in the case of her husband, who was before the court, and she sentenced him to imprisonment for three months. She said they had been married seventeen years, and in that time she had supported the family and had been forced to supply her husband with money for liquor. Today, the woman said, was the first time she really was boss of the household, and she meant to "see how it felt to give orders."

Miss Eleanor M. Colleton is one of the two teachers appointed to make an investigation among the children of the public schools of Boston for the purpose of learning how the schools can become most helpful in giving vocational instruction. One purpose of the investigators is to find out why so many children leave school before graduation. They also hope to learn the value of industrial training to children who are not able to complete their course.

Mrs. Samuel Walters of Florin, Pa., for more than forty years has been carrying the mails between the post-office and the railroad station, and has never missed a train or a mail. She is one of the few women carriers along the Pennsylvania railroad lines. As a recognition of her services she is now receiving four times the salary paid when she began her duties. She has had only one vacation in the forty years, and that was a short time ago, when she took a two-day trip to New York.

Most Beautiful Woman In English Society.

Viscountess Curzon,

Who has been chosen to fill the position of Queen of Beauty in the Eglinton Tournament, which is to be one of the most interesting features of Mrs. Cornwallis West's "Shakespeare's England" exhibition at Earl's Court, London, this summer, is the wife of the heir to the Earldom of Howe. She is only 22 years old, but looks to be still in her teens. She has two children and her husband is taking an active interest in politics. He has been adopted as the prospective candidate for Battersea, and when the next general election rolls around he will be opposed to the redoubtable John Burns, president of the local government board.

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University has named Superintendent Francis as a member of the Committee on Education of the National Peace Committee for the celebration of the 100th anniversary of peace among English-speaking peoples, which celebration will be held in 1914-15, Mr. Roosevelt being chairman. The Committee on Education is organized for the purpose of considering the matter of the publication of a number of text-books and books for general reading, bearing upon the history of American-English relationship of the last hundred years.

Primary Manual Arts.

At the meeting of Miss Nevell's class for teachers, on Thursday afternoon Mr. Greasinger, of the Commercial Printing Company, gave a talk on "Book-Binding, the Old and the New," which the teachers reported as very helpful. The speaker rapidly sketched the craft from its infancy to the present day, showing the difference in method that has taken place in the last few years. He also made a strong plea for the good all-around education of the boy or girl who elects to take up this work seriously. "Accuracy," he says, "as well as taste, judgment and skill, are prime requisites for this work."

Avenue 62 School and Social Center.

Superintendent J. H. Francis will address the Sixty-second Avenue Social Center meeting, 7:30 p.m., Saturday, March 30, 1912. A splendid musical programme is being prepared for the occasion.

Open-air group work on the porches and under the trees is proving a first-class antidote for malignant spring fever.

Over 200 joined the Avenue 62 Hiking Club this week. Trips to Poppy Peak, Eagle Rock, the Arroyo Seco and Buschs Gardens are the chief attractions.

English as She is Writ:

"Miss D: Please excuse Helen for absents, for she has a bad cold and I have bin geving her fisick to try and clean out her sistum and brake up her cold, and it is bad yet, so if you will be kind enough to keep her out of the Draft I will be ever so much Oblige to you.

"P. S.: She just luvs her Teacher."

Thirty-sixth Street School.

The crops are ruined at Thirty-sixth street! Thirty enthusiastic youngsters had planted thirty rows of potatoes, with a crop in mind that would wipe out the debt against the new balopticon. Alas! They were all washed away by the rain on Tuesday, and on Wednesday thirty rueful youngsters dug grimy palms into tearful eyes, and then bravely blowing noses, started out to get up an entertainment to raise the awful cloud of debt.

Gardner Street School.

Mrs. Jones, of the Public Library, will address the Parent-Teacher Association on March 19 on the subject of "Books for Children." Mrs. Jones has made a thorough study of the subject, and it is expected her address will be a most interesting one.

Superintendent Francis will speak on the evening of March 22. The school orchestra will furnish music.

Custer Avenue Intermediate.

Hikes up to and above the snow line in the mountains in the interest of science and health, were the order of the day, on Thursday and Friday. On Thursday, seventy-five boys went up to Sierra Madre, and from there up the Mt. Wilson trail, some of them as far as the top. They were accompanied by Messrs. Kersey and Jesson, and on Friday the girls essayed the same trip, under Principal Reed and Miss Phelps. Some of the pupils had never before seen snow, and were wild with delight when they reached it, performing the regulation stunts of snow-balling and snow-building with a zest quite unknown to the child inured to winter joys.

Berendo-street Intermediate.

The author and magazine writer, John S. McGreearty was the speaker at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association on Thursday afternoon. He spoke in his own delightful way on "California."

Instead of the customary Friday morning out-door aud-call at Berendo intermediate the pupils of each grade crowded into one room and listened to six debates given by some of the history students. The judges were experienced debaters from the Los Angeles High, Polytechnic, Avenue 21st intermediate and Fourteenth-street intermediate, and the questions and speakers were as follows: A-9—"Resolved, That Immigration Is a Benefit to the United States." Affirmative, Louis Lissner, Morris Ambrum, Lucy Wilcox; Negative, Houston Peterson, George Burrall, Leslie Gaynor. The judges gave the victory to the affirmative, after a close contest, but the honors to Houston Peterson, leader on the negative side.

B-9 class—Question: "Resolved, That Immigration Should Be Encouraged and Not Abolished," was won by the affirmative, the speakers being May Roberts, D'Alton Myers and Phyllis Adam. Negative: Alfred Drew, who was chosen speaker; Esther Whiting and Clair Peterkin.

The A-8 class discussed: "Resolved, That the Panama Canal Will Benefit San Francisco More Than New Orleans." Affirmative (winning,) Leo Germain, honored as chosen speaker; Helen Northmore, Bernard Hiss; Negative: Clinton Thaxter, Helen McCall, Stuart Cooper.

B-8 question: "Resolved, That Immigration Into the United States Should Be Prohibited." Won by affirmative, Ben Whiting, Wylie Brown (chosen speaker,) Gus Wise; Negative, Helen Riley, Ruth Cunningham, Aurelius Kinsey.

A-7's discussed: "Resolved, That War Should Be Abolished." Affirmative won. Dorothy Armon (chosen speaker,) Lois Byers, Stephen Marschutz, Regina Atkinson; Negative, Gerty Lewman, Thornton Stephens, Anabel Cook.

B-7 question: "Resolved, That Immigration Should Be More Closely Restricted." Affirmative won. Helen Meredith, Ruth Hunt, Glenn McGinnis; Negative, Ruth Hammond, Robert Mehse, Mildred Davis.

High School.

One of the most gorgeous and interesting donations the Zoological Museum has ever received is being mounted by some of the boys of the zoology classes. It consists of a collection of oriental butterflies presented to the school by Satio, a Japanese graduate of the Los Angeles High School. Some of the butterflies so closely resemble old brown leaves as to afford splendid illustrations of protective mimicry.

Professor Fernando Sanford, head of the department of physics at Stanford University, visited the school last Wednesday, as a guest of Mr. Cavanaugh, one of his former students.

The Los Angeles High School cadets will go into camp near Pomona from April 1 to April 6.

Lester Roth and Russel Parsons will represent Los Angeles in the Whittier High School debate to be held in the Los Angeles High Assembly Hall, March 22. Whittier is coming up 200 strong to root for its team. The fate of the initiative and referendum as regards Federal legislation will be settled during the debate.

The Pasadena debate which is a league contest, promises to be a brilliant affair with Chaning Follette and Paul Howe representing Los Angeles High. The question for discussion is: "Resolved, that it would be better to improve our inland water ways than to grant merchant marine ship-subsidies from our Pacific Coast to South America and the far East."

President Baer of Occidental College delivered an inspiring address to the boys of the school at the regular Wednesday Assembly call.

Polytechnic High School.

Mr. Chapelle addressed the Civics League on "Garbage Disposal," at the meeting held Tuesday.

Dr. Baer of Occidental College spoke on interscholastic athletics at a meeting of the Boys' Students' League at an aud-call Wednesday.

Dr. J. A. Eby, president of the Polytechnic Social Center, was the speaker at an auditorium call for girls held Friday.

Mr. Alexander, head of the Boy Scouts of America, spoke to the boys at an Aud-call Thursday.

Dr. Hunt of U.S.C. will address the classes in sociology and economics in the near future. This will be the first of a series of lectures by prominent men which is being arranged by S. I. Miller of the history department.

The Senior A's have chosen purple and white as their class colors. The class officers are: President, Bazard Taylor; vice-president, Lois Colt; secretary, Lydia Nielsen; treasurer, Ward Montgomery; historian, Faith Guy.

Work on the annual, "The Polytechnic Student," is progressing rapidly. Joe Weston, a graduate of Polytechnic, who has had much experience in photography, is taking the pictures of the various organizations. In accordance with his brilliant idea, a corner of the roof has been turned into an impromptu photograph gallery, and all the former trouble of trips down town has been elliminated, the whole affair being accomplished with much more convenience and far less expense than ever before.

Miss Ethelwyn Fagge, librarian, has formed a reading class which meets once a week. The work is entirely voluntary, those who are interested joining it purely for the pleasure of listening to the good literature which she reads aloud to them.

The operetta, "The Royal Peddler," to be given by the Glee Clubs, will be presented April 18.

Miss Adele Meyer, chairman of the Programme Committee of the Polytechnic Social Center, spoke on social center work at Alhambra, on Wednesday.

Miss Charlotte M. Lord, of the history department, spent a pleasant day visiting the history classes of Manual Arts High School.

C. E. Locke, of the faculty, is attending the meetings of the Charter Revision Committee, of which he is a member.

Miss Beckensale, of the Long Beach High School faculty, visited the composition classes at Polytechnic High School, Wednesday of this week. She enjoyed her day's visit very much.

The third league debate took place Friday, between Polytechnic and Pomona High schools. The debaters were Hazel Wilkinson, Orville Willard, Hiram Hamer, and Earle Hanson.

Hollywood High School.

Hollywood High School is preparing to put on as the school play this year, "Twelfth Night," and March 29 has been fixed as the date. The cast of characters is as follows: Orsino, Henry Enders; Sebastian, John Lawton; Antonio, Marion Smith; Valentine, Marion Smith; Amio, Leslie Somers; Sir Toby Belch, Jack Hoch; Sir Andrew Anguecheek, Mark Herron; Malvolio, Leonard White; Fabian, Edward Lewis; Clown, Lynn Nichols; Olivia, Stella Messenger; Viola, Esther Fry; Maria, Lillian Grass; musicians, Julian Baker, Alfred Wilkie; officers, Jay Perrin, Chauncey Berg; pages, Pearl Hill, Ray Feeman, Helen Knox, Corine Lovejoy; guards, Norris Montgomery, Harold Perrin, Joseph Beattie, Rollin McBroom; lords, Francis Sanborn, Gordon Stephens; ladies in waiting, Mildred Tracy, Geneven Ryerson, Beatrice Bennett.

This play is quite an event in the school calendar and is always looked forward to with great interest by the students and their friends. The tryouts for the parts came two or three months ago and since then rehearsals have been faithfully attended and the cast is working hard to bring the play to the usual high standard. All the costumes are being made by the swing department of the school.

The English department gave a candy sale Wednesday to raise money to buy pictures for the department. The sale was managed by Miss Florence Stone and netted $50.

Thursday afternoon the Hawaiian Glee Club went out from the city and entertained the students for a half hour. Thy were enthusiastically received.

The Home Economics Club of the will entertain the girls of the school and their mothers with a St. Patrick's Day costume party, on Friday evening. The women teachers and wives of the faculty men will act as patronesses, and will join in the fun of the evening. The following invitation has been sent by the club to the guests:

"Sure we're goin' to have a parthy,
And we want yez to be there,
And in honor of St. Patrick,
Just a bit of grane we'll wear.
'Tis av March, the fifteenth day,
All the colleens will be gay,
An ivery wan a "stunt" we ask,
Shure 'tis but a little task.
If yes truly wish to go,
Drop a line to Granger's Flo."

The invitations are tastefully decorated with shamrocks in watercolors.

Sleep.

Clothe me in dreams, O sweet, sad wraith of sleep.
Wrap me from head to feet in garments white
Of mystic dreams; with stars of radiant light
Gemmed here and there in these pale clouds that weep.
For tired heart, and weary brain doth leap
With one great throb toward the dim unknown
That holds long rest for earth-born sigh and moan.
Shroud me in pallid dreams, O ghost of sleep.
Lay your wan fingers on my aching eyes,
And bid life's other phantoms flee away
Into the solemn shades that have no day,
Where, broodingly, eternal silence lies.
Then whisper, soft as moon on frost-wreaths hoar,
"Dream, worn-out one, dream here forevermore."

—[Fanny Driscoll.

Mothers of Men.

Mothers of men. The words are good indeed in the saying—
Pride in the very sound of them, strength in the sense of them; then
Why is it their faces haunt me—wistful faces, as praying
Ever some dear thing vanished and ever a hope delaying—
Mothers of men?

Mothers of men, most patient, tenderly slow to discover
The loss of the old allegiance that may not return again.
You give a man to the world, you give a woman a lover;
Where is your solace, then, when the time of giving is over,
Mothers of men?

Mothers of men. Yet surely the title is worth the earning.
You who are brave in feigning, must I ever behold you, then,
By the door of an empty heart, with the lamp of faith still burning,
Watching the ways of life for the sight of a child returning,
Mothers of men?

—[Theodosia Garrison, in Munsey's Magazine.

Days Too Short.

When primroses are out in spring,
And small, blue violets come between;
When merry birds sing on boughs and green,
And rills, as soon as born, must sing;

When butterflies will make side-leaps,
As though escaped from nature's hand
Ere perfect quite; and bees will stand
Upon their heads in fragrant deeps;

When small clouds are so silvery white
Each seems a broken rimmed moon—
When such things are, this world too soon,
For me doth wear the veil of night.

—[William H. Davies in the English Review.

OVER THE SEA.

Dr. William Collingridge, for thirty-two years medical officer of health for the city of London, is to retire. For twenty-one years he was medical officer for the port of London and during all these years' service he has been fighting for pure and unadulterated food for the people of London. He is satisfied with his work, and says: "If I had my life to live over again I should lead it in the same way. I could not go slow and sacrifice enthusiasm for the sake of an extra ten years of life."

Prince Boris Clement Robert Marie Pie Louis Stanislas Xavier of Tirnova, Crown Prince of Bulgaria and Duke of Saxe, has just been celebrating his coming of age in his father's capital of Sofia.

Basile de Arsenieff, Russian Consul-General at Calcutta, has been appointed first secretary of the Russian embassy, at Washington, to succeed Constantin Nabokoff, who replaces Mr. Arsenieff in India.

England's youngest milkmaid is 6-year-old Miriam Rothschild, daughter of Hon. Charles Rothschild and grand-daughter of Baron Rothschild. The little girl takes a great delight, it is said, in milking the cows of Lord Rothschild's farm at Tring, and she has become quite adept at the work.

The Prince of Wales will matriculate as an undergraduate of Magdalen College, Oxford, next Michaelmas term. The president of Magdalen, under whose immediate care the Prince will be placed, is Dr. Warren, who was one of the ablest of Jowett's pupils at Balliol. White and Gray Enamel Furniture

White Enamel and Gray Enamel Furniture for bedrooms and breakfast-rooms is becoming very popular on account of its cleanly and sanitary features.

There are many grades of enamel furniture, due to the quality of the enamel used and the way in which it is finished. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that you select those goods made by reliable manufacturers only.

We invite your inspection of the very complete lines carried by us and wish to state that the same dependable guarantee which distinguishes "the house of Pease" applies to ALL the lines which we carry.

SENORA ISABEL EVA DE CASTRILLO.

Wife of the Minister from Nicaragua, Dr. Don Salvador Castrillo, Is Young and Charming and Interesting in the Capital of Greater America.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Central America has been rendered more than usually interesting recently by the visit of the American minister to its various republics and also which the well-read man and woman can acquire with small labor, thanks to the Bureau of American Republics. All five of these small republics are now represented in Washington and the group of envoys is assisting the importance in the councils of Latin countries which their progress and strategic importance warrants. Of this formal division of diplomatic representation at the American capital the minister from Nicaragua and his charming young wife, who came to Washington about fifteen months ago, are among the most popular and delightful. Dr. Castrillo is a type of the pleasant, frank Latin-American, well-bred, well-read and worldly familiar with every phase of political history in this country of his own. He is serving his country here for the second time, the first time he was sent to represent a party of his government which had risen against the existing regime as represented by Senor Luis Corea. Mr. and Senora Castrillo have a handsome apartment in Stoneleigh Court and are also going through the fascinating experience of housekeeping in the American capital.

They have read many entertaining papers concerned Senora Castrillo, the Latin-Americans residing in different parts of the earth and their adventures in the cooks, the green grocer, the laundry needed agents to the ordinary life in cities. So my contributions to life in Washington have not been untimely. I cannot say that adventures and my experiences have been altogether pleasant, for the lack excitement. The Latin differs so essentially from her associates but little as geographical distances go, that merely knowledge of my sex even casually is interesting to me. I have been in the reflection on the spring and my slight repining over vine and fig tree is not unpatriotic. I am inspired by the material reflection of much more one can purchase with small silver change than a large-sized bill in this progressive. From the feminine standpoint that the Latin women is rather antiquated, old fashioned is the word. We show little interest in the feminista movement, though echoes of it reach us and no matter how provincial we may feel at the way the world moves us or how impatient we are at our mistakes, we have not hastened to take their part away from them ourselves. Nicaragua is in all essential ideals, especially those which relate to home, conservatism is well founded and though we have almost every advancement and progressive innovation for which America is famous, we have not granted equal rights propaganda nor does it seem probable that it will in this generation.

"I like a country which is changing and of so varied a nature that we have almost every sort of food right at our doors. The coffee which I think possesses the best flavor of any on the market, Americans use more Nicaraguan than they know. Purchased under the East Indian name and Java, they fall to recognize that but little of the grain from those remote countries is coffee from Central America, is shipped here in tons and sold under other names. We have a vast production of sugar, the rich sugar from the cane and not the beet variety which is so much purchased here. We raise wheat in any large quantities in this country sends us many foodstuffs as it does to other part of the world. But we have corn and that is the staple among many of our people. We have very good rice and as for the country is pastoral, even we do not fall of sustaining milk and milk. Our fruit is delicious and I do not lack that the Americans are as copacious of bananas, pineapples and other delicacies as the Latins. Coffee a much esteemed beverage in many households and much of it comes from my own plantation.

"From a historical view, all of Nicaragua is a fascinating study for the final history of Nicaragua does not lack those romantic elements which are so welcome in student days. Our civilization begins a good century before the most ancient portion of this country. The name Nicaragua comes from that of the first convent to Christianity, a chief who governed all the land when a bold sea captain, Gil Gonzales Davila with four vessels sailed westward from Panama early in 1522 in search of the Spice Islands. He touched the mainland on the Pacific side and after many mishaps and passing through untold perils, he reached the land of Nicaragua, a mighty chieftain who gave him welcome and at once embraced the Christian religion. According to the testimony of the commander, with Nicaragua there were baptized more than 9000 of his braves and these Indians remained true to their adopted faith through the succeeding ages. The town of Nicaragua was near by the mighty lake, which bears his name and traces of it may be found. It is of peculiar interest that Gil Gonsales heard from the pilots who were with his expedition of the passage between what he designated the North Sea and the South Sea, but really between the Atlantic and Pacific Ocean, by way of the river and the lake and he makes an early report on the possibility of a canal in his communication to the Spanish Vice-roy, made in 1523, saying that only two or three leagues of very level road separate the ocean from the lake.

"We are proud of the luxuriant beauty of our country with its wonderful charm of lake, river and sea shore. Being mountainous, it is naturally a mineral country and from the successful working of mines has come much of the national wealth. We have the precious metals in abundance, gold, silver and platinum and some of the valuable gems and in other portions there are rich copper, salt, mercury, sulphate of lime, sulphur and lead. The working of these mines has increased the population and given it a more permanent aspect. The country is being settled steadily if not rapidly and we are even getting on the land of travel and have our share of tourists and explorers. There are many cities worth a visit in Nicaragua not only because of the superb natural scenery and the tropical environment, covered with vegetation and flowers when this country is enveloped in ice and snow, but also attractive artistically and historically. There is the lovely city of Leon, a flower garden all the year around, full of fine old mansions built during the Spanish occupation and possessing many public buildings which are unique for grandeur and architectural excellence. The Cathedral of San Pedro in Leon is one of the greatest churches on this side of the world. It was erected in the age of faith at the cost of $5,000,000 reckoned in American money and that when laborers of the most skillful attainments could be hired at 25 cents a day. From the roof of this great church a splendid panorama of the country unfolds and one can see the seething cauldrons of thirteen volcanoes. Nevertheless though so many awful possibilities are contained in these active volcanoes, Nicaragua suffers less from their eruptions than the neighboring countries."

Senora Castrillo is exceedingly attractive in appearance and though she can claim ten years of married existence she lacks several years of being 30. She has lived nearly all her life near Managua and has the cosmopolitan air which seems the heritage of the gently born Latin. Her parents come from ancient Spanish settlers and are both natives of the lake district about the capital. Her father, Gen. Alexander Eva, was long military Governor or general commandante of the army and was one of the most revered citizens of the republic. He died less than a year ago and his daughter, Senora Castrillo, is now observing mourning for him. For this reason she has mingled but little in society, though with the Easter tide she will lighten her mourning somewhat and accept a few invitations from her colleagues in the Latin contingent.

Senora Castrillo was educated in a well-known convent of her native land, the Convent of the Ascension, and she is a finished musician and linguist. Though theoretically educated in English she had so little opportunity to practice the spoken language that the Senora found herself somewhat handicapped on her arrival in Washington. Her small children, a girl of 7, Elsa, and the boy named for his father, Salvador, who is 6, have been valuable aids in acquiring the vernacular. They picked up the English from their playmates in Stoneleigh in a few weeks and now they "play" in English as they term it and then impart their experience to their mother. Senor Castrillo speaks English perfectly and he has been accredited here in several capacities before the past year when he came as Minister from his reunited government. But this was before his marriage and since that interesting event his missions have all been to Latin capitals. He was Minister from Nicaragua to Buenos Ayres for several years and he has also served in Mexico.

"We claim a very ancient hierarchy of the Catholic Church" said Senora Castrillo, "besides our venerable political lineage. The diocese of Nicaragua was canonically established in 1534, and some church authorities claim 1531 with Monsignore Diego Alvarez as the first bishop and our episcopal records continue from that time, within the first half century after the discovery of America by Columbus until now. The old records show that at first Nicaragua was considered a dependent see of Mexico and later on Lima, Peru, but we have had an independent existence since the 18th century, when we got a bishop of our own. At one time a concordant existed between our government and the Holy See, but that was abrogated and though the Catholic is the prevailing religion, others are granted full liberty. Beside the Bishop of Nicaragua resident in Managua there is an Apostolic delegate to all of Central America who lives in San Jose de Costa Rica and who makes stated visits to our country. All of our country is nominally Catholic and education is principally under the various religious orders. We have the public system also and we are becoming progressive and advance as the country develops in the material sense.

"Our social life is planned on Spanish lines adapted to more active ways of the new world. Dancing and dinners form the principal diversion as here, but we have more dancing parties than dinners while the reverse is true here. Social intercourse is more leisurely and our days being warm, we take the evening for visiting and receiving visits. At the Capital there are formal receptions at stated times as here, and the wives of officials exchange courtesy calls and sip some black coffee and eat fruit or ices. We are devoted to our homes and our husbands and little ones and nearly all women oversee the home in a certain way; even those who live on vast haciendas, have duties which they do not relegate to others. We take a personal view of obligations toward those less fortunate and the performance of certain duties, self-imposed and relating to charity is always part of the daily routine of the Latin womar. We read and discuss public affairs oven though we do not aspire to direct them, and if we have one quality more strongly developed than another, it is our intense love of country. Music is also a part of our daily existence and in every home one may hear the tinkling of a guitar or zither or mandolin, and the liquid strains which are part of our national heritage. Our homes nearly all have the patio and to sit under the stars of a summer evening and listen to some loved one singing the fervent love strains or growing plaintive over a familiar hymn or lullaby with perhaps a fountain murmuring softly near by is to get enjoyment out of life, unknown in a land where one is habitually enclosed by walls and has not cultivated the mandolin or guitar habit."

Senor and Senora Castrillo passed last summer in a Jersey summer resort and it fell far short of their beloved country home near Granada. Still both acknowledge the fascination of various phases of American life. The Senora and her little ones enjoy the street scenes and frequently take jaunts downtown during the shopping hours and get much enjoyment mingling with the shopping crowds and visiting the small theaters appeals especially to the children.

This famous Oxford "Blue" has yet to make his name as a musician, and report says he has a fair prospect of doing so. In the midst of his career as an athlete he won the Nettleship musical scholarship at Oxford. He has studied for years at Frankfurt under Herr Engesser, has performed successfully in Sydney, has published some music and composed a great deal more.

$5.00 Life Reading $1.00
(Reduced fee for this week only.)

I give just as careful and complete a revelation of your business, love and domestic affairs for $1.00 as I do for my regular fee of $3 and $5. I am taking the reduced fee plan to introduce myself and my work more extensively to the people of this city, where I have established my permanent home.

My Work Speaks for Itself

While I have the indorsements of hundreds of the most noted men and women of America, I deem them of little value, since I stand alone upon the merits of my work. Any person who can believe their own eyes and ears cannot help but know that I am a man of high ability and indisputable power excelled by no man on earth in this line.

Master of Strange Powers

There are strange and mighty forces which men and women can use to better their conditions. These forces are called personal magnetism, mental telepathy, semi-hypnotic suggestion, etc. All this I teach to any one who wishes to use it for a legitimate and honorable purpose.

What I Do for $1.00

I tell what condition your business is in and how to promote it. I tell you of any move, journey, position or change of any kind which may be before you, and how to act to obtain the best results. I tell you exactly what your acquaintances think of you, who to trust and who to shun. In short, I tell you everything you called to find out, and that, too, without asking you a question or you speaking a word.

I guarantee to develop mediumship to its fullest degree in those who have any latent power whatever. If I do not succeed as above stated, I ask no fee for my work and time whatsoever.

Who Wants Twisted Eyesight Like This?

How many people are wearing and buying glasses today that can't help but give twisted eyesight? The rays of light breaking through the old style glasses so often prescribed by eye glass merchants, cannot help but reach the eye in twisted lines.
When you look straight out through the center of such glasses, the lines of vision are only twisted once, but as you look through the upper or lower part of glasses of this kind, you have no chance at all of looking straight.
You can figure out for yourself just what such glasses are bound to do to your eyes.

Through My Lenses You Look Straight Like This

There's a big difference in the glasses, there's a big difference in the treatment you receive, there's a big difference in the service you get, there's a big difference in the effect on your eyes.
As long as the cost is no greater, doesn't it stand to reason that you really should go to an Eye Doctor for Eye Glasses, or for advice as to whether you ought to have glasses—and furthermore, as to what kind of glasses you ought to have, if any?
I am not only an Optician but an Oculist. I am licensed by examination—not merely by a card of admission—by the California Board of Examiners on Optometry and the California Board of Medical Examiners.

I Know What I am Talking About
When I Talk About EYES AND GLASSES.

and I know what I am doing when I tell you you don't, or you do need glasses, and when I tell you what sort of glasses you need. Because I know that store-bought, Bargain Counter glasses but rarely correctly fit the human eye. I grind the lenses which I prescribe, right here in my own laboratory.
The Toric lenses I grind for you set close to the eyes without touching the lashes, conform to the natural curve, permit a wide field of vision, eliminating the annoying reflections from back of the lenses, and will be found in every way more desirable than store-bought glasses can possibly be.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.
Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be give, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Elizabeth says: "I am troubled with a constant headache which also affects my eyes. My breath is awful, as I have a severe case of catarrh of the head and throat."

Answer: I receive daily hundreds of letters from people who have suffered as you do and who have been cured with the following prescription: Make a wash by mixing one-half teaspoonful of Vilane powder, which you can purchase from any druggist in 2 oz. packages, and add to this one pint of warm water, use this in the nostrils daily to thoroughly cleanse them. A catarrh balm should be used with this. This is made by mixing one teaspoonful of Vilane powder with one ounce of lard or vaseline and apply well up into the nostrils twice a day. If this is used daily your catarrh will soon vanish. It should, however, be used occasionally to prevent a return of the disease.

"C. G." writes: "If you know of anything that will cure dandruff, itching scalp and premature baldness, please let me know what it is."

Answer: For several years I have prescribed plain yellow mineol as superior to anything known for the treatment of diseased scalp. Get it in four-ounce jars with full directions. It quickly overcomes all diseases of hair and scalp and gives new vigor and intense natural color to the hair. Try it fairly and you will advocate its use for your friends.

"Mildred" writes: "I am constantly embarrassed because of the fact of my extreme thinness. I have absolutely no color in my face or lips and I am dull and lifeless most of the time. Please advise me what to do."

Answer: If you are so thin and pale and your lips and cheeks colorless it is because your blood is deficient in red corpuscles. This can be easily overcome by the use of three-grain hypo-nuclate tablets, which can be had from any druggist in sealed cartons with full directions for taking. When the blood is enriched by the use of these tablets your weight will increase, the color will come back into your face and lips, and it will improve your general system so that you will become strong and healthy.

"Edna" writes: "I suffer with rheumatism all the time and I shall be very glad if you can tell me something to relieve me."

Answer: I can give you a prescription which will not only relieve, but will cure your rheumatism. This is my favorite remedy and from the number of letters received from people who have used it proves its value in curing rheumatism. The following is made by mixing well, taking a teaspoonful at meal times and again before retiring: Comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; iodide of potassium, 2 drams; wine of colchicum, one-half ounce; sodium salicylate, 4 drams.

"Morris" asks: "I have suffered with a chronic cough for almost a year, and catch a fresh cold every few weeks. Nothing the doctor gives me helps, so I write to you."

Answer: You need a thorough laxative cough syrup, one that not only relieves but surely drives it from the system. The following regularly used will cure any curable cough or cold promptly. Obtain a 2½ oz. bottle of essence mentho-laxene, mix it with a home-made sugar syrup or honey as per directions on bottle.

"Anxious B." writes: "I have in recent years been threatened with appendicitis, but would never consent to an operation. Indigestion, constipation and sedentary habits cause me much suffering. Kindly prescribe for dyspepsia something which you think will cure me and prevent appendicitis."

Answer: The most scientific and satisfying treatment for your trouble is tablets triopepine; packed pink, white and blue in sealed cartons with full directions. All stomach disorders can be conquered by regular treatment.

"Nervous M." writes: "Loss of sleep, nervousness, loss of appetite and overwork has made almost a complete wreck of me. I have to work, but can scarcely drag one foot after the other. Please advise."

Answer: The condition you prescribe is prevalent especially with brain workers. Use the following: Compound syrup of hypophosphites, 5 ozs.; tincture cadomene, 1 oz. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful before meals.

"K. J." writes: "I have become so fat in the last two years that I am uncomfortable, unhappy and frequently embarrassed. Exercise and diet seem to not help. Please advise."

Answer: To avoid substitution get these two ingredients and mix in a bottle, shaking well before taking: Aromatic elixir, 5 ozs.; glycol arbolene, 1 oz. Take a teaspoonful after each meal for the first three days. After that double the dose and continue for several weeks or months as your case requires. A reduction of a pound a day is usual after the first week or two.

"Mars C." writes: "I am constipated and have a greasy skin. Suffer from headache, indigestion and some kidney trouble. I would you to recommend a remedy."

Answer: The best remedy to relieve and cure chronic constipation is called three-grain sulphets tablets made from sulphur, cream of tartar and herb medicines. Taken regularly the blood is purified, the bowels and liver stimulated into healthy action and a cure established. They are packed in sealed tubes with full directions. These tablets are splendid for children as they do not gripe or sicken.

"Mamma"—"I know of nothing better for bed-wetting than: 1 dram of tincture cubebs, 2 drams of tincture rhus aromatic and 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort. Mix. The dose is 10 drops in water one hour before meals.

Natura Benigna.

What power is this? What witchery wins my feet
To peaks so sheer they scorn the cloaking snow,
All silent as the emerald gulfs below,
Down whose ice-walls the wings of twilight beat?
What thrill of earth and heaven—most wild, most sweet—
What answering pulse that all the senses know,
Comes leaping from the ruddy eastern glow
Where, far away, the skies and mountains meet?

Mother, 'tis I reborn; I know thee well;
That throb I know and all its prophecies,
O, mother and queen, beneath the olden spell
Of silence, gazing from thy hills and skies!
Dumb mother, struggling with the years to tell
The secret at thy heart through helpless eyes.

Allis Once More.

Less than a month ago I had occasion to speak of the landscapes of C. Harry Allis, which were then being shown in the gallery of the Public Library at Long Beach. The pictures have been brought to Los Angeles, and are now an exhibition in the Daniell studios, in the Copp building, No. 218 South Broadway.

When the exhibition was in progress at Long Beach, I received the following letter of approval and appreciation from John Donovan. I publish it in toto, both because of the information it contains in regard to C. Harry Allis, and because it is pleasant to find that others think you have hit the nail on the head. Here is the letter:

"Noticing your review of Allis's exhibit, I thought I'd drop you a little dope on him. You make no error on him—he's a real painter. He and I sketched about Detroit River years ago, and later I spent considerable time with him at Etaples, French coast. He was with Alfred East a deal there, too, Kaapman, Boehme, Dudley Hardy and a host of others.

"Allis was a successful water color landscape painter long before he went abroad. He is one of the most conscientious and indefatigable students of nature I ever met. And if you will notice it, he is a fine draughtsman. He always knows his subject.

"I've not seen his later work. He was in to see me the other day. But I'm waiting until he shows here. In my estimation he is one of the strongest men that has ever drifted out here, and his work ought to interest them, if they know. It has stomach—no frivolity—sincere and poetic. He is also a pianist, and used to sing in the days agone. Also he writes not badly on art, and to finish is an interesting character.

"As much of this as you think fit you may use—it's the real McCoy. Wish I could talk it myself—but you may, later."

The "real McCoy" seemed so "fit," indeed, that I have "talked" it all for the benefit of my readers, and on their behalf I thank Mr. Donovan for his friendly letter.

If my readers will hark back to the issue of Art and Artists for February 25, they will find my published opinion of the works of C. Harry Allis. I mentioned his poetic interpretation of nature, with special reference to his scenes of springtime and autumn.

All the pictures are now being shown in the Daniell studios, and should not be missed by any lover of art. They will richly repay the most intimate study, and I think if you go once to see them you will return again and again—as I did.

You will linger, I feel sure, over "Evening," with its exquisite greens leading to the gray-blue of its hills, and with its streak of tender light extending over the sky. Or over the beautifully simple "Evening Near Fontainebleau," which may seem only a sketch in handling, but which has caught the full essentials of a good picture: the grays in the clouds are alive. Or over the lovely color scheme of "Autumn at Moret," all broken yellows, greens and purples in a mist of gray.

You will be charmed, too, by the exquisite color, the perfect poetic feeling of "Gray Day at Montigny," and with the soft play of light through the foliage in the picture called "In the Forest of Fontainebleau," which suggests the very spirit of autumn.

"Autumn at Montigny" is richly colorful. "Spring Near the Forest of Fontainebleau" shows us trees in flower, pink and white; it has a beautiful sky, with clouds that actually seem to move. "A Gray Afternoon" is a landscape in exquisite tones of cool greens and blues, and "Close of a Winter's Day, Bruges," renders the dark, dull atmosphere with great skill and feeling. "Edge of the Village, Evening," has trees that look black and damp, sodden snow spotted with dead leaves, and a suggestion of the red glow of sunset through the tree-trunks.

An interesting study (and also a well painted one) is "My Studio in France," as it pictures the very place in Grez where Robert Louis Stevenson first met his life. It is handled in a rich, suave manner.

These fascinating pictures will remain at Daniell's for several weeks.

Pictures by Jackson.

Beginning tomorrow, and continuing for two weeks, Martin J. Jackson will hold an exhibition of sketches, studies and pictures in oils and water colors, in his studio, No. 424 Copp building, No. 218 South Broadway.

There will be about twenty-five canvasses and five or six water colors, and I have no hesitation in saying that this will prove to be by far the most interesting exhibition Mr. Jackson has given us. Always an artist of much feeling and sentiment, he has been gaining steadily in technical expression during the past year, and many of the sketches he will show are strong and simple in handling, besides being good in color.

The subjects of the pictures and sketches will be varied, for the painter has painted in England, among the Adirondacks, near Denver, around Los Angeles and along the Pacific Coast from Laguna Beach to Port Los Angeles. Something here for every taste, surely.

Last summer Mr. Jackson had an interesting experience at Portuguese Bend. He spent two weeks with "Charlie," the old whaler who lives there all the year round; got up before dawn to sketch, and made some of his most successful sketches. He declares that he really enjoyed this strenuous regime, and is looking forward to a repetition of it next July. Certainly, the pictures speak of artistic enjoyment.

A charming water color is the English pastoral scene with a stream; it is long in shape, subdued but rich in color, and the slender white stems of birches give it a decorative effect that would repeat wonderfully well in a frieze. Good, too, are the sketches from Santa Monica and Hollenbeck Park.

The best of the bigger canvases is "Five O'clock," an afternoon effect of the sun shining along the ocean through a mist, and making a path of dull gold that reaches to the shore. The grayish blue expanse of ocean is remarkably well done. The distant Santa Monica Mountains are almost hidden in the trailing mists, and the "long pier" is dimly seen.

Another large canvas is "Crest of the Hill," showing a group of tall eucalyptus trees overlooking Elysian Park and the far-off mountains, which are touched with a tender glow. The picture, extremely decorative in color scheme and composition, has a delicate atmospheric effect. Still another is "Portuguese Bend," showing the beach from a high cliff. Below are rocks covered with golden brown kelp. Beyond them lies the sea in long, level lines of iridescent color. And one more is "Autumn in the Adirondacks," poetic and glowing.

Among the canvases of smaller size "Neptune's Carpet," ranks high in importance. It has a delightful color scheme. The ocean, seen from Mr. Jackson's favorite high cliff, is dull blue in the distance, of a dull, pale green nearer at hand, and then comes the design of the "carpet" still nearer, the kelp showing gray-pink through the clear blue water. "The Kelp Bed, Portuguese Bend," may be likened to another carpet, though in this the scheme is yellow and green. The moving water, well handled as to surface and reflections, was painted from one of "Charlie's" boats.

The artist shows two cornfields that are radically different in mood and effect. The larger canvas, "When the Frost is on the Pumpkin," gives us the gray mists of early morning. The ripe pumpkins are lying in a field near corn shucks that look menacing and spectral in the morning mists. "Indian Summer," the smaller picture, has a delightful sky of gray and lavender. It is an afternoon effect, with rich, warm colors in the foreground.

"Bleak and Cold," painted near Denver, shows us cottonwoods in winter. "Tranquility," a small study from Newburgh, N. Y., the artist's birthplace, is an autumn scene that is rich and harmonious in color.

One of the most subtle of the pictures is "Clad in Mist," painted in the early morning from the palisades at Santa Monica. Below lies the quiet sea, gray-green, while the pier at Venice is faintly suggested. A vigorous sketch of rocks and sea, "Corona del Mar," gives high cliffs in the foreground.

ART NOTES.

Boyar, No. 744 South Hill street, has been showing some interesting etchings and engravings. Tomorrow an exhibition of studies of roses by Miss A. M. Wagner will open, to continue for two weeks.

Frank L. Heath's collection of landscapes has been transferred from the Boyar Gallery to that of Wadsworth, No. 113 East Colorado street, Pasadena, where they will be shown till March 30.

Last night was "Donnybrook Night" at the Sketch Club. All the members of the club brought their brogue and told "Mike and Pat" stories—and some of them were mighty funny, too. There were songs by the Lost Town Trio.

Ernest Browning Smith will hold an exhibition during the first two weeks in April in the Blanchard Gallery. He will show European sketches, the most of them being impressions of the night.

On March 21 an exhibition of sketches by the California Art Club will begin at the Blanchard Gallery. The exhibition will close March 30.

On March 19, Miss Thekla Martens will lecture on "Beauty in the House;" March 26, "Beauty Out of Doors;" April 2, "Beauty of Personality."

J. Pierpont Morgan's wonderful collection of old masters and objects of art, valued at $50,000,000, is being transferred to New York.

Building Commissioner Ericsson advocates a pyramid construction for future Chicago skyscrapers. A 100-foot perpendicular wall, then an inset of five feet and another 100-foot perpendicular wall, and then another inset of five feet, he says, and all danger of collapse would cease.

A LITERARY EXCURSION

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Arnold Bennett is coming over from Paris in a few days to supervise rehearsals of the new play, "Milestones," which he has written with Edward Knoblauch, the American author of the prodigiously successful "Kismet." Apropos of Bennett, I wonder if anyone who met him while in America recently noticed the queer trick he has in conversation of frequently stopping dead in the middle of a sentence, as if he suddenly had forgotten what he was going to say, and pausing for a few seconds before going on.

The explanation of this habit, as it now has become, is that the author of "Clayhanger" used to stammer horribly. He did so from childhood, and bore the affliction with what patience he could up to the age of 24 or 25, when, quite characteristically, he determined to cure himself. Whether he tried Demosthenes' recipe or no I have not heard, but he finally attained his object by stopping abruptly in his speech whenever he felt a stammering fit coming on, and waiting until he was sure of being able to control his enunciation before he proceeded. In the course of a comparatively few months he had got rid of the impediment in his speech for good and all, but the trick of stopping abruptly in the middle of a remark remains to puzzle many who meet him for the first time.

Hall Caine must have got rather a nasty jar when he read the reports of the lecture on "What Was Shakespeare Like?" which M. H. Spielman, the famous art critic, delivered at the Royal Institution one evening this week. As most people know, the Manxman has taken a good deal of pleasure in the fact that he more or less resembles the most familiar portrait of the bard, which represents Shakespeare as a dreamy, poetical person, but now, alas, we have it from Mr. Spielman that Shakespeare was nothing like this.

"The mystery which surrounds his work and personality," said the critic, who has been studying the subject for several years, "extends to his portraiture. It has been humorously asserted that there can be found four thousand ways of spelling his name, and the number of what are supposed to be likenesses of him is in proportion." Most of these Spielman declared to be "excellent portraits—of somebody else."

After his lengthy study of the subject, Spielman has come to the conclusion that only two of the known likenesses of Shakespeare are genuine. These are the bust in Stratford Church, (probably made from a life-mask, not a death-mask, as has been mostly supposed,) and the engraving by Martin Droeshout. The first, as Spielman pointed out, was put up by his fellow townsmen and approved by his family. The other was a tribute from his professional friends and fellow-workers. This was pretty clear evidence that they really were like him. The lecturer pointed out that in spite of this, these portraits had constantly been challenged, and said the chief reason for this was to be found in the gross inaccuracy of the publications of the day, which professed to reproduce them. The seventeenth century, he added, seemed to care nothing for accuracy at all.

According to the lecturer, Shakespeare had "beyond doubt the appearance of a prosperous country gentleman," and all the sentimental-looking pictures of him are fakes. But perhaps Hall Caine won't believe Mr. Spielman.

Here is a gorgeous tip for anybody who has written a story that editors won't take. At least it worked like a charm with the editor of the famous "Cornhill Magazine" who, apparently, had no guarantee that the tale handed out to him by the author of a rejected manuscript was true until recently when he got a piece of wedding cake. How it all came about was told by Reginald Smith, K.C., the directing genius of the "Cornhill" at a dinner of the Authors' Club, this week.

About six months back, it seems, a short story was submitted to this editor by a writer who previously had had a good deal of fiction published in the "Cornhill." This particular story, however, didn't take the editorial fancy, and the author got it back, presumably with the usual rejection slip. Soon afterward a letter was received from him in which he stated that he and his fiancee, having quarreled, were not on speaking terms, a state of affairs which he had hoped to put right by the publication of the rejected story, which contained matter calculated, when she read it, to soften the lady's heart. So would the editor please play Cupid and consent to the story's publication? Surprisingly enough, the editor did, and the result was so exactly what the writer had hoped that before long there were marriage bells.

Guy de Maupassant, whose passion was accuracy of detail, probably would not thank the French "adapter" of his novel, "Bel Ami," who, for stage purposes, has changed the period from 1880 to the present day. M. Nozière, the ruthless man in question, has done this because, he says, the type of ladies' man depicted by de Maupassant has changed radically. The "ladies' man" of today, it seems, has neither beard nor mustache. "He must be," says M. Nozière, "a smart American type—that is with features of the antique or Napoleonic cast."

"He is not a manly man," adds the dramatist, rather unkindly, adding that if Parisiennes of 1912 saw the Bel Ami of 1880 come on the stage they would not find anything attractive about him, their ideal being no longer the cavalier with sprouting whiskers.

Most of us fondly imagine, when we use the phrase "nom de plume" that we are employing correct French, but that is a delusion. Curiously enough, no Frenchman ever says or writes, "nom de plume," but "nom de guerre," and how the first phrase, though it really seems a lot more appropriate, came into such general use, outside France, is a thing that is wrapt in mystery.

Of this, one is reminded by a "symposium" in a Franch review wherein several French writers tell how they came to choose their "noms de guerre." One of these is Pierre Loti, whose real name, as all the world knows, is Julian Viaud. It is not as generally known that Anatole France veils the real identity of M. A. Thibaut. Then there is "Gyp," otherwise the Countess Martel de Janville.

This authoress writes: "Jip is the name of a dog in 'David Copperfield,' and it is also the name of an electioneering agent in the play, 'Uncle Sam' by Sardou. That is where I took the name from. For the sake of letter-heads, seal, etc., I changed the spelling. That is not very interesting. I am, Yours, Gyp."

"Willy," who created the "C'audine" of endless adventures, and whose real name is Henry Gauthier-Villars, declares: "My name is too long. 'Willy' sounds simpler. Punsters, too, can make use of it." But as the puns that M. Willy suggests all are in colloquial French their point would be lost in translation.

Here, again, is the old story of the author who sells a book for a "song" and the publisher who makes a fortune out of it.—The author in this case is Miss Clo Graves, who is said to have sold "The Dop Doctor" for $250, and the publisher, William Heinemann of London, who is stated to have made on it, to date, nearly $20,000.

DRILL AND CREATORE.

TWO MUSICIANS AT THE HUGE LAND SHOW.

Band Director Presenting Varied Programmes of the Classics and the Semi-Classics—Drill the Director of a Big Company of Band Fakes.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Interesting music has been made next to Director Creatore and Director Drill. Mr. Drill has had a big band, finely rehearsed and singing a dashing style; Signor Creatore has not a world-famous band.

Mr. Drill's baton-venture has certainly added to his renown in Los Angeles and the choral force he so ably sustains has shown conclusively that Los Angeles is still capable of producing a fine singing body on occasion—many statements to the contrary notwithstanding.

Signor Creatore, though I do not consider him the greatest Italian leader I have ever seen, it must be conceded that he is a genuine musician of distinction and power, and one who shows to the finest degree the results of long and arduous research. Creatore's subtle and sometimes thrilling manipulation of his climaxes and crescendos—his wonderful long and arduous study of musical shading—is a notable feature of every programme.

Alessandro Bonci, celebrated tenor, who has deserted opera for the concert stage, is coming west again and will appear at the Auditorium early in April. Bonci will appear not only as a tenor, but will sing for the Symphony Orchestra, as its last soloist this season.

One of the most interesting figures here on the Coast is Miss Cora Mel Patten of Chicago—interesting because she is tremendously interested in the problems of life and working for the betterment of present conditions. Miss Patten is known as a forceful and brilliant interpreter of literature, who can interpret literature because she loves life; she believes that dramatic art is one of the most effective means of teaching ethics.

Miss Patten is well known as an exponent of more careful training of the emotional nature. She does not believe that we should give less time to the culture of the mind, but more attention to the education of the emotions—that feeling should be more trained by mind and will, thus directing to successful issues the forces of life. She is closely associated with the movements that tend toward the betterment of the drama, and the betterment of social purity.

She is chairman of the junior delegation of the Drama League of America, a society seeking to organize the forces of the country that are working along constructive lines in furthering and bettering of dramatics as an educational and social factor, and for the uplifting of all that is wholesome and pure in children's entertainments. The establishment of the children's theater in the cosmopolitan centers. This is one of the great movements of the time. Miss Patten has been invited to speak on the work before the State Normal Schools and the various teachers' associations of Southern California.

During the last week in March L. Patten will present Miss Patten at Blanchard Hall, Auditorium building, in one of the most important plays dealing with sex psychology. On Thursday afternoon, March 26, at 4 o'clock, will be read "The Awakening of Spring." This has been given by clubs and teachers, but has not been staged in this country. It is to be presented in the Free Theater of Berlin, and deals with the sex period, and, according to Miss Patten, has done more than any one thing to bring about a sane interest in sex as regards the young. On Friday evening will be read for the first time in Los Angeles Miss Patten's latest play, "Tomorrow," which is just from the press.

It is the custom, Mr. Sibley G. Morgan, organist of Westlake M. E. church, will give his regular fortnightly recital this evening at 7:30. He will play the following programme: Overture from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn;) prelude in C sharp minor, Op. 3, No. 2, (Rachmaninoff,) and "Festival March in E flat, Op. 28, No. 1. (Foote.) The following service will include "Ave Maria," from "Suite Gothique" (Boellmann;) "Elevation" (Guilmant,) and "Postlude Pontificale" (Vierne Steane.)

Mrs. Ludwyd McCune was entertained last week by the Hotel Potter, Pasadena, to entertain its guests on Thursday evening. She was assisted by the Tandler string quartette.

The second concert of the Woman's Symphony for the season will be given in Blanchard Hall Tuesday afternoon.

Among the larger numbers will be Haydn's Military symphony, the Tannhäuser suite, "La Fete de Seville," by Chaminade. The overtures will also play Chaminade Dance and a fantasie themes from "Madame Butterfly."

Mme. Frances Jude, violinist, will appear in the Sarasate "Zieguenerweisen" with Gertrude Ross at the piano.

A pupils' recital of Vernon Spencer and Ralph Wylie, violin, will be given at Blanchard Hall last Friday evening. A programme of excellence was presented.

The fourth of a series of musicales given by Mrs. J. T. Newkirk in her home on Meade avenue Thursday evening. A large number of pupils will be in the programme. The last part of April Mrs. Newkirk will give a musical tea, at which the musicians and programme will be entirely devoted to the spring season.

PAGEANT OF SHAKESPEARE.

EVENT AT AUDITORIUM FOR THE BARD'S BIRTHDAY.

Egan School Students to Offer "Processional" of All the Characters from Lear to Puck—Various Scenes and Characters, in Costume and With Appropriate Scene.

The Shakespearean Pageant now being planned by the Egan School, for the celebration of the Master-Bard's birthday, which comes on April 23, will be one of the most interesting events of its kind that has ever taken place in Los Angeles.

It will be held at the Auditorium and several hundred young persons will take part.

After an orchestra overture upon themes selected from the thoughts of the great composers upon Shakespeare and his subjects, Miss Helen Hady, of the Egan School, will read a prologue. This prologue will be written by Miss Amanda Matthews, who is well known in Los Angeles for her fascinating little stories.

It will be followed by a "Processional Pageant" of Shakespearean characters, in costume, from King Lear to Puck.

The first scene of the evening's entertainment will be called "A Dream of Shakespeare," and is supposed to transpire within sight of the old Globe Theater. About 100 persons will be used for this scene, which will close with a brilliant chorus, singing the Shakespearean air, "Tell Me, Where is Fancy Bred," Sir John Stevenson's composition. The chorus is being trained by Thomas Taylor Drill, general music director of the Land Show, and includes a number of promising young voices, heard recently to great advantage in "The Chimes of Normandy."

In the Processional Pageant about fifty children will appear, in costume, and keeping strict time to the stately old music.

The incidental melody of the pageant will include the Gounod "Romeo and Juliet" music, the Drinking Song from Ambroise Thomas's "Hamlet," and the Nicolai "Merry Wives" overture. There are also tunes from W. Ballet's "Lute Book," about 1580. The music will also be used for a curtain dance to the entire evening programme, the young people singing as they move.

This pageant will be given under the general direction of Frank C. Egan, with the assistance of Sedley Brown, Mrs. Florence Dobinson and Alfred Allen, while dancing numbers will be prepared by Mme. Matilditta, with the duelling scenes arranged by Richard Kruger.

The excerpts, in costume and with scene, include the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," Miss Charles as Juliet and Miss Foss as Romeo; the nurse scene from the same drama, Miss Flood and Miss Mace; a scene from "The Merchant of Venice," with Miss Mace as Portia and Miss Huskins as Nerissa; an excerpt from "The Taming of the Shrew," Miss Surridge, Miss Huskins, Mr. Alexander; the forest scene from "As You Like scene from "Julius Caesar," Mr. Calhoun; the arbor scene from "Much Ado," with Miss Jones as Hero; the church scene from "Much Ado," Miss Hasemeier and Mr. Backus; the closet scene from "Hamlet," Miss Sterling, Mr. Calhoun; a scene from "King John," Mr. Backus, Miss Lesser; a scene from "Julius Caesar," Mr. Calhoun, Mr. Neff; a scene from "Antony and Cleopatra," Miss Sterling, Miss Chenoweth; the mad scene from "Hamlet," Miss Chenoweth, Miss Sterling; the banishment scene from "As You Like It," Miss Rudolph, Miss Cornwall, Mr. Longstreth; the court scene from "King Henry VIII," Miss Caldwell, Mr. Paletta, Mr. Neff; a scene from "As You Like It," Miss Springer, Mr. Longstreth, Mr. Backus; a scene from "Twelfth Night," Miss Springer, Miss Courtell; the dream scene from "King Richard III," Mr. Calhoun, Mr. Kruger; the potion scene from "Romeo and Juliet," Miss Courtell; the sleep-walking scene from "Macbeth," Miss Foss; the play from "Midsummer Night's Dream," and the borrowing scene from "The Merchant of Venice."

Aunt Granny Hafford, a negro woman, has just celebrated what she calls her one hundred and twenty-fifth birthday, at Bloomington, Ill. She was a slave and as a girl lived in Virginia. She says she remembers seeing George Washington on several different occasions, though he has been dead 113 years.

VARIOUS FREAKS.

Mrs. Susan Frame of South Bend, Ind., 65 years old, recently cut a large tumor from her body without assistance and is apparently recovering from the operation. The only instrument used by the woman was a common, every-day penknife, sharpened on a kitchen steel by her own hand. She also used a small quantity of pulverized alum, an antiseptic and a cloth saturated in camphor.

Ellwood Fothenberger of Blandon, Pa., claims to be the tallest lad in his State for his age. He is only 13 years old and in his stockings he measures 5 ft. 10½ in. He weighs 146 pounds and wears a No. 8 shoe. He walks as straight as a stick and when it comes to a hike or a Marathon run he has few equals.

John Foulk of Otterville, Mo., is a midget, 45 years old. He is forty-three inches high and weighs fifty-five pounds, and is a member of a family of which all the others are of normal size. He owns a large chicken and turkey farm.

Ephpel Tosmasshanzski, a Russian, has been arrested in Philadelphia for walking in his bare feet with the mercury hovering around the zero mark. He informed the court that in Russia people thought nothing of going in their bare feet when the weather is much colder than it is here. He proved to the magistrate that he is far from insane, and he walked out a free man to continue to surprise the natives by dispensing with shoes and stockings even in the coldest weather.

John C. Jurgens, a $60 a month clerk in Cleveland, spent $25,000 a year for two years, the money coming to him from some source he will not divulge. Suddenly the remittance ceased, and, finding himself $7500 in debt, he fled the town, but has been discovered in Chicago holding a $12 a week position and living in a $3 a week room. He says he fled Cleveland from fear of being adjudged a bankrupt, when he would be compelled to tell where his transitory wealth came from.

Following a courtship of thirty years, during which time the bridegroom called on the bride twice a week, with the exception of one occasion, when he had typhoid fever, James B. Sturtevant at last "popped the question" to Miss Anna Earle and they were married in Noblesville, Ind., recently.

A tin check, good for 100 silver dollars, was one of the presents received by Rev. Dr. J. Layton Mauze of Central Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, at a reception in celebration of the tenth anniversary of his pastorate last week. The check was engraved on a piece of tin the size of an ordinary bank note. It was given him by the officers of the church.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

James G. Kerr, the oldest postal employee in the country, has handed in his resignation to Postmaster Campbell of Chicago, after sixty-two years of continuous service. Kerr is 84 years old. He is known as the "model clerk" of the department. He entered the service at Painesville, O., in 1850. He has not been absent a day since, not even on a holiday. His record shows he has never received a reprimand. He began work in Chicago in 1853. He will go to a brother's home in Painsville, O. "I am growing so old I do not think I can hold up my end any longer," he said to the postmaster. "My heart aches to think that I must give up my work, but I am too old."

Mrs. Anna Kossolof of New York has just celebrated her 113th birthday. She was born at Kiev, Russia, has survived her husband by forty years. She came to New York eighty years ago. She is only four feet tall and weighs eighty pounds. Her father and mother, she says, lived to be over a hundred years old.

The oldest resident of Harrisburg, Miss. Maria Bendor, died recently at the age of 102 years. She lived in Harrisburg twenty-three years, having come from Philadelphia. It is said that until her last illness Miss Bender never required the attention of a physician.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Perhaps, after all, the idealist is not always right. No matter what his motive may be, it is a question whether the effect of the teachings of the idealist are always productive of good in the minds of his students.

Is not a little kindness in the concrete preferable to any theoretical philanthropy? It may well be asked if doing is not always better than dreaming, and whether the attempt to make the best of conditions as they exist is not more praiseworthy than the futile struggle of the so-called reformer to refashion the world according to his own idea of what a world should be.

Irene Tucker is a lassie of 7 who lives in Alhambra. She has a wealth of auburn hair and several freckles on her round cheeks, but the true mother-heart beats in her little breast and the soul of a woman looks out through her big blue eyes.

One day last month she came running into the house with tears in her eyes.

"Oh, mama, look here at this poor little bird!" she exclaimed. "I just found him out in the street. He has been run over by a wagon or something and his wing is broke and he can't fly. Can't we put him in a cage and nurse him till he gets well?"

So the broken pinion was bathed in warm water and a salve was applied to the bleeding wound. Little Miss Tucker prevailed upon her father to purchase a cage in which she placed her new-found pet. Now for a month she has fed and given water to the bird, watching it and talking to it for hours at a time.

Now, Miss Tucker has a boy friend of 8 who is an idealist.

A few days ago as she stood by her pet's cage, the young man came up to her and said, "Oh, Irene, why don't you turn that bird loose? Don't you know it's wrong to keep poor little birds in cages? Birds don't like to stay in houses with people. Besides, he is well now. Why don't you turn him out in the fields where he can be with his brother and sister birds?"

"I know he's not well," the little maid protested indignantly. "If I turn him out he will just go and get run over by a wagon again, or a bad old dog or cat will get him. Don't you see he is not well? Watch him hop about. He can't even fly to the top of his cage. I guess I know more about birds than you do, Mr. Jackie Besides, I feed him good and give him lots of water to drink and he likes to stay with me, don't you birdie? I know he loves me 'cause he always sings when I come near him."

What better evidence of the bird's appreciation of her care could the little girl possibly have than the fact that it always sings when she comes near?

Policeman Alfred Robinson of New York certainly respects his duty when others are in danger more than he does his own personal comfort. He recently almost died from an attack of pneumonia, but returned to duty as soon as permitted.

Two hours after returning to duty he faced death in the smoke-filled hall of a tenement-house that he fought to rescue Mrs. Margaret Lahey, an invalid who had been overcome by smoke on the third floor. He carried the unconscious woman to the open air where she was revived. Robinson again returned to duty.

SAGE TEA USED BY OUR GTAND-MOTHERS TO DARKEN THE HAIR

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

The growth and beauty of the hair depends on a healthy condition of the scalp. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly kills the dandruff germs which rob the hair of its life, color and luster, makes the scalp clean and healthy, gives the hair strength, color and beauty, and makes it grow.

Get a 50-cent bottle from your druggist today. He will give your money back if you are not satisfied after a fair trial. Special agent, Sun Drug Co.

You can be the Envy and Admiration of Your Friends by the use of

Newbro's Herpicide

The Sanitary Hair-Dressing.

No matter where she is, the girl with a nice head of hair is always an object of admiration and at the same time the envy and despair of her less fortunate sisters.

The intelligent use of a good hair-dressing makes all the difference. Hair that receives no attention but the daily combing and an occasional shampoo cannot be pretty. Dandruff forms on the scalp, the hair becomes dead, brittle, uneven and drops out. There is an absence of that life, luster and snap possessed by hair which is given proper care and intelligent applications of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE.

HERPICIDE imparts gloss and beauty to the hair and to the user a sense of cleanliness, a feeling of satisfaction and assurance. Try it and see. Your friends will be surprised and remark on your improved appearance.

Grandma says: "Here's the way I make Fried Chicken taste so good:

Clean and cut a young chicken in pieces and sprinkle with pepper and salt one hour before dinner; dredge thickly with flour and fry slowly in oil or lard until it is done. To one tablespoonful of the fat used for frying, add one tablespoonful flour, mixed smooth; add one-half cup Borden's Pioneer Brand Evaporated Milk, one-half cup water, with salt and pepper to taste; stir constantly until it boils. Lay the chicken on a hot dish, pour the sauce around it, and serve at once.

THE BRONCKHORST DIVORCE CASE.

BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

In the daytime, when she moved about me,
In the night, when she was sleeping at my side—
I was wearied, I was wearied of her presence,
Day by day, and night by night I grew to hate her—
Would God that she or I had died!
—[Confessions.

There was a man called Bronckhorst—a three-cornered, middle-aged man in the army—gray as a badger, and, some people said, with a touch of country blood in him. That, however, cannot be proved. Mrs. Bronckhorst was not exactly young, though fifteen years younger than her husband. She was a large, pale, quiet woman, with heavy eyelids over weak eyes, and hair that turned red or yellow as the lights fell on it.

Bronckhorst was not nice in any way. He had no respect for the pretty public and private lies that make life a little less nasty than it is. His manner toward his wife was coarse. There are many things, including actual assault with the clinched fist, that a wife will endure; but seldom a wife can bear—as Mrs. Bronckhorst bore—with a long course of brutal, hard chaff, making light of her weaknesses, her headaches, her small fits of gaiety, her dresses, her queer little attempts to make herself attractive to her husband when she knows that she is not what she has been, and—worst of all—the love that she spends on her children. That particular sort of heavy-handed jest was specially dear to Bronckhorst. I suppose that he had first slipped into it, meaning no harm, in the honeymoon, when folk find their ordinary stock of endearments run short, and so go to the other extreme to express their feelings. A similar impulse makes a man say "Hutt, you old beast!" when a favorite horse nuzzles his coat front. Unluckily, when the reaction of marriage sets in, the form of speech remains, and, the tenderness having died out, hurts the wife more than she cares to say. But Mrs. Bronckhorst was devoted to her "Teddy," as she called him. Perhaps that was why he objected to her. Perhaps—this is only a theory to account for his infamous behavior later on—he gave way to the queer, savage feeling that sometimes takes by the throat a husband twenty years married, when he sees, across the table, the same face of his wedded wife, and knows that, as he has sat facing it, so he must continue to sit until the day of its death or his own. Most men and all women know the spasm. It only lasts for three breaths, as a rule, must be a "throwback" to the times when men and women were rather worse than they are now, and is too unpleasant to be discussed.

Dinner at the Bronckhorst's was an infliction few men cared to undergo. Bronckhorst took a pleasure in saying things that made his wife wince. When their little boy came in at dessert, Bronckhorst used to give him half a glass of wine, and naturally enough the poor little mite got first riotous, next miserable, and was removed screaming. Bronckhorst asked if that was the way Teddy usually behaved, and whether Mrs. Bronckhorst could not spare some of her time to teach the "little beggar decency." Mrs. Bronckhorst, who loved the boy more than her own life, tried not to cry—her spirit seemed to have been broken by her marriage. Lastly, Bronckhorst used to say, "There! That'll do, that'll do. For God's sake try to behave like a rational woman. Go into the drawing-room." Mrs. Bronckhorst would go, trying to carry it all off with a smile; and the guest of the evening would feel angry and uncomfortable.

After three years of this cheerful life—for Mrs. Bronckhorst had no woman friends to talk to—the Station was startled by the news that Bronckhorst had instituted proceedings on the criminal count against a man called Biel, who certainly had been rather attentive to Mrs. Bronckhorst whenever she had appeared in public. The utter want of reserve with which Bronckhorst treated his own dishonor helped us to know that the evidence against Biel would be entirely circumstantial and native. There were no letters, but Bronckhorst said openly that he would rack heaven and earth until he saw Biel superintending the manufacture of carpets in the central jail. Mrs. Bronckhorst kept entirely to her house, and let charitable folks say what they pleased. Opinions were divided. Some two-thirds of the Station jumped at once to the conclusion that Biel was guilty; but a dozen men who knew and liked him held by him. Biel was furious and surprised. He denied the whole thing, and vowed that he would thrash Bronckhorst within an inch of his life. No jury, we knew, could convict a man on the criminal count on native evidence in a land where you can buy a murder charge, including the corpse, all complete for fifty-four rupees; but Biel did not care to scrape through by the benefit of a doubt. He wanted the whole thing clearer, but as he said one night: "He can prove anything with servants' evidence, and I've only my bare word." This was about a month before the case came on, and beyond agreeing with Biel, we could do little. All that we could be sure of was that the native evidence would be bad enough to blast Biel's character for the rest of his service; for when a native begins perjury he perjures himself thoroughly. He does not boggle over details.

Some genius at the end of the table whereat the affair was being talked over said: "Look here! I don't believe lawyers are any good. Get a man to wire to Strickland, and beg him to come down and pull us through."

Strickland was about 180 miles up the line. He had not long been married to Miss Youghal, but he scented in the telegram a chance of return to the old detective work that his soul lusted after, and next night he came in and heard our story. He finished his pipe and said oracularly: "We must get at the evidence. Oorya bearer, Mussulman khit and methranayah. I suppose are the pillars of the charge. I am on in this piece, but I'm afraid I'm getting rusty in my talk."

He rose and went into Biel's bedroom, where his trunk had been put and shut the door. An hour later we heard him say: "I hadn't the heart to part with my old make-ups when I married. Will this do?" There was a lothely faquir salaaming the doorway. "Now lend me fifty rupees," said Strickland, "and give me your words of honor that you won't tell my wife."

He got all that he asked for, and left the house while the table drank his health. What he did only he himself knows. A faquir hung about Bronckhorst's compound for twelve days. Then a mehter appeared and when Biel heard of him he said that Strickland was an angel full-fledged. Whether the mehter made love to Janki, Mrs. Bronckhorst's ayah, is a question which concerns Strickland exclusively.

He came back at the end of three weeks and said quietly: "You spoke the truth, Biel. The whole business is put up from beginning to end! Jove! It almost astonishes me! That Bronckhorst beast isn't fit to live."

There was uproar and shouting, and Biel said: "How are you going to prove it? You can't say that you've been trespassing on Brockhorst's compound in disguise!"

"No," said Strickland. "Tell your lawyer-fool, whoever he is, to get up something strong about 'inherent improbabilities' and 'discrepancies of evidence.' He won't have to speak, but it will make him happy. I'm going to run this business."

Biel held his tongue, and the other men waited to see what would happen. They trusted Strickland as men trust quiet men. When the case came off the court was crowded. Strickland hung about in the veranda of the court until he met the Mohammedan khitmatgar. Then he murmured a faquir's blessing in his ear, and asked him how his second wife died. The man spun round, and, as he looked into the eyes of "Estreeken sahib" his law dropped. "You must remember that before Strickland was married he was, as I have told you already, a power among the natives. Strickland whispered a rather coarse vernacular proverb to the effect that he was abreast of all that was going on, and went into the court armed with a gut trainer's whip.

The Mohammedan was the first witness, and Strickland beamed upon him from the back of the court. The man moistened his lips with his tongue, and, in his abject fear of "Estreeken sahib," the faquir, went back on every detail of his evidence—said he was a poor man and God was his witness that he had forgotten everything that Bronckhorst sahib had told him to say. Between his terror of Strickland, the judge, and Bronckhorst, he collapsed, weeping.

Then began the panic among the witnesses. Janki, the ayah, leering chastely behind her veil, turned gray, and the bearer left the court. He said that his mamma wah dying and that it was not wholesome for any man to lie unthriftily in the presence of "Estreeken sahib."

Biel said politely to Bronkhorst: "Your witnesses don't seem to work. Haven't you any forged letters to produce?" But Bronkhorst was swaying to and fro in his chair, and there was a dead pause after Biel had been called to order.

Bronkhorst's counsel saw the look on his client's face, and without more ado pitched his papers on the little green baize table, and mumbled something about having been misinformed. The whole court applauded wildly, like soldiers at a theater, and the judge began to say what he thought.

Biel came out of the place, and Strickland dropped a gut trainer's whip in the veranda. Ten minutes later Biel was cutting Bronkhorst into ribbons behind the old court cells, quietly and without scandal. What was left of Bronckhorst was sent home in a carriage; and his wife wept over it and nursed it into a man again.

Later on, after Biel had managed to hush up the counter-charge against Bronckhorst of fabricating false evidence, Mrs. Bronckhorst, with her faint, water smile, said that there had been a mistake, but it wasn't her Teddy's fault altogether. She would wait till her Teddy came back to her. Perhaps he had grown tired of her, or she had tried his patience, and perhaps the mothers would let their children play with "little Teddy" again. He was so lonely. Then the station invited Mrs. Bronckhorst everywhere, until Bronckhorst was fit to appear in public, when he went home and took his wife with him. According to the latest advices, her Teddy did "come back to her," and they are moderately happy. Though, of course, he can never forgive her the thrashing that she was the indirect means of getting for him.

What Biel wants to know is: "Why didn't I press home the charge against the Bronckhorst brute and have him run in?"

What Mrs. Strickland wants to know is: "How did my husband bring such a lovely, lovely waler from your Station? I know all his money affairs, and I'm certain he didn't buy it."

What I want to know is: "How do women like Mrs. Bronckhorst come to marry men like Bronckhorst?"

And my conundrum is the most unanswerable of the three.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Col. George Dunn, United States military attache at Rome, has been spending some time in England investigating the system of punishment used in the British army. There has been much talk recently of a change in the American code, which has been criticized as inflicting punishment out of proportion to the faults committed.

Maj. William V. Judson, Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia, is to leave Washington for a visit of several weeks in Panama. Maj. Judson's visit to the isthmus is in direct line with the programme of the War Department to order engineer officers to inspect the work in progress in the "big ditch" under the direction of Col. Goethals.

Edward L. Thorndike, author of "Animal Intelligence," was recently elected president of the American Psychological Association.

Capt. William Van Schaick, who was in charge of the steamer General Slocum when she was burned in New York harbor, and over 1000 persons lost their lives, has, through the liberality of friends, been enabled to purchase a farm near Amsterdam, N. Y. He was reduced to poverty in defending himself in court.

Daniel Tombs, 7 years old, of Bowling Green, Mo., is said to be the youngest cattleman with a bank account in America. He has an account in a bank in Bowling Green and makes out his own checks. Last week the boy bought several calves, selecting them himself and paying for them with his own money.

INTERNAL COMBUSTION ENGINE.

When Rear-Admiral Hutch I. Cone, chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, appeared before the House Naval Committee, some of the members had in their hands newspaper clippings containing stories about wonderful development in Germany of the internal combustion engine for warships. The dispatches declared that Germany was almost in a position where these engines could be installed in battleships, with the result that her dreadnaughts would become superior to those of any other nation in cruising radius and ability to keep the sea for long periods. Such a type of engine makes smokestacks unnecessary and economizes room in the interior of a ship to such an extent that a vastly increased quantity of fuel can be carried. The engines burn either crude or refined oil.

Admiral Cone was asked whether the United States was doing anything in the same line, and he assured the committee that the naval experts of this country are not asleep. For a number of years this government has been experimenting with internal combustion engines, although we are probably not so far advanced as Germany. Several of our submarines are equipped with them, as well as a number of launches and small vessels. Up to the present time, however, this type of engine, which operates by a series of explosions, has not been applied to large ships, and it is doubted that even Germany would dare to install it in a battleship. There is an experiment station at Annapolis where the combustion engine is being studied and developed.

Housework Drudgery

Housework is drudgery for the weak woman. She aches, dusts and scrubs, or is on her feet all day attending to the many details of the household, her back aching, her temples throbbing, nerves quivering under the strain of pain, possibly dizzy feelings. Sometimes not to feel pain, not refreshing, because the poor tired nerves do not permit of refreshing sleep. The real need of weak, worn women is satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, and cures inflammation and ulceration, and such weaknesses as peculiar to sex, tranquilizes the nerves, improves the appetite and induces restful sleep.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know all his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let some unscrupulous druggist persuade you that his substitute or "just as good" composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit. Just smile and shake your head.

"Pop."

RENAISSANCE OF FISCHER.

PIONEER MUSICAL SHOWMAN BACK IN HARNESS.

Some Spell Unleashes His Diffident Tongue and He Tells of His Triumphs in San Francisco—Harry James Was Original Musical Director of Fischer's Theater.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

One never can tell by looking at a man, by conversing with him, or even by knowing him pretty well just what sort of interview-stuff he will roll out to you—if the time ever comes for him to talk typewriter.

Your friend with real-estate agent volubility may become a first-cousin of the clam family if you ask him for publishable sentiments. And likewise, if you know a man who stammers when he tries to pass the time of day, he may orate with the rotund fluency of a Daniel Webster if he thinks he is speaking a piece for the paper.

But I'll admit that I was never so badly fooled as on "Pop" Fischer.

"Pop" is the mildest of men, and the most successful producer of musical shows the Pacific Coast has ever known. In fact, he is the one man on the Pacific Coast who has become really big in his line.

Absolutely, "Pop" is to the vein of lighter melody what Oliver Morosco is to the drama.

And yet he has been a resident of Los Angeles for five or six years, and he has had very little to say to anybody.

He hasn't even knocked.

You could cut the tongue out of the average theatrical manager's mouth and put tire-tape over his lips—yet he would be able to enunciate beautifully when the conversation came into the hammer course.

In the theatrical business you always drive a tack with a sledge. Nobody is great but yourself. If there are other members of your family in the profession, you feel sorry even for them.

And there was the remarkable thing about "Pop."

Many a time I've met him coming away from high-priced shows which in all probability would have been egged if eggs hadn't been so expensive. And he invariably wore a sweet smile and radiated a happy thought.

I remember one "entertainment" in particular in which everything had been punk. Sometimes things are so rotten that they are funny, but here, unfortunately, nothing even went to this happy point. The prima donna was a plain lemon, the book read like a city directory, the score made you weep with childhood memories, and the chorus was a historical society. So I put it to him straight.

"Pop," I asked, "how did you like the troupe?"

"Such a fine curtain they carry!" he responded with rapid cheerfulness. "Never have I seen such a better one!"

He had found the little bit of joy and expressed it.

Everyone has been of the opinion that "Pop" has led a semi-retired life here for the past few seasons.

Not he.

With the little Fischer Theater on First street—now passed out of his hands—with the Fischer Theater in Pasadena, and with the American Theater on Broadway, he has been not only on the map, but well in the game every minute of that time.

While E. A. hasn't been putting over any Pink Ladies, Deep Purples or other sections of the rainbow, he hasn't been living on free lunches and hopes, not by a whole lot. He has been working for Mr. Fischer, and if he needed anything there was something under the third brick from the foot of the cellar stairs wherewith to purchase it.

The needed thing, apparently, was this jubilantly big musical company which is to infest the Lyceum Theater henceforth. And he sent Harry James, the Pacific Coast Julian Mitchell, back East to get it.

Harry got.

As long as I have known "Pop" I never heard from his own lips the story of his romantic adventures in the show business in San Francisco. For they were romantic, and they were great adventures.

I knew that they would make good copy, but "Pop" I was distinctly afraid of—as a source of narration.

I never asked "Pop" anything for publication that he didn't give me just one and the same answer:

"Come along—I buy one!"

And that was all the response I got.

So I called Harry into the council-of-war.

Harry is an enthusiast over "Pop," much as "Pop" is an enthusiast over Harry.

"Harry," I said, "we've got to get a yarn out of the old man, some way, but you know he never says anything. Let's drag him down to the Hoffman. I'll hook my foot around his chair to keep him from sliding away, and you do the talking."

"Right," said Harry.

We met at the Hoffman at 2 o'clock last Thursday afternoon. Mr. James, bathed in perspiration and victory after a hard battle with the hip-hip-hurrays, was commingling clam chowder, mince pie and coffee. Perhaps not exactly hygienic, but apparently very pleasing. I judge only from the clatter and speed with which they disappeared.

"The old man is certainly in bad today," said Harry, as he finally paused for breath; "one of his partners has tried to do him in the costume business, and has acted disgracefully. Poor 'Pop' is flying around between lawyer's offices and justice courts, trying to protect his own name and drag his associate out."

"I suppose he'll have absolutely nothing to say, now," I returned.

"Not a darned thing," said Harry, making a final assault on the pie.

But between us we fixed it up. Harry knew enough to make a story, and all we expected peaceable "Pop" to do was sit by and smile, and maybe deplete a stein.

Bye-and-bye he blew in.

"Mein Gott, Harry, this is terrible—this is terrible!" And we got an account of the business misadventure.

"Will you have something 'Pop'?" asked Harry, sympathetically.

"I take a little cognac," said the veteran manager. And the waiter started kitchenward.

Fischer rose excitedly. "I dun't want that cognac. It's no good for me—no good for me! Make it a cocktail." And the waiter again rambled, with the revised version.

There was a spot of silence, and I kicked Harry under the table.

"Mr. Fischer," I said, "I just want to ask you some few things about your beginnings in the show business. They'd be interesting to people, you know."

I looked at "Pop" for his smile, but I listened for Harry's voice.

Then the miracle happened.

"Pop" seldom raises his voice. He never makes gestures. He always speaks in a Weberfieldian dialect. He invariably talks slowly. He ponders. His words are chosen with painful care. He has never been known to say three consecutive sentences about himself.

I didn't believe my own ears for a few moments. Harry forgot to finish his coffee, and sat staring, with parted lips.

It was "Pop," and yet it wasn't.

He was sitting soldierly erect, at attention; he was speaking rapidly, fluently, without the slightest trace of German dialect; his sentences were well formed; his voice was deep and mellow.

And he was steadily talking of HIMSELF!

You never heard a better "interview" in your life.

Without my butting in with a single question—without the slightest interruption from Harry, his story progressed, logically, succinctly, rapidly.

Said he: "I think I got ahead in the show business simply because I made up my mind to succeed. I was born at Ulm, and my father was a soldier. He was a soldier in everything he did. He raised us soldiers. We were routed out of bed at 6 every morning in the year, and when we were dressed, my father lined us—six boys—at attention, and we went through drill and inspection. And the raps we got from his stick if our clothes were soiled or torn!

"I came to America, and thirty-five years ago I went to work in Cincinnati. A man whom I admired greatly had a restaurant and cafe, with which he made some success as a concert hall. I made up my mind to be a great manager like that myself—some day!

"Twenty-six years ago I came to Los Angeles. I had the good will of Messrs. Maier and Zobelein, and several other business men, but there seemed to be no place for me, so I moved along to San Francisco.

"There, on O'Farrell street, I opened my first restaurant.

"Bye and bye, I determined to turn it into a concert hall. I had the opposition of all my friends, but I was sure that it would go because I would do nothing cheap—a motto which I have endeavored to follow.

"I made a success of the concert hall, and then, imitation being the sincerest flattery, I found others doing the same thing.

"So I switched once more—and then more opposition.

"This time I sprang a surprise. I put in an orchestra of sixteen very fine players—I had already presented a Hungarian band, with Ferdinand Stark as concert maker—and offered nothing but grand opera people of the highest calibre. Among those were Abramoff, Alexandroni, the celebrated Spanish baritone Antonio Vargas, Bardarocco, Barduzzi, Paladini, Salvini and Puerieri.

"Another knockout.

"My next move was the building of Fischer's Theater, up just a block along O'Farrell street, on the site of the present Tait's restaurant.

"I believed that the Weber and Fields pieces would go on the Pacific Coast—at least in San Francisco. Nobody else did. That didn't make any difference with me—it did, to tell the truth; it rather reassured me that I was right.

"They laughed most of all in New York.

"Joe Weber made me pay twenty weeks' royalties in advance, and said that he hoped we would get at least four weeks out of 'Fiddle-Dee-Dee.' But he didn't think we would.

"I got a musical director, producer and general man about the theater of whom nobody had heard out West, but of whom every one was talking before long. His name was Harry James.

"So we put on 'Fiddle-Dee-Dee,' and started out.

"That show ran six months. The entire group of Weber-Fields pieces lasted three years.

"In the company were Kolb and Dill, Barney Bernard, Maude Amber, Flossie Hope, Winifred Balke, Harry Hermisen, Edna Aug, Georgia O'Ramey and Nora Bayes.

"Then Mr. James took the company to Australia, and, just two months before the fire, I sold out my San Francisco business and moved to Los Angeles. The Fischer luck, they called it. I came down here at the solicitation of my wife, who was in love with the climate."

Silence. Pop's tale was told.

"I think," I ventured at length, "that you will repeat that success down here. Don't you?"

It was the old "Pop" come back again. Smile, dialect, painful modesty and all.

"What you going to have?" he asked, dodging the issue.

"But aren't you sure of things?" I pressed the inquiry.

"Oh, sure! Sure!" Turning around: "Waiter!"

FAVERSHAM IN "THE FAUN."

JANIS AND HER NEW PLAY, "THE SLIM PRINCESS."

Fischer's New Company Opening Today—Fifth Week of "The Girl and the Boy," and Continuance of "Seven Days"—"Landslide" at Belasco—Durbar and Vaudeville.

Beginning tomorrow evening William Faversham will be the attraction at the Majestic Theater in his latest New York success, "The Faun." This highly amusing and extremely novel comedy satire has enjoyed the patronage of New York's blase amusement seekers and been stamped with their approval, and now comes to bid for Los Angeles commendation with its three hundred and twenty-sixth performance, which will be celebrated at the Majestic Monday evening.

It is not often that Pacific Coast playgoers see a Broadway success so soon after its initial production, and in consequence it may be well to elucidate the reason why William Faversham is the exception.

It will be recalled that last season

Housework Drudgery

Housework is drudgery for the weak woman. She heats- es, dusts and scrubs, or is on her feet all day attending to the many details of the household, her back aching, her temples throbbing, nerves quivering under the strain of pain, possibly dizzy feelings. Sometimes rest in bed is not refreshing, because the poor tired nerves do not permit of refreshing sleep. The real need of weak, nervous women is satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, and female complaints and ulceration, and cures these weaknesses as peculiar to women. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of the ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any unscrupulous druggist persuade you that his substitute of unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit. Just smile and shake your head!

Players at the various theaters of the city during the coming week.

Mr. Faversham and his talented wife, Miss Julie Opp, scored a pronounced hit here in "The World and His Wife," and the actor-manager made quite a comfortable sum for himself after all expenses had been paid. This same condition prevailed in every Coast city, and the outcome was that William Faversham went back to New York a much richer man than when he came. This is the primary reason for his quick jump to Los Angeles, where he picks up the western portion of his booking March 18.

A bit of intelligence anent the play Mr. Faversham is starring in, may be of interest to readers. It is from the wonderfully virile and imaginative pen of that master of romance and comedy, Edward Knoblauch, who has caused such a ripple in the theatrical world by his rapid fire successes on Broadway—first he produced "The Faun" with Faversham as the star; then "Kismet," with Otis Skinner in the stellar role. The two plays are totally unalike, yet they are strangely related and of a nature that leads one to believe their author a dreamer of beautiful and lasting visions.

"The Faun" is based primarily on mythology, that is, its leading character is mythological. The faun, as all students of literature know, is supposed to be a descendant of Pan, the god of agriculture, and therefore as near to nature as it is possible to get. Herein lies the secret of the comedy.

The author has lifted a character from the very cradle of nature and placed it in the lap of modern civilization. The character thus lifted rebels at the artificiality around him and begins a systematic campaign for revolutionizing things. He sets about re-arranging proposed marriages, because they are not mated naturally, bringing about changes in the every-day life of those around him and ends by departing, after having brought the light of nature to his companions' eyes and the spirit of joy to those who have come in contact with him. His departure is bemoaned, yet he is soon forgotten because he has created perennial happiness.

Mason.

Elsie Janis will begin a week's engagement at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow evening in "The Slim Princess," a musical play in three acts, in which she had a tremendously successful run at Charles Dillingham's Globe Theater, New York, last season.

Miss Janis has made wonderful advancement in her art as a comedienne since she has been a "regular star," and one would scarcely recognize in the tall, gracious, queenly young lady of today the romping, impish, little travesty artist who used to make some of the serious legitimate actors and actresses wriggle by the poignancy of her wit and satire when she did "imitations" of them in their greatest moments in the vaudevilles.

Miss Janis doesn't disdain to sing and dance—indeed in "The Slim Princess" she does a lot of both, and she even introduces one song in which to the manifest delight of her audiences she wickedly demonstrates how Ethel Barrymore, John Drew, George Cohan, Eddie Foy and even Sarah Bernhardt, might sing a comic song if they essayed the task.

But the protean Miss Janis doesn't have to depend any longer upon the little box of tricks with which she used to entertain the patrons of the halls who flocked to see "Little Elsie," the wonder child. She is a finished artiste now, at the age of 21, an actress of tremendous experience, vital intelligence, and legitimate methods.

She can sound the depths of pathos where it is necessary, as well as point a merry quip in a manner to raise the entire house to a gale of laughter. Her last season in New York proved her one of the favorite stars of the metropolis, and in "The Slim Princess" it is said she has the most congenial vehicle for the exploitation of her manifold talents that has yet been furnished her.

"The Slim Princess" is a musical comedy of three acts, the making of which involved the happiest collaborations on the part of three remarkably clever men. First, George Ade, the humorous philosopher, who wrote the ludicrously funny novelette from which Henry Blossom, the author of "The Red Mill" and "Mlle. Modiste," evolved a screamingly funny libretto. Apt musical illustration was furnished by Leslie Stuart, the gifted composer, who gave us tuneful "Florodora" and other well-known light musical plays, and the score is in his happiest vein.

Mr. Dillingham has surrounded Miss Janis with an exceptionally clever company including Joseph Cawthorn, the unctuous German comedian and has given the whole production a most sumptuous and elaborate investure in the way of scenery and costume. Beside Mr. Cawthorn, the other important principals in the cast of "The Slim Princess" are Julia Fray, Queenie Vassar, Estelle Baldwin, Florence Williams, Eugene Revere, Charles Judels, Sam Burbank, Douglas Stevenson, Oscar Regland, Neil Walton and Louis Baum.

Fischer's Lyceum.

Beginning with a matinee today and with regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday, Fischer's Follies Company will make its bow at the Fischer's Lyceum, presenting as its initial offering of its permanent musical comedy season, two of the present New York successes, both playing in that city now—"The Never Homes," Lew Field's big hit, and "The Song Birds," Victor Herbert's clever satire on grand opera.

The organization is presented by E. A. ("Pop") Fischer and Harry James, and is fifty strong, with a list of principals probably unequaled by any similar organization extant, and a chorus of picked singing and dancing girls that would do credit to any Broadway house in Gotham.

It is the intent and purpose to present with this organization only the present-running New York and Chicago hits, and for this purpose arrangements have been made with George M. Cohan, Lew Fields, Joe Weber, and the LaSalle Theater, Chicago, for their complete new output. It will also be made possible now and then to put on here first, the new musical shows contemplated for New York or Chicago.

With such resources, and the unlimited ability of the Fischer company in the way of costumes, scenery and all such accessories, no doubt can be entertained of the excellence of the productions in the utmost details. The first two, combined into one bill, will be fair samples.

"The Never Homes" deals with Lilydale, the fair city run by women only. Its firemen, police and courts are all feminine, and Patricia Flynn (May Boley) is its boss. Besides Miss Boley, the play will enlist Texas Guinan, prima donna, late of "The Gay Musician;" Mlle Vanity, premiere danseuse; Laura Oakley, Jane Urban, Ann Montgomery, Madison Smith, leading man, late of Fritzi Scheff; Herbert Cawthorn, comedian, world-famed; Robert Letts, Lon Chaney and others of the same roster of illustrious names.

In "The Song Birds," for which a special chorus is enlisted, Miss Guinan will shine as Tetrazzini. With Mr. Herbert's fine music, this latter show is almost grand opera, and is certainly a contrast to the other, the music of which, light and lilting, is from Baldwin Sloane's pen. Together, they will serve admirably to exploit the abilities of this fine organization, and Mr. James, at the head of his sixteen musicians, is confident that he will "show" Los Angeles something new and real in musical comedy.

The following show is to be "The Henpecks," and also a Broadway hit.

Grand Operahouse.

Announcement is made by the management of the Grand Operahouse of the fifth week, starting today, of "The Girl and The Boy," Walter De Leon's new musical comedy, which has made such a decided impression on the theatergoers of Los Angeles and vicinity.

"The Girl and The Boy" shows Ferris Hartman and every member of his excellent company at their respective best. Mr. De Leon has written some real music and has arranged fine dance numbers. It is in an element of this nature that the Hartmanites shine brightest, for there is not a poor voice nor an indifferent dancer in the entire aggregation.

To Mr. Hartman has been delegated the role of a Scotch detective and he portrays the canny gentleman in an unctuous mirth-provoking manner. Mr. De Leon plays the Boy, who arouses his father's wrath as the result of his early marriage, and plays a real boy with the life and dash of a boy. "Muggins" Davies is the Girl, and wife, and in the part of "Mike," she is simply captivating. Miss Myrtle Dingwall's beautiful voice is heard to peculiar advantage in a very beautiful solo number and later with Percy Bronson, in a splendid duet. Elephantine Roscoe Arbuckle gives a touch of the broadest comedy to his portrayal of "Slats" the bellboy, and makes things move along right merrily.

Burbank.

"Seven Days" is proving to be the funniest as well as the most popular play the Burbank stage has known in a long, long while. So large have been the audiences since the first performance, that the announcement is made that the second week of this famous farce will commence with the matinee today.

The idea of quarantining a house full of people, including a divorced couple, who are not exactly on speaking terms with each other, and the introducing of a charming young girl as the new wife of the divorced husband for the purpose of appeasing the inquiring mind of a wealthy and dollar-producing aunt of the fellow, is sufficiently ingenious to account for the unprecedented popularity enjoyed by "Seven Days" during the past three years.

That the Burbank audiences relish the rich and plentiful fun in "Seven Days" is amply attested by the size of the gatherings that nightly scream over the ludicrous situations of the farce. The local newspaper reviewers all bore testimony to the fact that the Burbank company's performance of "Seven Days" is a pronounced farcical achievement, one that compares most favorably with the performances given here by the traveling companies.

Nothing funnier than Genevieve Blinn's "seeing" things can be imagined; no more thoroughly delightful comedy portrayal than that offered by Forrest Stanley has been seen in months; Grace Travers' work as the divorced wife is a constant delight, while Lola May, Lillian Elliott, Charles Giblyn, Henry Corrigan and the others of the Burbank company

Affairs of the Week and Coming Events in Society.

Mrs. Samuel N. Bonsall,
One of the honored guests at an elaborate luncheon given at the California Club by Mrs. Thomas Newton.

IT seems to be the really fashionable season to announce betrothals and each year a score or more interesting secrets are revealed. Yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, pretty Miss Louise C. Taylor, daughter of Mrs. Sally C. Taylor of No. 1739 West Twenty-fifth street, entertained a number of her girl friends at a bridge party. The invitations read, to meet Miss Virginia Lee, a young cousin of the hostess, visiting here from Spokane. This ruse was continued until the end of the games, when the guest having the lowest score was presented with the "booby prize," a pretty green silk bag containing a white ribbon, around the neck of which hung the names of Miss Taylor and Winthrop Otis Hearsey.

Miss Taylor's guests have expected this news for some time. She recently presided at a large luncheon when her young friends were sure a secret was forthcoming. They were on the qui vive for the excitement and hunted through the corsage bouquets and other places where the announcement might have been hidden, but nothing turned up. Later a box of stuffed dates were brought in by a little cupid. The keenest of interest was manifested and several of the young women were positive they knew the lucky man, but to their disappointment, "April fool" was all the dainties contained.

The function yesterday proved most successful and those who responded to invitations are: Mrs. Charles E. Morse, Mrs. George H. Bowman of Denver, Mrs. Mary Welsh of Ft. Collins, Colo.; Mrs. Justus S. Smith of Spokane, Miss Alda E. Will of Redlands; Mrs. Nelly C. Taylor, who assisted in receiving; Miss Meta Smith, Miss Hazel Childress, Miss Katherine Ramsburg, Miss Lois Salisbury, Miss Muriel Stuart, Miss Margaret Mathews, Miss Pauline Lynch, Miss Bessie Lynch Miss Ruth Buchanan, Miss Bertha Anderson, Miss Kate McCann, Miss Mary McCann, Miss Marie Nolan, Miss Kate Nolan, Miss Helen Updegraff, Miss Sophie Kubach, Miss Clara Leonardt, Miss Myra Smith, Miss Gwendoline Lawton, Miss Iris Lawton, Miss Ethel Dubbs, Miss Virginia Nourse, Miss Charlotte Cox, Miss Marguerite Vincent, Miss Virginia Lea, Miss Genevieve Wilson, Miss Mary Richardson, Mrs. William C. Hay of Portland, Mrs. Willedd Andrews, Mrs. Victor B. Stewart, Mrs. Walter S. Johnson and Mrs. Clifford S. Mead.

Mrs. Newton Hostess.

Mrs. Thomas Newton of West Adams street entertained with a large and elaborate luncheon at the California Club recently, in honor of Mrs. Samuel N. Bonsall and Mrs. Ernest Clysdale Hamilton, who, with her children, is visiting Mrs. Newton. Violets and jonquils were used in decorating, while St. Patrick's Day was suggested by unique favors of pigs, harps and shamrocks.

—o—

Mrs. Trueworthy Hostess.

Mrs. John W. Trueworthy of No. 742 Garland avenue was hostess yesterday at an informal auction bridge given in compliment to Dr. Trueworthy's daughter, Mrs. Albert Schuneman, who is the family's winter house guest, and also for Mrs. George Archer, both from St. Paul. About forty guests were bidden.

Benefit Ball.

The Barlow Sanatorium ball is still a delightful topic and the most encouraging reports are received daily by the different committees. The proceeds will be absolutely net to the charity for which it is intended, as there will be no deduction made for expense as the building, flowers and even the smallest details have been donated by friends. It is hoped that the fourteen beds closed for the past two years on account of insufficient funds will be opened again, as there are already many applicants on the waiting list.

Among the chairmen who have chosen their assistants are Mrs. Philip Forve, in charge of the coffee and sandwiches, who has included Mmes. Earl Mueller, George Fusenot, Violet Stone, Thomas Duque, Simon Maier, Laura Rieger, W. W. Neuer, W. Mackie, James Kays, Arnold Berkelman, Louis Grant, Valentine Peyton, J. H. Miles, James P. Burns, H. J. Wollacott, Leland Neiswender, Charles F. Noyes, T. R. Gabel, M. A. C. Griffith, Frank Larned, Charles L. Whipple, Brenton Lee Vickrey, and the Misses Eugenia Shafer, Ruth Kays, Anna McDermot, S. Lynch, Eileen Canfield, Ruth Larned, Clara Leonardt, Florence Bowden, Evangeline Duque, Hazel Barlow, Lelia Jolly, Ada Seely, Mamie Maier, Florence Brown, Helen Brant, Mary Forve, Dorothy Shafer, Olive Erdt, Mary O'Neil, Hildreth Maier, Jeannette Mackie, Mary Desmond, Anna Grant, Edna Miles and Sue Adele Miles.

At the punch and lemonade booth will be Mrs. Robert Wankowski, assisted by Mmes. W. T. Hutchison, Willis H. Booth, F. O. Johnson, R. D. Bronson, E. A. Featherstone, R. H. Edwards, A. L. Cheney, F. J. Carlisle, A. H. Braly, L. V. Youngworth, H. J. Henneberger, Benjamin Johnson, and the Misses Gretchen Day, Viola Hamilton, Louise N. Hill, Georgie Off.

Pleasant Plans.

Carl de Vidal, known in literary and newspaper circles under the pseudonym of C. de Vidal Hundt, expects to take his young bride to Europe in the autumn. At present they are sojourning at Coronado and then the eastern States will be visited prior to their departure for the old country.

The candidacy of M. de Vidal for a special commissionership to France in behalf of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition of San Francisco is being considered earnestly by Director-General Skiff, who is in charge of the domestic and foreign exhibits. It is Mr. Skiff's intention to send De Vidal as secretary to former Ambassador White, who probably will head the complimentary World's Fair Commission to France and other European countries.

M. de Vidal has lived in Los Angeles several years and with his bride, who was formerly Miss Lottie Buissaret, is well known here. He is the scion of an old Lorraine family. His father was Baron de Bournique-Fresnieres. While away the young couple will visit the estates of M. de Vidal's family in the Black Forests of Baden and in the north of France.

—o—

Eastern Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Coburn Turner of No. 1001 West Washington street, with their children left last week for an eastern trip. They will go first to New York and then to Washington. While in the latter city they will be guests of Mrs. Turner's mother-in-law and sister, Judge and Mrs. Sidney Ballou.

Coronado Gossip.

Society functions at the Hotel Del Coronado are at the highest ebb. The big event of the last fortnight was the hal masque Saturday night at which the polo contingent made merry. More than 100 were in fancy dress. Boxes on each side of the ballroom were filled with youth and beauty resplendent in gorgeous gowns and flashing jewels.

The greatest hit of the evening was Mutt and Jeff, impersonated by Capt. J. Campbell Berley and Walter Dupee. Lord Tweedmouth was attired in a Roman costume. Lady Herbert was Diana of the chase. Jennie Crocker was a Turkish princess. Eleanor Sears wore short skirts as a simple child. Lord Levenson Gower impersonated a 16-year-old girl. Tom Driscoll was an Italian Chief and Mrs. Driscoll an Indian princess. John Hobbs was a Dutch peasant and Mrs. Hobbs was Cleopatra. G. G. Amery was a bridegroom. Francis Carolan was a court clown. Miss Florence Roper was Dolly Varden. Henry Simpkins impersonated David Garrick.

Among the dinners given at the Hotel Del Coronado during the polo season was one by Capt. J. C. Beslee at which the guests were members of Mrs. Alice French Vanderbilt's party. The guests appeared in ball costume. Mrs. C. D. Velie entertained sixteen friends in the grill-room. John D. Miller entertained twenty-five. Templeton Crocker gave a select dinner to six San Francisco society leaders. Maj. Colin Ross celebrated his reentrance into the arena of gaiety upon his recovery from an accident in a polo game by giving a dinner for six.

Mrs. Edwin Mann was hostess this week at several functions given at Coronado in honor of her mother, Mrs. Edwin Thomas of Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Mann gave a luncheon Tuesday in the main dining-room, where covers were laid for fourteen. Spring blossoms were used as the table decorations. The guests were Coronado society women. Mrs. Mann gave another bridge party Wednesday afternoon at her home on A avenue. A prize was awarded the winner of the highest score at each table.

—o—

San Diego News.

Mrs. Walter O. Poor was hostess at a bridge-luncheon, complimentary to her guest, Mrs. Joseph J. O'Brien of Boston, at the U. S. Grant Hotel, Wednesday afternoon. The luncheon was served in the main dining-room. Following the luncheon tables for bridge were arranged in the women's foyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Poor and Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien have returned from an automobile trip through Southern California, stopping at Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, Pasadena and Riverside.

Mrs. M. A. Rife was hostess Thursday afternoon, at a bridge party, given in honor of Mrs. F. I. Holcomb, who is the house guest of Mrs. W. P. B. Prentice. Thirty guests participated in bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. John Vance Cheney, who contemplated leaving this month for a six months' tour of Europe, have postponed starting until next July or August. The change was made on account of the condition of Mr. Cheney's health.

BEAUTIFULLY TAILORED SUITS

$25.00, $30.00, $35.00, $45.00

New suits are fairly tumbling over one another for admittance to our garment department. Stock-rooms are full to overflowing. Those who have had a peep at these late arrivals say without hesitation that, for popular priced suits they outrank anything they have seen or heard of. Here are copies of the very latest Paris modes. Some severely plain tailored styles, others demi-tailored, showing a touch of graceful trimming here and there. There are whipcords in the lighter tans and grays, shepherd checks in black and white and plenty of the ever popular navies. Also the new taffeta Suits.

Hosts of Charming Gowns

Evening and Afternoon Gowns, Restaurant Gowns, Street Frocks and Lingerie Dresses.

Surely such assortments, such exquisite styles and such tempting values have not been seen before in this city. Every Fashion center is visited by our buyers. They strive to secure styles a little newer, a little more exclusive. They devote as much time and attention in choosing those pretty little Taffeta Gowns we are selling at $15.00 as those at a hundred or more.

Blouses

$3.50, $5, $7.50, $10

Daintier Blouse styles were never invented. They are different, they possess the air of newness, of smartness rarely found in garments at popular prices. The soft, sheer Voiles and Batistes and Crepes finished with the newest laces are indeed charming.

Junior Suits $20.00

Not ordinary Suits are these, not styles seen here, there and everywhere, but Suits with the earmarks of Fashion, combined with painstaking workmanship and good materials.

The soft toned Gray and Tan mixtures and invisible Stripes, the white-and-black Stripes and Shepherd Checks and the plain Navies and Black are all much admired.

While these Suits come in sizes for girls from 13 to 17 years, many women of small stature may be fitted without a stitch of alteration. Come to the Third Floor and see these splendid Suits.

Returned Home.
The guest of Mr. and Mrs. Luzerne Stevenson, of Hotel New Maryton, J. A. Uhland of Tonopah, Nev., has returned home after spending two pleasant weeks in this city. Mr. Uhland has decided to return with his family to make his home here.

Social Dozen Bridge Club.
Mrs. Delois Castle entertained the members of the Social Dozen Bridge Club with a luncheon at her home Thursday. All the appointments for the affair were carried out in the St. Patrick motif. A large silver candelabra with green candles graced the center of the large table, and favors were pipes on which were shamrocks, filled with green candies. Following the luncheon, tables were arranged for bridge and prizes awarded to Mrs. Marr and Mrs. Rupard. The members present were Mrs. J. G. Rupard, Mrs. Clayton Ward, Mrs. Andrew Swanfeldt, Mrs. Fred Ussher, Miss Ada Groves, Mrs. Hinton Marr, Mrs. Edward Abbott, Mrs. Will Pennell, Mrs. Karl Fishburn, Mrs. O'Brien and Mrs. Charles Jones.

House Guest.
Miss Etta M. Elliott of Columbus is the house guest of Mrs. James Douglass Jackson, No. 1113 Westlake avenue. Many social affairs are being planned in her honor.

Visiting Day.
Tuesday will be visiting day at Cumnock Hall, this being the closing date of the winter term of the Galpin Shakespeare class, in charge of Mrs. Warren Fishburn. An interesting programme has been arranged.

Luncheon Delightful.
Mrs. Lillian Worth Fruehling, who is going abroad shortly, was the honoree at a handsome luncheon given at the Angelus by Mrs. Harry Harrington, Friday. A basket of pink Killarney roses graced the center of the table, and place cards were handdecorated, ornamented with the same flower. Covers were laid for sixteen.

Around the World.
Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Wheeler and their daughter, Miss Estelle Wheeler, who left New York in October for a trip around the world, and have been spending a month in this city, left for their home this week.

Bridge Luncheon.
Complimentary to Mrs. L. Gram of Laramie, Wyo., who is spending the winter in this city, Mrs. Fannie Manasse entertained with a bridge luncheon recently, in her apartments in the Hotel Lovejoy. A shower bouquet of red carnations graced the small luncheon tables which were later arranged for bridge. Harmonizing score and place cards were used. Those invited to meet the honor guest were Mrs. George Richardson, Mrs. L. Richardson, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Owens, Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Helen Gowans, Mrs. Robert Hardy and Mrs. George. Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Hardy were awarded the prizes and Mrs. Gram the guest prize.

Surprise Party.
Complimentary to the birthday anniversary of her son, Raymond, Mrs. Frank C. McArthur entertained with a surprise party in the parlors of the Hotel Wilhelm, Friday evening, and assisting the hostess were Mrs. Paul Ridley, Mrs. Small, Mrs. Elmer Riggle and Mrs. Levi. A musical programme was given, assisted by Mrs. Elmer Riggle, reader. A feature of the evening was a booth with a gypsy fortune teller, to reveal the fortunes of the young people. Dancing was enjoyed to a late hour, when a buffet supper was served. All the appointments were carried out in red, white and blue. A rustic basket was filled with red carnations, which shared the honors of the table with a large birthday cake, on which were twenty candles. When the cake was cut a ring, thimble, button and wishbone were found. Red, white and blue streamers were festooned from the electroliers, and favors were tripods of candy tied with red, white and blue ribbon. Among those present were the Misses Joyce Burgess, Abbie Steele, Isabelle Smith, Frances Bischoff, Willimina Rector, Naomi Hunt, Margery Peck, Ruth Myers, Albra Smart, Axcie Gilham, Irene Olson, Alice Foster, Ethel Ridley, Marie Koll and Messrs. Sam Carter, Clyde Dirlan, Milton Koll, Force Edwards, Oscar Bischoff, Leo Levi, Loyal Underwood, Mark Howlett, Howard Dirlan and Douglass McArthur.

Five Hundred Luncheon.
Mrs. D. P. Hatch, No. 1829 South Flower street, charmingly entertained the members of the Wednesday Afternoon Luncheon and Five Hundred Club at her home, which was brightened by a profusion of jonquils and narcissus. Following the luncheon "500" was the game for the afternoon and handsome prizes were captured by Mrs. Downer and Mrs. Simpson. Members present were Mesdames Carl Newerf, A. L. Hammel, D. P. Hatch, T. E. Simpson, Mamie Algier, Minnie Algier, C. M. Cooley, Frank Delfel, C. M. Downer, H. B. Hall, W. D. Newerf and Miss Sallie Shields.

Dancing Party.
Miss Estelle Wheeler of New York City was the honoree at a dancing party given by Miss Dorothy Youmans at her home, No. 408 Occidental boulevard, recently. Yellow jonquils were used in an artistic decoration throughout the home, and delightful music was furnished for the dancing, after which dainty refreshments were served. About twenty guests enjoyed the evening.

Whist Affair.
Mrs Harriet Van Horn entertained with a delightful whist party yesterday afternoon at her home, No. 1116 Harvard boulevard. Green and white were used in ornamenting the home in honor of Ireland's patron saint and white carnations were used in baskets and vases. Tables were arranged for thirty-six players and out-of-town guests were Mrs. Robert Hackney of Milwaukee, Mrs. L. W. Garoutte of Lincoln, Neb., Mrs. Hunt of Denver, Mrs. C. E. Ward and her daughter, Mrs. Wallace, of Iowa; Mrs. S. E. Frisbee, Miss Frisbee and Miss Hazel Frisbee of San Diego.

Iowa Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Casbeer of Des Moines are the guests of their daughter, Mrs. George A. Howell, No. 1617 Wilton place, and will remain until spring.

Luncheon and Thimble Party.

The members of the Kaitter Klub were entertained with a luncheon on Wednesday by Mrs. Lee C. Mueller, in her apartments in the Hotel Lucas. The perfume of violets filled the luncheon room, as these flowers arranged in a mound graced the center of the table. Covers were laid for Mrs. John Griffith, Mrs. George A. Howell, Mrs. Horace Skinner and Miss Ellis. The balance of the afternoon was spent with dainty fancy work.

OUT-OF-TOWN-SOCIETY.

Pasadena.

ONE of the few noteworthy functions of last week was the bridge party given Monday evening by Misses Evelyn and Pauline Lutz at their home on South Orange Grove avenue. Tables were arranged for forty players and handsome prizes were awarded the winners at each table. Among those who enjoyed this hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. C. M. M. Crichton and their house guests, the Earl of Rothas and B. G. Howard of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Martin, Dr. and Mrs. Eben P. Clapp, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Strafford, Mr. and Mrs. William St. John Ranney, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Condit, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Lutz, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Grattan, Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Post, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Vedder, Mmes. George W. Sturdivant, Henry Goss, John W. Hugus, Hiram Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Neustadt, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bartlett Shidler, Dr. and Mrs. A. D. McCoy, Misses Elsa West, Cora Auten, Mary Manning, Messrs. Winch and Taylor.

Dr. and Mrs. Albert Hatcher Smith entertained Monday evening with an elaborately-appointed reception given at their home on North Garfield avenue in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Henry C. Mable of Boston, who have been their house guests for a week. With Dr. and Mrs. Smith, and Dr. and Mrs. Mable, Col. and Mrs. Haskell of Boston, received and assisting about the flower-decked rooms were Mmes. Edwin Hopkins, William Harrison Ballard, B. H. Kinney, Royal H. Pinney, and J. E. MacMillan. Mmes. Ballard and Hopkins presided over the tea table in the dining-room, where refreshments were served and the young girls assisting were Misses Bernice McCurdy, Elizabeth McKinney, Marion Horton, Rachael Coolidge, Mildred and Anita Smith. The pleasure of the evening was added to by music furnished by Miss Ruth Ward at the piano and Frank Richards, violinist. There were about eighty present.

Mrs. G. F. Washburne entertained Sunday afternoon at her home on Bellefontaine street with an informal reception when a number of her friends were given the pleasure of meeting Prince Sarath Ghosh of India, who entertained the company with a sketch of the life and customs and the position of the women of India. There were between forty and fifty present and Mrs. Washburne entertains the same and other friends today, when a lecture on Cosmic Consciences will afford interest.

Mrs. David B. Van Slyck of South El Molino avenue was the hostess Tuesday at a prettily-appointed luncheon given at the Valley Hunt Clubhouse complimentary to Miss Charlotte Thomas, who is at Hotel Maryland after an absence of two years abroad. Jonquils were used in table decoration and all the accessories carried out a golden yellow color scheme. Covers were laid also for Mmes. Albert Sherman Hoyt, Charles Frederick Holder, George Gill Green, William E. Grattan, Frank Holder, Frederick Gleason, Henry H. Sherk, Montgomery Ward, J. Dawson Thomson, James H. McBride, Frank Gates Allen, George Cruickshank, K. J. Devoe, Robert Gardner Neustadt, Charles D. Daggett and E. M. Neustadt.

Mrs. J. N. Burnes of South El Molino avenue entertained Monday afternoon with an informal musical and tea, which was arranged in honor of Mrs. Edwin Ginn of Boston, a guest at Hotel Raymond. W. E. Foley read several original poems, Mrs. Walter Raymond contributed vocal solos, Sydney Hoben gave piano numbers, and among other distinguished guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pixley and Miss Zona Gale.

Miss Louise Hawkins of South Pasadena avenue gave a delightfully informal bridge party at her home Tuesday evening complimentary to Gelston Moore of New York, who is a guest here. Tables were arranged for sixteen players and after the games a chafing dish supper was enjoyed. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. George A. Vedder, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Barnes, Misses Ethel Hinds, Helen Rowland, Gladys McLachlan, Helen Goodrich, Dorothy Hinds, Messrs. Harold Knight, Robert Cassamajor, Thomas Norton, Irving Benton, and Harold Hawkins.

The marriage of Mrs. Mae Jerrems, who has spent so many winters at Hotel Maryland as to have become identified with Pasadena society, and James A. Kennard of Chicago, which was solemnized at Redlands Monday, came as a surprise to their many friends here. The bride's mother, Mrs. W. H. Jerrems, and a few intimate friends were present at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Kennard left Wednesday for Chicago, where they will reside.

Mrs. Jacob J. Mansar of Altadena entertained Tuesday afternoon with an informal bridge party complimentary to Miss Soper, a guest at Hotel Green, and Miss Barry, who is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mears, Altadena.

Mrs. Samuel Merrill, Jr., of Summit avenue, was the hostess at a theater party Tuesday afternoon, given at the Grand, followed by afternoon tea at the Alexandria. Those enjoying this affair were Mmes. F. C. Bodine, H. C. VanBuskirk, Frank Thomas, M. N. Butler, H. J. Burnett, Misses Mary Stone, Craig and Elizabeth Craig.

Mrs. George Arthur Vedder of Palmetto drive, gave a charming luncheon Wednesday afternoon, at her home, when covers were laid for Mmes. William Franklin Knight, E. G. Reighard, Thomas Norton, J. Dawson Thomson, M. L. Gaylord, John T. Greenwood, M. K. Tomlinson and the hostess.

Mrs. F. G. Cruickshank of East Colorado street, arranged a pleasant dinner party Wednesday evening for her daughter, Miss Dorothy Vandevort, when covers were laid for twelve of Miss Dorothy's friends.

Miss Dorothy Hinds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hinds, Prospect Park, was the hostess, yesterday evening at one of the most beautifully appointed dances given at Annandale Country Club this season. All the decorations and appointments carried out the St. Patrick's Day idea and the dance orders and favors were in keeping, showing the green of the Emerald Isle. Miss Hinds was assisted in receiving by her parents and others assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Sheehan and Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Doty, Miss Ethel Hinds and Robert Cassamajor. There were one hundred of the younger society set present.

Mrs. Charles J. Willett was the hostess at a small but prettily appointed luncheon, given at her home on North Los Robles avenue, Thursday, complimentary to Miss Cochrane, daughter of Gov. Cochrane at Soldiers Home, Sawtelle.

Mrs. Robert Gardner Neustadt celebrated the fifth anniversary of her wedding day Thursday, at her home, "Farview," Altadena, with a small informal tea, the guests being friends at Hotel Green and a few of the matrons of the younger set. Mrs. George G. Green, mother of the hostess, and Mrs. E. M. Neustadt, presided over the tea table during the first hour and Mrs. C. M. M. Crichton and Mrs. John Visscher Eliot the second hour. American Beauty roses were used in the dining-room in decoration, and annunciation illies with smilax festoons in the living-room.

Miss Mary Manning gave a prettily appointed dinner Thursday evening at Hotel Green, complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neustadt, in celebration of the fifth anniversary of their wedding day, when covers were laid for fourteen. The decorations and appointments were unique, carrying out the idea of the wooden wedding, and those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Visscher Eliot, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Grattan, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. MacWilliams, Misses Auten, Manning, Messrs. Carpenter, Wilkinson and Gilcrest.

Mrs. Albert E. Carroll of Palmetto drive, entertained very informally on her at-home day, Thursday, at tea, in honor of her sister, Mrs. Victor Caldwell of Omaha, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Carroll of Boston, both of whom are her house guests. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. L. C. Bostwick and Miss Martha Craig. Between 4 and 5 about forty of Mrs. Caldwell's old friends had the pleasure of meeting her and Mrs. Carroll. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell, who have been here a few weeks, leave for home tomorrow.

One hundred members of the Valley Hunt Club and some of their non-resident friends, and house guests enjoyed readings at the clubhouse last evening, when Miss Ruth Remenway gave "The Fourth Estate." Later supper was served in the dining-room. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Eben P. Clapp, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Underhill, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Kellogg, Dr. and Mrs. D. B. Van Slyck, Mr. and Mrs. John Murray Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Lockwood, Dr. and Mrs. F. F. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Daggett, Mr. and Mrs. George Rumsey, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Braber, Mrs. S. M. Hamilton, Mmes. West, Manser, Misses West, Lutz, Sherman, Henry B. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lutz, Mr. and Mrs. James S. MacDonnell, and many others.

Mrs. James W. Coleman of Casa Grande street, gave a small tea Wednesday, which was enjoyed by thirty of her friends. Mrs. E. B. Taylor contributed to the afternoon pleasure by several vocal solos. Among the guests were Mmes. Wierman Miller, A. B. Taylor, M. E. Johnson, W. B. Gard, Alexander Holland, John Goldwaith, James Lenton, F. G. Adams and Cherrington.

Mrs. E. C. Thompson of Brent avenue, entertained Thursday with a luncheon, given for Mrs. J. W. Meyers of Tacoma. Covers were laid also for Mmes. Arthur Keats, F. A. Barnes, C. H. Kay, E. E. Barnes, P. H. Ellers and G. H. Marston.

South Pasadena.

ONE of the most beautifully appointed of the week's social events was the bridge party given by Mrs. Benjamin Fitch Huntington, Friday afternoon, at her home, No. 1535 Ramona avenue, complimenting Mrs. William Smith Mason of Evanston, Ill., an annual winter visitor to Pasadena, and Mrs. Trowbridge C. Eggleston of Denver, Colo. The artistic bungalow was enhanced with a graceful profusion of yellow daffodils and violets, and on the dining-room table a handsome cluny lace luncheon set was used, graced by a low bowl filled with the daffodils, and the violets scattered over the table. Assisting her were the Misses Mae and Dorothy Foster and Miss Catherine Huffman and other unbonnetted ladies were Mrs. George Bush and Mrs. Norman Marsh. Handsome prizes were awarded the winners at the conclusion of the games, and those invited to meet the honor guests were: Mrs. Nathan Williams, Mrs. Fiske and Mrs. Wells of Evanston, Ill., Mrs. Walter Selvee, Mrs. E. F. Hobert, Miss Florence Gifford, Mrs. David Vail, Mrs. Clarendon Foster, Mrs. Arthur Levitt, Mrs. Harrison Gifford, Mrs. Albert Judd, Mrs. William Bradshaw, Mrs. George Adams, Mrs. T. W. Bishop, Mrs. John D. Reavis, Mrs. Jessie Cairns Shoebottom, Mrs. Norman Marsh, Mrs. Robert Gortner, Mrs. O. B. Manchester, Mrs. William Nelson, Mrs. Ernest Sutton, Mrs. Mary Stringfellow, Mrs. George Patterson, Mrs. Howard Kelly, Mrs. Anthony Eugene Halsey, Mrs. John Salisbury and Mrs. William Harrison of Los Angeles, Mrs. J. P. Bryan of Philadelphia, Mrs. P. Holmes Updike of Long Beach and Mrs. Tom Shepherd of Platteville, Wis.

The tiniest of pink rosebuds and blue for-get-me-nots peeping out of masses of delicate maiden-hair fern, arranged in a mound, these flowers gathered into corsage bouquets at the ends of long ribbons, were the beautiful welcoming spirits which Mrs. Henry Menderson summoned to her aid for a luncheon which she gave at her home, No. 1701 Hope street, Wednesday. Hand-decorated cards marked covers for Madam Kempton, Mrs. Ross Hamilton of Los Angeles, Mrs. Willis N. Tiffany, Mrs. O. A. Blatner and Mrs. Frank Beardslee of Chicago. Following luncheon the guests were taken to the Mason to see "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Mrs. E. N. Grant, No. 1000 Fair Oaks avenue, delightfully entertained the members of the Tuesday Afternoon Thimble Club at her home, which was enlivened by the use of jonquils and ferns. During the afternoon a contest was enjoyed and a prize awarded to Mrs. E. L. B. Godfrey, after which delicious refreshments were served. Members present were: Mrs. Rebecca Cairns, Mrs. John W. Moore, Mrs. Henry A. Perkins, Mrs. N. Harter, Mrs. Samuel Custer, Mrs. T. I. Gifford and Mrs. E. L. B. Godfrey.

One of the enjoyable affairs of the past week was the informal bridge party given by Mrs. David Vail at her home, No. 1830 Spruce street, Wednesday evening. The St. Patrick motif held sway in decorating the rooms where the card tables were arranged and the dainty refreshments served.

SOCIETY.

Large Japanese baskets filled with daisies was the flower used, and the shamrock score cards. Included were: Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hobert, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sebree, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Egleston of Denver, Colo., Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Levitt, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Rhone, Miss Rhone, Mr. and Mrs. William Councill, Mr. and Mrs. Carl McStay, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Bennett, Miss Dorr, the Misses Ellen and Charlotte Butterfield, Miss Butterfield of Vermont, Dr. and Mrs. Clarendon Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Eugene Halsey. A pretty compliment of the evening was a large Japanese basket filled with jonquils, presented to Mrs. T. C. Egleston of Denver, Colo.

Mrs. E. M. Crowe, who has recently returned from a trip to Japan, and Mrs. C. B. Oliver of Long Beach, who is removing to Alameda, were the complimented guests at a luncheon given by Mrs. Z. L. Parmelee, at her home, No. 919 Fair Oaks avenue, Tuesday. Rove de Or roses, in a low bowl, formed a beautiful centerpiece for the table, and covers were also laid for Miss Pauline J. Walden, Mrs. S. F. Johnston and Mrs. Lucie Harrison of Pasadena, Mrs. A. M. Fisher of Portland, Or., Mrs. J. W. Springfield, Mrs. Sara Hopkins, Mrs. L. Holmes and Miss Carrie Leas of Los Angeles, Mrs. Mary F. Woodcock and Mrs. Laura Wright of this city. Following luncheon a literary contest was indulged in.

Mrs. Waller G. Chansler, who is removing to Seattle, was the honoree at a theater party given at the Belasco Saturday followed by tea at the Alexandria, given by Mrs. Arthur Levitt, No. 1501 Fremont avenue. Purple fleur-de-lis graced the tea table and monogram cards marked covers for the guest of honor, Mrs. E. P. Johnson, Mrs. John Milner, Mrs. William West, Mrs. Philip D. Wilson, Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, Mrs. Walter Cosby, Mrs. Ward Chapman, Mrs. Fred Johnson, Mrs. Will Innes, Mrs. Joseph F. Bumiller, Mrs. Fred Hines, Mrs. Helen Henderson Steckel, Mrs. L. D. Sales, Mrs. Willard Doran, Mrs. John Johnston, Mrs. Arthur Waters, Mrs. Robert P. McReynolds, Mrs. David Llewellyn, Mrs. Harriett McCutcheon, Mrs. Taylor Ely, Mrs. Samuel Storrow, Mrs. W. A. Barker, Miss Bird Chanslor and Miss Lina Johnson.

The members of the Monday Evening Musical Club were entertained at the home of Mrs. Willis Tiffany, No. 821 Brent avenue. Scandinavian composers was the motif for the programme. Miss Vail read an article on Scandinavian music, followed by several solos by the hostess, accompanied by Prof. Woodmansee. After the programme light refreshments were served to fifteen members.

Mrs. John D. Reavis, No. 1102 Fair Oaks avenue, gave a luncheon at the Annandale Club yesterday afternoon, complimenting Mrs. George Russell of Seattle, a winter visitor at Long Beach, and the wife of the Seattle postmaster. A large basket filled with narcissus graced the center of the round table, and smaller baskets filled with the same flowers were given as favors. Japanese cards marked places for Mrs. Russell, Mrs. William Harrison of Los Angeles, Mrs. White of Venice, Mrs. Leuth of Seattle, Mrs. Norris Van Brunt of Venice and Mrs. Robert Gortner.

One of the very handsome parties of the week was the bridge luncheon given by Mrs. Walter Sebree and Mrs. Ernest Sutton, at the home of the former, No. 1628 Laurel street, Monday afternoon, complimentary to a bridge club of which they are members. Pink stock was used to enliven the small tables at which the luncheon was served, and which were later arranged for cards. Following the games prizes were captured by Mrs. Charles C. Hudson, Mrs. Fred Hudson, Mrs. Robert Gortner and Miss Butterfield and the guest prize by Mrs. George Patterson. Special guests present were Mrs. E. F. Hobert, Mrs. Arthur Levitt, Mrs. George Patterson, Miss Bertha Bosbyshell, Mrs. Wheaton of San Francisco and Mrs. T. C. Egleston of Denver, and members, Mrs. William H. Council, Mrs. Carl McStay, Mrs. B. F. Huntington, Miss Charlotte Butterfield, Mrs. Mary Stringfellow, Mrs. John D. Reavis, Mrs. Charles C. Hudson, Mrs. Fred Hudson, Mrs. Richard Mahon, Mrs. J. W. Monahan, Mrs. D. W. Davis, Mrs. W. D. Newerf and Miss Butterfield of Vermont.

Inglewood.

MR. AND MRS. W. G. BURGESS entertained at their home last Friday evening for their daughter, Miss Frankie May. The Burgess family moved this week to Los Angeles and this party was in the form of a farewell for the young people. The first part of the evening's entertainment consisted of a musical programme and was furnished by Sutia Putnam, Marion Oestrich, Ethel Leist and Joyce Burgess. Following the music, games were played by the young people. Delicious refreshments were served during the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McFadden and children of Santa Ana were visitors Sunday at the home of Mrs. McFadden's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Kelso.

Mrs. George Lytle of Los Angeles entertained delightfully at her home on Vermont avenue, last Friday evening, for Miss Annette Putnam of Inglewood, sister of Dr. Putnam, who is soon to become the bride of Earle van Gelder also of this place. During the musical programme which was a most enjoyable feature of the evening the doorbell rang and two large suit cases were handed in for Miss Putnam which, on being opened by her, were found to contain beautiful linen pieces of every conceivable variety from handsome bed and table sets to dainty handkerchiefs and doilies galore. Delicious refreshments were served during the evening.

Mrs. Hugh Grice entertained at a luncheon at her home on Grevillea avenue, Wednesday. Covers were laid for Mmes. Scott, Magee, Dinsmore and Thorburn.

About thirty ladies of the Methodist Episcopal Church were most delightfully entertained Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Charles Keith at her beautiful home on Queen and Eucalyptus. Readings by Mrs. P. Carroll were one of the enjoyable features of the afternoon's programme.

The members of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church held an unusually interesting meeting at the church parlors, Friday afternoon, Mrs. William Kelso, president, presiding. A number of interesting reports from the Presbyterial Society, which convened last week in Los Angeles, were read before this meeting.

The Fortnightly Study Club met Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sloper on Regent street. The subject for the evening was "The Life of Gen. Fremont." An interesting and instructive paper was read by Mr. Johnston, after which a general discussion followed by those present.

Mr. and Mrs. William Savage of Bakersfield spent the past week in Inglewood visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Stedman and Mrs. Alice Bestor.

The student body of our High School held a masquerade party in the basement of the school building Monday evening, March 11. Each member of the student body was given the privilege of inviting one guest, and about ninety young people were present to enjoy the evening's merriment. The costumes were of every variety, from the sublime to the ridiculous. The most interesting and picturesque of the costumes was the one worn by Miss Sutia Putnam, sister of Dr. Putnam, and a junior in High School. This was a buckskin dress, of a real Indian princess, and at one time the property of the Cheyenne Indians. It is most beautifully beaded and for other ornamentation has tufts of real hair from scalps taken by that tribe. This dress has been a precious heirloom in the Putnam family for a number of years. After the unmasking the young people spent the remainder of the evening playing games in the gymnasium. Dainty re-

INVEST AT ONCE IN A BOTTLE OF

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

And enjoy the charms that are so admired in a fashionable woman.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

Is a liquid powder, far surpassing the dry powders that have to be applied so frequently to gain the desired effect. It whitens, softens and clears the skin. It is absolutely free from grease, thus preventing it from encouraging the growth of hair.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

Has been in actual use for nearly three-quarters of a century, which is the surest guarantee of its superiority. If you will use it regularly, you will know why it has been popular for so many years. Any first-class druggist or department store can supply you, or on receipt of $1.50 we will send you a bottle direct.

A soft, velvety sponge must always be used for applying GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM. It is wise to procure one of

Gouraud's Oriental Velvet Sponges

In dust-proof boxes, ready for use. Price 50c each direct.

Ten cents in stamps will bring you a book of

Gouraud's Oriental Beauty Leaves

This charming little booklet of perfumed powder leaves may be slipped into the purse to use on all occasions. They are amazingly refreshing after exposure to wind, snow or dust.

Riverside.

MRS. STANLEY J. CASTLEMAN, Riverside's Lady Bountiful, whose beautiful home on Rubidoux drive is hospitably opened almost constantly during the season to her friends, entertained very charmingly Tuesday afternoon in compliment to several house guests. Four tables were arranged for pivot bridge and exquisite jeweled pins set in platinum, the prizes of the afternoon, were won by Mrs. P. K. Frankenheimer, Mrs. J. A. Strong, Miss Ethel Smith and Miss Lena Nelson of Chicago. The St. Patrick's idea was cleverly introduced in the serving of refreshments, gay little green flags waving from the mounds of ice cream, the candies being shamrock-shaped mints and the cakes and sandwiches also being shamrock-shaped. The decorations were white iris and hyacinths combined with greenery. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Castleman entertained another company of friends with informal cards.

Mrs. Arthur Brouse and Mrs. Frank Taylor were the charming hostesses at a large and very handsomely appointed card party given at the Women's Clubhouse Saturday afternoon. Twenty-seven tables were arranged and whist was played, the first prizes, a cream and sugar set and a brass clock, being taken by Mrs. Albert Miller and Miss Gertrude Hersey. The second prizes, brass fern dishes, fell to the lots of Miss Martha Waite and Mrs. W. W. Dauchy. Following the game a collation was served. The decorations were of acacia, freesias and a wealth of palms and ferns. The yellow and white idea was also introduced in the refreshments. A large number of out-of-town guests were present.

Mrs. C. M. Loring of Minneapolis was hostess at a large and very handsomely appointed luncheon given in the refectory of the Mission Inn Thursday afternoon. The large round table had for its decorations golden jonquils and freesias mingled with ferns. The favors were quaint little Riverside.

MRS. STANLEY J. CASTLEMAN, Riverside's Lady Bountiful, whose beautiful home on Rubidoux drive is hospitably opened almost constantly during the season to her friends, entertained very charmingly Tuesday afternoon in compliment to several house guests. Four tables were arranged for pivot bridge and exquisite jeweled pins set in platinum, the prizes of the afternoon, were won by Mrs. P. K. Frankenheimer, Mrs. J. A. Strong, Miss Ethel Smith and Miss Lena Nelson of Chicago. The St. Patrick's idea was cleverly introduced in the serving of refreshments, gay little green flags waving from the mounds of ice cream, the candies being shamrock-shaped mints and the cakes and sandwiches also being shamrock-shaped. The decorations were white iris and hyacinths combined with greenery. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Castleman entertained another company of friends with informal cards.

Mrs. Arthur Brouse and Mrs. Frank Taylor were the charming hostesses at a large and very handsomely appointed card party given at the Women's Clubhouse Saturday afternoon. Twenty-seven tables were arranged and whist was played, the first prizes, a cream and sugar set and a brass clock, being taken by Mrs. Albert Miller and Miss Gertrude Hersey. The second prizes, brass fern dishes, fell to the lots of Miss Martha Waite and Mrs. W. W. Dauchy. Following the game a collation was served. The decorations were of acacia, freesias and a wealth of palms and ferns. The yellow and white idea was also introduced in the refreshments. A large number of out-of-town guests were present.

Mrs. C. M. Loring of Minneapolis was hostess at a large and very handsomely appointed luncheon given in the refectory of the Mission Inn Thursday afternoon. The large round table had for its decorations golden jonquils and freesias mingled with ferns. The favors were quaint little

An Importer's Overstock—2500 Yards Maderia Embroideries

10c--15c--25c

—It has been many and many a day since we've had the opportunity to present an embroidery sale anywhere near on a par with this offering.
—Some time ago an importer came to us with samples of a certain lot of fine Madeira embroideries that he had in stock.
—He wanted to dispose of these embroideries for a lump sum. We didn't particularly need the goods, but if the price was a consideration we might take it.
—Would you believe it, we bought this embroidery.

For 66⅔% Under Value

—That is, we paid just one-third of its real worth, consequently when we offer you the lot at the three prices mentioned above, we deem it startling news indeed.
—These are fine Maderia embroideries on extra quality Longcloth and the different prices are for the different widths mentioned below.

Lot 1—Embroideries 10c

—Consists of narrow English Eyelet Madeira embroidery.
—Edges 2½ to 4½.
—2½ inch insertions on the average.
—Different widths of beading.

Lot 2—Embroideries 15c

—English eyelet patterns on fine Longcloth.
—Edges from 5½ to 12 inches wide.
—Pattern after pattern, one prettier than the other. They should go like wildfire.

Lot 3—Embroideries 25c

—When the writer was shown this lot he said, "Why, those will make a big sale at 49c." Then the buyer said, "Well, what can you do at 25c?" "Great," was the reply, and 25c is the price. We only wish there were ten times the quantity.
—Think of allovers 22 inches wide at 25c.
—Think of 24-inch flouncings at 25c.
—Think of 10 to 16½ inch corset cover embroideries and flouncings at 25c.
—We believe if this entire lot of embroideries contained ten times the quantity it would be exhausted before the day was over.

"You Certainly Have Most Beautiful Millinery —You Don't Mean to Say These Are Only $10?"

—The Broadway's display of millinery this season is so far in advance of anything we have ever presented that we are unable to express our real enthusiasm in words.
—Not only is the display remarkable from the beauty standpoint but from the standpoint of simplicity and originality, and the prices in every instance are so moderate that expressions like the one we have printed in the headline are heard frequently.
—Ever so many of the best-dressed women of Los Angeles have been talking about Broadway Millinery this season and during the Fashion Show just passed many have paid us the highest compliments.
—We are placing particular emphasis on our wonderful line at $10.00.

Two of These Hats Have Been Pictured

HAT TO THE LEFT—Is a hemp draped mushroom shape in brown. Around the crown are small roses. This charming model is built high on the right side with a novelty feather. It is a clever creation at $10.

HAT TO THE RIGHT—Is a burnt straw hemp shape with a slight side roll. A band of primrose ribbon laid low around the crown, finished with a high trimming of roses to match. A charming girlish model that can be worn by maid or matron. $10.

A Remarkable Purchase of 1500 New and Beautiful Undermuslins At 50c and $1

—Here's the result of having our representative right on the spot in the Eastern market. The opportunity came for us to secure this splendid lot of undermuslins at away below their real worth. And like a flash we took advantage of it because, first, this maker is celebrated for the splendid undermuslins they manufacture and again because the price was such an inducement. Note the details that follow.

Princess Slips $1.00

Ordinarily $1.50 to $2.00

—They're made of good quality soft muslin, trimmed with embroidery, lace and ribbon. The 27 dozen shouldn't last a day at this price.

Combination Suits $1

Ordinarily $1.50 to $2

—If you only could see these splendid combination suits and the clever way in which they are made and trimmed. Some with embroidery, lace and ribbon. Combinations of cover and drawers and corset cover and skirt. Oh, they're remarkable at $1.00.

Corset Covers 50c

—When you see them you'll wonder how it is possible for us to present them at the price.
—Some with deep yoke of insertion and edging, others with embroidery or lace beading and ribbon. 50c is a very small price for them.

$1.00 Thread Silk Stockings 75c

—The women of Los Angeles will be glad to know of this opportunity to buy splendid thread silk hose at 75c pair.
—Hosiery that even at $1 commands attention. Think, therefore, of a saving of 25 per cent.
—Made with double sole and high spliced heel. The hosiery news will bring great activity to this department Monday. Aisle 8.

Silk Boot Stockings A Monday Sale 28c Pr

—Made with strong lisle top and pure silk foot. That means silk where it shows and lisle where the wear comes. 28c is an important sale price.

Infants' Silk Hose 19c

—Pure silk, seconds of a 50c line that are made specially at 25c.
—Choice of pink, blue, white and black. This is a buying pure silk at less than lisle. 19c pair.

25c Vests 18c

—Low neck, sleeveless. Made with shield. An opportunity to save on this staple article. This item should crowd the underwear section.

Women's Vests 10c

—They're marked higher and good value at the regular price. Good quality swiss ribbed. Made with yoke and shoulder straps. 10c the Monday sale price.

New Tailored Suits--Indeed Out of the Ordinary at $17.50

—In firmly establishing the Broadway as distinctive headquarters for popular priced suits, we have put forth every effort to bring together the best possible garments at the different prices.
—But perhaps no price that we are able to present is filled with greater value meaning than these suits at $17.50.
—Suits that are new, Suits that are cleverly tailored.
—Suits that have all the earmarks of garments that sell at a great deal higher.
—In the perfect-fitting lines, in the materials, in the finish. Included are——Serges, Whipcords, Diagonals, Homespuns, Mixtures, Plain Tailored and Novelty Suits. Prominent are the cut-away models and the plain tailored effects.

One Model Pictured $17.50

—Is a handsome whipcord suit in the two-tone gray effect. Three-button cutaway coat. Wide lapels. Lined with all-silk peau de cygne. Skirt in side effect.

Another Model at $17.50

—As pictured is of navy serge. Collar, lapels and cuffs trimmed with ratine. This is also a new cutaway model. A large silk braid ornament gives a finishing touch to this suit.

Just Look at This Clever Idea Embodied in the Eppo Petticoat

—A petticoat without Drawstrings. Why, how is it possible? Ah, that's just the patented feature of the Eppo that has made it such a wonderful attraction.
—Eppo Petticoats are made with an elastic back and this is but one of the many features that will be presented to you

By the Factory Demonstrator

—who is now with us in the interest of this splendid petticoat.
—Eppo Petticoats fit like a glove, and the variety is so extensive that we are able to satisfy the wants of nearly every woman. Priced according to quality in cotton $1 to $3.75. Silk $5 to $10.

Seconds of 50c Silk Socks For Men 29c

—These are in black and the most desired plain shades.
—Fine grade thread silk made with double heel and toe.
—Classed as seconds because of slight imperfections, but the imperfections are slight indeed. Many's the man who is willing to buy these stocks at 29c in preference to paying 50c for the perfect grades.

Underwear Seconds 32c

—Seconds of a much higher priced line, combed yarn. Shirts have knitted cuffs.
—These are in ecru color. All sizes in both shirts and drawers. 32c.

25c Cashmere Socks 17c

—All sizes in these cashmere socks. Good strong Merino heel and toe.
—Even at 25c they're good value, therefore see the importance of this item at 17c. Annex.

Easter Silk Sale

Savings are Almost Unbelievable

This Silk Department has gained a city-wide reputation for Silk Values. A year ago in March we held a silk sale. Needless to say, the values made it a pronounced success.
—Therefore when the buyer went into the market in preparation for this year's event, he planned long and carefully to make this Easter Sale even of greater importance than last year's.
—For those who want the very finest silks—the silks that are most approved by Fashion—you will be able to attend this sale and buy them at prices that are startling, to say the least. For example

$1 CHIFFON TAFFETA 59c—26 inches wide, in beautiful shades of ivory, light blue, tan, reseda, gray, brown, navy, Copenhagen, Alice, pink and white.

APARTMENTS TO BE IMPOSING.

Fine Improvement for Ninth and Alvarado.

Unusual Attention Given to Exterior Design.

Building to Be Completed in Seven Months.

Working plans for a steel frame apartment hotel of the most metropolitan type, to be erected at the southwest corner of Ninth and Alvarado streets by P. L. Auten, president of the National Hardwood Company, are being completed by Architects Train & Williams. The building, which will be five stories in height and of handsome and imposing design, will cost about $160,000 and will be one of the finest structures of its kind on the Coast. It will be completed and ready for occupancy about November 1.

The site has a frontage of 150 feet on Ninth by 115 feet on Alvarado, and is in the heart of an exclusive residential district. The building itself will be 103x149 feet in size and will contain 216 rooms, divided into seventy-three apartments. A paved alley on the west will lead to a broad driveway and court gardens at the rear.

The exterior of the building will be lined with tapestry brick laid in English bond, the friezes being in diaper designs of three colors. The base will be in granite. All the trim will be of white stone and the cornice will be of the same material in a highly ornamental effect. An interesting feature of the treatment will be the use of keystones over the windows. In appearance the structure will be one of the most pleasing in the city.

The first floor entrance vestibule will be on the street level and will open directly into the lobby. The floor of this vestibule will be of tapestry brick, with Grueby tile insets. The floors will be of the same tile. Tile floors, as elsewhere in the building, a rich, harmonious color scheme will prevail.

LOBBY IN MAHOGANY.

The lobby will be large and magnificently finished in Juana Costa mahogany. From it will open a large reading-room and a ladies' parlor, both hardwood and luxuriously appointed and furnished. The parlor will open directly onto the garden court, which will be paved with vitrified brick in "herring bone" design. Small trees, seats and a handsome fountain will lend charm to the court arrangement.

The basement will be high and will contain a large and elegantly-finished dining-room, as well as billiard-rooms and writing-rooms. Here also will be found the caterers' kitchen, storage-rooms, a grocery receiving-room and delivery-room, together with the heating and power plants, the water tanks, ice storage-room, vacuum-cleaning system and garbage incinerator.

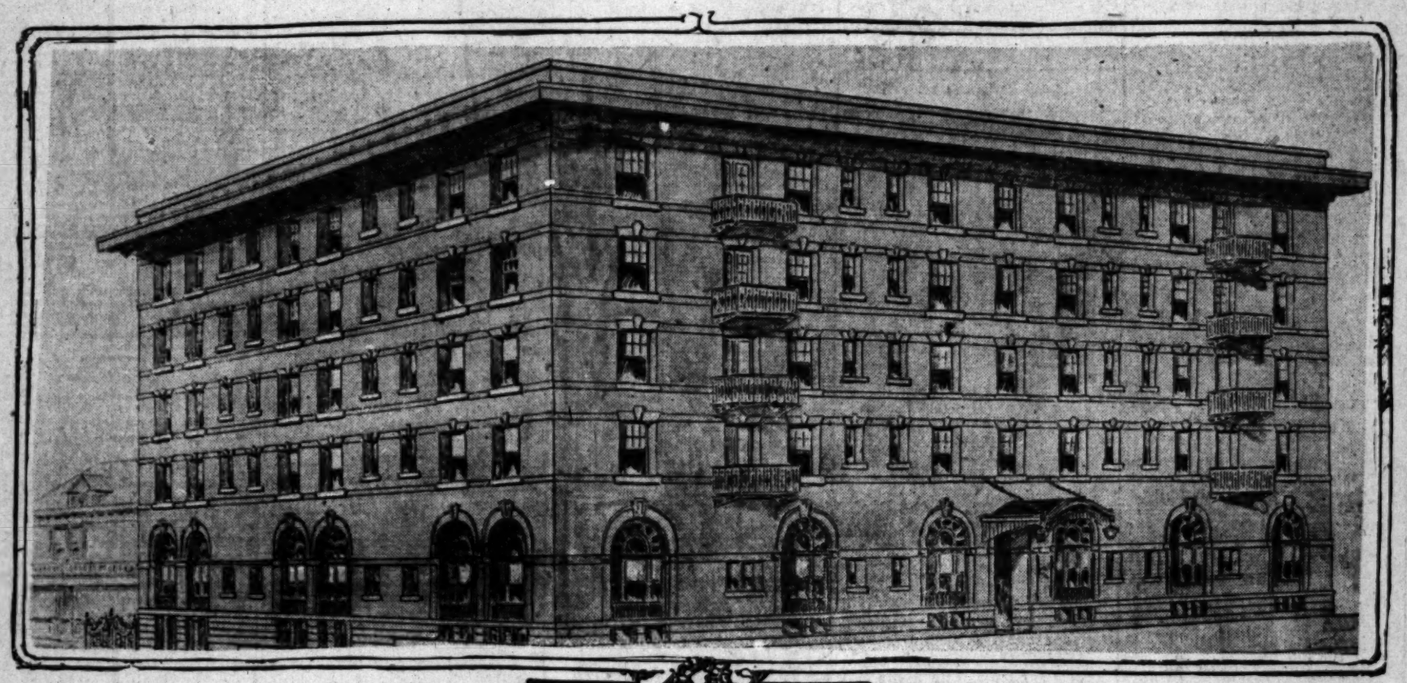
Each apartment will have its own living-room and bath, and will be fitted with a disappearing bed. The bathrooms will be finished in tile. The floors are to be of unusually large size, the interior finish of the apartments is to be of birch.

Electric passenger elevators will serve the building from basement to roof, the latter being given over to a roof garden and sun pavilion.

BUNGALOWS CHANGE HANDS.

E. T. Hunter & Co. report the sale of eight modern bungalows, located on Titus and Saturn avenues, Huntington Park, for Walter Merchant, to John S. Knox, formerly connected with the Cudahy Packing Company in Kansas City. The consideration is given at $35,000.

Steel Frame Apartment Hotel for Corner of Ninth and Alvarado Streets.



Metropolitan improvement planned by Architects Train & Williams for P. L. Auten.

FACT AND COMMENT.

Do not miss the Land Show at Fiesta Park. This, the second great soil exposition undertaken in this city, must be put down as an almost unqualified success. What the enterprise lacked in steam last year has been supplied in full measure by that peerless boosting organization, the Los Angeles Realty Board, under whose auspices the show is being held. Profiting by last year's experiences, the management has not only succeeded in assembling an exhibit of nearly double the magnitude of that previously shown, but has created an exposition that will entertain and instruct the most critical visitor.

Even if one cares absolutely nothing for the soil or its products, and, if there is such an individual, he unquestionably has never seen farming exploited in the interesting way in which the Land Show does it, the visitor at the exposition will find entertainment features a plenty to hold him. The concerts by the superb band of the famous Creatore are alone worth the daily price of admission, as is also the singing of the excellently drilled local choruses.

The city dweller who couldn't tell for the life of him tell a mangel wurtzel from a Bermuda onion will nevertheless be able to give boredom a wide birth at the Land Show Beautiful. Incidentally the visitor of this type may by a visit to Fiesta Park be enabled to see interest in a very important subject of which today he is sublimely and most unfortunately ignorant.

The Hunger for Land.

The hunger for land has come to be one of the impelling motives of the day. The "back to the land" warning of the economist has taken a firm hold on the popular imagination. The constantly rising price of food stuffs, with its ever present suggestion of market possibilities to the grower and producer, has driven the lesson home.

Modern scientific farming, the kind based upon careful experimentation and chemical and miscroscopic soil tests, has made good. By intensive cultivation the willing and intelligent grower can actually net as much from twenty acres as the old fashioned quarter-section once yielded.

The day of the old-time American farm is passing. Land all over the country is getting to be too valuable for the old slipshod methods. To have land spread all over the out-of-doors and to take from it yearly the fruits of an indifferent cultivation is what might be labeled the American method, but it is a method that is doomed. And none can respond more quickly to the changed conditions than can the average American once he learns the lesson that is so illuminatingly taught at the Land Show.

Under the great tent at Fiesta Park are to be seen the products of the small farms of the Southwest, the farms that are within the reach of the average man who longs to become a producer. The show is a gold mine of information for the man who has questions to ask about this, the modern kind of farming. At the Land Show one can learn more in an afternoon or evening about the farming possibilities of scientifically irrigated lands than he could pick up in a month of random investigation.

Government Interested.

At the Land Show one may listen to lectures on scientific agriculture by the most learned of the academic farmer scientists. The United States government has shown its interest by loaning the exposition a most comprehensive and costly exhibit as well as two of its most erudite experts to act as demonstrators. As a short course in agriculture the free stereopticon lectures at the Land Show are about the nearest approach to a dive into the curriculum of a first-class agricultural college that could be imagined. The different great railway systems having exhibits at the exposition offer lectures that are veritable "seeing the West" tours.

Expositions like that at Fiesta Park are unquestionably of great aid in the development of this section. Thanks to the liberality of the railways in offering the forty-five-day tourist rates now in operation, thousands upon thousands of visitors from the East and Middle West who would otherwise not have come across the continent are permitted to visit the Land Show and to receive the benefit of its educational features. This is practical boosting for Southern California, the kind of advertising that pays. Not only the Missourians but all their neighbors to the East and West and North and South are being "shown" at the Land Show.

Our Immigrant Teachers.

The American people are so constituted that it takes some such educational exploitation as that attempted at the Land Show to get them interested in the new kind of farming and awake to the present-day land situation. As often pointed out in these columns the American farmer has long had an object lesson worthy of his contemplation in the methods of the humble immigrants who have reclaimed so much of the abandoned soil of New England. It has never been the question of "have to" with the American farmer that it has with the poor peasant.

The average Polish or Slavonian truck gardener would smile at the perplexity of the Middle Westerner who yearns to own 160 acres of land when he can only afford to pay for twenty or ten. On this Coast the patient Chinaman with his everlasting crop rotation and his comfortable bank account has shown the way for the man who would tackle intensive cultivation. Uncle Sam with his hundreds of experimental stations and his drilling in insect pest extermination, soil chemistry, fertilization methods and crop rotation has only succeeded in bringing a part of the people of this country to a realization of what presumably less clever peoples have learned through the homely experience of fighting plain starvation.

It is a grand educational work that the agricultural schools of the land are doing and one which cannot be too earnestly supported. And fully as practical in its way is the educational influence of shows like the Pacific Lands and Products Exposition where the homeseeker, the farmer, the tourist, the horticulturist and the investor can meet to learn and to ask questions and to learn some more.

PLEASANTON SOLD.

Grand Avenue Hotel Purchased by Realty Company for Ninety Thousand Dollars.

The Hotel Pleasanton at No. 1120 South Grand avenue a three-story pressed bhick building of sixty rooms, covering a lot 60x165 feet in size on the east side of Grand avenue between Eleventh and Twelfth streets has just been sold by C. L. Bundy to Adloff Realty Company for a consideration of $90,000.

Jacob Adloff, president of the buying company, owns other Grand avenue frontage and has great faith in the future of this street. The property was bought for an investment. The price paid gives a value to the ground alone of about $850 per foot.

The purchaser was represented by L. J. Durnerin, with Mines & Farish, and the seller by Thos. C. Bundy & Company.

SALES TOTAL LARGE.

The A. E. Halsey Company announces sales during the last ninety days as follows: Lot on Eighth street, between Olive and Grand avenue, 40x140 feet, Merchants Bank & Trust Company to a local investor. Property at No. 622 South Hope street, lot 45x167 feet, estate of J. A. Brown and A. Bramble to A. E. Halsey. Property at No. 739 South Flower street, lot 40x165 feet, W. J. Van Houten to a local investor. Property at No. 842 South Flower street, lot 45x155 feet, local investors to R. T. Jones. Property at No. 1022 South Grand avenue, lot 50x155 feet, Warner Estate to Ralph Coddington. Property at No. 846 Westlake avenue, lot 50x150 feet, Mrs. J. Kelly to A. E. Moffatt. Lot on Grand View, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, Mrs. A. Latham to Ella Eagleson.

NOTEWORTHY TRANSFERS.

Early Development of Two Fine Tracts in Southwest Assured. Oil Men Buy Baldwin Acres.

Notable among the realty transactions of the past week was the purchase by George H. Peck from the McAnny Company of 125 acres at the northwest corner of Western and Florence avenues for a consideration of $225,000. The sale, which was reported exclusively in The Times, was made through the agency of Bryan & Bradford. Through the same agency Mrs. Chas. Connolly Waldberg sold to a local investor 160 acres at the southeast corner of Cypress and Florence avenues for a consideration of $250,000. Both tracts are to be developed as high-class residence subdivisions.

Another important deal of the week, made through the same agency, was the sale to Mrs. Irvine Waldberg of 100x200 feet in Westmoreland place for a consideration of $12,500. The buyer will improve the site with a beautiful residence to cost not less than $40,000. This is one of a number of similar mansions projected for the same exclusive subdivision for early construction.

Another noteworthy sale was the acquisition by a number of local oil men, represented by Edwin G. Hart, of 324 acres of the old Rancho La Mercedes, formerly owned by "Lucky" Baldwin, and situated just east of Montebello. The property was bid in at court sale and brought $152,000. It is the intention of the purchasers to divide the property into fifteen-acre tracts to be improved as country home sites.

MANY NEW HOMES.

Permits for Residences Predominate in Building Figures Covering March Construction Activities.

From March 1 to March 15, inclusively, the Chief Inspector of Buildings issued permits to the number of 515 for new structures of all kinds. These represent buildings to cost a total of $717,823. The figures for the corresponding period of last year were 401 permits and $1,139,404 valuation. The drop in valuation is accounted for by the fact that the permit for the $700,000 Union Oil building at Seventh and Spring was issued early in March of last year.

Of the permits issued to date for the month it is interesting to note that 224 were taken out by home builders and that the new dwellings called for will represent an aggregate outlay of $533,954. It is not unlikely that a new record for the number of permits issued in a single month for new houses will be established before April 1.

Following is the classified report for the month to date:

	Per.	Val.
Class C	10	$108,150
Class D, 1-story frame	174	248,512
Class D, 1½-story frame	5	11,600
Class D, 2-story frame	45	273,842
Sheds, barns (frame)	118	17,464
Foundations only	2	2,400
Brick alterations	34	20,895
Frame alterations	126	34,910
Demolitions	1	50
Total	515	$717,823

CHICAGOAN PAYS CASH.

A reported consideration of $110,000 cash was last week paid by Edwin Heming to the Isaacs Bros. Company for forty feet on the south side of Seventh street between Olive and Grand and immediately adjoining the site of the eleven-story office block to be erected by John Brockman at Seventh and Grand. The property has a depth of 110 feet. The deal was handled through the agency of R. A. Rowan & Company. Heming, who is a wealthy Chicagoan, bought for investment.

BUYS VALUABLE CORNER.

The northeast corner of West Adams street and Adams place has been sold to a local investor by the National Bank of California. The property is 145x150 feet in size and is one of the most desirable corners on West Adams street, being surrounded by many fine homes. The sale was made by John G. Staub of the Tatum-Winstanley Company, representing the seller, and Hugh K. Walker, Jr., of S. R. Earnest & Co., representing the buyer. The consideration is said to be close to $20,000.

They Come.

GREETINGS WITH TEARLESS EYES.

PARENTS OF VIOLA CARVER HUG AND KISS HER.

Emotions Are Suppressed in Public, but Father and Mother Stand by Their Daughter—Listen Behind Closed Doors to Her Story, Understood by Them for First Time.

There wasn't a tear shed when Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Carver, of Tacoma, met their daughter, Miss Viola Carver, the slayer of J. Edwin Edge, No. 939 South Hope street, in the matron's quarters at the Central Police Station late yesterday afternoon.

The girl was standing in the middle of the room when her father and mother, accompanied by another man and woman, friends of the family, entered. She had been expecting her parents for some hours so was not surprised when the steel outer door was opened and they were ushered into her presence.

Mrs. Carver was the first to speak. As she put her arms around her daughter and kissed her, she remarked, in a most matter-of-fact way:

"Well, we are here, girlie."

A slight smile spread over the girl's face as she looked up at her mother, and then directing her gaze to her father, replied:

"I'm glad you are here."

The father put one arm around his daughter's shoulders, and gave her a more hearty kiss than did the mother. He spoke to his child gently but she was not affected to tears. Shortly afterwards the father left the matron's quarters to telephone to attorneys. Not in the presence of others was any reference made to the killing of Edge.

During Carver's absence an endeavor was made to secure an interview with Mrs. Carver, but she refused to see any one, sending out by the matron the statement:

"I have absolutely nothing to say under any circumstances."

Carver was quite willing to talk. He said:

"I don't know what to say. We have just gotten here and know less about the case than you do. We came just as quickly as we could. I have seen my daughter, taken her in my arms and kissed her, to let her know she was in the hands of friends. I know you boys would like to have a column and a half story, and if I knew how to give it to you, I would.

"How long we are to remain in Los Angeles I do not know. Where we will stay while in the city I do not know. I have not even seen the attorneys, who appeared for the girl. After I have seen them and had a talk and learn a few facts, why, perhaps then I may be in a position to say something. At any time I'm willing to tell you anything I may know."

Carver is a small man with iron-gray hair and gray eyes. He wears an almost incessant smile which has wrinkled his features. While he fully appreciates the predicament his daughter is in, he has sufficient control over his emotions not to show it.

Shortly before 4 o'clock Carver returned to the station in company with Manager Clark of the Hotel Snow. They were soon followed by the attorneys who have become interested in the case. They were all closeted with Miss Carver for more than an hour. None of them had any remarks of moment to make as they left the station.

Miss Carver will be arraigned before Police Judge Chambers at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Later she will be removed to the County Jail.

WORSE THAN THE REVOLUTION.

It was a strenuous day yesterday for C. Cortez, a young Mexican. He began drinking early and soon ran out of money. He could not borrow so he stole an overcoat and when the alarm was given he was chased some blocks by Chauffeur Cole, driving the police patrol. On giving up the overcoat he was released but while en route home was knocked down and slightly injured by a motorcyclist at San Fernando and Ord streets. He was removed to the Receiving Hospital in the same patrol by which he has been chased earlier in the day.

Los Angeles' Magnificent Setting with a background of mountain ranges and foreground of ocean blue can only be fully appreciated by a visit to

Mount Washington

This is Los Angeles' only real view property, and it is the only section of the city which, for topographical reasons, will remain always exclusive and free from the encroachments felt by other districts of the ever-widening circle of barns, garages, livery stables, etc. Accessible in twenty minutes by auto out N. Main. Take Yellow Garvanza car to Avenue 43.

ELEGANT MISSION RESIDENCE.
HIGH, SIGHTLY CORNER.
$37,500 $37,500 $37,500

A new elegant 11-room mission style residence, recently completed by the owner for his permanent home, located on absolutely the highest, most sightly and choice corner nearly 100x150 feet in size, West Adams Heights, commanding a magnificent view of the city and mountains that never can be obstructed. Streets are paved and surrounded by the handsomest homes in the city. The first floor consists of reception hall, reception parlor, large living-room, exposed to the two streets, large dining-room, a conservatory, also a den; pass pantry and kitchen, all in white enamel finish, beautiful fixtures, there are many French glass doors opening onto porches front and rear, which, together with the many windows permits the flooding of the house with light and sunshine; large handsome stairway in white, with mahogany trim, leads to the second floor, where there are five sleeping rooms, two tiled baths, dressing-rooms, etc. The roof is of tile. A garage, basement, with gas furnace and automatic water heater, completes one of the most desirable properties it has ever been our good fortune to offer. Ordinarily the price of such a property would be something like $50,000.

A WILSHIRE BEAUTY.
—$12,000— —$13,000— —$13,000—

Right on Wilshire blvd., we have one of the finest homes in the city, just nearing completion. It is exclusive throughout, finish in Peruvian mahogany, old English oak and white enamel all hand rubbed, large living room, handsomest hall and stairway in city. Maid's room and bath off screen porch, large conservatory off living room, also light cheerful breakfast room, four large charming sleeping rooms, large sleeping porch, two beautifully tiled baths and shower, besides dressing room and large closets on second floor. Decorations and fixtures in keeping with rest of house. There is large garage with man's room. In fact, you will agree with us there is nothing in city to compare with it under $25,000, all things considered. If you are in the market for such a home you cannot afford to miss seeing it.

WILSHIRE SPECIAL BARGAIN.
—$11,000— —$11,000— —$11,000—

This beautiful 11-room house, just off the boulevard, is a real bargain. Worth $12,500. Reception hall, living-room and library finished in mahogany, dining-room in fumed oak, finish is first quality; decorations are all of hand work by one of the finest artists in California; hardwood throughout; handsome sleeping-rooms and sleeping porch; attic; three baths, large gas furnace, automatic water heater; large fine garage for two machines; house less than a year old; nothing like it for the price in the city. Phone or call on us for appointment.

BEAUTIFUL 9 ROOMS
NEAR WILSHIRE.
—$9250— —$9250— —$9250—

This elegant 9-room house, just completed, is one of the best values we have had. Large cement porch across front; oak floors throughout; woodwork all hand-rubbed to beautiful piano finish; decorations and lighting fixtures very handsome and in best taste; Gruby tile mantel; four charming sleeping rooms and sleeping porch, two baths, good basement, furnace, automatic water heater, garage, etc. Among handsome homes. Nothing like it in city under $10,000.

GRAMERCY BARGAIN
$6250 $6250 $6250

This modern 7-room bungalow is up to date in every detail. On a large 60-foot lot, hardwood floors throughout, nicely decorated, handsome finish and fixtures, cozy breakfast-room in delft blue, tile bathroom, furnace, cement drive and garage. This place never occupied, owner has held firm at $6500 and is the equal in every way of other places near that have sold for $6500, but he is now anxious to sell and we can deliver a bargain in this property to a bonafide buyer.

WESTCHESTER PLACE.
FOURTEEN-ROOM RESIDENCE.
$27,500. $27,500.

You may look the city over and not find as grand a building site as the one on which this mansion of a home is located. Westchester Place has high building restrictions, private paved and lighted streets. Wide highly improved parkings, lots that are 120x150 or larger, and other very desirable features that make this an ideal and exclusive residence district. The lots alone sell for $100 to $150 per front foot. We have a beautiful new mission residence that will compare favorably with any $40,000 home in the city. The lot is 120x150 and highly improved. Very imposing exterior. Broad porches and balconies. Selected hardwoods are used throughout main rooms or first floor. Five beautiful bedroom and two tile baths, beside servants' rooms and bath. Every convenience and comfort known to modern architecture are incorporated into making this one of the finest and most modern houses in the city. We can show you real value in a house already built.

A HUNDRED DOLLARS
BUYS A REAL HOME IN
ELLIOTT PLACE,
"THE TRACT BEAUTIFUL."

Starting in April, 1911, the original HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES, of the Douglas Building, undertook the development of a beautiful 45-acre mesa of land lying on the San Fernando Boulevard at the entrance to the Eagle Rock Valley.

High-class improvements were installed and numerous handsome homes constructed for the officers of the company and for many of its stockholders. Three lots were devoted to tract tennis courts and children's playground with play-houses, wading pool, sanitary drinking fountain, swings, teeter boards, merry-go-rounds and benches installed. Another lot was devoted to a handsome two-story Swiss Chalet building completely equipped with a grocery and house-supply stock, the ownership of this tract store being retained by the company.

Streets were scientifically and thoroughly graded with a surface of 5 inches of decomposed granite, topped with an 80 per cent. asphaltic oil and sand finish, being thoroughly packed and rolled and giving practically an asphalt street. Steel water mains with service connections inside the curb line for each of the 199 lots in the tract were put in and gas mains were laid before the street surfacing was done, thus making unnecessary the future tearing up of the completed roadways.

Cement curbs, gutters and 5-foot walks laid throughout the tract; 10-foot parkways set with palms and black acacias were provided. Highly ornamental light posts at each of the four corners at all of the street intersections were installed with hollow cement caps equipped to illuminate the street signs at night. The entire 45 acres were graded to give an effective contour to the subdivision.

Definite policies were fixed in advance and restrictions provided as follows:

No house or lot would be sold to any person without a prior investigation being made as to his character, habits and responsibility; all houses must be set back 35 feet from the street front; no fences except of one approved design would be allowed, and none of them to come nearer than 65 feet from the front; thus insuring a clear sweep of lawns fronting on the streets; all lots were made of generous size with the lines so arranged as to fit the lay of the land; a durable and attractive waiting station for the residents was built on the Eagle Rock Valley car line and a branch tract office provided for therein.

A handsome 4-room bungalow complete with lawn, fences, walks, gas and electric fixtures, window shades and screens, shed, ready to occupy may be purchased for $2150, $100 cash, balance $21.50 monthly.

This home and the scores of other attractive structures in Elliott Place should be inspected by every prospective home owner in Los Angeles. Take an Eagle Rock Valley car north bound on Spring street and alight at our branch office at Hinstock avenue. Agent is there; or call Main 2900, A2900 for an appointment to go out in our auto; or see us at our offices.

CONTRACTORS— And Builders.

CONTRACTORS AND BUILDERS— HERE ARE YOUR QUICK PROFITS. BUILD ON COLLEGE TRACT LOTS WHERE THERE IS READY SALE FOR BUNGALOWS.

A good location is the chief factor in selling bungalows quickly. The neighbors' houses help sell yours.

You can make big money buying and building on College Tract lots. Bungalow homes in this highly improved subdivision sell on sight. College Tract is the cheapest high-class building property in Los Angeles, in the center of great southwest activity.

COLLEGE TRACT LOTS.

Every lot improved with lawn and fences. Curbing and cement walks in and paid for. Oil paved streets and wide parkings. No unsightly lots in the tract.

Sewers, water, gas, electricity, telephones, postoffice, churches, assembly hall, model stores and a three-minute car service make College Tract the most desirable moderate priced locality in Los Angeles. Every lot surrounded by high-class bungalows.

Bed-rock prices assure you a good margin of profit. Turn your money quickly.

Gramercy Place lots $950 to $1300. Monthly payments if desired.

DU RAY PLACE.

The Tract of Opportunity.

By far the cheapest good property ever offered in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES INVESTMENT COMPANY, 233-235-237 So. Hill st. 60127; Main 2248.

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF.

DU RAY PLACE

is the highest ground in the vicinity.

Compare its location and the improvements now being actively pushed, with those of other tracts. Compare the prices and terms. Take West Adams through car. Autos waiting at the end of the line to show you the property.

You can secure a lot in

for

$250 and up.

$10 down and $10 a month, including interest.

And when we say $10 down, that is exactly what we mean. You can pick out the

CHOICEST LOT IN DU RAY PLACE

for a $10 payment. You will not be asked to pay $5 or 10 per cent of the total in order to secure a good lot when you get to the tract. This subdivision will have all

IMPROVEMENTS IN AND PAID FOR.

Oiled streets, with cement curbs and gutters, permanent cement sidewalks. All construction the best. Graders already working on the tract. Cement work to start at once.

BE AMONG THE FIRST

Prosperous and thriving Los Angeles is growing toward the southwest.

LOCATION IS THE KEYNOTE,

and makes the value. We have it, also the environments.

You have within your grasp

A RARE OPPORTUNITY

By Investing at

DU RAY PLACE.

A purchase at this opportune time will without doubt return to the buyer immense profits.

Los Angeles is rapidly going to the front as a favored place of residence—in fact, it is a regular Mecca for the homeseekers coming West.

It is bound to grow—it will have to grow to provide homes for the constant influx of people.

BUILDING ACTIVITY IS AT ITS HEIGHT.

Contracts have been let for the construction of 40 BUNGALOWS.

This means an immediate and substantial INCREASE IN VALUES.

DU RAY PLACE

is rightly called beautiful.

Trees and shrubbery will be abundant. Nature has done her part to make it beautiful; we are doing our part in offering you this opportunity. You do your part and grasp this investment while the low opening prices prevail.

DU RAY PLACE

adjoins the West Adams section, where lots sell for $5000 to $30,000 each.

This popular new tract is sure to prove an ideal home site.

The soil is not a hard clay, but having previously been a bountifully producing truck farm it is adapted to the growth of vines, roses and flowers, which will make your future home attractive.

Close enough to the commercial center to reach your office readily, and far enough from the downtown district to get the cool, bracing breeze from the ocean.

A short ride to the surf.

DO NOT DELAY.

These lots have been selling rapidly throughout the rainy days.

They sell because all who see them realize they are exactly what they have long been searching for.

Don't put it off and have nothing but regrets to pay for your negligence.

For investment or home purposes this is the ideal spot for the man of moderate means.

COME OUT AND SEE THE TRACT.

ELLIOTT PLACE

"THE TRACT BEAUTIFUL"

Consider the future of the high, sightly homesites in the northern portion of Los Angeles. The development of San Pedro Harbor and the commercializing of the district south of the city will go hand in hand tending to injure the desirability of that location for residences. The better class homes are going and will continue to increase in the healthier, higher, sightlier north.

Forty handsome bungalow homes have already been erected in ELLIOTT PLACE by the original HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES, built to meet its motto of "best built bungalows" thorough in construction, attractive in design and complete in every detail. Each home is equipped with lawn, walks, fences, electric fixtures, gas heater, multitudes of built-in features, window shades and screens.

Prices have been fixed at more than reasonable figures; lots can be purchased for from $700 up, on terms of $25 cash and $10 monthly; complete homes ready to move into may be purchased for from $2150 up, on terms of 10 per cent. cash and 1 per cent. per month on our very equitable contract, which provides that the monthly payment covers taxes, interest, fire insurance and all street assessments, making the terms "same as rent."

From ELLIOTT PLACE, a gorgeous view of the hills of Griffith and Elysian Parks, Mt. Washington, the Glendale foothills, Mt. Lowe, Mt. Wilson and the other impressive peaks of the Sierra Madres may be had. This wonderful property should be visited by every resident of Los Angeles and particularly by every prospective home owner.

Take the Eagle Rock Valley car northbound on Spring street, and in twenty-five minutes the conductor will have you alight at ELLIOTT PLACE STATION at the foot of Hinstock avenue, where courteous tract agents are always present, ready to exhibit our real homes and our lovely lots; or call at our offices on the fourth floor of the Douglas building, northwest corner of Third and Spring streets, or PHONE Home A3000 or Main 2960 and we shall be happy to send our automobile to take you to the property.

BEAUTIFUL LOTS $550, $600, $700. $25 CASH—$10 A MONTH.

Don't be a mere looker on. Don't be satisfied with a worthless bunch of rent receipts. Join the army of investors and home buyers at Sierra Park. Own one of these splendid lots—$550 and up on our easy terms. Bank your money here—then watch it grow. Pasadena and Los Angeles are fast welding together. Sierra Park is midway between on Huntington Drive. An ideal suburban property.

Only 30 minutes from theater and shopping center. Splendid car service. Electricity, gas, water, cement walks and curbs, graded streets and tree-lined parkways.

TO GO: Take "El Molino and Local" car in Pacific Electric Building, or anywhere on Main street to First, and get off at Sierra Park Station. Or, come to this office for free transportation. Agent is on property from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. daily, including Sundays. Come out today.

FOR SALE—

JUST THINK OF IT.
About 80 acres of land right at intersection of Adams and Washington street (fronting Washington,) for only $1050 per acre. It will subdivide and sell right away for $2500 per acre.
It seems incredible that there is anything left in this locality at $1050, but this is straight goods with no joker.
Owner is non-resident lady. Has never seen the land and don't realize its value. It takes half cash in real money to buy it. No shoestring payment or hot air goes. As a syndicate proposition, this has the rest of the bunch beaten to a frazzle.

FOR SALE—

What to buy? Buy Real estate.
When to buy? Buy Now.
Where to buy? Buy in the line of the city's mighty progress to the Los Angeles harbor, in a locality that has license to become the center of activity in the way of progress and developments, both in business and residence property.
5 acres, 10, 20 to 25-acre tracts.
Prices ranging from $2500 to $3000 per acre. The five-acre tract has six-room house with gas in for lighting and cooking purposes and has outbuildings, well and windmill. The soil is par excellent, the drainage perfect, the elevation commanding.
These tracts lie between Central ave. and Compton blvd. and south of Foreso avenue. Central avenue is 80 feet in width to the south boundary line of said tracts and paved as far south as the north boundary line, excepting between Florence and Slauson aves. Certainly these tracts have a very bright future for subdivision purposes and will be so recognized by the shrewdest speculators and the most conservative investors.
These tracts are owned and controlled and for sale by E. A. Ingram and are offered for a limited time only and subject to change of price without notice. Splendid terms, about one-half cash, most of which will run on or before five years at 6 and 7 per cent. interest.

BUSINESS PROPERTY.

$35,000.

A CORNER

140x213.

I am offering for sale one of the finest industrial sites, a corner near 7th and Mateo st., right in the heart of the wholesale district, with spur track in rear; large sites are getting very scarce and in demand, mortgage $15,000 at 7 per cent. 2 years to run. Might consider some exchange. I can get you tenant for this property that will pay 12 per cent. on your investment if you will improve with warehouse.

$14,000.

80x120.

Improved with good buildings and leased for a term of years to responsible people. Present income $140 per month, netting better than 13 per cent. on the investment. This property is close in and where things are doing; mortgage $6200, 7 per cent., 2 years. This is absolutely good.

$4700.

80x132.

Improved with frame building, leased—for a term of years with machine shop and laundry. Income, $77.50 per month, mortgage $3000 at 7 per cent., 2 years. This property is also close in. Why loan your money when you can buy this class of property?

$4000.

LOT 50x150.

18TH AND SAN PEDRO.

Splendid location for large laundry or warehouse. This is absolutely $1000 under the market price. This will make you some money. Terms if desired.

$5000.

120x140.

Close to 9th and Santa Fe Ave.

Salt Lake spur on property to double alley. The cheapest location in the city for warehouse or factory. Look this up at once or you will be sorry. Terms.

$7800.

132x140.

Santa Fe Ave. near 9th.

With Salt Lake spur in rear. Just think of this for a snap. Will double in value in one year; $2000 cash.

FOR SALE—

BUY ACREAGE.

WATCH YOUR MONEY GROW.

And buy in the line of the city's growth, between the City of Los Angeles and San Pedro Harbor. Either one will double the value of your property. Buy an acre or more at Richland Farms, the best located and most convenient tracts around Los Angeles. Only two blocks of the Long Beach car line, the best suburban car line out of the city, 180 trains per day; only 15 minutes from Sixth and Main. Each tract equal to five city lots, at a price less than one good lot in the city. Subdivide your tract later into lots and your money will be more than doubled. A fine place for a residence; a rich, dark loam soil that will grow anything from onions to oranges. The largest chicken ranch in the county close by proves its advantages for growing chickens. Water piped to every tract and oiled streets. School within three blocks; all the conveniences of the city, and you have a country estate. We run two automobile excursions daily from our office, at 9:30 and 2:00, including Sundays. Let us take you out to see the best investment proposition around the city. Go see the magnificent view of valley trees and mountains from our land. Prices $700 to $1000, according to location; easy terms to suit you. Be sure and go now as we have sold over half of the tract in eight weeks and prices will soon be advanced.

LANKERSHIM.
$15,000.

15 acres right on the new Van Nuys car line, 100 feet from the good roads boulevard. Set solid to the choicest of table peaches, apricots, plums, berries and grapes. Absolutely no irrigation for the soil is of the very richest and deepest. Improved with 5-room house, barn, tank, windmill. Only 2 blocks from bank, stores and postoffice. Right in town. A $10,000 residence going up next door. The cream of Lankershim. Just over the pass from Hollywood. Now to the point, this place as an ideal suburban home has a definite income of over $3600 a year. And, as a residence subdivision it is ready now. One street through the center and it's done. Some people are going 8 and 7 miles further out and paying big prices for country homes on bare land. Who are the people making the big money? Answer, the subdivider. Here is your opportunity now. A present home and assured income. A definite quick profit when you want to let go. When you talk to the man who has foresight enough to buy right. $5000 cash will handle this. Call on.

FOR SALE—

SONOMA COUNTY

4700 acres, 10 miles of ocean frontage, two boat landings, first class fruit and potato land; dry feed knee-deep; lots of green grass; 15 inches of rain already. This is all good land and ready for subdivision. A direct grant from Spain. Has large cow barns and lots of other buildings; assessed at $63,000. Has been rented for $2000 in advance, per annum. This is the first time it has been offered for sale, and it can be bought for $30 per acre. It is located north of San Francisco.

5000 acres, range and farm lands. Now belongs to a northern bank. 3 houses with furniture and plenty of farm implements; fenced with 4 and 5 wire fence; first-class range; automobile road to coast runs 7 miles through this ranch; railroad now building close to property; timber cruised by bank before making a loan, showed 9,000,000 feet of redwood and 15,000,000 feet of pine timber; lots of oak. This place has been in possession of the bank only a few weeks. It can be secured by small payment down, and two years terms on the balance. Price $15 per acre.

FRESNO COUNTY.

Modern hotel building, 3 stories, 40 large bedrooms, also large dining and commercial rooms, ¼ block of lots. Garage, bar license costing only $300 per year. This is an exceptionally fine hotel proposition over paying well. The building alone cost more than the price asked which is $20,000, 1-3 cash, balance 3 equal annual payments. This property is located in one of the best towns in valley.

Six and half sections of good land free from alkali and hardpan, four miles from railroad. Large water developments on adjoining land. Price for immediate sale, $25 per acre, 1-4 cash, balance in five years.

TULARE COUNTY SECTION.

640 acres, one mile from Terre Bella company lands. Highly improved, all fenced; 200 acres summer fallowed wheat, balance winter sowing; all in good shape; first-class orange land, and especially fine for olive culture. One of the very best buys in San Joaquin Valley. In right in line of improvements on large scale by railroads. Price for immediate sale $100 per acre; 20 per cent. down, good terms on balance at 6 per cent. The lands adjoining have just been sold to a large fruit company from the south, through my office. If you want to invest for profit in this valley why not get the benefit of my 20 years residence up there? The Porterville banks will tell you that I bought raw lands in large tracts, cut it up 8 years and the same property for 15 times more than it cost. I have placed others, why not you?

At a bargain, one of the best 10-acre, 4-year-old groves (Navels and Valencias) in Porterville district, on oiled road; plenty of water and some improvements; in first-class condition; price $7000; half cash, balance good terms.

Also 20 acres with $1100 worth of improvements; 10 acres of 4-year-old Navels and 10 acres leveled and ready to plant. This, with ample cheap water and with location unsurpassed, at $10,000, half cash, is one of the best buys in the Porterville District, midway between Lindsay and Porterville.

Also 878-acre delta land; extra fine soil; covered with willow, oak and cane; large, fine 2-story house, with fruit; also barn and other buildings; hog-tight fencing; all this, with 150 acres of fine alfalfa, makes this a place a rare bargain at $125 per acre.

If you want a ground-floor proposition in line of large developments, write or call on PAY $50.00 DOWN.

THEN 18 MONTHLY

PAYMENTS OF

$9.25 EACH.

After the above payments have been made, if the land is being improved we will allow payments to be suspended until November 1, 1914. Then the balance in annual payments.

Will sell as many acres as may be desired under the same conditions.

This is a rare chance to acquire a piece of the choicest irrigated land in the San Joaquin Valley.

LAND WILL PAY PURCHASE PRICE.

Immediate possession will be given and a few cows or a flock of chickens will give sufficient returns to provide funds for all future payments and improvements.

OPPORTUNITY FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

To the young man or lady holding a position in the city this proposition should appeal with striking force. Arrangements can be made to have the land cultivated, cropped and improved until such time as it seems advisable to go on the property. Many owners are netting as much as $50 per acre rental per year.

Soil, water and climate the best and everything right for stock, alfalfa, sweet potatoes, berries, poultry or fruit.

No pioneering. Near railroads, schools and churches, creamery, cannery and packing-houses.

It's land that will make comfortable living and independence for the owner.

A LARGE ACREAGE IN PEACHES.

There are 534,750 peach trees in the county and during 1911 the prices realized on the crop ranged from $20 to $40 per ton. The Merced peach is of such a high grade that the prices realized for them make the growers independent as soon as the trees begin bearing.

LIVINGSTON SWEETS ARE MORTGAGE LIFTERS.

Merced Sweets have a market of their own and during 1911, up to November 1, the growers had received for the sweet potatoes shipped $585,000. Since November 1 there has been shipped about $78,000 worth of sweets, making a total of $523,000 worth to go out of the county for the 1911 crop.

FIVE ACRES NETS $1350.

Mr. Joe Lawrence, of Livingston, planted his five acres to sweet potatoes in 1911 and received $1350 for his crop. Many others are receiving equally high returns from their five and ten-acre tracts.

TOMATOES A BANNER CROP.

Tomatoes are one of the banner crops also. S. Pregno & Son netted $1200 from one acre planted to tomatoes and many fortunes are being made by those planting this crop. They ripen early and bring a very high price.

LAND ADAPTED TO FIGS.

Our Livingston lands are specially adapted to the Smyrna fig and it is no uncommon occurrence for a Merced fig raiser to net $500 per acre for his fig crop.

BERRIES, ALSO.

A crop easily handled and very profitable is berries. Many places have been paid for entirely from such crops.

COUNTY LEADS IN DAIRYING.

Dairying is another of the great industries of the county and during 1911 the dairy product amounted to $1,781,690.

Alfalfa should not be overlooked in mentioning the money making crops of Merced county, as from five to six crops are harvested each year, and the yield is very heavy, frequently making ten tons per acre per year.

ON THE RAILROAD.

Livingston, Merced county, is on the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and is surrounded by as fine a body of land as is to be found in the State.

A CHOICE BODY OF LAND.

The Orchard and Farm Lands Company, 215 Mercantile Place, Los Angeles, is the general sales agent for what is known as the Smith & Sweet Tract, lying just south west of Livingston, and which is indeed a beautiful body of land, and we can sell in tracts from five acres up.

WATER DITCHED TO EVERY TRACT.

The water is ditched to every tract and a perpetual water right included with every sale or contract.

LAND WILL DO THE WORK.

THAT if taken immediate possession of and farmed to sweet potatoes or any other of the many crops the returns from the land will far more than pay the entire purchase price within three years.

Our land is practically surrounded by established colonies and the experimental point has been passed, and we only ask of you to

WANTED. $25,000.
I want an associate, active or not, with $25,000 in a land and farming enterprise near Brawley, Cal. I will give one half interest. Have 735 acres excellent land. Direct ownership, partially mortgaged, on largest portion, balance being purchased under easy contract. A large portion under cultivation. Money to be used on purchase contract, grading, planting of trees, full development and current expenses. With the improvements made with this money the proposition will be worth more than $100,000. Under present development raising corn and cotton it will pay this year $30,000 gross; 20 per cent. net. I want to set out dates, apricots, grapes and early shipping crops. Income with development will easily pay off incumbrances. I prefer to associate with one that can carry the incumbrances at reasonable rate. This proposition is exceptional, the values are here and easily seen. In 10 years this property will be worth a half-million dollars. I am a practical farmer and I will make the man who associates with me, a rich man inside of ten years. For full particulars. Address box 28, TIMES OFFICE.

But to make it make good.
Ay! there's the rub.
No. 1—1300 Acres, $23,000.
No. 2—1700 Acres, $43,000.

Located close to railroad, fine climate, good surroundings.

Each place is fenced into several fields, fair buildings, well watered by never-failing creek and springs; has many fine 5 and 6 oak trees. These are not sage brush or barren ranges. The proportion of pasture land—growing an abundance of nutritious grasses—and plow land —well suited to the growth of alfalfa, beans, sorghum and corn for ensilage—is well balanced. An ideal fancy stock ranch for an energetic, ambitious, brainy farmer, who wants to grow all his feed and feed all he grows. Several hundred acres is high-class deciduous fruit land. This is a good year to select a ranch, defects are plainly visible. This class of property is limited, will go low for a premium as it falls into capable hands. Don't argue, get into action; drop me a letter for full particulars; say you mean business and where you can be found.

If I don't, I lose, not you. Do it now.

L. J. C. SPRUANCE CO.,
1002-4 TITLE INSURANCE BLDG.

FOR SALE—1700 ACRES CITRUS FRUIT land; located in the famous orange and lemon section of Southern California, Riverside; the lands are practically free from defects, being almost level, the soil of that quality so highly prized by grovemen, and, best of all, situated right near a progressive, modern, up-to-date city; only a few minutes drive from packing-house conveniences, electric cars, school, churches, postoffice and general trading center; this fine tract of land being separated only by a low range of hills from a section of Riverside where bearing orange and lemon groves extend as far as the eye can see in endless number; this so-called frostless citrus land with irrigating water (which can be developed,) would be worth five times the present asking price of $75 per acre. Owner might consider part trade. Address WHIPPLE, 147 S. Broadway, Los Angeles.

FOR SALE—ALFALFA RANCHES.

20 acres fine stand of alfalfa, abundance of water, close to Pomona, house and barn, $2500 cash, balance easy.

25 acres between Pomona and Chino, perfect stand of alfalfa, new pumping plant, abundance of water, new modern bungalow and barn.

BRADLEY & EELLS,
Pomona Office, 229-1 Story Bldg.
111 W. 2d St. 8th & Broadway.

FOR SALE—JUST 45 MINUTES FROM HOUSTON. The greatest land sale in Texas is taking place. Write quick; it's a big choice tract of land, just 30 miles northwest of Houston, for sentiment, now open for settlement; is cheap and can be had on easy terms; down there they clear from $100 to $500 an acre in figs and other fruits, pecans and vegetables; these are not sage brush or barren ranges. The proportion of pasture land—growing an abundance of nutritious grasses—and plow land —well suited to the growth of alfalfa, beans, sorghum and corn for ensilage—is well balanced. An ideal fancy stock ranch for an energetic, ambitious, brainy farmer, who wants to grow all his feed and feed all he grows. Several hundred acres is high-class deciduous fruit land. This is a good year to select a ranch, defects are plainly visible. This class of property is limited, will go low for a premium as it falls into capable hands. Don't argue, get into action; drop me a letter for full particulars; say you mean business and where you can be found.

If I don't, I lose, not you. Do it now.

Owens River Valley—

FOR SALE—
320 acres of grape and orange land in Coachella Valley. This land is frostless and is the very best for winter vegetables. These can be raised to an immense profit while the orange trees are growing. The water conditions are the very best. In 200 yards of this land is a flowing well. The half section next to it is being improved by five families who are living there. There is not better land in the States than this half section for oranges and grapes. In two miles of this piece there is a 70-acre bearing orange grove watered entirely by a flowing well. This well flows 75 miner's inches of water. Let us talk with you and give you the figures of the orange and grape men around this piece. This land as a whole can be had at $80 an acre.

WHAT EXPERTS SAY

ABOUT OUR

RED APPLE LAND

C. TAIT, IRRIGATION ENGINEER IN CHARGE OF EXPERIMENTS IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA FOR THE GOVERNMENT, SAYS: "THE WATER NOW BEING SOLD WITH EACH TRACT BY THE REDLANDS & YUCAIPA LAND COMPANY, IS AMPLE FOR ALL KINDS OF FRUIT GROWING. THE CHARACTER OF THE SOIL MAKES IT POSSIBLE WITH EACH TRACT SOLD, FOR THE VERY BEST RESULTS WITH EVEN LESS WATER THAN IS NOW AVAILABLE WITH EACH TRACT SOLD. THERE IS NO BETTER IRRIGATION SYSTEM IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA THAN THAT INSTALLED BY THIS COMPANY."

W. H. CODD, HORTICULTURAL COMMISSIONER FOR YUCAIPA, SAYS: "RETURNS FROM APPLES IN YUCAIPA VALLEY HAVE BEEN EXCELLENT IN THE PAST. FIVE-YEAR-OLD TREES HAVE YIELDED FOUR BOXES OF APPLES TO THE TREE. TREES IN FULL BEARING HAVE PRODUCED AS HIGH AS $1000 AN ACRE IN GOOD YEARS. THE LIMIT SEEMS TO BE ONLY THE CAPACITY OF THE GROWER TO GIVE HIS TREES THE PROPER CULTIVATION AND CARE."

YOU CAN BUY THIS EXCEPTIONALLY RICH FRUIT LAND, WITH ONE SHARE OF WATER STOCK IN MUTUAL WATER COMPANY, FOR $275 AN ACRE, ON VERY EASY TERMS. MORE THAN 2000 ACRES PLANTED TO TREES ALL READY ON THIS SUBDIVISION. POTATOES, ONIONS, BEANS, TOMATOES, CANTALOUPES, MELONS, ETC., ARE BEING GROWN BETWEEN THE YOUNG TREES AT GREAT PROFITS.

WE WANT YOU TO INVESTIGATE THIS PROPOSITION NOW. FREE EXCURSIONS TO BUYERS. FOR FURTHER INFORMATION, CALL ON OR WRITE

HOTELS, LODGING-HOUSES—
For Sale, Lease, Exchange, Wanted.

FOR EXCHANGE—

3 MINUTES' WALK FROM BROADWAY.
This is one of the closest in modern apartment houses in Los Angeles. A business man owns the real estate and furniture and will sell the furniture and give you a 10 years' lease, at a very low rental. He expects you to pay only what the furniture is really worth. Owner will sell on terms or will consider exchange. This is the best deal we have seen in 5 years. Also see us for Ocean Park and Venice propositions.

EXCHANGE!
9-room apartment house clearing over $50 per month. This is on the west side, close in and one of the most expensively furnished houses in the city. Modern in every particular. The owner wants something that will take care of itself, while he looks after other business in the East. This is the best high-grade proposition on the market today. No particulars over the phone. See us for propositions at Ocean Park and Venice.

$2500
Handles 18-room apartment house clearing $240 per month. This has a good lease with a rental less than $4 per room. Has long waiting list.
See us for propositions at Ocean Park and Venice. We have a number of other good houses from 40 to 65 rooms, that can be handled with good exchange.

$1200
Handles 32-room apartment-house. If you are looking for a bargain come and see this. Close in, cheap rent and good lease. See us for propositions at Ocean Park and Venice.

NEW HOTELS
We have the exclusive option to lease a hotel to be built on Hill street near Third, of about 50 rooms, which we can lease for 20 years and the rental is just.
We can also erect a hotel immediately on Grand ave. near 9th street, of about 125 rooms.

NEW APARTMENTS
We will build and lease an apartment hotel of 100 rooms on Hope street near 8th st. This building will be modern and up-to-date in every respect.

FIGUEROA STREET
We have the plans for an apartment house which will be erected on Figueroa near 10th street. This house will contain 175 rooms and will be the most modern apartment in the city. All of these locations are in great demand, so if interested please call to see us as early as possible, or write us for propositions at Ocean Park and Venice.

BUSINESS INVESTMENTS—

WE MADE
8 PER CENT.
FOR INVESTORS
in the Peerless Brick and Artificial Stone Co. as the stock that was sold for $6 per share up to March has advanced to $8.50 per share, and will go to $7 per share on April the 2nd. Remember, that this stock started selling at $5 per share on January 15, 1912.

Now we have erected our factories and have them in operation, and have acquired assets of more than the value of the money received from the sale of stock.

We are manufacturing a brick that has anything of the Kind beat in every way possible, our brick stands many time the crushing weight of the clay product, is fire-proof, as much air can be made of concrete, (our product is concrete) is absolutely waterproof, and can be manufactured in any color that may be desired, and any design.

This makes a grand line for this section of the country, as every house has a mantel, some of them two, most all porches have artistic brick pillars, and the city of Los Angeles, has always wanted a non-absorbent brick, to do away with the dampness in the rainy season, that seems to invade the clay brick structures.

These are only a few of the main features of the company.

We manufacture this brick at a great reduction in price, when compared to the clay product, either pressed brick or common red brick.

And still we have a fine profit.

You may say that we will have competition; of course, we will have competition, we expect it, but they cannot duplicate our goods, and we are the pioneers in the field and you know what that means, when the pioneers make an article that stands the test.

Our company is made up of men of standing in the city of Los Angeles and successful men at that.

The men who have invested in this company are SATISFIED STOCKHOLDERS AND ARE ASKING FOR MORE STOCK.

THOSE WHO CAN AFFORD IT ARE INVESTING MORE MONEY.

COME IN AND TALK TO THESE MEN.

REMEMBER, NO PROMOTION STOCK OR SALARIES TO OFFICERS OR DIRECTORS.

OUR STOCK BOOKS, MINUTE BOOKS, BY-LAWS, CHECK BOOK, AND EVERYTHING IS OPEN FOR INSPECTION.

WE WILL ARRANGE TO GUARANTEE YOUR STOCK IF YOU CARE TO PAY PAR VALUE FOR YOUR STOCK.

WE NEED SOME GOOD MEN TO ASSOCIATE THEMSELVES WITH US, AND INVESTMENT AT THE SAME TIME. YOU MAY BE THAT MAN.

COME IN AND INVESTIGATE THIS AT ANY RATE, WE LIKE TO SHOW OUR PRODUCT, OUR BUSINESS, ETC., TO ANY ONE INTERESTED ENOUGH TO CALL.

DO NOT WAIT UNTIL ANOTHER RAISE IN THE PRICE OF STOCK.

AND, REMEMBER, THAT THERE IS 70 per cent. of the stock still in the Treasury.

TO CONSERVATIVE INVESTORS—
The NEW UNITED MORTGAGE CORPORATION of Los Angeles, capitalized at $500,000, par value $10, is being organized along lines that will make the stock not only absolutely safe, but should be an exceedingly profitable investment.

It is a well known fact that money loaned on real estate has been, is, and will continue to be one of the most profitable investments one can make, as the money will always be in the bank or invested in first mortgages.

This stock will be sold either for cash or small, monthly payments, as desired.

Those interested are invited to call for full particulars at Suite 620 CONSOLIDATED REALTY BLDG.

WE HAVE FOR SALE, AT COST, A PRIvate water company, supplying 625 lots, in a good section of Los Angeles. Entire equipment of machinery and mains, new and up to the best and latest type, with unlimited supply of fine water.

The installation of connections, as the property builds up, will more than pay for entire plant, and when entirely settled, the income will be 100 per cent. per annum.

Owners of the property do not want the trouble of operating, leaving a wonderful opportunity for some one familiar with such work. Cost is less than $15,000.

WANTED—MONEY.
$50,000 AT 7 PER CENT.
The security offered for this loan is located just eight miles east of the city of San Diego and consists of 854 acres, all cultivated land.
There are 140 acres in 25-year-old Mission olive trees, 60 acres in other varieties of olives from 5 to 15 years old.
The income from the olives for the past 5 years has averaged $16,000 per annum. There are 200 acres of equally good land as the olive orchard which is used for raising hay and grain and which is adaptable for subdividing, and can be sold at from $300 to $400 per acre. The balance of acres is hill land and is used for grazing. The water supply is ample and of a dependable source; there are 7 wells in all besides a large reservoir.
Their property has been appraised by us as being worth $150,000. The owners of this property are also large owners of San Diego and San Francisco business property.

Fulfilling Mission.

HUGE SUCCESS IS LAND SHOW.

Hundred Thousand Visitors in Five Days.

Action Wins Plaudits While Wonders Are Skipped.

Machines Interest More Than Plant Marvels.

The exhibitor who can make an orange tree blossom, grow a green orange, and drop it ripe and juicy into the hand of the astonished visitor at the Land Show while he waits, is all that is needed to make the wonders complete.

It would likewise be a compelling stimulus to attract the crowds to the magnificent fruit displays, if one were needed. Inasmuch as 100,000 persons attended during the past five days, this does not appear to be the case.

It is things in action that count. Even Luther Burbank's fruit marvels fail to stand up against a huge pump belching a stream of dirty water, for the purpose of showing how the thing is done. But that's what the average Yankee wants to know. They are all "from Missouri" when visiting the Land Show, and the thing that makes the wheels go round always has a crowd.

What cared the men and women, boys and girls, for the most magnificent display of orchids ever seen at a land show, or all the other floral wonders set out for their benefit, while The Times linotype machine was whizzing and whirring, rattling and clattering, and dropping the hot lines from the mold. The visitors stood for hours, craning their necks over each other's shoulders, to see how it is done.

There seemed to be little interest in the vegetable mammoths, so ostentatiously lined-up to attract attention and show the superior quality of the soil of "our county," rare and marvelous as they are. It was the fellow in action—the man with a knife—cutting red roses out of beets, bride roses out of turnips, and Gold of Ophirs out of carrots, who held the crowd in open-mouthed admiration. The demonstrator easily holds the boards against all comers.

THE BAND'S THE THING.

Of course, the biggest thing in action is Creatore's magnificent band. When the fellows with the Victor Emmanuel moustaches were walking about the exhibit hall, the crowd scattered in every direction, taking a glance here and there, but when Creatore got busy the big white elephant was as nothing.

There is one really modest man at the show—the juice-drink man. If he would try hard he could yell "You'll find it good," so that he might be heard throughout the business section of the city, but not wishing to be too aggressive, he can only be heard when you get within two blocks of the Land Show tent. He is "some" on action, but there is a metallic ring in the glasses, which serves to hold the juice in and the crowd out.

There's a cow on exhibition. She isn't real lively—not much on action—because she is made of some sort of pulp "dope," but she seems to attract her share of attention.

Those big, noisy palms, built by nailing palm branches to a log, attract a lot of attention—particularly those done up in muslin pantalettes or calico hobble-skirts. A pair of aged Easterners inspected one of the latter with much care and wondered "what kind" it was. The palms make a very effective decorative scheme, giving the impression of a palm garden.

"Take one free," has a great many booths under the tent and displays a great variety of products, but is popular with the crowd—next to the man in action. The boys and girls find his wares a great burden—the smaller the "kid" the more he carries, but he makes out to get away with large quantities.

OUT OF TOWN THRONG.

Yesterday was "Beach and Orange County Day," and excursions over the Pacific Electric from San Pedro, Long Beach, Newport, Santa Ana, Orange and other points sent extra visitors by the hundreds. Former residents of Oregon here also observed the occasion, which had been set aside by Gov. Oswald West as a day for a reunion of former Oregon people in the southern metropolis. Gov. West at the last moment was unable to come, but yesterday's crowd contained hundreds of Oregon people and also many from Seattle, Tacoma and other northern Coast points, of whom there are large numbers now in this region.

Eastern colonists who in coming to Southern California looked forward to the Land Show as their Mecca, were much in evidence.

The registers kept by the various exhibitors showed signatures of new arrivals from practically every State in the Union. Most of the land-seekers had definite ideas of what they desire in the way of future homes, and the questions asked showed that most of them had long cherished the plan to settle to some particular branch of open-air life in the West.

LECTURES DRAW CROWDS.

The free illustrated lectures delivered in the Southern Pacific lecture hall, adjoining the exposition tent, drew more persons than could be accommodated. The lectures are delivered continuously, opening at 10 a.m. and running without stop until 5 p.m. They are resumed at 7 p.m. and run until 10 p.m. The speaker, subject and motion pictures and stereopticon views are changed every half hour.

C. J. Blanchard and C. H. Shinn, the United States government lecturers, who brought motion picture films and thousands of lantern slides to illustrate all branches of agriculture, irrigation and forestry, speak both afternoon and evening. In addition there are at the Land Show a dozen other lecturers representing various counties, towns and districts of the West.

Today there will be special musical programmes and observance of St. Patrick's Day.

Creatore will lead his fifty musicans both afternoon and evening.

IRISH SONGS TONIGHT.

Director Drill of the great chorus which now enrolls 465 singers, will make his only appearance at the Land Show as a soloist tonight. Drill, who has for years been a strong American exponent of Irish music, will sing "The Wearin o' the Green," "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and "The Cruiskeen Lawn."

The afternoon Creatore Band concert includes Verdi's "Miserere," with solos by Signori DeMitry and Rossi.

The celebrated organ offertory, by Batiste, and the "Irish Caprice," composed by Creatore.

The evening Creatore programme will open with the "Land Show Beautiful" march, composed by Creatore, the oratorio "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," and the grand selection from "Carmen," with solos by Signori DeMitry, Rossi and DeLuca.

"Kern county and Arizona Day" will be celebrated tomorrow. Gov. Spry and a host of Utah boosters are due to arrive tomorrow night by special train to celebrate "Utah Day" on Tuesday. Wednesday will be "California Day" and "Society Night." Thursday will be "San Diego Day," "San Bernardino and Riverside counties Day." Friday is "Imperial and Coachella Valley Day."

USES CANE ON PRISONER.

Patrolman's Treatment of Aged Man Calls Forth Hisses from the Crowd—Is Struck and Retaliates.

Shrieking and cursing, his face besmeared with blood from a laceration on his forehead where Patrolman Mayes had struck him with a cane after receiving a stinging blow across the back of his left hand, Dr Daniel G. Allinder, 69 years old, living at No. 911 South Hill street, was taken to the Receiving Hospital yesterday afternoon.

The physician admitted he had been drinking to excess. He became so violent at the hospital it was necessary to strap him to a cot.

Dr. Allinder was arrested at Sixth and Main streets by Patrolman C. J Smith.

"I arrested the man because he was striking at people with his cane," asserted Smith. "When the patrol wagon arrived he was steated on the curb in a peaceful manner. After being placed in the wagon he began striking at Mayes, when he attempted to get in. Mayes snatched the cane out of his hand and struck him on the head."

"I didn't strike the man until he had made a number of passes at me and finally gave me a stinging rap across the left hand," said the patrolman, as he exhibited a swollen hand, with a red line across it showing the effects of the blow he had received.

Capt. Murray visited Dr. Allinder in the hospital as soon as he heard of the affair.

"The man was cursing and swearing when I saw him," said the captain.

The several hundred persons attracted by the arrest of the doctor hooted the patrolman when he struck the prisoner, but there was no other demonstration, other patrolmen keeping the crowd in check. Dr. Allinder was not seriously injured.

Religious.

CHRIST'S COMING NEAR AT HAND.

ADVENTIST PREACHER SAYS HE BELIEVES IT.

Two Largely Attended Meetings Held in the Auditorium Yesterday—Second Sermon Preached by Aged California Woman—Two Meetings for Spanish People.

That there is now going to the world a message that is to prepare a people for the judgment, was the theme of Pastor A. G. Daniells of Washington, D. C., world leader of Sevenh-Day Adventists, before an audience of more than 2000, gathered yesterday forenoon in the Temple Auditorium. In the audience were Seventh-Day Adventists, before an nine churches in Los Angeles, and the churches of Pasadena, Long Beach, Sawtelle, Santa Monica, Glendale, Santa Ana, and others near by, and the ministers and leading workers from the States of Utah, Arizona, Nevada and California, who are in attendance at the Ministerial Institute.

In the pulpit with Pastor Daniells were Pastors E. W. Farnsworth, president of the California Coast conference; J. N. Loughborough of Lodi; E. E. Andross, president of the Southern California Conference; G. B. Thompson of Washington, D. C., G. A. Irwin, president of the Pacific Union Conference; Charles Thompson, president of the Northern Union Conference, and J. O. Corliss, secretary of the Pacific Religious Liberty Association.

Mr. Daniells said in part: "We have chosen the name adventists to express our unbounded confidence in the second advent of Christ to this world. We believe it just as much as we believe that He has been here. We know that He will come again. Believing, as we do, the Bible to be the inspired word of God, we must logically believe in the second advent of Christ. We not only believe that Christ will come again, but we believe that that coming is near at hand.

"When Jesus comes, dear friends, He is coming to end this present reign of sin. I praise God that there is to be an end to sin, that it is not to reign forever and continue to bring in its awful train of sickness, sorrow, suffering and separation that it is bringing now. This world is one great charnel house. Funeral trains are moving all the time; our fondest ambitions are being broken; our dearest friends are being torn from our bosoms; and the things that we desire most are being wrested from us by the cruel hand of death. God is not going to let sin and death reign forever. Life eternal—immortal life—will be the portion of those who accept Jesus Christ."

Pastor Daniells was emphatic in his statement that there is a gospel message in the world today to prepare people for the second coming of Christ. It is found, he declared, in Revelation 14:6-14. He then declared that this warning message is now being preached in nearly all the known world, and said that this to him, is one of the greatest evidences that the coming of Christ is near at hand.

Mrs. E. G. White, 84 years of age, and the only woman of the denomination who has been ordained to the ministry, delivered the sermon of the 3 o'clock service. She gave a beautiful and sympathetic interpretation of the Lord's picturesque parable of the vine and its branches. The speaker drew from her text a series of truths which were at once intensely practical and absorbingly interesting. She commanded the undivided attention of her large audience to the end of the discourse.

Two meetings for the Spanish-speaking people were held in Central Park Hall. The morning service was conducted by Pastor M. Serna of Solomnville, Ariz., and the afternoon service by Pastor Eugene Bond of San Diego.

A baptismal service, at which thirteen persons were immersed, followed the afternoon meeting. E. E. Andross, president of the Southern California Conference, performed the ceremony.

SCHOONERS LIGHTER LADEN.

Price of Hops Hops Up Price of Beer and the Spigots Will Not Flow Quite So Long.

In addition to the high-cost-of-living problem, the public will soon face another proposition in the high-cost-of-drinking problem if the plans of Los Angeles brewers are carried into effect.

Owing to the doubling in the price of hops and malt and the continued increase of up-keep expenses, local brewers are planning an advance of 10 cents on the dozen quart bottles of beer.

Though no definite step has been taken, the leading brewers have talked over the proposition and all are said to favor a slight increase. It is expected the advance will be made before summer, when the warm weather will aid them.

In defense of the proposed advance the brewers assert beer is being sold cheaper in Los Angeles than in any other city on the Coast.

The breweries favoring the advance and whose products will be affected are the Maier, East Side, Los Angeles and Mathie companies.

It is hardly likely, say brewery officials, that the advance will cause a like advance in price to the retail trade but will possibly mean a diminution in the quantity in the "schooners."

DELEGATES APPOINTED.

County Charter to Be Drawn Up By Committee of Freeholders to Be Selected in Convention.

Sixty men and five women were appointed delegates from the Chamber of Commerce by President Osborne, yesterday, to the convention of commercial bodies to nominate fifteen freeholders to draw up a county charter to be voted on May 14.

The list includes:

THEY'LL BE MEN'S ESCORTS.

Women Employees of Uncle Sam Plan Leap Year Dance, Issue Invitations and Will take the Lead.

Every Los Angeles employee of Uncle Sam, from the janitors in the basement to the heads of the different departments, were recipients of invitations yesterday, to a leap year dance, to be given April 16, at Kramer's. The women will invite the men, picking out their partners for the dance and ultimately escorting their male friends home.

More than 400 invitations were extended by the twenty-two women employees who are managing the affair. Postmaster and Mrs. Harrison will lead the grand march, with former Postmaster Flint and wife next in line.

Mrs. Ethel M. Thornton, Miss Fannie K. Scoffield and Mrs. Bird Shelton, sister of the First Assistant Postmaster-General, are the chairmen of the three committees.

TO RESIST THIS FARE.

Eagle Rock Valley Residents Consider Five Cents Extra for Five-eights of a Mile Excessive.

Residents of Eagle Rock Valley are resenting a charge of 5 cents for a ride of five-eighths of a mile. The Los Angeles Railway Company has been charging a 5-cent fare to the city limits and another nickel for the ride from the city limits to the end of the line, less than a mile away.

Recently the territory covered by the short extension was annexed to the city and the patrons of the line insist that the extra fare should not be charged. There has been fighting on the skirmish line, where individuals refused to pay the fare and have had fights with the train crew.

A concerted attack is scheduled to be made tomorrow morning, when thirty pledged volunteers have agreed to resist to the limit any attempt to collect the extra fare. A petition is in circulation asking the City Council to sustain the contention of the resident patrons of the line.

WEATHER WORKS WONDERS.

ORCHARDS ARE BUDDING.

RIVERSIDE, March 16. — The glorious spring weather, with its alternate days of rain and sunshine, is doing wonders for the whole of Riverside county. The orchards and groves are budding and blossoming and the fields are taking a fresh lease on life. The past few weeks have witnessed the closing of a number of large real estate deals, principally in acreage.

Isaac Wilkinson has sold to W. G. Raymond of Holtville his fine fourteen and a half-acre grove at the corner of Washington and Victoria avenues, the purchase price being $20,000. The grove is set to full-bearing navels and is one of the finest in this section. With it goes full water rights. Mr. Raymond has also purchased from H. F. McGowan of Pomona a ten-acre navel and Valencia grove on Dufferin avenue, paying therefor $20,000, this price including this year's crop. Mr. Raymond makes the latter purchase for a home.

In the sale of these two groves there were a number of other large properties involved. Mr. Wilkinson secures from Mr. Raymond a 320-acre ranch lying seven miles north of Holtville. This is all under cultivation and with it goes full water rights. The ranch is valued at $25,000. In the deal with McGowan 320 acres of land adjoining the above are turned in by Mr. Raymond. This is one of the fine ranches of Imperial Valley, being all under cultivation and well improved with an eight-room house and other buildings. In the deal the property figured at $40,000. McGowan at once leased the ranch for an annual rental of $4000 cash to W. C. Cook of Ventura, who will turn 4000 head of sheep onto the property.

D. E. Furrow has sold to E. W. Moulton his ten-acre grove on Glenavon place. The grove is set to year-old navels and Valencias. Mr. Moulton buys as an investment.

A LABOR OF LOVE.

An exquisite piece of needlework, containing more than 10,000 stitches, was exhibited yesterday by Police Judge Rose. It was a white satin pillow presented to him for Mrs. Rose by Mrs. Refugio M. Carmona, wife of the interpreter in the judge's department of the Police Court at the Central Station. Mrs. Carmona has embroidered on the pillow an American eagle with outspread wings, poising gracefully upon the folds of a handsome flag fastened to a pole by knotted cords of gold. In the claws of the eagle are clutched a bundle of arrows and a sprig of olive. It took Mrs. Carmona almost six months to stitch the cover.

Love Leads Man to Court.

William Nelson, a Pullman car porter, followed Mrs. Audrey Williams from Denver to this city to kill her because she would not desert her husband for him, according to the story told in the Police Court yesterday.

Plainclothesmen Watson and Glenn were advised of Nelson's intentions, and arrested him as he entered the Williams home, No. 321 Merrick street, armed with a gun, with the evident purpose of killing her and taking his own life.

Judge Chambers suspended sentence on the promise of friends that Nelson will secure a run that will never bring him back to Los Angeles.

STIMULATING GENIUS.

Curious Psychological Enigmas that Can Only Be Explained on Theory that Talent Is Sporadic.

[Washington Post:] Genius is the most curious psychological phenomenon with which the mind of man has ever grappled. Nobody knows what it is; nobody has ever explained the causes of it. A great crisis arises in a nation's history and the Moses who leads it out of the wilderness emerges from the obscurity of a Kentucky log cabin and takes his place among the immortals. The nation tries one after another of its greatest generals and meets defeat upon the battlefield, until there comes from the counter of a country store a plain man who had graduated at the bottom of his class at West Point, and had until then been a failure in the army as well as elsewhere. The King selects from among the poets of the empire a bard to take the place of Tennyson, and he produces nothing but drivel, while along comes an unassuming little Anglo-Indian, and writes the epics for a race. Genius can neither be forced nor stimulated. It either is, or it isn't, and that's all there is to it. All the prize contests in the world can't produce a Shakespeare, but neither starvation nor misery can choke one who has a message to deliver.

Out in Missouri some months ago they offered a prize of $500 for a State song. All the highbrow composers got busy with their fountain pens and pianofortes, and guaranteed to turn out another "Dixie." Songs were submitted from every State in the Union until the judges were in despair, but somehow Orpheus wasn't on the job, and not a tune turned in measured up to the plans and specifications. And then all of a sudden Uncle Dave Ball, fresh from Pike county, dropped into Jefferson City one day whistling a ditty from the Ozarks touchin' on and appertainin' to the subject of "houn' dawgs," and in a week all Missouri was het up about it. Now the contagion has spread so far abroad that there probably isn't anybody from Maine to California who doesn't know they've been kickin' that dawg aroun', and who isn't convinced that it has "gotta" stop. Meanwhile, no doubt, they've given up trying to award that prize out in Missouri; but they've got the State song they wanted, and it hasn't cost them a cent.

No, you can't make a genius to order. It simply can't be done.

COST OF CHEOPS PYRAMID.

Could Not Be Duplicated Today for Less Than a Hundred Million Dollars for Material and Labor.

[Seattle Post-Intelligencer:] One of the most familiar questions asked by "personally conducted" tourists visiting Egypt and the great pyramid built by Cheops is: "I wonder how much it cost to build it?" A building contractor with a head for figures and building estimates has estimated that the Cheops pyramid could not be duplicated today for less than $100,000,000. With modern machinery and the employment of 40,000 stonecutters, haulers, quarrymen, masons and laborers a duplicate of the pyramid could be erected in two years.

It has been calculated that the work really required the services of 100,000 men for thirty years. The Cheops pyramid occupies a space of twelve and three-quarters acres and is 746 feet high and contains 142,315,000 cubic yards of stone and granite. The material alone represents an item of $36,000,000, while the labor would increase this amount by $72,000,000. To this must be added $3,000,000 for tools, transportation and similar items. The pyramid is built on a solid rock 150 feet deep, and to build a foundation of this character would add to the cost to the extent of making the total $100,000,000.

Mr. W. H. Housley, Greenville, Tennessee, writes:

"Five years ago I took a very severe cold, which resulted in la grippe. I never was so bad off. I was in bed several weeks, and when I did get up I had tonsilitis and sore throat.

"I tried to cure this for months, but it gradually got worse. A doctor advised me to have the tonsils cut out, but I did not like the idea. Another doctor examined me and told me the same thing. I finally decided to try Peruna. I got a bottle of Peruna, and after I had taken one bottle my throat was entirely well and I was going about my work. TURAL GAS OR THE SOUTH.

Supervisors to Grant Pipe Line Franchise.

Lines to be Constructed from Fields.

Ten Thousand for Loss of Finger.

[DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Midway Gas Company, a Los Angeles corporation, which contemplates furnishing the entire California territory with natural gas, today secured franchises from the Kern county Board of Supervisors for a three-line pipe line system from the Midway oil fields to the Los Angeles county line. The bond fixed was $500. The board received the protest of Truxtun Beale, who opposed having the line follow the county road, which crosses part of his ranch.

SUES FOR BIG DAMAGES.

Suit for $10,000 damages for the loss of his left index finger, alleged to be due to the company's negligence, was announced today by L. V. Davidson, a bookkeeper, against the Musick Oil Company. Davidson said he was called from his desk work to help fix some casing, when the elevator, weighing 5000 pounds of iron came his way, smashing his finger.

OIL PRICES UP.

Beginning next Friday the Standard Oil Company will make contracts for purchase of oil from the Sunset-Midway fields, according to a general higher schedule of prices announced. Including 15 gravity, and under, 35 cents; including 21, and under 30 cents; including 24, and under 27, 55 cents; 27 gravity and under 30 cents. The present schedule prevails for oil up to 22 gravity and 40 cents for everything above. In the Kern River field is not included in the announcement for the reason that there is no oil there of the quality specified.

Operations in the West Side fields in which the Standard has shown a desire to increase its purchases for some time past, and it is said that competition of other marketers is one of the causes.

The Edwards family lived in Los Angeles in 1908. It was then that she and her brother-in-law, Brown, have been unjustly accused by her husband and his

TWO DEATHS.

Walter H. Vilas, 34 years old, left his wife and small son in Wisconsin to Taft about one and a half ago, died this morning after an illness of about a week of uremic poisoning. His remains will be shipped tomorrow to Wisconsin for interment.

Ah Chet, 40 years old, a cook by trade, was found dead this morning in the sagebrush near Whiskey Flat, Taft. An inquest will be held over his remains tomorrow.

PASTOR DIES.

Rev. W. H. Reedy, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of this city, died tonight after an operation for appendicitis. He was a graduate of the University of California, aged 40 years, and leaves a wife. He was pastor for three years and was one of the best known and most highly esteemed ministers in the valley.

ACTOR IN TROUBLE.

Ralph Harvey, a theatrical man from Angeles, is in jail here on charges of A. J. Crawford, a local manager, who accused Harvey of passing a $75 check. Harvey came here a week ago and represented himself to be advance manager of the Elmore Stock Company, appearing at Crawford's Theater. But it developed out he had nothing to do with the troupe.

ROAD BLOCKED ROADS.

Heavy snows have fallen on the Tehachapi and Sierra Nevada ranges and roads leading to Los Angeles and Mojave are blocked. At Lebec, in the Antelope Valley on the San Francisco-Los Angeles auto route, drifts are very deep. The storm was preceded by a heavy rain and in consequence it is underlaid with mud. Four to six inches of snow fell in the Coast range country.

OIL LEASE.

It is said G. W. Dorby of this city has leased 320 acres in section 25 in the Midway field, to the Standard Company, $50,000 cash bonus to drill a well on every forty within three years. The land is one of the best in the field and Mr. Dorby refused many dollars for the property.

MEANS DEVELOPMENT.

Important sale which will result in the development of a portion of the Covina Short Line Electric Company is reported by the Herald in the transaction, which has been made by J. Dormody to A. D. Hall, of sixty-two lots, all in the improved subdivision, and which will be earnestly developed from this date. The consideration involved in the transfer is $10,000.

TO EAST ADAMS.

Plans are prepared by Carl Stanley for a three-story frame building to be erected by him at No. 415 East Adams street. The building will contain seven apartments and sixty rooms, a large amusement room in the basement and a roof garden on the roof. Each apartment will have a private bath. The finish throughout will be of modern type.

EXPERT VISITS HILL TRACT.

Famous Town Planner to Help in Laying Out Huge Subdivision of Investment Company Near Inglewood.

Charles Mulford Robinson, famous town-planning expert, accompanied by G. L. Mowder, engineer, Charles A. Elder and W. D. Deeble of the Los Angeles Investment Company, outlined yesterday morning the plans for developing the 2500-acre Hill Tract of the Los Angeles Investment Company. Work will commence at once. Streets are now being laid out and building will commence at a point just west of College Tract on the recent Baldwin purchase. This will be built up solidly with homes westward toward the hills lying north of Inglewood.

Home building will also start both east and west of the Inglewood car line on the Baldwin holdings. The east half will be built up with moderately-priced homes and the west half with homes costing from $4000 up.

Robinson declared that the Hill Tract offered the most magnificent opportunity for landscape work he had ever seen. His plans call for a 200-foot north and south boulevard, and a boulevard of corresponding width, running east and west. Winding streets will follow the hills and irregular lots, varying in size from a quarter of an acre to an acre, will be laid out. Rustic bridges, waterways, parks and sunken gardens are to be provided for.

On the highest elevation, overlooking both the city and the ocean, an observatory will be built, and near it a civic center is to be grouped. Here are to be located the postoffice, stores, school buildings, a City Hall, and all other necessary business structures. Arrangements have already been made for at least two car lines.

Robinson leaves this afternoon for San Jose, Cal., where he is engaged in municipal work. It is possible that he will return to Los Angeles at an early date to complete his work here.

Because It Pays.

PLACES HONESTY ABOVE PROFITS.

INDISCRIMINATE ADVERTISING PROVES WORTHLESS.

Publicity Chairman of Men and Religion Forward Movement Tells Local Ad Club How to Obtain Best Results—State Laws Prohibiting Fakes to be Enforced Here.

To place honesty above profits and eliminate waste, were first among the recommendations made to the members of the Los Angeles Advertising Club yesterday by George W. Coleman of Boston, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, who addressed the local club in Levy's banquet hall in the afternoon.

The Associated Advertising Clubs have an affiliation of 110 organizations and a total membership of more than 7000. They have been organized for seven years and on May 19 at Dallas they will hold their eighth annual convention. he last one was held at Boston with an attendance of 2300 delegates.

In the Dallas convention the club at Honolulu and several advertising leagues of England will be represented. Nine days will be devoted not only to executive sessions but will include a complete tour of the State of Texas for the entertainment of which the people of Dallas have raised $30,000. Ten Dallas pulpits will be open to delegates for lay sermons on the text of advertising on the Sunday the visitors are here.

Carnegie Hall in that city will be used as a display room for clever advertising layouts. The convention will be divided into six departments which will hold separate morning sessions and an expert from each department will present the supreme message of each meeting in fifteen minutes before the entire convention in the afternoon.

Coleman is chairman of the publicity committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement and is a public speaker of force and charm. His effort here yesterday amounted to oratory. The gospel of scientific efficiency as preached by him met with the heartiest response of the 100 Los Angeles specialists who sat with him at the overflowing banquet table.

Advertising that is honest, believable and dependable, he declared to be an essential of the age. It is so much so, he said, that even public utility corporations spend fortunes in order to cultivate the good will of the people through a campaign of education by publicity.

The ethical standard of the age should be emphasized in advertising, he said, and not an inch of white space should be wasted nor a line of type exaggerated either in size or in text. Advertising has educated the public in the quality and value of merchandise and what is offered in the advertisement must be delivered in fact.

Several States have passed a law containing only 154 words which puts an iron hand on every manner of false advertising and after such a law is passed in a State the advertising clubs of each city owe it to themselves, Coleman said, to have a committee of experts who will see that the law is not violated. This will eliminate the fictitious in advertising and will earn the confidence of the public.

The day is gone, Coleman stated, when indiscriminate advertising is worth anything. Newspaper space must be scientifically applied and it must be backed by values exactly as represented and also be supported by expert salesmanship.

Others who gave speeches were Col. W. C. Hunter, author and humorist of Frozen Dog, Idaho, and Henry N. Tolles of Chicago, a brilliant representative of the Sheldon Correspondence School. Several of the local men responded to toasts. W. Botsford was toastmaster. Botsford is president of the local club and a special representative of the Pacific Railways Advertising Company.

Songs were written between courses and committed to memory and sung. Herbert A. Schoenfeld, vice-president of the Seattle Advertising Club, was the director of harmony, with J. Webb Smith at the piano and Edward Borgum playing the banjo. They made up a wonderful song about Los Angeles where the ad. man "just scintillates, cavorts and radiates and never prevaricates the whole year 'round."

San Francisco will try to get the convention next year and William Woodhead, the president up there, sent the Los Angeles people a telegram requesting their support. E. K. Honk, vice-president of the Los Angeles Club, went to San Francisco to bring Coleman here and a local committee of fifteen took him to Pasadena and other places yesterday morning to show him the sights.

Priceless Papers.

OLD RECORDS SECURELY FILED.

ANCIENT ARCHIVES OF THE REVOLUTION MADE SAFE.

After a Century of Exposure the Government Has Special Cabinets Made for the Six Hundred Thousand Documents Relating to the Revolutionary War.

[Washington Post:] After being exposed for nearly a century to the ravages of time and the wear and tear of frequent handling, thousands of priceless records of the Revolutionary War will be saved to the people of the nation by a plan which Commissioner of Pensions Davenport has just worked out. While the plan itself is simple, and one that long ago would have appealed to any thoughtful business man, yet Pension Commissioners of the past have given little or no attention to this vastly important side of their work.

Immediately on becoming head of the Pension Office, Commissioner Davenport realized that steps must be taken to preserve these documents or else a few years would see their utter ruin. And their loss, he knew, would not only be irreparable to the government, but to thousands of people as well. They were, in brief, those little human documents that gave evidence of the part taken by the sturdy heroes of '76 in the struggle for American independence.

Around these documents historians have written the story of that struggle, patriotic societies have used them to supply the material upon which their organizations are founded, and genealogists have eagerly searched them to trace the deeds and trials of their honored ancestors.

And, moreover, as long as there remains interest in the men who made possible the birth of the republic, thousands of others will annually consult the archives of the Pension Bureau for the records which illumine these time-worn and yellowing documents of the past.

For some years after the close of the revolution no attempt was made to assemble the records of the soldiers who bore arms in that momentous struggle. Then came the demand for reward through pension and the establishment of the Pension Office. It was a slow, uncertain task at the outset, but in a few years approximately 600,000 documents were collected. They told, besides the battles in which the individual soldier had fought, a record of his family and, in some cases pathetically, his limited worldly possessions. The government was young and poverty-ridden then, and the soldier's right to aid was based largely on his need.

As a rule these documents were prepared by the clerk of the court to which the soldier applied when filing his pension claim. They were written on the best handmade paper of that period, and with handmade ink, and to this fact perhaps more than anything else is due their lasting quality. But as years passed and the papers became prey to time, it became evident that their existence was threatened unless steps were taken to preserve them.

When the present commissioner was appealed to he saw that immediate action was imperative. Many of the oldest documents, folded and packed away in exposed racks that had done service from the time the office was established, were torn and crumbling.

In his dilemma, Commissioner Davenport appealed to a cabinet-making company. He furnished plans and constructed a special pattern of filing case, which combined lightness and compactness so that women clerks of the revolutionary division could handle them with ease. The cases are made to contain documents weighing seventy-five pounds. They are of light wood lined with steel, and roll back and forth on roller bearings. The records themselves are placed flatwise in large linen-lined envelopes to obviate the necessity of folding. This habit had worked the principal destruction to the documents under the old system.

While the widow of the last revolutionary soldier died some ten years ago, thus ending this feature of the annual pension budget, these intensely interesting documents, revealing as they do, the story of that momentous period in American history, will remain a priceless possession of the government for all time. This is why Commissioner Davenport is proud of his filing system, and why he says, the hours he labored in working it out was time well spent. It is, in fact, one of the best and most complete in use in any of the Federal departments.

LEGALIZED POISONING.

Congress Plays Politics Instead of Legislating for the Relief of Workers in Match Factories.

[New York Commercial:] Congress hesitates to pass a law forbidding the use of white phosphorus in making matches because some members of the House of Representatives fear that such a measure will help the so-called match trust. It makes no difference that the Diamond Match Company, at the request of President Taft, has thrown open to public use the patented sequisulphide process which is practically harmless to health. The Ways and Means Committee is playing politics and apparently its only reason for opposing the law is that it is recommended by a Republican President in an election year.

It is pleaded that the small match factories use white phosphorus exclusively, and the large concerns wish to give it up. Since white phosphorus is the specific cause of one of the most horrible diseases known to medical science, and one which is absolutely preventable, those who persist in using it are practically licensed to commit murder. The harmless process is open to all, and the poisonous matches should be taxed out of existence. Congress passes laws to compel railroads to adopt all sorts of safety appliances to protect passengers and employees, but balks at the match which carries almost inevitable disease and death for fear of helping large manufacturers. Its members are politicians, not statesmen or men of affairs.

THE FIDDLE AND THE BOW.

Senator Taylor of Tennessee Drew Inspiration From His Violin That Made Him a Fortune.

[New York Herald:] Every one knows that Senator Robert L. Taylor of Tennessee fiddled himself into Congress thirty odd years ago, and that he has been called "Fiddling Bob" in consequence, but only a few know he made $250,000 out of his lecture "The Fiddle and the Bow."

A Herald reporter called on Senator Taylor shortly after he had declined the invitation of his colleague Senator Bradley of Kentucky, a guitar player, to join in a concert for the benefit of their friends. Senator Taylor in declining stated what few persons know, namely, that he had not played the violin for twenty years.

"Why did you stop?" he was asked.

"Because there was never a man who got much reputation out of so little ability as I did through my fiddling. My brother and I were taught to play the violin by an old negro attached to our family down in Tennessee. My brother is a beautiful violinist, but I played only fairly well, partly by note and partly by ear.

"When I was a young man I ran for Congress in the Jonesboro district in the mountains of East Tennessee. I took my fiddle on to the stump and I used to play the old southern songs and sing them. I found it a pretty effective method of campaigning and I was elected.

"Then I soon found that I never went to a meeting or to visit a friend or stopped at a hotel that somebody would not fetch a fiddle, place it in my hand and insist on my playing. I found that my reputation far exceeded my ability and as I did not want to disappoint those whose expectations had been whetted so keenly I gave my fiddle to my daughter and haven't touched it since.

"After that I developed a lecture entitled 'The Fiddle and the Bow.' I delivered that lecture all over the South and at a number of places in the north. I made $250,000 out of it. It consisted of stories of southern life, mostly concerning negroes and a tribute to music."

Senator Taylor declared he had never permitted the lecture to be printed, but when urged to give a sample of its quality he repeated slowly, in his richly modulated Southern voice, this passage:

"I once heard the divine Melba sing. In every note there was the rapture of love and the pathos of tears. In every thrill there was a warbly bird and in every swell of her voice the dim shadow tone of an invisible harp. I drifted on the silver tide of her song. It ebbed and flowed and broke into spray on shining rocks, and golden sands and I was tossed to and fro on every passion known and felt on earth and in heaven.

"I heard Ole Bull sweep the vibrant strings of his violin and change it into a thing of passion. It laughed and sang and sobbed like a child. It pleaded like a lover and sighed like a maiden. It echoed from the battle field of love, the drumbeat of fluttering hearts and the sweet musketry of kisses and then died away into whispers as sweet and low as the summer evening's last sigh that shuts the rose."

Probably half the girls in Dixie know by heart that passage about "The drumbeats of fluttering hearts and the sweet musketry of kisses."

Senator Taylor then poured all the molten eloquence of Webster into a little fantasy about the laughter of the negroes as they gathered in the hour before dusk on the old plantation. He wouldn't repeat it for quotation; it is too rich a portion of "The Fiddle and the Bow."

Can't Navigate Auto.

Ivan St. Johns, a member of the Whittier News staff, was fined $50 for having taken one friend home in an auto belonging to another acquaintance. Police Judge Chambers gave the visitor a severe lecture before imposing sentence. The machine belonged to Dudley Harvey Elder. St. Johns was trying to take R. J. Leibrick to his home at No. 109 South Hill street when he was taken in charge by a patrolman. He was intoxicated.

COLORED JUBILEE SINGERS.

The Williams Jubilee Singers will give a concert on next Saturday evening in Gamut Club auditorium, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. European Chorus. The same musical combination delighted a large audience last season and this second engagement is the result. The club is planning its trip to Lake Tahoe for next July, open to all members of the Y.M.C.A. and their friends, and persons interested should get in touch with J. L. Graham, at the association building.

HOTEL TO HAVE RUGGED SETTING

Fine Hostelry Projected for Laurel Canyon.

Building to Follow Lines of Feudal Castle.

Will Occupy Site of Present Laurel Inn.

A picturesque hotel designed to follow the lines of an old feudal castle of the middle ages has been planned by Alfred Priest for the Canyon Castle Corporation of which Chas. S. Mann is president and Sam S. Porter, vice-president and manager. The imposing structure projected is to occupy the site of the present Laurel Inn in Laurel Canyon, on the roadway leading to the summit of Lookout Mountain, and will have a fittingly rugged setting.

The proposed structure will be of concrete exterior and will represent an outlay of about $85,000 upon the part of its builders. It will have a frontage of 200 feet and will be three stories in height above a high basement. A rear wing will extend back for 150 feet. The promoters announce that construction will be begun within the next few weeks.

The hotel will be unusually complete and will practically constitute a little city to itself. In the basement will be a billiard room 50x40 feet in size with a large fireplace and oak paneled walls and ceilings. Opening from this will be a bar, barber shop and shoe shining room. A private card room 25x35 feet in size and a dance hall 32x40 feet, the latter with a raised orchestra platform, will with the heating and power pants, the incinerator room and ice making plant complete the basement arrangement.

The lobby will be on the first floor and will be fifty feet square. It will contain the offices, elevator enclosures, check rooms, news stand, florists' stand and public telephone booths. An elaborate stairway will lead to the second story. Off the lobby will be a lounging room 40x50 feet containing a fireplace sixteen feet in width and extending to the ceiling. The ladies' parlor will be finished in white and gold in the style of Louis XIV. The lobby and lounging room will both be in quartered oak, with paneled ceilings and walls.

The dining-room is to be 50x70 feet in dimensions and will be finished in mahogany after art noveau panel designs. Adjoining will be the kitchens, pantries and bakery room. At one corner of the building will be maintained a complete grocery and market department which is designed to supply both the hotel and the dwellers in the bungalows of the vicinity. The hostelry will contain seventy guest rooms, each with a private bath and dressing room.

An eighteen-foot veranda will extend entirely across the front of the hotel, bridging a mountain stream adjacent to the building. This stream is to be so directed as to create a picturesque falls and about it will be laid out a pretty little park.

A roof garden and sun parlor will be attractive features of the hotel. One of the plans contemplated is the construction of a rustic bridge from the roof to the hill directly back of the building. The side of this elevation is to be beautifully parked.

The hotel will maintain its own stables for saddle horses as well as a garage where will be kept machines for hire. Level spots near by will be utilized for tennis courts and a golf links will eventually be laid out.

WEST VIEW HEIGHTS.

Sales at West View Heights, the last high ground on West Adams Hill, have started off briskly and many fine homes are projected. J. F. Adams will in ten days, commence the erection of a handsome $10,000 home on a Washington boulevard corner. G. F. Sloan will build on the second lot from the Adams home. William C. Morris, formerly of St. Louis has selected a frontage of 110 feet, with the intention of erecting a pretentious home. Jonathan F. Dodge has reserved 110 feet frontage on Rimpau avenue. Albert E. Mills, a 55-foot lot on Mineral avenue, and Mrs. Catherine Monahan, 55 feet on the same street. James A. Anderson has taken 55 feet on West View avenue and Chas. O. Middleton has reserved 165 feet on the same street, as the site of his permanent home. This site commands an exceptionally fine view. C. J. Griffin has selected a 55-foot lot on West View avenue. Edward D. Zehner, with the Chas. O. Middleton Company, is in charge of the sales.

OPENS OFFICE.

FOURTEEN HOMES STARTED.

PERMIT TOTAL IS LARGE.

GLENDALE, March 16.—Fourteen new homes were started this week in the Richardson tract. This section now resembles a lumber yard, lumber and other building material being piled on so many of the vacant lots. These homes will be of a good class, ranging in value from $2500 to $4000, and containing from five to eight rooms, with all modern conveniences and outbuildings. In nearly every instance the structures will be occupied by the owners when completed. The work will be rushed to completion. In the tract recently purchased from the Richardson estate by the Pacific Home Builders of Los Angeles, ten new homes will be started next Monday. Already ground has been broken for several of these.

Building permits footing up to $41,000 were issued for business blocks in this city during the past week. These permits were three in number, the largest being for $25,000, taken out by Parker & Sternberg, a local firm. This building will be combined with a $6000 structure to be built by J. H. Flower on Brand boulevard, between Fourth and Fifth streets. The Parker & Sternberg building will be 100x100 feet, while the Flower Block will be 50x100 feet, making, together, the largest business block in this city.

J. W. McIntyre has taken out a permit to erect a business block on Fourth street between Franklin court and Glendale. This building will be entirely of brick with pressed brick front.

ACREAGE

We have several of the choicest pieces of Acreage to be had in the District South of Los Angeles, at prices lower than the value, as demonstrated by actual sales of adjoining pieces, and decidedly below intrinsic values. These pieces are held under contract at figures and terms obtained before the announcement of certain developments and improvements that have added materially to their value.

There is no section adjoining Los Angeles in which the next couple of years will see such a decided advance in value due to the proximity of the harbor, the city and assured undertakings as this district. The terms on some of these properties are extremely easy and in one or two instances we might be able to use some trade.

CHEAP

Is Only a Comparative Term

For instance, you can buy cheap bonds or cheap stocks, but it would not prove that standard bonds and standard stocks could be purchased at less than prevailing market figures, and the man who bought a bond or stock simply because it was cheap—without any regard to its salability, should he care to dispose of it, or without regard to its earning capacity, in the shape of interest or dividends—would be considered an exceedingly foolish man. If you want something cheap, without regard to quality, you can buy Confederate bonds by the bushel, but I doubt whether you would consider it a good investment simply because you had purchased a great quantity of them for a small amount of money.

So it is with land. You can buy cheap land in California. In fact, you can buy at many places and from many people, for a less figure than you can purchase on Grogan's Merced Tracts, BUT you cannot secure the same quality of land, with the same advantages of soil, water, climate, market and transportation facilities, and the same earning capacity per acre, anywhere else in California for the same amount of money.

The facts regarding Grogan's Merced Tracts are as follows:

(1.) Merced county is the banner agricultural county of the State of California. The proof of this is that at the 1911 State Fair, held at Sacramento, Merced county took 17 out of 25 first prizes, 4 seconds, 4 thirds, grand prize for the best general agricultural exhibit, and a special prize for the best display of cereals.

(2.) Merced—located on the main lines of the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroads, 151 miles south of San Francisco—with a population of 4000, has on deposit with its two banks, $3,500,000, which makes this little town, in all probability, the richest city per capita in America. Over $333 for every man, woman and child in Merced county. And, remember, every dollar of this $3,500,000 has grown out of the ground, proving conclusively that prosperity in Merced county is of the wholesale variety.

In addition to the foregoing, Grogan's Merced Tract, which adjoins the westerly city limits of Merced, is the only remaining body of land, close to the city of Merced, that can be had for subdivision purposes. All the other close-in lands have been subdivided and sold, and when this 4300-acre tract is sold out, those wishing to purchase in the banner agricultural county of California, and who, in addition, wish to get reasonably close to the advantages the Merced city has to offer, will simply have to go and look up the individual owner, who might be more or less willing to sell, and pay the price he asked—which means that inside of twelve months' time, no first-class, close-in land in this territory can be had at less than from $250 to $300 per acre.

Even at $300 per acre, this quality of land would be very cheap, because it will earn and actually net from 20% to 30% per annum on $300 per acre and upwards.

Remember, Grogan's Merced Tracts are universally considered to be the very cream of the entire Merced region. In addition to the advantages of soil and location, each 10 and 20-acre farm or subdivision has of record, a perpetual water right, which insures a super-abundance of cheap gravity water for all time to come, at a rate not exceeding $3.00 per acre per year. This rate is permanent and cannot be raised.

When you buy on Grogan's Merced Tracts, you buy:

1st.—In a proven farming territory.

2d.—Close to the richest town, per capita, in America. A town that offers good church, school and social advantages.

3d. Close to San Francisco, Oakland and all the Bay cities—the best markets west of Chicago.

4th. Not only where the soil is unexcelled, and with a water right that is perhaps the best in the State, but also where everything has been done for you, even to the installing of the lateral irrigation ditch. When you buy on Grogan's Merced Tracts there is nothing left for you to do except to go on your land and farm.

The price of this land is only $150 per acre. Terms one-fourth cash, balance 1, 2, 3 years, with interest at 6% on deferred payments. This is only $37.50 per acre for land that will net you from $60 to $300 and upwards per acre, which means that the purchaser will have less real money invested than in any other land offering in California today.

Anyone who buys and takes advantage of the opportunity can easily pay for the property he purchases out of his own earnings inside the purchase time, and remember, this land will double in value inside of two years, just so surely as the State of California continues to develop.

If you so desire, look at every other land offering on the market, but do not buy before investigating Grogan's Merced Tracts.

The Merced Chamber of Commerce has loaned us, for exhibition purposes, a portion of Merced County's prize winning 1911 display. This exhibit may be seen in the windows of my office, 555 S. Spring Street (ground floor.) If you cannot call personally, 'phone or write for free booklet, entitled "Facts For Farmers," fully descriptive of this territory and of Grogan's Merced Tracts.

MEXICAN REBELS TIE UP TOWN.

Americans in Laguna Region Ruled by Brigands.

Agriculture and Commerce Are Etnirely Tied-up.

Siege Is Filled Wih Many Human Interest Events.

BY W. D. HORNADAY.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TORREON (Mex.) March 13.—Bands of rebels and brigands have made the Laguna district, of which Torreon is the industrial center, the scene of their operations for more than a year. Business interests and the non-combatant element of citizens have been made to feel the brunt of this protracted disturbance. This city does not belong to the common Mexican type. It is a creation of modern Mexico. Within the last fifteen years it has sprung from a barren spot upon the glaring sands of the Nazas River Valley to a thriving, pulsating industrial and business municipality of more than 30,000 population.

In this work of upbuilding Americans have been the chief factors. More than $20,000,000 of American capital is invested in industrial and commercial enterprises here and in the immediate tributary territory. Prior to the series of revolutionary events and their attending depressing effect upon business the American colony at Torreon numbered about 700 people. There still remain here about 200 of this number. Most of them are men, the women and children having been sent out of the country to escape possible harm in the event of mob violence.

REBELS HOLD UP TRAINS.

It is indeed a remarkable experience that this handful of Americans and a few other foreigners who determined to "see the thing through" have passed through, and the end is not in sight. For more than five weeks the town has been practically bottled up by bands of rebels, which are close upon every side.

Occasionally, at long intervals of perhaps fifteen to twenty days, a train would be able to get through and make its passage to the outside world, but where there was one of these successes there were nine or more failures.

Time after time trains carrying parties of Americans and other refugees from the town were held up by rebels, and after the passengers had been robbed, the crew was forced to return to Torreon with the train.

Many efforts have been made to get letters out from here telling of the situation that confronts the besieged inhabitants. How many of these special messengers who, in order to get beyond the rebel lines, had to make their way secretly through the mountains by dangerous trails, arrived at their destination is not known here. Even telegraphic communication has been cut off most of the time that the siege has been on.

BUSINESS INTERESTS INJURED.

It is a blockade that has wrought great injury to the industrial and general business interests not only of the town itself but of its whole tributary country. While some of the manufacturing plants here had enough raw material on hand to keep them in operation during this trying period, others have been forced to close down, thus adding to the perilous situation by throwing out of employment many hundreds of men.

What this unemployed element would do in case an opportunity was given to it to form into a mob is a question that brings fear to the heart of more than one American and other citizens who are striving in every possible way to afford protection to the people and property.

If the period of the blockade is kept up much longer famine will be added to the other woes of the bottled-up people and make more acute the possibility of rioting on the part of the destitute and unemployed. No freight has been received here for nearly a month owing to the tying up of the railroads.

Food supplies of all kinds are becoming scarce and enormous prices are asked for that which is available. Several cars of corn and other food products which were ordered here recently during a brief period that the telegraph lines were open were confiscated by rebels before they reached their destination.

MARKET HOUSE EMPTY.

The market house, which in time of normal conditions is filled with a great variety of food products gathered from the rich farms of the Laguna district, is now almost entirely empty.

One of the sources of supply, in the matter of vegetables particularly, for the city, has been the Chinese gardeners who own rich irrigated tracts near town. Several hundred of these Celestials were formerly engaged in gardening, but on account of the horrible massacre of more than 300 of their number in Torreon during the Madero revolution most of them have left this part of the country, and vegetables, which were plentiful, are now hard to obtain.

These days of waiting and suspense on the part of the Americans who are cooped up here like so many men in prison are not without their human interest incidents and features. The absence of news as to what is going on in the outside world adds to their suppressed excitement. Every rumor and report that reaches town, no matter from what source it may come, is quickly spread about and made the subject of the wildest speculation. Little effort is made on the part of these beleaguered foreigners to transact business. Micawber-like, they are waiting for something to turn up.

GOVERNMENT CRITICISED.

Incidentally, the Americans do not hesitate to show their displeasure over the failure of the United States government to protect its subjects in this country.

Opinion is freely expressed that the State Department, instead of warning

DEPARTMENT STORE IS RUN ON THE CLUB PLAN.

Interesting Experiment Succeeds in Large Los Angeles Establishment—Practical Results of the "Did I" Idea—Spreading Infor mation and Enthusiasm Among the Workers and F reezing Out the Chill.

BY HENRY C. WARNACK.

A LARGE idea came to the manager of a big department store in Los Angeles two years ago, and, like everything which touches the Los Angeles business man, the idea was permanently adopted. It came in the form of a question, and the answer completely reversed a big firm's method of business. The question was: "Why should institutions like the Y.M.C.A. and national political party central committees monopolize the committee and club plan of work?" The answer was that an immense business concern can be placed approximately upon a commission form of government basis.

In the mind of the manager here was a big power going to commercial waste. He could see no reason in the world why he should not apply the system to the conduct of a department store that employs from four to six hundred clerks. If co-operation pays in religion and politics, it was reasonable to believe that it would also pay in business, and the manager was after business. It was a big idea, but it needed working out, and the manager set himself and a large and clever executive staff to the immediate business of its development.

You cannot get something for nothing, even in California. The manager knew exactly what he wanted to get; his only problem lay in what to give. He decided to give entertainment and information in return for greater intelligence and efficiency of service.

Providing entertainment with comparatively small expense to the corporation was not difficult. From a staff of 400 employees at least 100 might be spared from the floor between 9 and 10 o'clock any morning. On the fifth floor of the establishment was a convenient hall for lectures.

MAKING EVERYTHING COUNT.

Every large firm contributes annually to many religious and charitable enterprises without any direct returns. The manager decided to get action on some of this output. When the Salvation Army people came to him for his annual subscription, he said: "Yes, we will give you $100 this year, but we want eight of your people to come down on the morning we suggest and give talks to our girls on the work of your social department."

This rule he applied to all others making the same demands on his institution. When the pastor of a negro congregation approached him for a donation, the manager replied: "We will give you $50, but we want a chorus of your best singers to come and give us an hour of music on any morning that is convenient for them." To the temperance workers, the Y.M.C.A. secretaries and the pastors of the large churches he put the same proposition.

It worked admirably. Everybody responded, and the sales people were enthusiastic from the start. Then it occurred to the manager that his employees should contribute something to the plan, so he divised a scheme whereby they should have a part in entertaining one another. He made it a rule that every employee should sing, recite, read a paper or deliver a noration before a part of the staff at least once a month during their terms of service in the store. If an important young person with freckles and a bicycle applied for the position of messenger boy, he was accepted on condition that he had

TOWN OPENING SOON.

Owensmouth to Be Placed on Map of San Fernando Valley in Next Few Weeks.

Final arrangements are being made for the opening of the new town of Owensmouth, subdivided by the Janss Investment Company at the upper end of the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands. The actual date of the opening and the festival to be held, will be announced within a few days. The plans provide for putting the townsite on the market within the next two or three weeks.

The Pacific Electric road, now built to a point beyond the town of Van Nuys, is being rushed into Owensmouth as rapidly as possible. A class A depot will be constructed. The Southern Pacific is also to have a depot in the building.

Following the completion of the mission-style tract office of the Janss company, the next building to be started will likely be that of the bank, the architect's drawings for which are already finished. The building is a pretentious two-story, white tile affair, and the interior fixtures are to be elaborate.

SALES AND EXCHANGES.

The Frisbie-Justema Company reports the following sales and exchanges. Stores on West Washington street, A. C. Addison to G. W. Sloan of Altadena for ranch and cash, price $9000. Residence of L. T. Dudley at Highland Park, and some vacant lots, for a five-acre improved ranch in San Gabriel Valley to H. J. Carter, consideration, $4500. For E. M. Hudson, 320 acres of land near Angeola, Kern county, to P. H. Marley for improved Nebraska farm and cash, consideration, $34,000. Inglewood property and cash to W. H. Hillman for improved ranch of twenty acres at Oceanside, sold to W. E. Spaulding of Inglewood. Five-acre ranch of W. F. Ruffner at Baldwin Park, to Mrs. Lucy Higgsbie, consideration, $4500.

TO GO FIFTEEN STORIES HIGH.

Projected Office Block Will Set New Record.

Latest Structural Marvel to Face Central Park.

Will Occupy Site Leased for Ninety-Nine Years.

Of all the numerous metropolitan building projects of the present day in Los Angeles, one of the most interesting is that just revealed in the plan of the recently-organized "Building Owners" to erect a fifteen-story office structure on West Sixth street immediately adjoining the Consolidated Realty building at Sixth and Hill. The enterprise is significant not only because it marks another step in the phenomenal changing of the Sixth-street sky-line, but on account of the unique architectural and engineering problems involved in the construction of the proposed building.

Hitherto architects, in planning local skyscrapers, have been content to get ten or eleven stories within the limits of the 150 feet of height allowed by the building ordinances. In the magnificent $1,000,000 structure now under way for the Los Angeles Investment Company at Eighth and Broadway thirteen stories will be accommodated above a high basement.

Thornton Fitzhugh, the architect and engineer of the structural marvel proposed for West Sixth street, has adopted an unusual arrangement by which the floors of that structure are to be of thin slab construction excepting over the first story, where a false ceiling will be introduced to allow for pipes and wire conduits. This plan will permit of the construction of fourteen full stories, the gallery story above the first floor constituting practically a fifteenth story.

The building, which will cost about $465,000, will be admirably situated for the purposes intended, fronting directly upon Central Park and being accessible from all parts of the business section. It will have a frontage of sixty-five feet by a depth of 150 feet and will be of the shape of a letter "U," with a court 20x102 feet in size extending in from a twenty-foot alley at the rear. Having a free southern exposure from this court, the building will be unusually well lighted.

LATEST FIREPROOF TYPE.

The building will be of the latest standard steel frame construction, and absolutely fireproof throughout. Not an inch of wood will enter into the finish of the structure, all the doors, window frames and mouldings being of pressed steel with a baked-in stain perfectly imitating light mahogany.

The front of the building will be faced with cream colored enameled terra cotta, excepting for the first two stories, which will be faced with granite. The main shaft will be plain, the upper portion being ornately treated after the Renaissance style.

The corridor floors throughout will be tiled, and every office will have a tile border twenty inches in width. The lobby will be sixteen feet in width and will be ornately finished in marble. The corridors will be wainscoted in the same material.

In all 350 offices are provided for above the first story, which will be given over to stores. The ground floor, with its gallery, will have a height of seventeen feet and will be lighted not only by prism glass street windows but by skylights in the court. Throughout, the architect has carefully considered the economies of construction as applied to space arrangements, the result being the securing of the maximum of income consistent with office building requirements.

SITE UNDER LONG LEASE.

The site of the proposed Sixth-street skyscraper is held under a ninety-nine-year lease, the recent consummation of which was reported in The Times. The Building Owners' Corporation, holder of this lease, has in its directorate a number of prominent men of this city, among these being George R. Whitcomb, head of the Whitcomb Company; Benjamin F. Pierson, general superintendent of the California Edison Electric Company; Milo Baker, retired capitalist; Harold F. Whitcomb, son of George R. Whitcomb, and a recent graduate of Dartmouth College, and W. E. McVay, vice-president of the German-American Savings Bank.

This corporation will pay for its century-long tenure of the Sixth-street site a total of $1,188,000 in rentals. The transaction in its entirety was handled through the Whitcomb Company, which has been identified with many of the notable long-term leases concluded in this city in recent years.

Thornton Fitzhugh, the architect of the splendid improvement projected, was the architect of the mammoth Pacific Electric building at Sixth and Main streets, together with other noteworthy structures in this and other cities of the Southwest.

EIGHT HOMES STARTED.

Eight modern bungalows were started in Vermont Square and New Vermont Square during the past week. These are situated as follows: G. Dombrowski, corner of Forty-ninth street and Halidale; Mrs. Ada Albee Delscamp, south side of Forty-second street, between St. Andrews and Gramercy places; Claire E. Snow, north side of Forty-sixth street, between Denker avenue and Harvard boulevard; Jessie E. White, west side of Budlong, between Forty-ninth and Fiftieth streets; Kenneth M. Lees, west side of Arlington, between Santa Barbara and Forty-first drive; Alfred Osterberg, north side of Forty-third street, between St. Andrews and Gramercy; D. W. WILL IMPROVE STATE'S ROADS.

Gov. Hunt Outlines Plan to Employ Convicts.

Citizens of Prescott Greet Chief Executive.

New Reclamation Project Is Launched by Eastern Men.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) March 16.—Gov. Hunt and other State officials were the guests of Prescott Saturday, received by a committee of business men in the early morning hours, the town brilliantly lighted at the time by pyramids of red fire. The visit developed into a boost for good roads. Through the rain the party was taken on a twenty-mile ride over the completed part of the Prescott-Phoenix highway via the Senator mine. Pioneers Home also was visited. In the evening the Governor met 250 Prescott men at a Chamber of Commerce banquet, whereat very little was talked except roads. The Governor said that he proposed to work the convicts on the public highways and in the case of the short term men or men whose terms were nearing the end, if their conduct had been good he believed it would be safe to entrust them with their work without even a guard. He also said that it was his purpose to remove the stripes from their clothes and in the case of men in whom the special trust of behaving themselves without a guard was reposed, he would be willing to risk his office as a forfeit; if they should take advantage of his confidence and run away he would be willing to resign, as the penalty. Another idea he advanced was that in addition to the good time allowance now given for work, the prisoners should be paid a small stipend of perhaps 25 cents a day to accumulate to their credit against the day of discharge, that they might have at least a little bit of money when they faced the world again after their confinement.

The response to the Governor's address was made by Judge E. W. Wells, who was the Republican candidate for Governor in the last election. Senator-elect Ashurst was one of the main speakers. He told of plans he had made to secure the building by the government of a wagon bridge across the Colorado River at Yuma. He said it was the only river that runs for 1600 miles through the United States and is not crossed by a wagon bridge of some kind and he believed it was high time there was no such river without a bridge. And such a bridge would be an important factor in the transcontinental highway.

WILL BUILD NEW DAMS.

A large party of Indiana business men, headed by former Congressman James Watson, all of them stockholders of the Arizona Land & Irrigation Company, has been in Prescott during the past week looking over the property of the company north of Prescott. Two water storage dams are to be built at a cost of $1,500,000, conserving the flood waters of the Granite and Willow creeks. The company has title to 32,000 acres of good land in the vicinity and is planning to plant 10,000 acres in fruit, to be divided into small farms and sold to settlers on long-term contracts.

Over 1000 men are employed on the new Verde Valley Railroad. The grade is about complete to the Verde River, down which the work will be of the heaviest character for twenty miles. In places the road bed is being cut along the side of a canyon wall and the route will be scenic in the extreme. The whole thirty-six-mile road will cost about $1,250,000.

The Arizona Power Company is preparing to furnish electric power for pumping in the Verde Valley. Already fifty farm owners have subscribed and it is probable that at least 4000 acres will be irrigated by water raised from wells by electric power.

The new Hermit Canyon trail of the Santa Fe Railroad Company is now complete down into the Grand Canyon from a point about three miles west of El Tovar, giving sightseers an opportunity to descend to the river by one trail and return by another. Heretofore practically a monopoly has been enjoyed by the Bright Angel trail, operated by former Congressman Ralph Cameron.

DEDICATE NEW BRIDGE.

Sunday a number of Flagstaff residents in automobiles formally dedicated the new bridge across the Little Colorado River. The structure is 660 feet in length and has been built in the most substantial manner. It has been needed for many years, being on the only thoroughfare into the northeastern part of Arizona, across a river frequently impassable on account of high water or quicksand.

The Prescott Chamber of Commerce has approved a plan submitted by the Rev. Charles H. Davis of this city for a Chautauqua, from June 15 to 30, and will raise $3500 for the purpose.

In an Indian hut near Seligman last Saturday was found the body of an unknown man. In the head were a number of deep gashes inflicted with an ax, which was found beside the body. Evidence at hand indicates that the man was a tramp and that he had been killed by others of his kind in a drunken row.

LAWSUIT OVER A PIG.

Judge Smith in the Superior Court has just ended a case of keenest interest to the people of Walker. It involved the ownership of a pig, which strayed away from the home of Victor Strom on Lynx Creek and found comfortable quarters in the yard of J. M. Duncan, several miles away. The pig had grown to the dimensions of a hog before it was located by its owner. Mr. Duncan demurred at the idea of turning back a hog where only a pig had left the Strom home. So the matter was taken into court and fought bitterly, though at some time during the proceedings the animal in dispute was slaughtered and the flesh put to best possible use at a memorable feast given by Mr. Duncan to his neighbors. At Walker, Strom was given a verdict of $15. When the case was appealed to the Superior Court, Judge Smith decided that he was without jurisdiction and the judgment of the lower court will therefore stand.

PAPER HAS A HISTORY.

Yesterday the Prescott Journal-Miner celebrated its forty-eighth birthday with a new heading and a new dress of type. The paper was established under the name of the Miner in Chino Valley, a hand-press and type having formed a part of the impedimenta of the party sent out by President Lincoln to establish a Territorial government. When the capital was moved to Prescott, the paper went with it. It was then a five-column, four-page weekly, edited by Tisdale Hand, and most of the news consisted of accounts of Indian raids and military reprisals. The daily was established in 1872. It now is owned and edited by J. C. Milnes.

Paul P. Hastings, for years general freight and passenger agent of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railroad system, is understood to be slated for the position of assistant to Edward W. Chambers, western traffic manager of the Santa Fe system, with offices in San Francisco.

Patrick Fenton, for ten years in charge of the National Forest district at Grand Canyon, has resigned and will make his home hereafter in California.

At Flagstaff Thursday, C. O. Robinson, cashier of the Arizona Central Bank, died of pneumonia, aged 47. He had been a resident of Flagstaff since 1901. A wife and daughter survive. Two brothers are residents in Bakersfield, Cal.

MISS SUNBONNET.

BY SUSANNE GLENN.

A neat, white picket fence stretched between the two gardens.

The gardens were as equal in excellence as two gardens very well can be; perhaps the garden of the little white cottage may have contained a few more flowers than the garden of the big white house. But even that was a question.

Jeannette Perry sat in her tiny grape arbor thinking hard. She was thinking about James Harper. How could anyone, knowing the circumstances, sit in the Perry garden and not think of James Harper?

"Good morning, Miss Sunbonnet," he had said on the very first morning she ventured into the garden, as he endeavored to get a glimpse at the face under the faded pink folds.

When the girl lifted her head, the man gave a start of astonishment at the steady, questioning brown eyes and serious, sweet lips.

"I—I beg your pardon," he stammered. "I thought you were a child."

"I am glad you are neighborly," she answered simply, "since our gardens adjoin. Perhaps you will not mind showing me how to do things? I never made a garden before."

"If only you will let me," he cried eagerly.

So it came about that James Harper worked in the Perry garden as much as he did in his own, and every plant, every flower, spoke loudly of his presence.

Jeanette was very happy in her Eden. While she dug in the soft earth on her side of the trim picket fence, her heart seemed to grow unaccountably mellow and receptive. As she planted the seeds and tended the young plants at James's direction, other invisible seeds were sown that produced roses in her cheeks and music in her voice.

"You are a great gardener, Miss Sunbonnet," James often observed, "and you seem to grow with it. I am getting jealous; you are beating me!"

"It is because I love everything so—they cannot help growing for me!"

"You are a little girl, after all," he said, smiling indulgently.

And still Jeanette did not understand, did not comprehend what it all meant, until Lucile Emerson came to the big white house.

Lucile was tall and studiously graceful. She wore wonderful clinging gowns and arranged her hair in a manner not condusive to the wearing of sunbonnets. She monopolized James, she rode his horse, called him "Jimmie" with the utmost freedom.

So Jeanette sat in her little arbor and thought her poor, unhappy thoughts, and fought for strength to go on with her ordinary, colorless living.

Two persons occupied the larger arbor on the garden of the big white house. After a comfortable fashion they sometimes had when together, each was interested in a bit of reading.

After a time the girl closed the book in her lap, and looked at her unconscious companion.

"Jimmie," she cried presently, "I've made a discovery about you, and I hope you are not going to deny it!"

Harper's smile was an amused one. He always found this girl's unexpectedness entertaining.

"So?"

"You are interested in this young person next door, and I want you to tell me about her."

The "young person next door" clasped her hands over her thumping heart, dreading to hear his answer, and yet not daring to disclose herself.

"She is a very nice young person, Lucile," said James calmly.

"Nice? I should hardly think that the word, Jimmie. I—I do not know just the word to describe her, but it certainly is not 'nice'!"

"It is a little difficult, Lucile, and I do not know that there is any occasion for you to worry your pretty head about it."

"Sugar-coated, like all your sarcasm! Well, there just is occasion my boy, where you are concerned. Tell me, how came you to be such friends—and do you really care?"

"We are friends because our gardens adjoin, and because country people have a way of getting acquainted over the garden fence. And, of course, I like her, because, as I told you, she is a nice little girl."

"But that is not the point. Do you care enough to forget that she is in no possible way suited to you?"

"One cannot forget what one never knew, dear child."

"But Jimmie, you are such a scholar, so learned that you discomfort even me. I can discover nothing in which she is really posted."

"You know very little about her, Lucile. I have never known of her reading anything I was not interested in, at least."

"And she is quiet and dependent, and afraid of things, where you have always admired a fearless woman. I dare say she never rode a horse in all her life."

"I believe she is a bit nervous about horses," he admitted with his indulgent smile.

"Oh, I see there is no use in talking. Facts, however glaring, have no effect upon a man in love."

"So that is what all this means? You think I am in love with Miss Perry? I thought you more discriminating, dear second-cousin Lucile! I merely like her very much, because, I repeat, she is a very nice girl!"

"I think you expressed it better this morning when you called her Miss Sunbonnet."

"Still, remember there is something under the bonnet," advised James, walking away with provoking good humor.

Jeannette in her arbor, sat in motionless misery.

"It is true," she whispered; "he admires a woman who is capable and bright and fearless, and I am a plain, stupid little thing afraid of my own shadow. Lucile loves him—and he loves her, only he doesn't understand it yet, any more than I did until she came and set fire to my very heart!"

Until long after darkness had settled, she sat motionless with her thoughts.

"Now when it is too late I have overcome one of my deficiencies," she thought bitterly as she sat fearlessly in the breathless night.

Across the sky streaked jagged gleams of lightning. Thunder crashed nearer and nearer. Then rain dashed into the frail shelter. But she smiled contemptuously, defiantly.

"Whatever makes my little Miss Sunbonnet so pale?" inquired Harper next morning as he crossed into the neighboring garden.

"I am not pale," denied Jeannette flushing uncomfortably. "And I wish you would call me by my name; that other sounds too foolish, really!

James wondered vaguely. But before he could investigate this new turn of affairs, Lucile called from the porch that she was ready for her ride.

"You'd better look out for Jet this morning," he cautioned as she mounted the uneasy black horse. "She is nervous as a witch."

"You must know I am utterly unafraid of a horse," answered the girl loud enough for Jeannette to hear. "A few miles of this fine, open road will quiet her, never fear."

Jeannette shivered as Jet pranced out of the gate.

"I could never ride like that," she said aloud. Then she saw James's admiring glance toward the graceful girl on the flying horse, and hastened to the back of her garden.

An hour later Jeannette was working with the roses at the front gate. A clatter of hoofs told her of the rider's return. But why was Lucile clinging so desperately to Jet's neck, her white face half concealed by her loosened hair and the horse's flying mane?

Jet was plunging wildly, uncontrollably. The moment she comprehended, Jeannette flashed through the gate.

"Nothing must happen to Lucile," she sobbed frantically. "He loves her; he loves her!"

Wildly she waved her bonnet before the oncoming horse. As Jet slackened and half-turned, Jeannette clutched the loosened bridle. The horse swung round and stopped, evidently weary from her run. Lucile slipped limply to the grass, unhurt.

"Jeannette, Jeannette," cried Harper, rushing to her and loosening the bridle from her fingers.

At sight of her white cheeks he took her suddenly in his arms.

"You are sure you are not hurt?" he cried sharply. "Oh, Jeannette, what made you do it? You might have been killed!"

"I wanted to save Lucile," she whispered.

James Harper looked at her with eyes through which his heart spoke. Color returned to her pale cheeks, and at sight of it he stooped and kissed her tenderly, reverently.

"Precious little Miss Sunbonnet," he whispered.

A "gentleman from Indiana," Calvin Worrall by name, has divorced his young wife, Corinne. He says that he loves her devotedly still but when he found her posing in the window of a local drug store as a feminine illusion, he thought it time to separate. Judge Troutt agreed with the husband and granted him a divorce decree. When the lady recovers from her illusion perhaps there may be a reconciliation.

Pioneer ROOFING

Our Ready Roofing holds its life indefinitely. The secret of this lies in our thorough knowledge of how to treat asphalt-saturated material in the best way to retain its natural oil. Cheap roofing quickly dries up and falls to pieces, even when heavily painted. You don't have to paint Pioneer Roofing.

The sand coating used for the final finishing of Pioneer Rubber Sanded Roofing is a distinctive and valuable feature that no other roofing possesses. It adds materially to its strength while leaving it pliable and easy to handle.

Most of the Ready Roofing used in Los Angeles is Pioneer Roofing. This fact alone shows that it is from all standpoints THE BEST.

Greatest Street Improvement Activity Yet Known Now in Santa Monica

The Magnificent Wilshire Boulevard to be Continued Through Soldiers' Home; Oregon Avenue to be Paved for a Distance of 24,000 feet; California, Ninth, Eleventh, Fourteenth, Idaho and Many Other Streets to be Improved at Once.

To a stranger coming suddenly within the environs of Santa Monica, the tremendous street activity might lead him to believe that its residents were preparing for some world wide event, to such colossal proportions are Santa Monica's street improvements growing; even though he knew nothing of the millions of dollars that were being lavished upon its pleasure portion along the beach; its schools, club houses, casinos, including the Col. J. B. Lankershim and J. W. Mitchell masterly hotel, casino and beach resort its many superb subdivisions and its beautiful new homes.

Wilshire Boulevard Will Be Continued.

At last the matter concerning the completion of the superb Wilshire boulevard through the grounds of the Soldiers' Home has been settled, and this world famous thoroughfare will pursue its uninterrupted way toward the sea.

The matter was taken up between representatives of Soldiers' Home and county representatives, but a few days ago, and it was shown by the county representatives that a large portion of the grounds occupied now by the hospital and other buildings belonged to the county according to their map, which resulted in the Soldiers' Home officials ceding absolute title of Brown boulevard as well as that portion of the famous San Vicente boulevard within the home boundary to the county. This latter boulevard is one of the principal thoroughfares in the world-noted eight-mile automobile race course, and the boulevard on which the far-famed Brentwood Park is located. Wilshire boulevard is to be further enhanced by a continuous parking of trees set ten feet apart, and flowers, bordering it on both sides from the city to the sea. Work on this has started.

Paving Of Oregon Avenue And Other Street Improvements.

Oregon avenue is one of the beautiful boulevards running at right angles with the sea. According to the new and elaborate plans for its improvement, 24,000 feet of its length will be asphalt paved, which includes in its scope all of the territory between the City Hall at Fourth street, to the city limits of Sawtelle at Cambridge street.

Other streets which are to be improved at once are: Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Fourteenth, Seventeenth, California, Idaho, Alta, Marguerita, Carlisle and Georgiana, as well as those in the new 180-acre subdivision of the Palisades. These latter streets are to be paved and are to include sewers, water, gas, as well as sidewalks and gutters and parkways of trees.

Other streets which are now nearing completion, are the handsome oiled roadways in Ethelwyn Manor. These are of a very superior type, being finished with rock screenings and rolled perfectly smooth, as well as highest grade cement walks and curbs.

A very elaborate system of magnificent boulevards is now being planned for the superb Wright-Callender-Andrews & Co. villa site property, in the Santa Monica foothills, soon to be subdivided. These, of necessity, due to the heights of the property, will undoubtedly be laid out more or less serpentine fashion on a gradual slope to the crest; being connected by rustic bridges spanning the chasms and otherwise promising many fascinating and attractive features, in both their man-made beauties and natural charm.

Brentwood Park Boulevards Planned By Famed Scenic Artist.

The regal boulevards of Brentwood Park were laid out by a noted scenic artist, which accounts for their superiority of grace and beauty; attracting not only the attention of those accustomed to the usual home parks of our own country, but arresting considerable comment from those who are familiar with the palaces of royalty abroad and their magnificent surrounding parks.

They are designed on big, generous lines, in harmony with the lavish proportions usually adopted by these grounds of royalty, with broad, beautiful boulevards varying between seventy-five to one hundred and eighty feet in width.

Each boulevard pursues a gracefully curving, serpentine course from San Vicente boulevard to the more elevated portion of the Park, winding now here around one of the circular plazas of trees, bordered by ovals of magnificent imported shrubs and flowering plants placed at each intersection of the streets, the circles running seventy-five feet in width; now there it takes an imperial sweep past some palatial home.

Each boulevard is bordered by the beautiful lawns, shrubbery and graveled walks bespeaking the true manorial homeplace.

In the center of Brentwood Park is the crowning point of its beauty, a large circle consisting of six acres, planted to a most elaborate scheme of floral gardening, in which will later be established a mirror lake and Japanese garden.

It is largely due to this unusual plan of general layout that Brentwood Park has become so widely known as the perfection of suburban home places; but a few minutes spin by automobile to Los Angeles, or a short ride by car, and yet it affords all of the seclusion that the most exclusive could desire, environed by one of the most picturesque natural settings of mountain, canyon and sea that there is in existence in this glorious Santa Monica.

TRACT LIKE A PARK.

New San Gabriel Valley Subdivision Marvel of Landscaper's Art. Huge Sum Expended.

The California-Michigan Land and Water Company, a syndicate of Michigan millionaires, places on sale today a subdivision adjoining the beautiful estate of Henry E. Huntington on Huntington drive, which will be known as "Michillinda." The tract includes 157 acres, and is covered with orange trees, walnuts, sycamores and live oaks. The entire tract has been landscaped and developed into a veritable park.

The property was purchased for approximately $200,000, and over $50,000 is being expended for improvements. A feature of Michillinda will be the park and water garden facing Huntington drive. The landscape work is under the direction of John Shaw, an artist whose work is well known throughout the United States.

In the center of the park will be an artificial lake, 70x150 feet. Marine plants will give a touch of picturesqueness. At one end of the lake will be an extensive pergola, over which will climb roses and vines. The walks through the park will be of gravel. The entire place will be lighted at night by ornamental electroliers of the type now used on Spring street, and which also will be installed throughout the tract.

Michillinda is on the highest ground in San Gabriel Valley, and commands a beautiful view up and down the valley, and of the mountains. It is reached by the Monrovia or Glendora cars. The selling agent is the James B. Forbes Company.

Many of the above will immediately construct homes on their purchases, it is stated.

FOUR BLOCKS PLANNED.

PERMIT RECORD IS LARGE.

WHITTIER, March 16.—That four new brick blocks will be started in the business district next week and that building permits aggregating nearly $200,000 have been issued since the first of the year is evidence that business in this section has been remarkably good in spite of the dry weather. Stimulated by the recent rains, activities in all lines will increase, it is believed.

A two-story brick block is to be erected on the corner of Philadelphia street and Bright avenue for Mrs Clara St. Johns. It will cost about $18,000. This is the present site of the old Whittier Hotel, one of the landmarks of the town. A garage is to be built on the corner of Milton and Philadelphia streets for H. G. Cauldwell and H. G. Bailey, to cost $8500. A two-story brick building for the city fire department and a brick building on West Philadelphia street, to be built by A. J. Stevens, are other new projects.

There are about fifty residences under construction, costing from $1000 to $10,000 as well as another building for the High School and the new public school on North Pickering avenue. With one or two exceptions all the work is being done by local contractors.

SELLS FINE GROVE.

Bartels & Schwarz report the sale of a 17½-acre orange grove, situated on West Collins street, near North Glassill, Orange Co., for David Carr to Mrs. Louise B. Schilling, for $21,750.

DEPARTMENT STORE.

energy, a good character and would prepare a thesis on the dilemma of indeterminism or Bergson's theory of duration. The subject was not always suggested to Freckles, but if it happened that the young gentleman's will to do ran slightly in advance of his synthetic philosophy he was handed a piece of paper on which were printed one hundred subjects from which he could make a choice for his first literary excursion.

A woman whose heart is in the work was engaged to come to the store twice a week and conduct nonsectarian religious services, which usually take the form of unpretentious talks to the young women of the institution along lines of character building.

In itself the educational idea was not new and the manager was glad to accept conventional lines already established and proved reliable by twenty-five large concerns in different cities of the United States.

THE CLUB PLAN.

It was the club and committee idea, however, which most appealed to the manager, and it is in its delightful development that the keenest interest of all employees centers.

The chiefs of every department and their best workers are organized into separate clubs, which places the store and its organization very much on the basis of a city, and gives it something like the commission form of government of a municipality. That the whole scheme pays is proven by the books of the firm. Their business in the year 1911 shows an increase of $400,000 over the business of 1910, and at least 15 per cent. of this can be traced directly to the club and educational plan.

DID I?

One of the clubs bears the unique name of "Did I?" and its membership is composed of general expense boys, the stamp man, the complaint man and the assistant manager of several departments. In the single question of "Did I turn out the lights in my stockroom?" the members of this club save the firm hundreds of dollars annually. Another question which means much to the house is "Did I offer my customers a transfer slip from my department to the next?" Still another example is "Did I suggest to the customer who wanted her goods delivered C.O.D. that we give coupons only on cash sales made in the house?"

Not for a moment must it be imagined that the work of these clubs is limited to a stupid set of perfunctory interrogations. Entering the clubroom with bristling energy promptly at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning is the president of the "Dustless" Club, who is also the buyer and the manager of the suits and coats department. Already seated at the table are half a dozen of his head people and the room has an atmosphere of keener expectancy than a first night in any theater. "What's the matter with our fitters?" thunders the president. "They need enthusiasm," answers the chairman of the committee on Arbitration. "The fitter is the salesladies' last hope. When the fitter is called in she either spoils or makes a sale. If she is not enthusiastic about the suit or coat and doesn't show on the instant that a few touches will make it a perfect fit we lose the sale and sometimes the customer."

Does the president stop to think? Not for a second. He snaps his answer out with a sort of spontaneous combustion. He lives in a state of knowing. To think and to act on the spot are a part of his qualifications for the position he holds, and it is his business to surround himself with that kind of a staff in so far as the money alloted his department will buy that kind of service.

NO CHILL WANTED.

"We don't pay saleswomen salaries to dummies to let the fitters make their sales for them," he replies. "Enthusiasm can be too raw and a sale is lost as quickly in that way. There are times when the fitter can help close a sale and I'll ask the committee to take this up with those fitters who are cold on the job. Tell them to loosen up. They must understand that the fitter who sends out a chill loses her place. Speak to your suit women and remind them that the fitter cannot possibly know what they have already told the customer about the goods being shown. By continued conversation with the customer the suit woman should tip the point at which the prospective sale has arrived.

"While we are talking about fitters I want the committee to observe the girl on the end pressing board. Her power was going the other day when the machine was at rest. I timed her for a minute from the other end of the room and when I went by she threw the switch. This is literally burning our money. If you want that department to make a showing you must hold down expenses. Let us hear from the stockroom."

"We need another hand the worst way," replies the head of the suit and coat stock.

"If you can get along through February without this extra expense it will help us wonderfully in holding down in our department," the president replies. "Don't overwork yourself, but see if you can't figure it out for one month more. Where are you shortest?"

"We need a duster more than anything else," is the ready answer.

Thereupon the manager of shirt waists offers a suggestion. "February is a dull month for us," he says, "and we can loan the stock a girl all day for a few weeks."

The transfer is promptly ordered with the result that one department is saved the expense of hiring a new girl while the store is saved the wages both of the new clerk and of the idle one. All of this is done without taking up one moment of time from assistant manager, manager or superintendent. It is a capital illustration of how the entire scheme works in the great store's economy.

Socially the club system infuses an air of delightful expectancy throughout the store. Programmes are arranged by the different clubs, in which the entire store is invited to participate, and this gives the members of the big staff a round of legitimate pleasure arranged without expense and without keeping damagingly late hours. The legitimate craving of the young people in the store for entertainment and social intercourse is thus carefully met without exposing any of them to the random and questionable amusements.

SALESMANSHIP SCHOOL.

Had anyone predicted ten years ago that America holds as many people who could afford to own and run automobiles as is now the case the prophecy would have been rejected the world over. This fact alone inspired the manager to introduce a school of salesmanship.

"It is like this," he said to his executive staff when the subject was first broached to them, "we see in this city alone thousands of persons running automobiles when five years ago we never suspected that a hundred people in the city could afford them. It proves to me that people can buy goods if they are made to want them. They want automobiles and they get them. They will buy our goods if we can make them want the goods. All over this country the storehouses of factories are glutted with their production. The factory man's one hope is not the jobber and not the traveling salesman. It is not even the owners of retail stores. His one hope is the young man and young woman behind the counter who deals directly with the customer. I believe that the entire industrial future of the United States depends upon competent salesmanship and if there's any way to develop the sort of salesmanship that sells I am going to secure it for this store."

The manager, by the way, is 35 years of age and looks younger. It happens, either by accident or premeditation, that the head of every department on the five floors of that store is also between 30 and 35 years of age. The man the manager placed in charge of this salesmanship idea is a Norwegian, 35 years of age, who is a vegetarian and a teetotaler and who looks to be 24. He was removed from the head of a big department and given nothing but an idea for his new workshop. Nothing works a man harder than an idea, if he is the right sort of a man and the idea is the right kind.

BOOK WOMAN'S PLAN.

This man and idea represented the only principle which makes anything worth while from a star to a peanut stand. It presented a favorable combination of forces and when this happens, results are sure to follow because it is the simple law of principle applied to purpose and from this law there is no escape. The young man learned that a woman in New York had written a book on salesmanship and was making it stick. He could have bought a copy of the book for $1 net, but he decided that a ticket to New York was the greater economy. To New York he went and placed himself in the hands of the woman who wrote the book. So far as he was concerned, she had Hypatia, Madam Curie and all of their class nailed to the mast and frazzled in the wind. It took him about three days to inoculate his system with the book woman's plan and he came back to the Coast on the limited thinking faster than the train ran. In a week he was adjusting New York theories to western salesmanship conditions and inventing new theories of his own. He undertook the instruction of a small class of twenty-five of the store's most promising people in a thorough one-year course of the finer arts, in salesmanship, but he called the whole store up in sections of 100 at least once a week for two years to hammer into them a few essentials, such as the fact that human service and respect for all classes served is the first essential of business.

Then he made them understand the necessity for atmosphere. He wanted them to understand that atmosphere is not the crazy hallucination of the dilettante of literature and art, but is the common sense asset of every good business man. Atmosphere in a dry goods store means hospitality. It is the attitude which goes out from the clerk to the customer and to which every sort of customer is compelled to respond. Of course, such an attitude cannot be struck by a person who is sloven and cheerless.

A SWEET BREATH.

That led the instructor into the vital field of personality and the things he told those 400 people about clean teeth, a sweet breath and a shining face and shining shoes all helped in the making of a successful staff. No detail was too trivial for his emphasis. One of the essentials on which he insisted was the voice. He admitted that every man and woman might not have a rich, vibrant voice of a quality which makes verbiage more like wine than like words, but he maintained that every person has his own tone and that a failure to find and employ this tone demonstrates unnatural breathing and deficiencies in character, such as deceit and bitterness. He forced them to comprehend that salesmanship without confidence-building is an impossibility and from one simple step to another he led his whole store to the expression of those riches of personality which absolutely dominate every possible situation.

Naturally out of the many, a few would see the light and these few he selected for the more exhaustive studies of the classroom. It was soon discernible that he could teach better by demonstration than by word, since people can comprehend objects of vision when they misinterpret terms of speech.

The result was the adoption of weekly demonstrations attended by different sections of the store and in which salesmanship of the indifferent kind and of the alert and expert kind were forced upon the attention of the clerks who needed it most. This has been prosecuted with so much vigor that it would be impossible to consult a clerk in that store on the purchase of anything from a paper of pins to a diamond breach and not receive both sympathetic attention and expert advice. They have created for the store an atmosphere of sincerity so distinct that it is intensely recognized when encountered. None of them feel that they have mastered salesmanship, but all of them have a business courage and disposition which has been an illumination to those who have watched the development of the plan.

CROWNS HIGH HILL.

New Huntley Apartments Command Fine View of City—Building One of Largest of Type.

One of the most noteworthy of the apartment-houses recently erected in this city is the large Huntley apartment just completed at No. 1207 West Third street by Allison Barlow. The building, which is one of the largest of its type in Los Angeles, crowns a commanding elevation and overlooks practically the entire city. Plans for the structure were drawn by Jefferey and Van Trees.

The Huntley is three stories in height and of cement plaster exterior. It has a frontage of 246 feet on Beylston avenue by 137 feet on Third street and is of the general shape of a letter "H." It contains in all 182 rooms, these being divided into sixty-seven apartments of two, three, four and five rooms each. The lobby is large and handsomely finished. A large ballroom and amusement-room are features.

The property will be managed by the owner, who is an experienced hotel man. The house is now being handsomely furnished with mahogany furniture and phones are being installed in each apartment. The place will be opened March 20.

REALTY FIRM BANQUETED.

Following a custom inaugurated several months ago, W. I. Hollingsworth, head of the firm of W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., gave a dinner to the members of his office at Levi's on Friday evening, March 8. The object of these meetings, as expressed by Mr. Hollingsworth, is to create a closer unity, and to foster greater harmony among the different departments. An open discussion followed the dinner, the new Hollingsworth building at Sixth and Hill streets, conditions affecting the real estate market, the stimulus added by recent rains, and modern selling methods being the topics talked upon. Those present were: W. I. Hollingsworth, B. O. Miller, C. B. Hollingsworth, F. W. Kadletz, J. L. Addis, W. J. Rice, M. H. Koehler, E. A. Weber, H. G. Bell, J. O. Haley, H. W. Wright, Louis Evans, R. B. Chidwalader, G. Winne, E. G. Carter, E. E. Olsen, C. S. Older, J. D. Cassatt, Miss Ringo, Miss Gordon and Miss Webb.

LAYING OUT PARK.

Nine Acres in Heart of Athens-on-the-Hill to Be Beautified — Many Sales Reported.

In accordance with the plans of the subdividers, improvement work is now begun on Arcadia Park, consisting of nine acres, laying between Figueroa street and Vermont avenue, in Athens-on-the-Hill. The plans have been made for a large fountain to be constructed along Grecian lines in Central Park at the junction of Olympia, Campaign and Laconia boulevards in the same tract.

Watkins & Belton, owners, report the following sales in the subdivision: William H. Naary, $500; W. L. Clark, $1500; C. H. Plath, $2000; H. G. Folsom, $800; George T. Fourl, $1400; Atlanta Trabu, $1200; Cris N. Falksen, $1000; J. Ralph Anderson, $500; L. L. Campbell, $800; B. R. Stewart, $1600; T. W. Whittaker, $800; E. E. Richard, $500; C. E. Thompson, $500; Cleveland B. Holden, $800; Fred Luth, $1200; Grove D. Streator, $950; the Misses Schotta, $1000; C. Edward Page, $500; Alfred W. Jones, $6000; John R. Leonard, $1000; George B. Thatcher, $1000; Charles R. Plumb, $800; A. L. Davis, $500; W. S. Meredith, $500; Willard L. Buell, $1100; James E. Barker, $1200.

AT THE CITY'S EDGE.

A new and sightly tract to be known as Lafayette Square is soon to be placed on the market by the Crenshaw Trust and Realty Company. The property is situated on high mesa land extending from Washington boulevard to Sixteenth street immediately adjoining Crenshaw boulevard on the west. The holding comprises eighty acres and is the last piece of the old Nadeau Vineyard Rancho to be subdivided. The present owners acquired the acreage from the Nadeau family many years ago and have steadily held onto it, awaiting the time when the city should have advanced to the limits of the property. The president of the corporation is G. L. Crenshaw and C. R. L. Crenshaw is secretary and treasurer. The firm has offices in the new Title Insurance building.

YUCAIPA VALLEY.

Claussen Bros., sales agents for the Redlands and Yucaipa Land Company, report sales in their Yucaipa Valley irrigated land and in Yucaipa City town lots, to the following buyers: Dr. E. Barron, seven acres; W. W. Robbins, ten acres; Mrs. E. V. Garwood, three town lots; E. J. Garwood, ten acres, apple land; C. E. Garwood, ten acre and one lot; John Koehler, ten acres; Mrs. Anna Moore, seven and one-half acres; A. G. Andrews, ten acres, and L. C. Wa[illegible] acres. These buyers will [illegible] holdings to fruit [illegible] spring. Mrs. E. V. Garwood will begin at once the erection of a house on her land on Redlands boulevard. H. E. $100 Gives You Any Home You Choose —and you'll find the monthly payments as easy or easier than the rent you're paying now. $23 to $30 covers everything—the principal, interest, taxes, and even your insurance. We don't believe in charging for extras and never do business that way.

Rodgers Park

You know that Vermont avenue is the only avenue running straight through from the mountains to the sea. You know that Normandie avenue is one of the prettiest in Los Angeles. Rodgers Park stretches from Vermont to Normandie avenue and lies so high and dry that you have a most magnificent view of the entire city before and below you from this vantage point.

Here are some features that we don't believe you will readily find anywhere else, especially when our prices and terms are considered: Public tennis court and playground, model stores, 5c fare on yellow car line transferring to all other cars of the company, 14 separate parks on the tract, homes containing from 5 to 7 rooms, good finish throughout, polished floors, big, home-like fireplaces, choice hardware, built-in features, artistic fixtures, cabinet kitchens, sleeping porches, white enameled bath rooms. Choose from about 40 new homes—all different. You get the use of and a free 2-year option on the adjoining 50-ft. lot at its present price.

offers an unheard of opportunity for the man without a great amount of ready cash for immediate investment, who still is enough of a live wire to want to own his home. Are you one?

is just such a tract as is best suited for the comfort, health and happiness of such families as are tired of living in flats or other cooped-up city quarters. Take a ride out to Rodgers Park. Ideal living there always.

Choose Your Home Now

Rodgers Park is an opportunity. It's hardly true that an opportunity only comes once in a lifetime, but each opportunity is at its best just once. We honestly believe Rodgers Park is at its best NOW. A month ago its success did not seem quite so assured to outsiders, and a month hence prices will no doubt be higher. Besides, is there any real, good, rational reason for delay on your part, when one payment of $100 down lets you move right in, into a home comfortably and artistically ready, in the fullest sense of the word?

Read the details regarding Rodgers Park and the homes we are offering there in the narrow column to the left. You'll find interesting information there, which should lead you to take advantage of this $100 offer while it is still open. Will you be too late, will you be one of the "Wish-I-Hads?"

Just a Word About Lots Here

"Why do you sell these lots as cheap as $600?" That question has been asked us more than once since we opened the sale of lots in Rodgers Park. It's a natural question. You'll ask it, too, when you see the tract. Buy NOW, for by so doing you will save money.

How to Reach Rodgers Park

We'll be glad to have you come to our offices and ride out in an automobile. Or take a Florence Avenue car on Hill Street, between Third and Eighth, to Florence Avenue—10-minute service. Or take a Vermont Heights car on Broadway, south of Fourth, to Seventy-sixth Street. Courteous salesmen on tract.

A NEW RECORD OF LEGISLATION.

Not One Vote Against National Insurance Scheme.

But Plenty of Opposition Has Arisen Since Then.

Medical Men Most Potent in Fighting the Move.

[L. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 24.—For an act that passed through Parliament without a division, that is without any member registering a vote against it, the national insurance scheme against sickness and disablement has set up a record for the extent of the controversy that has raged around it.

The friendly societies, which have insurance benefits of their own for members, started the trouble. They feared that the bill, by forcing their members to contribute to the government scheme, would induce them to leave the societies. This was settled by approved societies being allowed to administer the act so far as it dealt with their members.

Then came the opposition of mistresses and servants, who, besides objecting to contributing their six cents weekly each for the insurance of the servant, raised a cry against the necessity of sticking the necessary stamps in a book.

Opposition also came from large employers of labor, chiefly in the cotton districts of Lancashire, who held that the extra tax would deprive them of their profits.

Other classes have taken up the cry against the bill, the Socialists among them, as they wanted a system to which the workmen would not have to contribute, the state and employer paying the whole of the amount required.

MEDICAL OPPOSITION.

The most serious and sustained opposition to the bill, however, has been that of the medical men. 21,000 of them have signed a declaration that they will not accept service under the act. The chief objection of the doctors is that no adequate remuneration for the medical men could be obtained under the act, that it would, in fact, amount to about $1 yearly for each patient. This is only a calculation, as the act states that the remuneration of doctors who place their names on the lists of those agreeing to attend patients under the act shall be a matter of arrangement between the local insurance committee and the doctor. The medical men, however, point out that the committee consist of perhaps eighty members, only three of whom would be medical men, so that the chances of adequate remuneration are the remotest.

The medical men also object to the control by friendly societies, chiefly because they believe well-to-do people would creep into friendly societies and get medical attendance at the same rate as the laborers. Then there is objection to what is known as the contract system. This already exists in certain districts, chiefly among the miners, who contribute to a fund out of which a medical man is paid, those contributing for a fixed term.

Those doctors who, in face of the opinion of the great majority of their profession, have agreed to act under the bill are being decried as "blacklegs," and the campaign is being carried on much as would a strike of trade unionists.

COUNTER CAMPAIGN.

The government has started a counter campaign to bring home to every household in the land that it owes to a Radical government that they avoid what they believe to be the blessings of a great measure of a great healing organization. Mr. Lloyd George opened this campaign with a meeting in the London Opera-house when he replied to the criticisms of the medical profession. He contended that the doctors were no longer under the control of the friendly societies, and as to remuneration he will get up an independent authority on which the doctors would be represented and which would settle the terms. The insurance authorities could not arrange the terms for paying doctors without consulting the local Medical Committee representing the whole of the doctors in the district and there was an appeal to the insurance commissioners. If the medical profession refuse to act, all the safeguards inserted in the act for their profession would be carried out at once and the act would be in force as ever. The money allotted to medical benefits would be handed over to the insured persons through their societies and the doctors would once more find themselves in direct touch with the friendly societies, the membership of which would be increased by 10,000,000.

The act was to have been proclaimed on May 1. The time has now been extended until July 1 and an effort has been made to have the date further retarded.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL.

Philadelphia Planning to Purify the Entire Flow of the City by a Filter System.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] Under an order of the State Department of Health the city of Philadelphia is planning to purify its entire sewage flow, which now goes into the Schuylkill and Delaware rivers. The experiments in so large an American city are well worth watching by all who are concerned about the future needs of any city.

The first sewage disposal plant in the Quaker City, built under this order, is to filter and purify the sewage from an area inhabited by 10,000 people. It is at Holmesburg, on Pennypack Creek, which empties into the Delaware River. It is a combination of tanks, filters and basins, built at a cost of $107,000, and is to be in operation by April or May. The effluent from the plant, it is expected, will be purer than the water of the Delaware River, with which it will finally mix.

If this experiment is thoroughly successful other plants, to take care of the sewage of all Philadelphia, will be built. The economic possibilities of preventing the crude and offensive turning of raw sewage into streams are yet undetermined, but Berlin and Paris have extensive plants on modern scientific principles that are worthy of close study by American cities.

PANAMA CANAL'S GREAT LOCKS.

THE LARGEST EVER DESIGNED FOR ANY PURPOSE.

Will Have Ample Space for the Greatest Ships Now Built or Contemplated in the Future—Many Novel Safety Devices to Be Installed to Guard Against Accidents.

[Detroit News Tribune:] The canal, from deep water in the Atlantic to deep water in the Pacific, will be fifty and a half miles in length, on land, forty and a half miles. In passing from the Atlantic to the Pacific side, ships will enter the canal from Limon Bay, passing through a channel 500 feet wide to Gatun, a distance of about seven miles. Here they will enter a series of three locks in flight, and will reach at once the highest elevation of the canal, eighty-five feet. And will find themselves on the surface of Gatun Lake.

Gatun Lake is an immense lake, formed by impounding the waters of the Chagres River by Gatun dam, and will cover an area of 164 square miles. Over this lake steamers will move under their own power at full speed for a distance of twenty-four miles, until they reach Bas Obispo, the entrance to Culebra cut. Culebra cut is about nine miles long, the minimum width of the channel being 300 feet at the bottom.

At Pedro Miguel one lock will lower the ships to the level of fifty-four and two-thirds feet above sea level. The descent from Pedro Miguel is to a lake eleven and a half miles long, ending in the Miraflores locks. Here two locks will lower vessels to the sea level.

Passing through a bottom channel 500 feet in width, the vessels will then pass out to the Pacific, covering eight and one-half miles in the sea-level channel.

It will be seen that the actual work of dry excavation is chiefly centered in the Culebra cut and in the foundations for the locks.

The mental picture of the canal does not carry with it a view of a continuous channel, as the greater distance is over the surface of Gatun Lake. The actual visible channels are at the entrances on the Atlantic and Pacific sides and at Culebra cut.

According to a time table of transits which Col. Goethal's chief engineer and chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, has prepared, twelve hours will be allowed to the slowest ships in passing through the canal. This allows three hours for the passage through the locks.

The control and disposition of the Chagres River has been the crucial problem in all canal projects. The high level plan converts this river into a valuable auxiliary, and disposes of its waters so that they shall afford the greater part of the means of transportation. The dread Chagres is made to form and feed a vast lake, over the surface of which ships will pass with speed and freedom. This lake is the chief feature of the project and its creation will be contrived by the erection of the Gatun dam, closing the gap in the encircling hills through which the Chagres finds its way to the Atlantic Ocean.

The dam from end to end is one and eight-tenths miles long and 1900 feet wide at its greatest width. The crest of the dam will be 115 feet above sea level, placing it at about thirty feet above the normal level of Gatun Lake. The width of the dam at the eighty-five-foot level, where it meets the crest of the lake, will be 375 feet.

The dam is semi-circular in shape, meeting and including elevations or hills in its contour, which have been left intact, thus reducing the cost of construction. It is said to be so immense that it does not have the appearance of a dam, so much as of a natural mound connecting the side hills at Gatun.

Some idea of the magnitude of the mechanical portion of the work may be gathered from the fact that 100 steam shovels are at work on the entire line; that the plant carries, 4131 cars, 279 locomotives, eighteen dredges, thirty-nine barges and sixteen pile drivers on the canal alone with sixty-eight locomotives, fifty-six coaches and 1495 freight cars on the railroad. About 35,000 men are employed.

In the construction of the locks the canal builders have had to meet with novel difficulties. In the first place, the locks are the largest ever designed. They are constructed in pairs, and involve an immense amount of excavation and concrete laying. Excavation of 5,500,000 yards of dirt is necessary for the construction of the twelve to be built.

They will be approximately eighty-one feet high, the center wall has a width of sixty feet for its entire height, the side walls will be from forty-five to fifty feet wide at the surface floor, narrowing at a point about 24 1-3 feet above the surface of the floor until they are eight feet wide at the top.

The interior chambers for the accommodation of ships will be 110 feet usable width, and 1000 feet long, giving sufficient space to hold the largest ships ever built. It will require about eight minutes to fill the locks, and in order to facilitate the passage of ships through, intermediate gates will be placed in the lock chambers, dividing the locks into chambers of 400 and 600 feet respectively, so that when a monster ocean liner passes through, the two chambers can be thrown into one.

Coal Not for Eating.

[New York World:] The present winter has been a record breaker in many ways so far as the weather and the cost of living have been concerned. During the recent blizzard many householders were caught unawares, dealers couldn't begin to meet the sudden demand, and coal supplies were all but raided on the streets. One morning as Representative Roberts was on his way to catch a car for the Capitol he saw a coal wagon crunching through the snow a few yards ahead of him, the negro driver pausing a pipe and flapping his arms to keep warm. Just as it got in front of a house a woman threw open a front window, thrust her head out and beckoned to the driver, and called:

"Is that coal for Eaton?"

The negro took the pipe from his mouth and rolled up the whites of his eyes with astonishment. He said:

"Good Gord, no'm; this here coal for sartin'—it's fur burnin'."

SUNSET BEACH.

SUNSET BEACH, March 12.—The Sunset Beach Improvement Club held a meeting at the Hotel Sunset, yesterday. Los Angeles, Pasadena, Pomona, Ontario and Santa Ana were represented. After lunch was served property owners held a business session and decided to build a cement sidewalk from First street. The new company is to dredge the lagoon and build a pier and dancing pavilion. There will be more than $100,000 worth of improvements put into the district this spring.

BOWSER, HE INVESTS.

And Mrs. Bowser Also Picks Up a Good Thing.

By M. QUAD.

Oh, no, Mr. Bowser didn't kick open the gate nor bang the front door nor throw his hat on the floor instead of hanging it on a peg—not this time.

He opened the gate as tenderly as one handling dynamite—almost waited to knock at the door, and when he had entered the hall he carried a fatherly smile on his face.

No glaring at the cat as she came forward—no turning up his nose at the dinner—no declaring the coffee to be the worst slops ever set before a man with a palate not made of sheet iron.

Just good. Just real good. Just nice and sweet and lovely. Just so lovely that Mrs. Bowser wondered if the honeymoon was to come back after all the long years.

At times, while the meal lasted, Mr. Bowser smiled blandly. At other times it was complacently. He also uttered a chuckle now and then and poked himself in the ribs for a good fellow—a sharp fellow—a fellow that knew a gold brick from a summer squash.

And Mrs. Bowser, she also smiled and made throaty sounds and put on knowing looks and the cat winked at the cook and all went off like a New Hampshire church deacon sliding down hill on an ox sled and tipping over the barns in his path.

"Now, then," began Mr. Bowser as he finally led the way to the sitting-room, "you are of course aware that something good has happened."

"Yes, dear."

"I have long wished to be a millionaire."

"I know."

"Well, the day has arrived at last."

"I'm so glad!"

"I knew you would be, Mrs. Bowser, you have never considered me a brainy man, have you?"

"Why, you are not a great statesman."

"Just an average man that goes ambling around? I know enough to jump over the fence when I hear an earthquake coming, but not enough to be Secretary of State. That's about the way you used me up I take it."

"Yes."

"I don't blame you for I haven't seemed to amount to much heretofore. But now, however—"

"Yes—what?"

"Right here in my head—in my brain pan. Brains got to working at last. Result—a million dollars."

"You don't tell me!"

"Astonished, are you? Found a new Bowser? Not a great statesman like Chauncey Depew, but he hauls in a little million dollars from a simple idea. Just as easy as rolling off a log, and yet all the great minds of the world have passed it by for centuries."

"You astound me, Mr. Bowser!"

"I thought I should. Mrs. Bowser, you were born and brought up in the country."

"Yes."

"You have seen thousands of cattails growing in swamps?"

"Yes."

"They grow on long stalks, and at the end there is something that looks like a banana. It's called a plume."

"I know. I have gathered hundreds of them."

"Well, a farmer brought one into the office today. The instant my eyes lighted on it I got an idea—the idea—the million-dollar idea."

"To sell them to school childen for real bananas?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

Mr. Bowser smiled at her indulgently and asked:

"What does a fine ostrich plume cost?"

"Why, you can go as high as $20."

"Where do most of them come from?"

"Africa, I believe."

"Right you are, and the demand is always away ahead of the supply. The profit on a $6 plume is $4.50. Suppose, Mrs. Bowser, that we didn't have to send to Africa or California for ostrich plumes? Suppose we counted the ostrich right out of the business? Suppose I could furnish $10 plumes at a clear profit of $9.90 to myself?"

"But how can it be possible?"

"Ha! ha! ha! Where does the cattail come in? See?"

"You would make them into ostrich plumes?"

"With the use of various dyes. That's the secret—that's the idea. The farmer has three acres of swamp grown up to cattails, and I leased it for $30 a year. He went away, grinning, but he'll sing a different tune when I begin to haul in my $1,000,000. Going up there tomorrow to begin gathering stock. What do you think."

"It's wonderful, but I must tell you that I've got something most as good. I don't think there's more than $500,000 in it, but that will help some."

"But I don't like the idea of you making investments without consulting me," he replied, as his smile faded.

"Oh, but I didn't have to invest a dollar. The idea came to me as it did to you—in a flash."

"Well, what is it?"

"You—you won't give it away?"

"Of course not."

"Well, how many oranges does the world consume every year?"

"Millions."

"Say billions, Mr. Bowser. What becomes of at least two-thirds of the peelings?"

"Thrown aside."

"That's it. There you are. Suppose all these peelings could be saved? Suppose one even had to pay 50 cents a bushel for them?"

"By then what?"

"By a chemical process turn them into leather—yards and rods of leather—the same leather you see in most of the shoes advertised?"

"But what chemicals would do it?" asked Mr. Bowser, after sitting for a moment, as if stunned.

"I'm still experimenting on that, but I think that Epsom salts and chloride of lime will do the trick. I figure that I can make the leather for about $10 an acre, and sell it for a thousand. After the first year I may sell out to the Leather Trust. They are in the market for a good thing. I should ask you to come in with me, but you'll be busy with your cattails."

"Woman, what—what is this!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he stood up.

"And I think I might convert lemon peels into alligator skins," she went on. "If I can just think how many could be picked up at Coney Island in a day by a hustling boy!"

"I don't understand—by thunder, I don't!"

And then he caught the smile on Mrs. Bower's mouth, and when she was forced to laugh aloud he roared.

"Insulted! Insulted and humiliated in my own house! By the living jingo, but this is too much—too much!"

"But those cat-tails. Those ostrich plumes!

"Mrs. Bowser, I leave the house! I leave it never to enter it again! No living breathing woman can make a fool of me!"

"But you know—"

"Too late! Too late!"

And he stomped down the hall and was in such a hurry to get out doors that he carried his hat in his hand and his overcoat on his arm. He did not go far nor stay away long, however. He went over and told his story to the druggist, and the man of hair dyes and plasters soothingly said:

"Bowser, there is just one way you can get ahead of that wife of yours."

"How?"

"Get admitted to an idiot asylum!"

Owensmouth

THE NEWEST TOWN on the VAN NUYS-LANKERSHIM LANDS

The Great Opportunity

Tens of thousands of acres of the richest land in the San Fernando Valley have recently been subdivided into small tracts, and placed on the market. Thousands of people will settle on these lands. Wonderful prosperity will follow.

A town as the center of this rich field must be built. Necessity demands it. Every opportunity is here awaiting the new city. All signs point to a wonderful future for Owensmouth. Everything is going with a rush. Streets are being laid out and graded, curbing put in, and buildings planned. On all sides is activity.

Next Sunday we will announce the big opening date for the sale of these business and residential lots. We will tell about the big, free barbecue and the mammoth entertainment programme planned for the day of the birth of this new town. Owensmouth is a wonderful opportunity for investment.

—Surrounded by Acres and Acres of the Finest Land
—With Two Railroads, One Steam and One Electric
—the terminus of the $500,000 Boulevard and Parkway.

What more could be desired to insure the success of the new town. Last year over 500 carloads of hay and 100,000 sacks of grain were shipped from this point, and these lands are now being planted to sugar beets, beans and orchards.

Business men, Investors, and Homeseekers. Do you realize the wonderful opportunity this new town affords—the splendid location—the exceptional business prospects, and the fine transportation facilities.

THE MEN BEHIND—

The new townsite and the lands surrounding are under the control of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, the developers of the big Van Nuys-Lankershim Tract. The Board of Control is composed of men of integrity, financial achievement and great enterprise.

Gen. H. G. Otis, General Manager and Owner Los Angeles Times.
O. F. Brant, General Manager Title Insurance & Trust Company.
H. J. Whitley, General Manager Los Angeles Suburban Homes Co.
Gen. M. H. Sherman, pioneer builder of interurban electric lines.
Harry Chandler, Vice-President and Assistant Manager Los Angeles Times.

H. J. Whitley, General Manager of the entire property and famous as a developer of lands and builder of cities, has full charge of improvements and all developments. Hollywood and Van Nuys owe their phenomenal growth and prosperity to his development work. Owensmouth will be the finished product. What better opportunity could be presented to the investor? What greater field could be afforded the business man.

PROGRESS IN CALIFORNIA.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

California came to the front in 1911 with its largest year's foreign commerce yet, a total of $196,356,608, and this is how it was made up, according to the reports of our useful Bureau of Statistics:

Imports	$ 89,669,963
Exports	66,686,645
Total	$156,356,608

Or, rather more than $2,000,000 a week.

IMPORTS.

San Francisco	$56,681,947
Los Angeles	3,767,403
San Diego	815,353
Humboldt	7,261
Total imports, 1911	$89,669,963

EXPORTS.

San Francisco	$44,749,722
San Diego	1,216,782
Humboldt	1,130,586
Los Angeles (pending completion of harbor)	87,605
Total exports, 1911	$46,686,645

The imports in 1911 were $3,500,000 more than in 1910, and the exports $9,500,000 more, a total increase in the year of over $17,800,000, or nearly $1,500,000 a month gain in the State's foreign commerce.

Building Permits.

For the thirty days (January 29 to February 28, 1912,) Los Angeles leads with building permits aggregating a value of $2,286,860, or $1,272,000 more than in the corresponding thirty days of 1911, according to the monthly bulletin of the California Development Board.

The same authority gives the building permit figures of San Francisco as $1,762,550, and $1,760,430, respectively. Increases are also recorded for Oakland, San Diego, Fresno and Stockton.

In Many Directions.

The farming and orchard industry is being extended in every quarter, and new planting this season will be large. The demands on the nurseries have entirely exhausted their stocks.

New development and colonization projects are being inaugurated all over the State. The Lake Shore ranch of 150,000 acres on Goose Lake in Modoc county is to be subdivided and colonized. Building and other industrial operations are active generally.

California's production of quicksilver in 1911, says the State Mining Bureau, was considerably larger than in 1910. The output was 19,109 flasks of 75-pounds each, which figured an average price of $46.01 per flask, or a total of $879,205, says the United States Geological Survey. The increase was 1444 flasks, worth $80,203.

The largest production came from San Benito county, followed, in order as named, by the counties of Santa Clara, Lake, San Luis Obispo, Napa, Sonoma, Santa Barbara, Trinity and Colusa. The counties of Kings, Monterey, El Dorado, Fresno, Shasta, Solano, Stanislaus and Yolo, will also become quicksilver producers at an early date.

The 1912 quicksilver production will exceed that of 1911 as unusual activity prevailed among operators and owners last year.

In the past six years California's quicksilver outputs have had the following values:

1906	$712,554
1907	663,178
1908	785,530
1909	773,798
1910	799,002
1911	879,205

During the last twelve months a fifteen-ton quicksilver furnace has been built in Lake county; work on a twenty-ton furnace has been started in San Benito county, and a twenty-four-ton furnace has been completed in Sonoma county, in addition to the reduction plants already operating in those counties. New furnaces with twenty-four and forty tons capacity, respectively, have also been erected in Monterey and Fresno counties.

California turns out practically all the quicksilver produced in the United States.

Bank Clearings.

For the thirty day periods under comparison the showing is one of increase for each principal city in the State, Pasadena not being reported for 1912. Here is the comparison:

	Feb., 1912.	Feb., 1911.
San Francisco	$223,216,903	$182,669,544
Los Angeles	89,010,257	64,754,035
Oakland	14,997,643	11,615,861
San Diego	10,597,746	6,425,283
Sacramento	6,489,513	5,586,046
Stockton	3,426,275	2,305,563
Fresno	3,149,179	2,091,859
Pasadena		3,042,761
San Jose	2,765,984	1,794,109

MEXICAN REBELS.

Americans to leave the danger zone of Mexico, should have advised the Mexican government that the United States would afford its expatriated citizens every protection and enforce the demand that no American in the country be molested. This is what the English government is doing, according to advices received here by the British Consul.

The warning from Washington to Americans in Mexico has served to lower the estimate of the United States government in the minds of the mass of people of this country. This is one of the subjects which the foreigners here have plenty of time to discuss.

NO ORGANIZED PLANS.

Time does not weigh so heavily upon their hands as might be supposed. They get no little amusement out of watching the amateurish way in which the soldiers, both Federals and rebels, are carrying on their campaign in and around the town. There seems to be a woeful lack of organization on the part of both elements of this military strife.

One day news will come that a certain ranch employee or perhaps a laborer in some mine has assumed the leadership of a force of Vasquistas and that he has been accepted as the commander for all the rebel bands in the district. Then a new leader will suddenly come to the front and the first one will be deposed or executed for some alleged offense by his own companions.

What may be an apparently well-developed plan for carrying on the revolutionary movement today may be countermanded tomorrow.

Time after time has the day been set for making an attack upon Torreon, but always some new development intervenes that causes a change in the plans.

HOME MILITIA GUARD.

In this city a municipal guard, known among the Americans as the Yellow Jackets, was organized and maintained for a short time by popular subscription. This home militia had a strength of several hundred armed men, and its purpose was to aid the Federals in resisting any attempt to capture the town on the part of the rebels. It was stipulated that each man was to receive $2 per day. The organization lasted only a few days, however, as the funds for payment of the men were exhausted and most of the members of the protective force quit their jobs.

Forming a belt around the city within a radius of six to eight miles is a force of more than 3000 rebels under command of Gen. Cheche Campos. Not infrequently bands of these rebels come within the limits of the town, but get away quickly before the Federal garrison here, which numbers 1800 men, commanded by Gen. Telles, can get an opportunity of attacking them.

All of the towns in the Laguna district, consisting of Gomez Palacio, Lerdo, San Pedro, Matamoros, Mapimi, Bermejillo and a number of smaller places, as well as Torreon itself, are conceded to be at the mercy of the rebels. Most of these towns are already in the hands of Vasquistas.

FAMINE IS PREDICTED.

The immediate disastrous effect upon business in this rich scope of agricultural territory and in the different towns and cities by reason of the revolution is not the worst phase of the situation. What is to come in the future, irrespective of how the present conflict may be determined, is viewed with alarm by those who are interested in the prosperity of the people.

But for the fact that most of the plantations are in the hands of rebels and that laborers upon these places belong to these different bands there would have been planted this season a larger crop of cotton than at any time in the history of the industry in Mexico. As it is, very little of the staple will be raised. The same is true as to corn and other crops. This will be a lean year for the mass of the people of the country. In many sections famine is almost certain to come.

THE OPEN SHOP.

To Prevent This, Union Labor Is Fighting the Rights of Independent Workingmen to Earn a Living.

[Portland Spectator:] Some surprise was caused by the publication here of a dispatch stating that the strike of metal trades workers in Los Angeles had been won by the strikers, who had gained all they struck for on June 1, 1910, including recognition of the union and closed-shop conditions. It happens that the dispatch was not true. The Founders' and Employers' Association of Los Angeles declines to give the unions a monopoly of the labor market, and drive from the Southern California metropolis the thousands of independent workmen who have been attracted there by open-shop conditions.

It is probable that the dispatch was sent out in the hope of bolstering the weak closed-shop fight in Portland. This has been done before but the success of the ruse has rarely been sufficiently great to justify its expense.

To establish and perpetuate the closed shop, the McNamaras planted dynamite which razed many structures and destroyed scores of lives.

The crimes for which the fifty-four union-labor leaders were indicted and arrested were committed in an effort to close the workshops of the country to all but those who had procured licenses to work from the labor monopolists.

The closed shop is the prize for which the union leaders are fighting with slingshots, rocks, bludgeon and dynamite. When the walking delegates and other dynamiters of the unions secure the closed shop, labor and capital, employee and employer alike will be in their power. Except through them, the laborer will be unable to find work; and except through them, the employer will be unable to get workmen.

In the closed shop, none but unionists are allowed to earn a living. No work of any sort that has been handled by independent labor may be touched in the closed shop.

Imagine this a closed-shop town, wholly in the power of the labor leaders, who represent less than 15 per cent. of our voting population. There would be no work for the independent workman, and there would be no labor for the independent employer. The one would starve—or move—and the other would fail, and move. So soon learn what tyranny is union workmen would have in the labor leader for a master. work, and the employer would to pay the labor leaders for a to employ. Think of what happen if the labor leaders the orders for the dynamiting structures and the murder of men, and the laborer who these orders, were in control the adoption of closed-shop And yet, some of our gain a temporary advantage their competitors, profess to closed shop, and make a about it. But these usually seeking a political they betray their fellows votes of the unions, them to betray the union get the office.

What Leap Year Ought to B

[New York Times:] Leap has been complained, seems to named on the same principle the "Meeting of the Waters" at larney—which is a place where streams do not meet, but part. year ought to be a year in which jump over a day—a 25-day year labored explanation given by that all the days after February jump forward one day in the more than usual is not quite tory. However, we must confess year something, and we think that we do not call it a "leap year," as the Romans and the French still do. Every child must then have to learn that the Romans put in their extra day between the ruary 24 and 25, that their February had twenty-nine days and that reckoned it six days from February to March 1, so that the extra day is the sixth day (reckoning backward) counted in advance.

Not Guilty, But—

[Harper's Magazine:] A Wheeling (W. Va.) lawyer says that he has heard many queer verdicts in his time, but that the quaintest of these was that brought in not long ago by a jury of mountaineers in a murder trial. Colbran, mother of Alexander Colbran and Gilford A. Cochran, stockholders in the firm of Cochran stockholders in the firm, $1,000,000 in sums ranging from $1,000,000 downward to the twenty-fifth part of that sum.

This was the first case for the jury, and after the majority of the jury, and after the usual hours arguing and disputing over it in the bare little room at the rear of the courtroom. At last they came back to their places and the foreman

Miners and British Public Wearied of the Delay.

Railways Are Equipping the Engines to Burn Oil.

Daily Additions to the Army of the Unemployed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 16.—There will be further joint meetings of the miners and the coal owners this week. The negotiations have not yet despaired of reaching an agreement.

From many districts come evidences of the growing desire of the miners to return to work, more particularly among the non-unionists, who are not receiving strike pay.

Sir Hugh Bell, a leading colliery owner and ironmaster, said:

"We are not getting on at all."

The unemployed who number more than 1,000,000 men are receiving daily additions to their ranks and in many instances their families are without provision, while others are limited to the small amount of strike pay allowed by the trade unions.

Further extensive restrictions of its railroad service were put in force today and the London and Northwestern and the Great Eastern Railroad companies are having their locomotives fitted with oil burners.

In many places the street lamps no longer are lighted. Even in Birmingham, the municipality was obliged to put out seven thousand street lamps at night. The shortage of coal is such that the military authorities have started the troops to fell trees in the Windsor forest to provide fuel for the military camp at Borden, in Hampshire.

Conditions in Lawrence, Mass.

U. G. R. Gordon, government immigration inspector, says: "I found at Lawrence that the organizers of the strike were trying to make propaganda by pleading the poverty of the strikers. I ascertained that in the last year the Lawrence people sent an average of $128,000 to their friends in Europe. The report of the savings banks there showed that there was $2,250,000 on deposit, most of which belonged to the workers. Twenty-five per cent of the families in Lawrence, which is a manufacturing town, own their homes. The average pay of all the textile workers I found to be from $10 to $12.25 a week. We have also found the family earnings there to be more than one inmbr of a family works they average $18 a week."

Increased Cost of Living in Canada.

Edward H. S. Chilton, Jr., of Toronto, finds, according to compilations of the Canadian Labor Department, that the cost of living in the Dominion now stands at an index finger of 131 compared with a standard of 100 set in 1890, and that retail prices for 1911 averaged 5 per cent. higher than for the previous year.

Wage-Producing Factory Goods Exported.

The Bureau of Statistics advices show the following exports of wages-producing American factory goods:

In the year	$945,000,000
In the year	847,000,000
In the year	690,000,000
In the year	818,000,000
In the five years	775,000,000

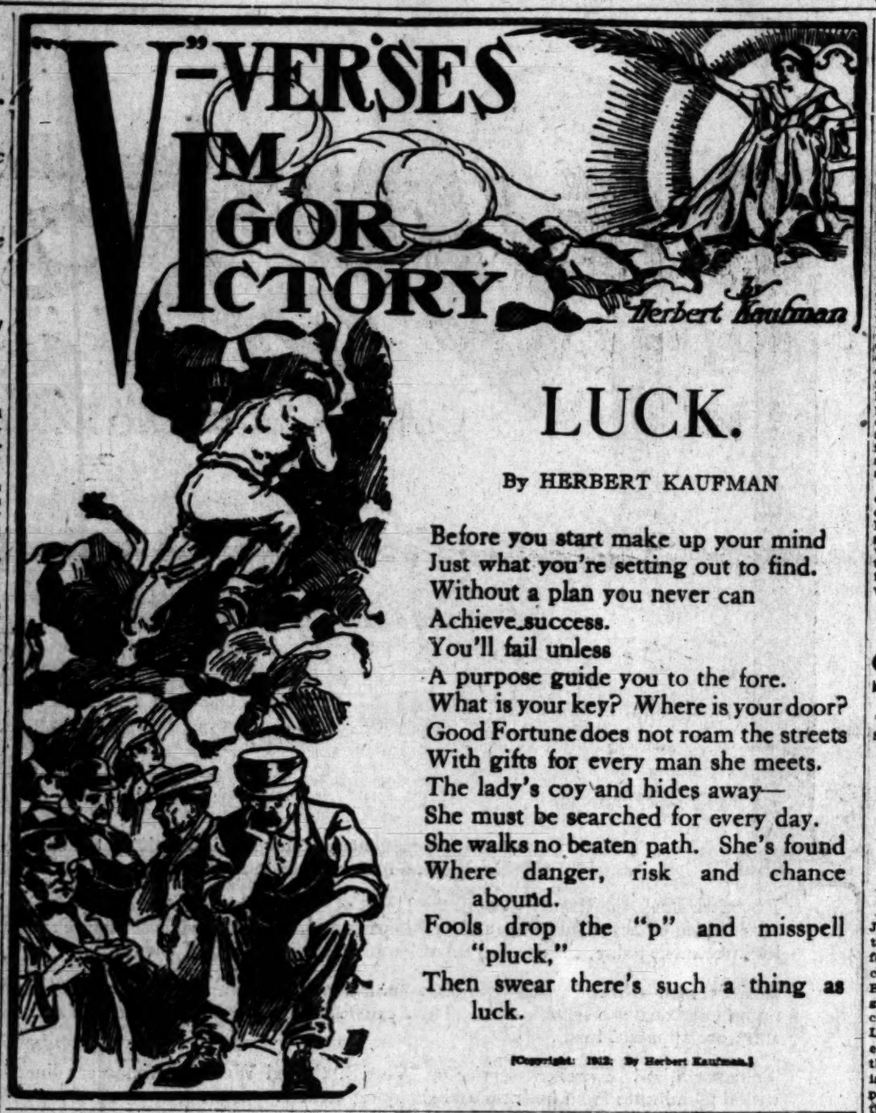
Being fully 40 per cent. was wages on the goods left our shores. Is that fine result to be set back?

Bonuses for Mill Workers.

The firm of New York says: Bonuses amounting to $65,000 were distributed among employees in the mills of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company at Yonkers, March 1. Men and women who have been in the employ of the company ten years or more received checks for amounts qual to 10 per cent of their salaries during the year ended December 31, 1911. Those between five and ten years of service received 5 per cent, bonuses. The distribution came as a surprise to the beneficiaries.

"This was the third time within a year that the company has thus remembered its older employees. Last year 1,000 employees of ten years' standing received the equivalent of 10 per cent of their salaries for six months. The gifts aggregated $40,000 in all.

"Forty years ago Mrs. Eva Smith Clarke, daughter of Alexander Smith founder of the mills, and Clifford A. Cochran, the last of the stockholders in the firm, distributed $1,000,000 in sums of from $1,000 to $5,000 each among the workers. To the twenty year employees of the mills at that time, many of the recipients of the bonuses of last week were not made public. On the occasion they were announced the confidence men profited by the publicity by fleecing the fac-



LUCK.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Before you start make up your mind
Just what you're setting out to find.
Without a plan you never can Achieve success.
You'll fail unless
A purpose guide you to the fore.
What is your key? Where is your door?
Good Fortune does not roam the streets
With gifts for every man she meets.
The lady's coy and hides away—
She must be searched for every day.
She walks no beaten path. She's found
Where danger, risk and chance abound.
Fools drop the "p" and misspell "pluck,"
Then swear there's such a thing as luck.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

ENGLISH dispatches just received in Los Angeles show that the dire results of the coal miners' strike in England are already more than appalling, even though the great strike only began on March 1. Business is absolutely paralyzed. Coastwise shipping is all tied up. Few passenger trains are running. The price of bread is going up. The schools, churches and public buildings have been thrown open to house the poor who are suffering greatly from the cold. Lloyd's has written many anti-riot insurance policies during the last few days. In the big cities hundreds of families are burning their furniture to keep warm. All the industries in the Midlands, where the biggest iron and steel industries are located, are at a complete standstill. Trade unions are asking municipal authorities to feed poor children. The secretary of the Federation of Unions (England's Gompers & Co.,) says recent strikes have so depleted the funds that already union men and their families are going hungry. A cable to the New York Sun says that muttering is beginning to be heard from the trade unions, which are being obliged to support hundreds of thousands of their members, who are out of employment because of the failure of the industries in which they are employed to secure coal. Laborite members of Parliament, allied with trade unions, foresee bankruptcy staring their organizations in the face in the effort to support men forcibly made idle by the miners' strike. Cities and towns are reducing their illumination and some have stopped lighting altogether.

Sheffield and other cities have shut off electrical power in the daytime, closing hundreds of factories. The railways are cutting off more trains every day and are losing $600,000 a day. Great Britain's premier railway, the Northwestern, is giving only compulsory service. This means that thousands of employees have been laid off, and many stations closed. The shortage of food is developing into fierce hunger. Food prices are steadily going up. The other big trade unions are urging the Miners' Union to accept anything that promises a satisfactory settlement. "It is all very well for the miners," said one official of these other unions, "but our own union's funds will soon be bled white." The normal weekly unemployment disbursements of the Steel Smelters' Union have risen from $4000 to $35,000, and that of the Amalgamated Engineers' Union from $5000 to $45,000. The outside unions are really suffering more financially from the unions' strike than is the Miners' Union, which, according to the Times of London, in certain districts, has $10,835,000 of money on hand, available for strike pay to 610,000 of the 1,000,000 strikers in the whole country.

Coal is so scarce that there are no fires in the army barracks at Aldershot. The situation in Scotland is as grave as it is in England. Railway men on several lines are necessarily suspended from work. The sailings of many trans-Atlantic steamships are postponed. Half a million of men in London alone are forced out of work by the strike. On March 4, for the first time since 1838, not a single ton of coal entered the city of London, with its population of nearly seven millions. Already 2223 freight and passenger trains have been discontinued, 704 of them on one line. The "out-of-work" figures are:

Striking coal miners	1,000,000
Men in other trades, forced to stop work	225,800
Notices of "no work soon" to	1,425,000
Total men affected so far (March 4.)	2,650,800

Before many days more pass the total number of idle workers will exceed 5,000,000. The prices of coal are rising rapidly, intensifying the sufferings of the poor. Wholesale merchants are calling in their drummers as retailers will not order during the strike, consequently many commercial hotels are empty. Mine owners, while willing to agree to a fixed minimum wage, are, naturally, not willing to agree that such minimum wage shall be paid whether the worker does enough work to earn it or not. This latter is the miners' main demand—a demand that the mine owners shall be forced to pay for services not performed. The union strike payments are $2.50 a week to every miner and smaller amounts to unskilled men and boys. The money in the union treasury will last a month. All the miners in England, Wales and Scotland are "out." The British government is buying Russian coal and storing it out of Great Britain, for the use of the navy. Railway waiting-rooms are no longer heated. The railway men are refusing to handle trains carrying troops to various points as protection against possible disorder, particularly in South Wales. Twenty steamships are held up at Glasgow for want of coal. Continental Europeans are cabling vast orders for American coal. A big Italian gas company has bought 300,000 tons for delivery at Genoa. Fourteen British steamers are on the way here for coal.

As a consequence of this great strike, the poor of Madrid, Spain, are suffering for fuel. Spanish coal merchants have "cornered" all the fuel substitutes, hitting the poor badly. The French miners (40,000) are striking to aid their British brethren. The coal supply for French warships is almost exhausted. Bunker coal prices at Hamburg have doubled. Mediterranean ports are already denuded of coal. The Channel steamers are "going slow" to economize fuel. The day Channel service is suspended. Great Britain's huge imports of frozen and chilled meats will cease in fifteen days if the coal strike continues. Other British industries to suffer first are cold storage, cotton goods, pottery, hosiery and shipbuilding. German coal miners, 180,000 of them, have struck also, and for the same minimum wage scale, too. They have sent $125,000 strike aid money to the British miners. Spanish fruit growers are being hurt, as they cannot ship for want of vessels.

Coal is badly needed at Amsterdam and Rotterdam, to supply British vessels.

With the British, German and French miners "out" and a probability of the American miners going "out," too, on April 1, a world-wide coal strike is feared.

Workers at the iron mines of San Salvador and Sateres, Spain, went on strike on March 5.

Five million workers idle by strikes in Great Britain (mostly men,) will mean a loss of at least $7,500,000 a day in wages alone, and many cases of industrial bankruptcy—particularly in the dependent trades.

Frantic efforts are being made to unionize the hard-coal workers in Pennsylvania, of whom, as yet only one-third are members of the United Mineworkers' Union.

Germany is face to face with a general mining strike. A 15 per cent. raise and "recognition of the union" is asked.

Interference in the Presidential election this year is tacitly threatened by President White of the United Mineworkers. In 1908 that threat by Gompers amounted to only 13,825 union-labor votes, as such, out of a total poll of 14,888,442, or less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The utterly futile Great Western Railway strike of England cost $500,000. Strikes are always a dead loss when lost and never pay when won.

American coal miners seek to obtain a quasi recognition of the union by forcing the mine owners to become agents for collection out of the men's pay envelopes of the labor-union dues. This the owners, seeing the trick, justly and persistently refuse.

Chicago grocery, milk and meat-wagon drivers are planning a general strike for April 1.

Eight hundred men employed on the Andalusian railways of Spain, have gone on strike. The movement is spreading.

John Mitchell of Gompers & Co. (American Federation of Labor,) under appealed conviction with Gompers for contempt of court, refuses to give Judge Wright, who convicted him, any assurance that he expected "hereafter to lend adherence to the decrees of the judicial tribunals of the land," quoting his own words. That's more than fighting trades unionism, more than rank socialism; it's unadulterated anarchy. Many are "doing time" for less than that.

In his evidence before the House Committee, Lewis V. Cox, postmaster of Lawrence, Mass., said: "There have been attacks on houses of people who refused to strike. Their doors have been broken down, windows have been broken and missiles have been thrown into rooms while persons lay asleep." He gave compilations of savings bank statistics of Lawrence showing a total savings of $21,000,000 on a basis of 86,000 population, which gave the average per capita of wealth at $245. The statement showed the foreign population well represented in deposits in banks.

Appeal to Passion.

MOST SERIOUS LABOR UNREST.

COMPROMISE NEVER SEEMS TO SETTLE ANYTHING.

Labor Leaders Want Government by a Single Class, Relatively Small in Numbers and Agitation Is Kept Stirred Up by Men Who Rather Orate Then Work.

[Wall Street Journal:] There is a false connotation to the very word "labor." It is used where work is meant, particularly by trades union leaders. The ox labors, but the reasoning man works. It is a difference of the spirit as well as of the letter. "They rest from their labors, but their works do follow them." The man who talks of "labor," therefore, as being peculiarly pathetic, privileged and sacred, is usually a blatant demagogue too shrewd to labor himself, but faithful in work of a highly undesirable kind, for the greater part is done with his jaw. At the present time the world is suffering from the most serious and widespread "labor" unrest, using the word in its strict sense, ever known.

In the agitation in progress in this country and in Europe, the hearts of the operatives are stirred by an appeal, not to his intelligence, but to his passions. Our own labor situation is bad enough, more in menace than in actual disturbance, outside of one industrial center in Massachusetts, and some other points of little importance. The menace, however, is hanging over us, particularly in the coal trade; and the portentous strike of coal miners in Great Britain may have important effects upon the situation here. The railroads, also, are confronting a fight with the locomotive engineers, to whom, more or less under compulsion, the railroads in the past few years have conceded wages and hours of work which analysis would probably show to be considerably in excess of the value of their product.

This is a gloomy situation, but it might be worse. It is worse abroad than it is here. Highly competent observers recently returned from Europe have said that, difficult as our problem is, it is apparently still manageable, and does not begin to compare in gravity with the situation so recklessly created by the miners in Great Britain. There the unions seem to be completely out of hand. Their leaders themselves may well be appalled at the terrible instrument they have created. An enormous body has been set in motion, and, unless it is checked in its early stages, it may acquire the uncontrollable force of an avalanche. The paralysis of the coal industry affects every other productive agency, and if the present condition in Great Britain continues even for a week it is highly probable that we shall hear tales of famine and riot such as characterized the recent railway strike.

And yet every compromise only postpones the final fight. The labor leaders want government by a single class, and that a relatively small one, its members and leaders peculiarly ignorant and prejudiced. The unhappy Liberal ministry in England is floundering in its efforts to get some kind of an adjustment. That or some other ministry will some day have to fight to a finish, with the nations life hanging in the balance. A wind of politics with which this country is only too well acquainted compromises and temporizes; but the remedies so far applied are surface treatment for a deep-seated disease requiring radical extirpation.

The other nations of Europe are equally interested, and the coal miners of Germany, to say nothing of France and Belgium, are already beginning to move. The threat is more warlike than demonstrations of battleships, and justifies all the anxiety for the safety of the social fabric which the foreign cables set forth.

SHERMAN LAW AND THE UNIONS.

STATUTE NOW INCLUDES THE "LABOR TRUST."

James A. Emery Denounces the Efforts of the American Federation of Labor to Secure Exemptions and Says Restraint of Trade Is Sole Purpose of Combinations.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] James A. Emery, general counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, in an address at Chicago, delivered before the Western Economic Association on "Labor Organizations and the Sherman Act," criticises the American Federation of Labor for its efforts to secure the exemption of labor organizations from the Sherman act. "The issue raised is of the most serious practical importance to employers, employees and the public. This statute alone of all national laws secures a Federal jurisdiction sufficiently complete and efficient to prohibit or penalize combinations aiming to obstruct or destroy the movement of interstate transportation and distribution," Mr. Emery declared.

"To exempt from the terms of the anti-trust law," he continued, "any kind of a combination which has and can stop traffic between the States or intimidate and dominate the trader in the distribution of his commodities beyond the State of their production is to leave the vast domain of interstate commerce without an efficient guardian and permit powerful associations, whose capacity for harm has been amply demonstrated, to operate in this unguarded area without civil or criminal responsibility to the irreparable injury of public and private right and interest. To support the demand for this unique exemption from the general operation of the law it is ingeniously and plausibly contended by the petitioners and their sympathizers:

"First, that Congress did not intend to include labor organizations within the scope of the Sherman act; second, that even if they did, it has been so interpreted as to threaten their existence as organizations and penalize their just and proper activities; third, such organizations by the very nature of their purpose and methods ought to be excluded from an act aimed at monopolies and undue restraints of trade, for they are neither conducted for profit nor have they capital stock, and they sell not commodities, but their physical activities and skill.

"The first contention is conclusively answered by a series of uniform decisions of the courts of the United States, beginning in 1893 and culminating in the famous decision of the Supreme Court in the Danbury Hatters' case, in which the tribunal of last resort, confirming the utterances of many District and Circuit courts, finally declared that the Congressional debates gave no support to the theory that labor organizations were not intended to be included, and, as a matter of law, the combination and acts presented to the court brought them plainly within the statute. If it be said this is but a technical conclusion of law, let it be further observed that but a few months before Senator Sherman introduced his original bill, the Supreme Court of the United States, in a unanimous decision obtained at the instance of labor organizations themselves, held that a boycott in the case at issue, a combination of workmen to prevent the employment of a fellow workman, was a conspiracy at the common law (Callan vs. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540.) The Sherman act, being a translation of the common law against restraints of trade and monopolies to the Federal jurisdiction, must have been intended to carry this common law inhibition into the act, for the decision was familiar to every lawyer in Congress. Finally, we know that Senator Edmunds, chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, was practically the author of the Sherman act, and after the passage of the act and a year before any court had applied it to labor organizations he declared it to include them in a statement defining the purposes of the act which he made in Chicago in 1902.

"In answer to the second contention, it can be replied that the commonly recognized rights of labor organizations have nowhere been so completely vindicated as in proceedings under the Sherman act. The right to organize, to make collective bargains respecting hours and wages, to collectively offer or withold labor, to peaceably and in concert withdraw from any form of employment for the purpose of securing better hours, wages or improved working conditions was recognized and vindicated by the courts of the United States in many decisions, a district court in one instance while operating a railroad through its receiver, directing him against his wish to enter in a trade agreement with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the court refusing only the employ members of the union exclusively, or to accept as a condition that its employes be permitted to refuse to handle the cars of other roads with which members of the brotherhood might be engaged in a trade dispute. In many decisions these rights of organization and collective action are tersely recognized as axiomatic.

"But, finally, are labor unions combinations which by their nature ought to be excluded from the act? The purpose of the act and the object of the conference of the power from which it springs upon the Federal Congress are to effectually protect trade and transportation between the States. The power and duty of Congress to effectuate this object apply to every form of attack affecting the movement of commerce and the freedom of the trader. It makes no difference whether the obstruction is physical or economic, a mob, a monopoly or a sand bank, the acts of individuals, combinations or the interference of a sovereign State. It is the right and duty of Congress to protect the intercourse between the commonwealths of the Union from any or all of these forces. Granted that every union is lawful in its purposes, its methods must be equally lawful or they condemn it. Nor is the possession of capital stock or the conduct of an organization for profit the criterion by which to determine its capacity to obstruct or stop the movement of commerce. From the Debs strike to the McNamara conspiracy the nation has again and again witnessed a demonstration of the fact that the most potent force to disrupt communication between cities and States, essential not only to the continued employment of labor, but to the obtainment of the necessities of life itself, is a combination of men without capital stock, but devoted to a single purpose—the interruption of trade or traffic until the objects of its attack concede the demands of the combination. It is not alone that a disciplined many direct their numbers and influence against the freedom and trade of one, but the frequent repetition of such events teaches us that they make the innocent party to their quarrel until in many serious instances the most remote from the scene and circumstances or conflict share the misfortunes of its chief victims. Thus in the Debs strike to compel the railroads to enforce his boycott against Pullman cars, entire communities were deprived of transportation service, while on a smaller scale and in other instances hundreds of merchants find themselves the subject of boycotting attacks because they continue to handle under contract the goods of a manufacturer engaged in a dispute with his employees, the merits of which may be utterly unknown to the distributers of his wares.

"Neither private nor public interest can permit such combinations to operate without criminal or civil liability, nor deprive the greatest body of all trade and the essential highways of national intercourse of efficient protection against the most injurious forms of blockade. Nor can this Republic, without complete subdivision of its fundamental principles, confer upon one class of its citizens the right to form combinations and do acts which remain unlawful and criminal when done by any other class of citizens. Under such legislation, membership in a trade union would confer privileges superior to those enjoyed by a majority of the nation."

Real Hard Luck.

[Kansas City Journal:] "Speaking of hard luck," remarked Senator Kinkel, "I had some hard luck once during my early days."

"Elucidate," said Senator Grawall.

"I had just invested my last 15 in a meal ticket."

"Yes, yes."

"As I started down the street a gust of wind tore the ticket from my hand. A lumberjack was passing, wearing heavy, hobnailed boots."

"Yes; go on."

"And he stepped on my ticket and punched out $4.85."

Venice.

MILLION MARK ALMOST REACHED.

VENICE HAS A YEAR OF UNUSUAL ACTIVITY.

Former Records Are Surpassed by Substantial Increase—Another Large Apartment House Started. Influx of Families Indicates An Active Season.

VENICE, March 16.—Building Superintendent Tate of Venice, has completed his annual report and the record far outclasses that of any previous year, both in the number and cost of buildings. From March 20, 1911, to March 11, 1912, the total valuation for permits is $712,645, but this amount would be greatly increased if all of the valuations on buildings had been given each time a permit had been issued. Mr. Tate's book shows that out of the number of permits issued during the year, the valuation on at least six buildings were not given and had these valuations been recorded, he believes that the total for the year would have reached nearly to the million-dollar mark.

Another large apartment-house is to be built in Venice and work upon it will be started immediately. The owner will be Mrs. A. M. Waite of Ocean avenue, and the site for the new building is at Paloma avenue and the ocean front. The structure will be of brick and one of the most substantial apartment-houses in the entire bay district. It will be three stories, and will contain fourteen apartments. C. W. Brown is the architect and builder. The structure will cost $25,000.

Work has been started upon the improvement of Westminster avenue and all intersections. The contract for the work was awarded to Braun, Bryant & Austin, Monday night at the Trustee meeting and a force of workmen were at once put to work. When these streets and Washington road is improved, Venice can boast of the finest streets in the Bay district. During the past year over eight miles of streets have been improved and paved and the good work will continue until every street in the city is put in a good condition.

NEW FAMILIES.

About thirty new families have moved into Villa City during the past two weeks and by the opening of the season the manager expects to have every villa occupied. Many improvements are being made in the little city and the gardeners are still at work putting the grounds in shape.

John B. Arthur has taken out a permit for an eight-room residence to be built on Coral canal to cost $1950. This will be one of the most artistic homes in the canal district. Polking & Grey are the architects and builders.

J. Haffner has secured a permit to erect a garage at No. 28 Sunset avenue to cost $1000. This building will be something out of the ordinary and entirely different from any other garage on the beach. It will be two stories and will contain eight rooms, four above and four on the ground floor. The lower rooms will be for automobiles, one machine to a room, and the upper rooms will be living rooms, fitted up with every convenience and thoroughly modern.

One of the finest and most modern apartment houses being erected in Venice is being built by W. A. Hewish at Trolleyway and Brooks avenue. It is three stories and contains fifteen apartments, all well finished and with every convenience, including private baths, gas heaters and lights. Fred Smith is the architect and builder. The building will be completed in about one month.

PLANS FINE HOME.

C. W. Meyer, for seventeen years one of the directing influences in the National Biscuit Company, with his offices in the last few years at Kansas City, is a purchaser of five acres of land in the Garvey annex to Ramona Acres and has ordered the immediate erection of a home to cost not less than $5000. Mr. Meyer owns valuable property in many cities of the country, but his initial visit to Southern California determined for him the choice of a home near Los Angeles for his final days. Among his holdings are business properties in the heart of Kansas City. The five acres were bought through Fabling and Hannigan, selling agents with the Janes Investment Company, the land costing $5300 cash. As soon as the deal was consummated Mr. Meyer had an ornamental fence placed around his property and retained both an architect and a landscape gardener.

"STUCK" ON SOUTHLAND.

Otto Thum, the man who invented sticky fly paper and who has made a fortune from its sale, has just purchased three lots and a chalet at Brentwood Park and will now make Los Angeles his home. He is the brother of Mayor Thum of Pasadena. Mr. Thum has taken a house facing on a lot with 271 feet frontage and a side extension of 300 feet. The chalet was constructed under plans made by John Albert Campbell. The building and grounds cost $13,540. Thum formerly lived in Grand Rapids, Mich.

CHANGE OF FIRM.

The firm of Bartels, Weik & Schwarz, real estate brokers, has been dissolved. B. W. Bartels and J. A. Schwarz continue under the firm name of Bartels & Schwarz, at the same offices, 404-405 Douglas building.

BUYS PALATIAL HOME.

One of the most attractive of the many fine dwellings recently erected in the Wilshire district, a beautiful house of the Spanish type, built by Sloan & Hall at No. 637 Harvard boulevard, was last week purchased by E. H. Seaver, vice-president of the California Drug and Chemical Company. Charles O. Middleton, the agent in the transaction, reports the consideration at $32,500. The house occupies a lot 98x150 feet in size, fronting east. Mr. Seaver will occupy the place as a permanent home.

TO BUILD ON HEIGHTS.

Plans are being drawn by F. T. Keeley for an elegant eleven-room home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parmelee, to be erected in Mabery Heights, the new northwestern subdivision. The plans will call for an expenditure of about $10,000. The exterior finish of the first floor will be tapestry brick and of the second an English plastered effect. Throughout, the early English style will be followed. All interior work wil be of the massive English order. Mr. Parmelee was formerly the owner of the Parmelee Transfer Company of Chicago, one of the largest transfer companies in the United States.

THE THRIFTY FARMER.

BY A HAY-MAKER.

Let merrily fall the spring-time squall
Upon the farmer's grain;
Cheerily he computes with glee
His huge prospective gain.

It is a cinch a good plump inch
Would make ten thousand bales,
And that would mean great scads of "green"
Through profitable sales.

He has some hay that grew last May Secure in safety vaults,
For hay is shy, the price is high,
And still it upward vaults.

When short of kale he sells a bale
To liquidate his bills,
Or sells a ton and with the mon
Buys some alfalfa mills.

His little wife—bless her dear life—
Could own a limousine;
Instead he loans five thousand bones,
And takes a mortgage lien.

He scrimps and saves (himself he shaves)
His neighbors call him "crank."
But even so, the first they know
The Ruben owns the bank.

And then, you know, he wants to go
And be a Congressman;
He "sees" the boys, and the "big noise,"
They say, "by heck, yon can."

And so, the swab, he grabs the job
And puts it in a can,
He sold some shoats, and got the goats
Of those who also ran.

And then some wise and meddling guys
In Washington did meet,
They said he sought and boldly bought
His high and honored seat.

But Rube stood pat and tightly sat,
And figured how to get
Himself scott free, and gobble the Committee when it met.

They named a date and sat in state,
But Ruben, where was he?
Some hay he sold, and with the gold
He bought the committee.

And now, my friends, to make amends
For such a wicked lay,
Take my advice and get the spice
That comes from raising hay.

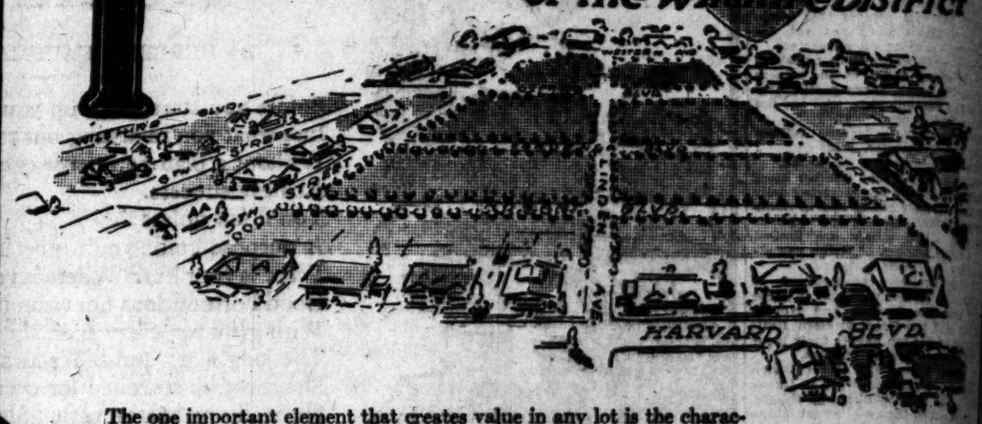
FRANCISCA PARK

The Beauty Spot in the Heart of the Wilshire District



The one important element that creates value in any lot is the character of the neighborhood and the immediate surroundings.

Francisca Park, the Beauty Spot in the Heart of the Wilshire District, is distinctive because of its location. Surrounded by beautiful homes and well-kept streets, in a fashionable section, Francisca Park offers the best lot investment today, considering the price and the elimination of pioneering.

Business men—shrewd realty operators—well-known professional men, and all lines of endeavor are now represented on our reservation list. There can be but one reason—the beauties and advantages of Francisca Park are apparent to all.

Transportation! Excellent service on West Sixth and Western avenue car lines brings Francisca Park within 20 minutes from business and shopping centers.

Large lots, 60x150 (more space if you desire,) wide streets to be paved with crushed stone; sidewalks, curbings and gutters; parkings adorned with ornamental trees. Gas, water and electricity brought to each lot. Many other late features.

On the first 20 lots reserved we will allow 15 per cent. discount. Availing yourself of this discount will give you an immediate profit.

SUBDIVISION SACRAMENTO VALLEY

THE Famous Jim Fair Ranch

of 10,400 Acres in Yolo county, near Woodland, is in my hands, exclusively, for sale. This is an extremely productive body of uniform, level, sediment river bottom land. Unlike most other large properties suitable for subdivision this land is bringing in 12½% net profit yearly by growing wheat and barley. It is in every way a strictly high class property. Is particularly adapted for alfalfa, sugar beets and truck gardens. Has both railroad and steamer transportation. A cash payment of $300,000 is required, the balance during 5 years. Especially for the big operator. I shall be pleased to show you photographs, maps, etc

COALINGA FIELD FOR FEBRUARY.

DAILY AVERAGE PRODUCTION IS UP TO STANDARD.

R. W. Dallas's Report Shows a Much Healthier Condition Than for Some Time—Reduction in Field Storage Is Shown—Oil Field Employee Is Injured.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

COALINGA, March 15.—The report of R. W. Dallas, manager of the local branch of the Producers' Agency, has been made up for the month of February and shows a much healthier condition of the field in general. The production was 51,183 barrels less than the month of January, but the daily average was greater in February, and at the daily average rate March's production would have been only a few thousand barrels below the record production of the field, had there been a thirty-one-day month.

The daily average for January was 11,333, while the daily average in February was 53,775 barrels, and this in spite of the fact that the report shows eighteen more wells producing in January than in the month past. Another showing is the reduction of field storage of 240,183 barrels, 60,000 less than the previous month, and the smallest field storage in the past two years and a half.

The tabulated statement is as follows:

	East side.	West side.	South field.	Total Feb.

Ned Jackson, a rig builder employed on the Standard Section 28 property, this afternoon struck his left foot with an adz which he was using and the blade cut through his rubber shoe and cut a big gash in his foot. He was brought in to Dr. Mount's office, where the wound was dressed and stitched by Dr. Mountford. He will be unable to use the foot for several days.

BUILDING PIPE LINE.

ANAHEIM WATER COMPANY.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

ANAHEIM, March 15.—The extent to which the Anaheim Union Water Company is preparing for the handling of its share of the oil produced on the recently-acquired Oil Company's lease on the Yorba reservoir site, is a surprise to even some of the stockholders of the company. The company is moving well in advance of present needs, as for instance, the construction of its own pipe line and in connection its share of the oil for a considerable period in advance to the Kellogg Oil Company. The latter contract can only be justified on the ground of expectation of great increase in the yield, for otherwise the very high price per barrel secured from the Kellogg concern for oil over the bids of the Amalgamated Pubb and Standard would never make up the cost of the pipe line and the increased expense of handling the oil under the division contract.

Regarding the expenditures made in preparation for handling the company's oil there has been nothing given out to the public. A tract of two and one-half acres near Placentia has been made by the water company and it will present at once for the handling of 100,000 barrels of oil daily over the San Juan, which runs through the heart of the new city of Placentia.

A tank farm will be built on the tract just purchased at Placentia. Aside from the large expenditures such as the construction of an extensive pipe line and purchase of land for the erection of tanks, smaller items of expense have been incurred in the survey work, a 70-horse-power engine costing $500 and a feed pump at $200. Three men will have to be kept on duty at the oil fields to patrol the division of the oil.

In the Coyote Hills the rotary outfit of the Industrial Company has been moved to a standard rig. The way the company has pushed the work in the Coyote Hills would indicate that development work in this territory will proceed rapidly. Elsewhere on the company's property, with the exception of well No. 58, things are moving along as usual. At the No. 46 on the east side of the main fault drillers are still engaged in trying to overcome the water trouble, the work being slow but sure.

WYOMING OIL FIELDS.

Even the railroads of Wyoming have adopted the oil produced in that state as a fuel for locomotives the oil fields of the State have increased. One of the big operators in Wyoming at the present time is the Midwest Oil Company, which owns properties in the county of Custer and Natrona county, having a large refinery.

Some time ago Ralph Arnold, the geologist of Los Angeles made the property holdings of the company, and appraised their value at $15,000,000. The oil produced in Wyoming is being refined, and the produce is being shipped to the Northwest and as far east. The wells are shallow and the quality of the oil is very light. Many Los Angeles investors are beginning to take an interest in the Wyoming oil fields, the Wyoming Ervay Oil company, with Commodore Foote and Ralph Arnold at its head, is already developing, and other companies are being formed to exploit the Wyoming oil fields.

Midway Plans.

The Midway Oil Company, in section 18, McKittrick field, is starting of extensive development work on its holdings in the Midway and North Midway fields, with the intention of the former to rush the work on several wells to a speedy completion. The completion of the new wells and the production now being obtained from the company's four wells will add materially to its monthly statements.

The Queen's Graceful Act.

[London American:] Passing through a long line of cheering subjects on his way from Sandringham to London on his return from India, King George passed the German Embassy, from which the German and Stripes. Rising in his carriage, he gracefully acknowledged the plaudits of the crowd by a reference to the flag of the German Empire. A simple, an unostentatious act that bespeaks the loyalty of the King and his country to the ideals of kindred race and the institutions and ideals, the salute to the flag will be regarded with much satisfaction on this side of the water.

The lines of identity are fast merging and the closeness of the two countries will be ideal after the Senate shall have acted favorably upon the general peace treaty now pending. The British King upon assumption of the throne was represented as having distaste for the Americans and as being indisposed to afford them the free recognition that was the habit of his father. The fact is the reverse, and the Americans in London find no more democratic and friendly member of the aristocracy than its capable and well-disposed head.

The incident of the King and the flag speaks volumes for the continued good understanding of the two countries which during the rule of King George and the administration of President Taft have come to have the closest bonds of sympathy.

LABOR LEADERS RESPONSIBLE.

Should Be Put in the Same Class as the "Trust" Magnates Being Prosecuted by the Government.

[Correspondence New York Journal of Commerce:] There is no doubt that labor is constantly securing a larger and larger return of the total output, and this is sometimes obtained at a cost which is damaging to the public and labor alike. If suitable means offered, the same results could undoubtedly be secured by peaceable methods at less cost, for public opinion invariably favors labor when its demands are just and not incompatible with public welfare.

It is certain that labor is not disposed to surrender its chief weapon—the strike—because there is often no other method of securing a hearing, and labor does not yet believe it can secure its objects without force of this character. Unless this situation is corrected by mutual arrangement or agreements to arbitrate, there is but one alternative left. If society is to protect itself against the usurpation of a class. That is to make strikes illegal and to hold the leaders on both sides responsible to the law. It has been found necessary to prevent the usurpation of capital, and labor itself now plainly shows the necessity of such restraint. The labor leader who orders the strike is just as harmful to society as the capitalist who creates a situation precipitating the strike. The extra wages of labor come out of the public just as much as do the extra profits which the trust exacts, and the labor leader possesses power for harm quite equal to that of monopolistic capital.

There is no better remedy for the present threatening state of affairs than to hold labor leaders and trust magnates equally responsible before the law and to make the strike quite as much an illegal conspiracy as a concerted movement on the part of capital to destroy competition. To avoid the strike some such body as a Supreme Court of Arbitration should be available as a resort when all other efforts at settlement have been exhausted. Moreover, the government should have authority to enforce the decrees of such a court. Force belongs to the State alone, not to labor or capital, and its use by classes or others who cannot get what they want peaceably puts us on the high road to anarchy. Out of sheer self-protection, society must adopt some means for eliminating the strike, which is nothing less than rebellion and class warfare.

AFRICAN WAR WEAPONS.

Rev. Dr. Rainsford Brings Back a Collection Gathered During His Hunting Expedition in East Africa.

[New York Sun:] As a gift from Rev. W. S. Rainsford, who returned some time ago from an extended trip through British East Africa, the American Museum of Natural History has received a collection of implements of war and the chase used by the Cherangang N'dorobo.

Among the objects in the collection are darts employed in killing elephants, a quiver with iron-pointed poisoned arrows for general hunting, and one arrow with point of wood, to which Dr. Rainsford has attached this label, "For Shooting Men."

Dr. Rainsford gives the following note in regard to his gift:

The poison smeared on the elephant darts was given me by the Cherangang N'dorobo. This small tribe has lived among the heavily-wooded fastnesses of a range of mountains which border the N'zoia plateau on the east in British East Africa mountains called also the Elceyo escarpment.

So far as known, the little tribe has held its own in this home for ages, constantly attacked by Nandi and Karamoja, tribes outnumbering the N'dorobo more than 100 to one. It has always beaten them off, sometimes with severe loss to the enemy. The deadly poisoned arrow has been this tribe's all-sufficient weapon. The secret of its preparation is most carefully guarded.

Dr. Rainsford has also presented to the museum a rare species of monkey which he shot on the N'zoia plateau.

He says that he never saw more than three of this species together and that he found them harder to stalk than any other animal he hunted in Africa.

Tidings have been received by the museum from Messrs. Allen and Miller, who are now conducting an expedition in the central Andes, to the effect that some 1600 specimens of birds and animals have been secured in that region.

The expedition, under date of November 16, was about to penetrate the little-known coast range to the westward.

HOT SPRINGS AT SEA.

Large Area of Boiling Water Reported in the Gulf of Mexico and Myriads of Dead Fish.

[Baltimore American:] A lake of boiling water in the Gulf of Mexico is reported by vessels having passed through and around the strange phenomena at a point in the western Gulf, about 240 miles south by east of the Texas coast. The area of hot water was variously given as ranging from a half to a mile in circumference, and seamen claim it is unquestionably due to an explosion on the bottom of the sea of some volcanic eruption, as the water appears to be greatly agitated in several places within the hot lake.

The British steamship Marcedian, Capt. G. Smith, bound for Port Arthur, passed through the hot seas Thursday morning, attention having first been directed by the myriad of dead fish in that vicinity, and an investigation showed the water to be unusually warm in some places and actually hot in other places. The officers and crew could not account for the hot springs so far from land and soundings showed the depth of water to be many fathoms in that section of the Gulf. Fishing schooners passing along the edge of the hot lake reported the fact and said schooners southbound had reported having heard an unusual disturbance or explosion at sea on Wednesday, but had not located the cause.

MAPS OUT FOR LARGE TRACT.

Hundred Acres to Be Added to Beach Suburbs.

Fireproof Garages Projected by Corporation.

Two New Piers Will Cater to Summer Crowds.

SANTA MONICA, March 16.—Maps have been drawn showing the subdivision of the Bundy tract of 100 broad mesa acres and these will be presented to the City Council for adoption Monday night. This new subdivision lies between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-second streets and extends from Montana on the south to San Vicente boulevard on the north. The owners of the property say they will within the next ninety days spend $50,000 in its permanent improvement. The building restrictions are to be of a high-class in order to preserve the caste of the tract.

Ordinances providing for the permanent improvement of Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets from Nevada to Montana and Montana, Idaho, Washington and California from Fourteenth to Seventeenth have been passed, and just as soon as the contracts can be awarded this work will be undertaken. The improvement is to include the laying of sewer and gas mains, concrete curbs, walks and gutters and the grading and oil paving of all of the streets. The ordinance for the improvement of three miles of Oregon avenue has also received the finishing touches and the city will soon be receiving bids for asphalt paving. The specifications as finally adopted provide for the systematic planting of palms on both sides of the street for the entire distance.

The contract has been let and work has been started on the construction of a $16,000 fireproof garage and warehouse for the Southern California Edison Company. The location is Eighth and Colorado. This building is to take the place of the frame one recently destroyed by fire. The garage feature has been added since the company, under a new policy, has made automobiles and electric runabouts take the place of horses in all work. Another $10,000 garage is to be built at Marine and Main. This will be for the accommodation of the wheeling public and the building will be ready for business with the opening of the summer season.

CONCRETE VINDICATED.

Concrete piles are being cast and are now in the seasoning process, preparatory to entering into the construction of two pleasure piers here. Both structures will be ready to cater to the summer crowds. The new pier is the Jones structure, to be built between Pier avenue and Kinney stret. The second is the Hollister avenue pier, which is to be rebuilt entirely, reinforced concrete piles replacing the present toredo-eaten ones of wood. The recent stormy seas had no bad effect upon any of the concrete piers along the shores of this bay, which fact is encouraging to th builders of the new piers and has confirmed them in the belief that they have made a wise decision in selecting concrete as the structural material.

On three lots in the Palisades fronting on Alta, E. L. Crispen, a recent arrival from Philadelphia, will at once begin the construction of a $10,000 residence. The plans have been accepted and a beautiful building will bethe result. The large lots were purchased early in the week, for a started cash consideration of $10,000. Work is also starting on the construction of a $12,000 business block of brick at Third and Utah. This is to be built for W. R. Hall of Hollywood. The old wooden buildings that have occupied the site for many years have been torn away. Mrs. Rose N. Cameron has builders at work on a $12,000 apartment-house at Ray stret and Trolley way.

BATH-HOUSE PROJECTED.

A modern new bath-house for North Beach is among the good things promised for the near future. W. J. Stadelman, one of the owners of considerable ocean frontage in that vicinity, has been authorized by his associates to proceed with the organization of a company for the purpose of giving Santa Monica such a bathing establishment as would be a credit to the growing city. The plans for the structure have already been drawn and they show a building that would be a credit to the beach and the matter has progressed so far that it is expected something of a substantial character will be done without delay. The building will contain a number of novel and attractive features, but will attempt no large plunge, going upon the theory that what the people most desire is surf bathing with fine tubs for those who care for baths in tepid water.

The building will contain 200 dressing-rooms, Turkish and tub baths, a free playroom for the children, free sun parlors of immense size for men and women, manicuring and hairdressing departments and suits and accommodations for surf bathers. There will also be a tearoom. The building as proposed will have a frontage of 200 feet on the ocean and will be 100 feet in width.

A. M. Montgomery, H. Cowell, Claud Rogers and J. B. Proctor are associated with Mr. Stradelman in the ownership of this property and in the promotion of the new enterprise. They are of the opinion that th time is ripe for the construction of a fine bath house here.

NEW BUILDING RECORD.

FINE STRUCTURES PROJECTED.

GLENDALE, March 16.—The record for building permits was reached this week when three permits were issued for business blocks, having a total valuation of $41,000, these being the largest permits ever issued in this city in a single week. The permits are for three two-story brick structures, two to be located on Brand boulevard between the boulevard garage and the Flower block, the other to be situated on Fourth street, between Franklin Court and Glendale avenue.

The largest permit was taken out by Parker & Sternberg, a local real estate firm. This was for $25,000. The ground floor of this structure will be 100x100 feet. On the lower floor will be four storerooms, the upper floor being divided into eight offices with a reception room at the front of the building, the rear being taken up by six four-room housekeeping suites, each provided with bath. The front of the block will be of the very latest design with large plate glass windows, and tile moulding. The building was designed by Roy Kent, a local architect.

Another of the permits was issued to J. H. Flower, who already has two brick blocks at the corner of Brand being a party wall between the structures. Flower block will be 50x100 feet on the boulevard and Fourth street. The flower block will be 50x100 feet on the ground floor and will contain two store rooms. The second floor will contain housekeeping apartments. These two buildings will be erected as one, theretures. This 150x100 foot building will be the largest in Glendale. The new Flower block will be entirely of brick, with pressed brick front, and will cost about $6000.

The third permit was issued to J. W. McIntyre, for a two-story brick structure on his property on Fourth street near Glendale avenue, next to the Bank of Glendale building. This building will contain three storerooms, 25x100 feet each, and will cost about $10,000. On the upper floor housekeeping apartments and office rooms will be located. Ground has already been broken for this structure.

PROUD OF NEW BANK.

HAS METROPOLITAN FEATURES.

MONROVIA, March 16.—In the newly completed American National Bank building the citizens of Monrovia are convinced that this city boasts one of the finest financial structures in Southern California. The building was only recently taken possession of by the owners and by the Schilling Drygoods Company, who share the first-story space. The second story is arranged in office suites.

The building was planned by Thornton Fitzhugh of Los Angeles, architect of the mammoth Pacific Electric building and other noteworthy structures of the Southland metropolis. It is of reinforced concrete and absolutely fireproof. It fronts ninety-two feet on Myrtle avenue and 126 feet on Orange avenue. The cost of the improvement was about $50,000.

The banking quarters are finished in mahogany and marble and in the height of elegance. They compare most favorably, in fact, with those of the metropolitan banks.

ACTIVITY STIMULATED.

RAIN ENCOURAGES TIMID.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 16.—Rain and the opening of the colonist season are two factors which are playing an important part in stimulating the activity in real estate in this city. It has also served to encourage some of the timid investors. Conditions are also regarded as favorable for building operations, and many predict that the total this month will be among the high records.

The Fagg-Dublin Co. reports the following recent sales: Mary Jones of Los Angeles to Harry McKelg of Pasadena, 50x160 feet on Allen street, 460 feet north of Colorado street, in Pasadena; this lot is to be improved with a six-room bungalow. Mary Jones of Los Angeles to W. S. Harrell of Pasadena, 50x165 feet, east side of Allen street, in Pasadena, 460 feet north of Colorado street.

H. W. Huntzinger to A. O. Overell, vice-president of the Overell Furniture Company of Los Angeles, 65x160 feet, northeast corner of Stratford avenue and Oxley street, improved with eight-room bungalow; reported consideration, $10,000.

Mary A. Burns to a local investor, 50x150 feet on Monterey road between Fair Oaks and Brent avenues, improved with eight-room house. Mary Brown to John Dewey, 56x150 feet on Oxley street between Brent and Marengo avenues, improved with six-room new bungalow.

A start has been made in what may prove an extensive industry in this city. Frank Stickles has a ranch in the San Joaquin Valley planted to figs. They are picked in the season, sun dried, bleached on the ranch, sacked and shipped to South Pasadena, to No. 1015 El Centro street, a packing-house owned by Mr. Stickles, and packed in three-pound boxes for the market.

SETTING OUT TREES.

IMPROVING NEW TOWN.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

EL SEGUNDO, March 16.—The El Segundo Land and Water Company is having a large number of trees set out as part of the scheme of beautifying this place. Thousands of dollars are being spent by the company in carrying out the plan.

It is intended to have attractive drives and boulevards. One hundred cars of crushed rock, cement and sidewalk material have recently been ordered. These will come in over the new railroad which already has added wonderful impetus and stimulus to the building activity. This material will be used in different parts of the city.

It is estimated that the Standard Oil Company, with its refineries at Point Richmond and El Segundo in full swing, will consume close to 20,000,000 barrels of high gravity crude oil annually. This immense quantity of oil will turn out by-products sufficient for the Standard to dominate the Oriental-Pacific trade, the target at which the company leveled its guns long ago.

W. I. Hollingsworth & Co. report a large number of recent sales.

PLAN "POPPY DAY."

TO MAKE ANNUAL EVENT.

VAN NUYS, March 16.—The people of Van Nuys purpose celebrating "Poppy Day" on some date in the not distant future.

The glorious California poppy is found in great profusion in and around the townsite of Van Nuys. In two or three weeks the fields will be literally seas of gold, and it is proposed to invite the world and his wife to enjoy the scene of the flowers.

At least 10,000 poppy bouquets will be prepared for those who do not incline to the task of picking them. Automobiles will be supplied for excursions around the town, and to the poppy fields for those who delight in picking the beautiful flowers. Other forms of entertainment are also being planned.

It is proposed to make "Poppy Day" an annual event at Van Nuys and no pains will be spared properly to inaugurate the new festival.

The generous rains in the San Fernando Valley make millions of poppy blooms a certainty this spring.

HUSTLING TRACT WORK.

A large force of street workers were added to the crew that is completing the improvements at Du Ray Place tract, the last part of the week, and within the shortest possible time driveways, sidewalks, curbs and parking spaces will have been laid out. Utility pipes for water, gas, sewers and telephones were placed before an announcement of the new subdivision was made. The Carlin G. Smith Company, projectors of the residence tract, report many reservations in advance of marketing the lots. Forty bungalows have been contracted for and are expected to be completed within the next few weeks. These comprise the first unit in the building scheme of the company.

DEAD RECALLS HISTORY.

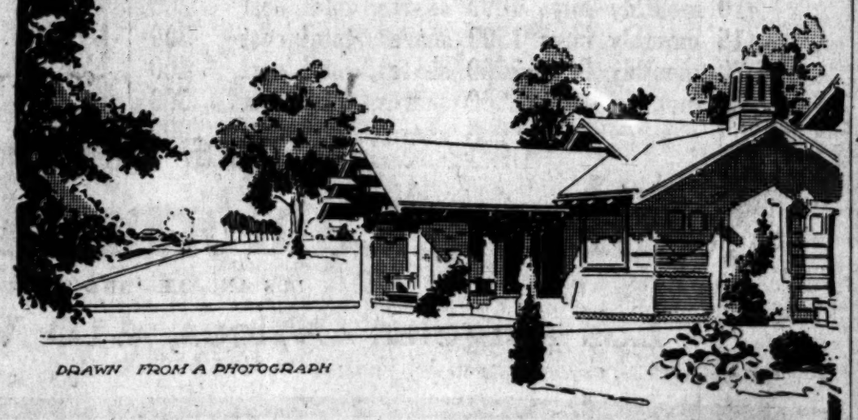
Olive Street Lot Acquired by Investment Company Once Held to Be Ideal Spot for Gardening.

The Los Angeles Investment Company has just purchased through its business property department, for a local investor, a lot on the west side of Olive street, sixty feet south of Ninth. The site has a frontage of sixty feet and a depth of 165 feet, and is improved with an old frame house. The investment company is said to have paid spot cash at the rate of $1100 a front foot or a total of $66,000 for the lot.

The purchase was made from the Union Trust Company through Dr. West Hughes. The purchasers will erect at once three one-story store buildings t a cost of about $15,000.

On July 8, 1877, George Hanson made a survey on this property and reported that it was on a high and gently inclined plane, having the very best facilities for irrigation, first-class soil, and being well adapted for gardening. At the time this survey was made, Grand avenue was known as Charity street. At this time all of the property from Ninth to Twelfth street, and from Hill to Charity street, was conveyed by the City of Los Angeles to O. W. Childs. When the sale was made, it was pointed out that these lots were situated only three blocks from the "college," the "college" presumably being the old State Normal School, at Fifth and Grand. At that time it was thought that the Normal School property would be the center of the city, and that about it would be grouped all the important business concerns.

Athens-on-the-Hill



DRAWN FROM A PHOTOGRAPH

The delightful showers have added additional luster to this beautiful residence park in the Southwest. The wealth of foliage and flowers is daily providing a veritable rainbow of scintillating color.

Undoubtedly, from some one of your circle of acquaintances you have heard of the wonderful low-priced offering of actual value that is being made at Athens-on-the-Hill. The great bulk of our sales are the natural result of this personal interest and personal endorsement.

We now want you to visit the tract on which over $100,000 has been spent during the past year alone simply to make it beautiful. We know it's human to take pride in one's place of abode. Every man's home is his castle. Wouldn't you rather put your castle on a big, roomy, highly-improved residence site at Athens-on-the-Hill than to try to cramp your naturally broad tendencies down into one of those small 2x4 lots presented in the common run of tracts? Surely you would!

And then, you will be doubly sure when we spring another Athens-on-the-Hill surprise on you. THE PRICE. Without boast or fear of contradiction, we claim Athens-on-the-Hill presents the one best opportunity to buy a genuine lot bargain close in, where you have a chance to make some profit. Think of it.

Lots 50x182 Only $500.00

On satisfactory terms.

Athens-on-the-Hill is in the southwest part of the city, on the Athens Cut-off line of the Pacific Electric, leaving Sixth street station. In big, luxurious cars, you can make the trip in just 20 minutes. Compare that time with the 30 and 40-minute wearisome ride in order to reach tracts in other parts of the city, where the lots are selling for double Athens-on-the-Hill prices. Two yellow car lines also reach the tract.

Athens-on-the-Hill is on the celebrated Harbor Boulevard, Vermont avenue and exclusive Figueroa street. All modern improvements. Wise restrictions rigidly enforced.

Come to our office today. Open Sundays 9:30 to 1:30. Get details. Cars leave every little while. You will enjoy the trip.

ES FOR OIL IN CODY FIELD.

Operation Heads Concern That Starts Drill.

Many Experts Are Directing Operations.

Indian County Force Will Readjust Itself.

(Special Correspondence of The Times.)

CASA GRANDE (Ariz.) March 16.—Twenty miles south of Agua Caliente, in the southwestern corner of Maricopa county, a standard drilling rig was erected about a week ago in what is known as the Cody oil field, owned by "Buffalo Bill" Cody, who is the head of the operating company, the Montezuma Oil Company. It is possible that the location of the well is much less remote than at present, as it lies thirty-five miles from the Arlington terminus of the Southern Pacific low-grade line, which has been surveyed westward through the field on its way to California. The site for setting the drilling rig was designated by W. R. Jewell, a well known expert, formerly connected with the United States Geological Survey. F. L. Gardiner, in charge of the drilling, has had long experience in the Texas and Pennsylvania oil fields. The drill now is working through a loose sandstone, within the color of oil was strong from the surface downward. It is predicted that a good quantity will be struck at a depth more than 800 feet of depth and that it will be of paraffine base. The company is said to be financially able, after sinking four wells to the depth of 1000 feet and to have no trouble.

The Cody also is interested in the Arizona Exploration Company, which has leases in the foothills of the Santa Catalina mountains near Tucson. Oil is seeping from the well, which indicates a resetting of the strata further away, and the prospects of oil are considered of the best.

WELL IS TAPPED.

At a depth of about 400 feet oil has been struck by the drill of the Arizona Oil Company in the Cody Hills district, near the line of the El Paso and Southwestern railroad, west of Fairbank. Oil was struck in considerable quantity. Drilling near the surface was difficult, quartz boulders being struck in the limestone. Progress is being made now, with the drilling rig, and a depth of 1000 feet is expected to be reached in a couple of weeks.

Charles Wightman, east of Florence, Ariz., and William Kellogg, prominent cattlemen, are sinking a well down about 700 feet, in the hope of striking oil in what is considered favorable ground. Wills and Kellogg are philosophical in the matter and say they will be satisfied to develop even a good water well. The well is in ground originally explored by a Florence man, near Riverside, where a considerable quantity of paraffine oil was struck before the drill penetrated the sands, filled with salt water, at a depth of 1800 feet.

The flow of gas, blowing newspapers feet into the air from the mouth of the pipe, has been struck at 1500 feet of depth in the Verde Valley Oil Company's well at Camp Verde, Yavapai county. Oil is present in quantity and when struck into it burns freely. A rig has been set up in the valley by the Tempe-Verde Oil Company, which has been organized in and near Phoenix. A large tract in Verde Valley, at least 1000 acres, has been filed upon for oil and will have been taken upon the surrounding land.

COURT FORCE ROUTED.

Yavapai has had a demoralization upon the official organization of Yavapai county, which has resulted from the upper floor of the Courthouse in Phoenix, which has heretofore been occupied by the District Court, which, besides its Federal functions, has had all Territorial cases above those of the Justices' courts. Besides, the county received a rental of $1200 a year from the rooms behind the courtroom for law library, the property of the county, used by the Supreme Court, District Court and by the bar generally. Now, on the removal of the Federal Court for which the county itself has practically no use, deprived of the upper floor, the local Superior Court is forced to hold sessions only when the courtroom is not otherwise occupied. The county judge, clerk and other officers have had to seek quarters much to their disadvantage, the worst blow, perhaps, being the seizure of the room of the bar association, which is the only room in the building, besides the Supreme Court room, in the capitol, several miles away, in the country, where the State Supreme Court will occupy extemporized quarters in the already overcrowded building. This condition of affairs is expected to have alleviation when the Federal officers will move out, their quarters ready in the new Federal building and when the government has elected to cancel its lease on the Courthouse.

MORROW HOLDS COURT.

Judge William W. Morrow, of the United States District of California, is holding sessions of the Arizona District Court and expects to remain here till the assumption of the duties of the regularly appointed judge will probably be Richard E. Sloan. To have been removed the office of the United States District Court, recently in existence, Judge Edward E. Jaynes of Tucson, formerly acting as clerk, by appointment by the Senate, Charles A. Overlock and Attorney Thomas Flynn have been named as successors of their former chiefs, C. C. Faust, Territorial form of Attorney, and C. C. Faust of Prescott, appointed Assistant United States Attorney and O. T. Hamilton has been given an assistantship by appointment. Now, by the Department of Justice commissioners have been appointed in all the counties and divisions of the United States District Court established again, after a lapse of several weeks.

Extensive preparations for the assembling of the State Legislature, which convenes for the first session on the 27th Court, scheduled for Phoenix. There is no doubt among those best informed that the legislative session will be a long one, possibly stretching into June, as the Constitution has made mandatory the passage of a large number of so-called progressive measures.

NATURE STORIES.

Dog Deserves a Medal.

[New York Herald:] Breaking through the ice on the Morris Canal in the Brookdale section of Bloomfield, N. J., Frank Johnson, 12 years old, would have been drowned but for the prompt action and intelligence of his collie, Rex. The boy was strolling along the canal towpath, accompanied by Rex, and wondering if the ice was strong enough to bear his weight. He at last concluded to make a test. As young Johnson started to go on the ice, Rex tried to prevent him, and caught his coat tail in his teeth. The boy shook the animal off and continued with the faithful dog following along. All went well until the boy had reached the middle of the stream, when the ice, weakened by recent rains, began to crack. The boy then started to retreat, but he was too late. The ice gave way and he sank out of sight in seven feet of water. Rex, however, got to the bank, and then turned to discover his master as the boy's head arose above the surface. Young Johnson tried to clamber out, but fell back and again disappeared. Rex dashed to where his master was struggling for life, and as the boy came up again the animal seized him by the sleeve of his coat and slowly pulled him out of the water onto solid ice. The boy was in a half-conscious state, but Rex licked his face and hands until he revived, and then the youth hurried home. After a hot bath he was put to bed. A few weeks ago Rex rescued John Moffet when he went through an air-hole while skating on the canal.

[Our Four-footed Friends:] A number of years ago a small white kitten strayed into a provision store, so forlorn in appearance it especially appealed to the sympathies of those in charge, and moreover such a good little thing, never jumping onto the bench or anywhere else it ought not to be, they decided to keep it. Eight or nine years afterward, one night, about closing-up time a large rat came into view, but the cat did not pay any attention to it, or seem to care anything about it. The proprietor said, "That cat is getting too old to catch rats; we shall have to get some traps and set around here." The next morning when the store was opened the body of a big rat was discovered lying onthe meat bench with its head towards the chopping block, a place in which it could not but be seen, and on two or three mornings of that same week, again the body of a large rat was found in the same way, as if the cat said, "I can catch rats if I want to." Mr. L. says no one could tell him after that that that a cat didn't understand what was said.

AN IMPERIAL MYSTERY.

Whether Emperor Menelek Is Dead or Alive Cannot Be Proven by Lord Cranworth, Court Physician.

[New York Tribune:] Is Emperor Menelek alive or dead? That is a question concerning which all the great powers of Europe are completely in the dark, and not even their cleverest diplomatic agents sent to Abyssinia for the purpose have been able to enlighten them on the subject.

Lord Cranworth, who has just returned from Abyssinia, brings the latest news about the matter, and his story is certainly of an extraordinary character. During his five months' tramp through Abyssinia from British East Africa, where he settled some three years ago, he made the acquaintance of the principal physician of the Abyssinian court, a native of European medical training, who spoke English perfectly.

The doctor, in response to Lord Cranworth's inquiries, practically confessed that he did not know whether the old Emperor was alive or dead. He declared that every three months he was summoned to the imperial palace at Addis-Abeba, and a huge figure was brought in to him there in a darkened room. This figure was swathed in bandages from head to foot, and a great mask, in which two holes were cut, for the eyes, was fitted over the face. He was always told that this was Menelek, and as the figure was a living being, he then officially certified that Menelek was still alive. But whether the body was really that of the Emperor or not he could not say, owing to the features and form being completely hidden.

Lord Cranworth states that the bulk of the population is inclined to believe Menelek to be dead. But it is the uncertainty about the matter which keeps them from rising in rebellion against the crown, and the various provinces of the empire from setting themselves up as independent States under ther Governors, refusing any longer to pay tribute to the imperial treasury at Addis-Abeba.

Occupational Disease.

[Syracuse Post-Standard:] A remarkable summary of recent investigations of industrial lead poisoning is published by the Department of Commerce and Labor. Nearly nine thousand cases of disease from this cause were reported in Great Britain in the ten years preceding 1909, and 667 of these cases resulted in death. Of the deaths 383 were among painters, the chief danger to them being, it is said, in the dust caused in sandpapering lead painted surfaces, in the mixture of white lead with oil, in the dust which dries upon the clothes, in eating with unwashed hands, and in the fumes from the burning off of old paint. So fully convinced have investigators become of the danger of white lead that in some places steps are being taken toward the prohibition of its use. The returns from New York State show sixty deaths during 1909 and 1910, thirty-seven of them among the painters. The printing trade contributed but four deaths to this total, although it is possible that some deaths of printers from other diseases may be indirectly due to this cause. Clearly shown is the need of protection for the painting trade against this occupational disease.

An Accommodating Heart.

[Nashville Democrat:] An Irishman applying for a pension at Washington insisted upon the justice of his claim, owing to the fact that he had been wounded while in the service of his country.

"How and where were you wounded?" one of the committee inquired.

Placing his hand over his heart he said: "I was shot in the breast on a retreat from Bull Run, yer honor."

"Shot through the breast on a retreat," said the committeeman. "How could you be shot through the breast on a retreat?"

"I had the indiscretion to tur'rn and look back, yer honor."

"But if you were shot through the breast in the place you indicate, the ball would have gone through your heart. How is that?"

"My heart was in me mouth at the time, yer honor."

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Hematite.

LORDSBURG (N. M.) Feb. 17.—Q.: I am enclosing two small pieces of mineral which I believe to be specular-iron, but I am not sure, and will be very glad if you will help me out. In the sunlight they show (with a glass) small specks of a bright-ruby color. The mineral seems to be insoluble and infusible. W.H.P.

A.: The specks you refer to are microscopic pseudomorph after pyrite, and carry no copper mineral resembling the specks, at sight. Complete tests show the mineral to be micaceous iron-ore, a variety of hematite.

Brown Coal.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 17.—Q.: Is the sample I leave at The Times office asphalt? Locality of deposit Southern Utah C.C.T.

Rock and Mineral.

CAMPO, Feb. 17.—Q.: I am sending a sample of ore from near Campo, Cal. Please tell me the character of the ore. J.E.S.

A.: The substance is granitiferous, fractured tormaline and hornblenda is present, with traces of yellowish augite.

Siderite With Spathic Iron.

LEWIS SPRINGS (Ariz.) Feb. 17.—Q.: Under separate cover I am mailing you today two samples of ore found near here. I am told by mining men that samples carry gold, and that it is worth filing upon. It is surface rock. R.D.P.

A.: The samples represent a fairly good surface rock, indicating precious metal. No. 1 is cellular quartz, with siderite (iron carbonate) and traces of zinc and lead. No. 2 is strictly siderite carrying cubes of spathic iron.

Impure Fuller's Earth.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—Q.: Enclosed please find sample taken from the Rose wood district, Antelope Valley from a ledge three feet wide and five feet down. I find some very small crystals in it, and you will find a few of them enclosed wrapped in tissue paper. Kindly let me know what they are? J.E.O.

A.: The pinkish, massive sample is an impure Fuller's earth, colored from manganese carbonate. The microscopic crystals in tissue paper, and in the mass, are crystalized quartz. The value of the mineral is nominal.

Soot.

Q.: Am sending you a sample of black-powdery mineral found near Los Angeles. Has it a value? G.W.S.

A.: The sample is from a stack of an oil-burner. It will make "government white-wash" or a low grade paint material.

Trace of Vanadium.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—Q.: Please analyze. Would like to know amount of gold it contains and quality? E.M.F.

A.: This department does not test for gold, you are respectfully referred to assayers. Iron oxides are present, with traces of lead vanadate, galenite and copper.

White Fuller's Earth.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19.—Q.: Sample taken from near Sanger, Cal. J.G.E.

A.: It is Fuller's earth, with mica, pyrite, arsenopyrite microscopically and sparingly present. Traces of aluminum oxide and iron sulphate are in the mass. Too impure for a commercial Fuller's earth.

Bismuth Ore.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19.—Q.: The sample in separate package, that I take the liberty of sending you, was obtained from near Silver City, N. M., and specifically, from Sierra county. Will you kindly tell what the mineral is, and give information as to its commercial value. F.N.J.

A.: The sample runs high in bismuth value. It has a good market price attached to it, but commercial quantities, and not more "stringers," is a condition precedent for a successful venture. Not tested for copper, gold, or silver.

Indian War Paint.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Feb. 19.—Q.: Sample cometh from a two-foot lode in the Big William's mining district. Does it carry quicksilver? Is it an iron or copper coloring? E.J.M.

A.: Quicksilver absent. Copper a trace. The sample is 96 per cent hematite, with silica.

Concentrating Ore.

BISBEE (Ariz.) Feb. 19.—Q.: I am sending you by mail today, two samples. The white rock in the white sack comes from a vein in Southern New Mexico, and this vein traverses accurately the backbone of a hot-back; the mineralization gradually decreasing away from the center of the vein. I would like to know what mineral, if any, causes the alum-like appearance? The other rock comes from near Bisbee, Ariz., and appears to be a chamber deposit. The yellow and dark rocks in the sample adjoin each other, blending on the contact. Is this rock vanadinite? Thanking you for the analysis you gave on the last rock I sent, and complimenting The Times as being the only publication, that I know of, (lay or technical) that helps the poor prospector in the search for ores and minerals. H.H.

A.: Glad to hear from you. Your references to The Times are carefully noted. We will treat of your ores from the standpoint of mineralogy, and not geologically. The quartz carries chalcopyrite, arsenopyrite, and pyrite, with a microscopical trace of galenite; vanadium is not present, iron oxide is in the mass. This is a "base" sulphide ore, and taken from the red sack. The whitish sample is a calciferous rock, with various forms of the pyrite family in microscopical forms. Iron alum is present in the mass in low percentage, but not of commercial value. The coloring matter in this sample is from the lime carbonate and the sulphides. No sample tested for gold.

Tripoli.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19.—Q.: This sample is from a point ten miles from Riverside, and I take it to be pure silica. The lead is about eight feet wide. With it you will find a sample tagged "Carney," and I take the sample to be tungsten. The sample tagged "Richard" is from a claim in Lower California, and I am at a loss as to what it is. D. A.

A.: The sample marked "pure silica" is tripoli (polishing powder.) It is an earth, formed into the resemblance of rock, and composed of the shells of diatoms and other infusoria, which use silica for shell-building." Other varieties of infusoria use lime and carbonic acid and build up limestones when they drop their shells to the sea bottoms.

A chip of tripoli, no larger than a grain of wheat placed under the microscope, will show many curious forms and shapes, such as spicules, wheels, tripods, etc., and each of these forms is a microscopic shell that formerly was the nesting-place of an animal. Tripoli is used for certain soaps; as a cleaner and polisher; as an adulterant in fertilizers. The coarser grade of tripoli is utilized in the manufacture of bricks, and the finer grade being suspended in water like porcelain-clay is assorted into sizes by precipitation in different tanks." The "Carney" sample is an impure fluorite (impurities iron oxides) and does not carry a trace of tungsten. The "Richard" sample is a variety of steatite (soapstone.)

Calciferous.

ALMO, Feb. 20.—Q.: Will you please be kind enough to let us know what these two samples are? From Riverside county. "ALMO."

A.: The gray sample is altered trachyte, and the white (friable) sample is carbonate of line.

Trachyte and Topaz.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 20.—Q.: Please find two samples herein from near Cedar City, Utah. The crystals were taken from the rock, as shown in the larger sample. What rock is this? Please name the crystals. MoB.

A.: The rock is trachyte, and the crystals are those of topaz.

Double Silicates.

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 21.—Q.: Confer a favor by letting me know what these specimens contain. Are they of commercial value? I will watch your Sunday Times for results. D. R.

A.: No. 1 lime and aluminum silicate. Calcite present. No. 2, a micaceous granular altered rock with potash trace. Commercial values doubtful.

Iron—Alumina Garnet.

EAST HIGHLAND, Feb. 21.—Q.: This is a sample of rock from San Bernardino county, and I would be pleased if you will let me know what it is, and if it has a commercial value. C. H. P.

A.: The sample is a massive form of almandite. Good abrasive.

Low Grade Meerschaum.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—Q.: This sample is from the Silver Lake mining district. Is it meerschaum of good quality? B.

Fuller's Earth.

HEMET, Feb. 23.—Q.: Kindly inform me what these minerals are and if of any value. No. 1 is from a water vein four miles south of Hemet. The mineral is turquois-blue when first taken out of the earth. No. 2 is from the foot-wall of the same vein. No. 3 is from the San Phillippe Valley, San Diego county. C. L. J.

A.: No. 1 is silliceous talc, in part Fuller's Earth of low grade. No. 2 is a better grade Fuller's Earth. No. 3 is lime carbonate.

Banded Agate.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—Q.: I found several of these gems at Redondo. Will you please name the sample for me? J. F. P.

Graphite.

PASADENA, Feb. 23.—Q.: This sample was taken from a lead on the east side of Mt. Baldy. Is it molybdenite? A.C.L.

Iron Carbonate.

YUMA (Ariz.) Feb. 23.—Q.: The sample in the red tobacco sack comes from a lode twelve miles from Yuma. I judge from its appearance, and crystal form that it is a rare mineral of some kind. Please name it for me. D. A. W.

Sodium Nitrate.

NEEDLES, Feb. 23.—Q.: I gathered this sample at a point on the Colorado River about twelve miles south of Needles, on the Arizona side of the river. Does it carry niter? C. B. F.

A.: The sample does not react for potassium.

Oxides and Sulphides.

PASADENA, Feb. 23.—Q.: I have been reading your mining news every Sunday that I have been where I could get a paper, and the "In the Earth" column is the first thing I turn to. I am sending you four samples from the Elsinore Mountains, and would like to have your opinion of them as to their value, what they contain, and their names. No. 1 comes from a vein four feet wide and about ten feet down. No. 2 is from a ledge fifteen feet wide and is from the surface. No. 3 is from an outcropping, and No. 4 is from the bottom of a ten-foot shaft where the vein is six feet wide. The samples come from different claims, all within a radius of two miles. R.B.C.

A.: No. 1, various iron oxides, with low per cent. copper and trace of lead. No. 2 altered serpentine with pyrrhotite (magnetic pyrite,) sparingly in the mass. No. 3 like No. 1, but lower grade. No. 4 "yellow copper ore" and carbonate of copper present in the two samples. Galenite is in one of the samples combined with iron oxides. Unless samples carry gold or silver the find would be of but little commercial value. No. 4, however, is encouraging.

Opal Silica and Quartz.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—Q.: "N. C.G.," and myself are sending you four samples from Slate Range and Panamint Valley for examination. Kindly classify the same. J.B.E.

A.: No. 1 is chiefly silica with aluminum silicate. Lime is present with dendritic forms of manganese. No. 2 is common opal. No. 3 boron present. No. 4 mixed quartz and jasper; platinum absent; lead and vanadium present in traces only. Pan the mineral and obtain an occasional color of native silver. Not tested for gold.

Bituminous Shale.

LAS VEGAS (Nev.) Feb. 25.—Q.: Locality near Virgin City, Utah. From a blanket formation. Is paraffin in the shale? J.C.B.

A.: Paraffin is not present in the sample.

Porphyritic Rock.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25.—Q.: I enclose a piece of rock from the Rosamond district, Kern county, California. Kindly tell me if there is values in it, and what it is composed of. H. C.

A.: The rock is conglomerate; iron oxides; manganese carbonate; trace of lead, and trace of vanadium present Not tested for gold.

Iron Oxides.

NORDHOFF, Feb. 26.—Q.: Enclosed please find sample. Kindly state what it is? It comes from Nordhoff and the deposit is 300 feet wide; quicksilver will pick it up and then it will float. H.C.W.

A.: The sample is a mixture of various iron oxides and pseudomorphic mica, and the very deceptive yellowish matter in the shale is also iron oxide (limonitic.)

Picrolite.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26.—Q.: I am sending you a sample of ore that looks like asbestos. I found a lead of it running with magnetic-iron about twelve miles north of Goff's. Please explain about the rock? D.C.L.

A.: The sample is not asbestos, but it resembles that mineral. It is a fibrous variety of serpentine; of massive structure, and radiated forms; leek-green in color and merging into yellow. Streak partly shining. Hardness 3.75. Composition over 40 per cent. silica; 37 per cent. magnesia; iron protoxide approximately 4 per cent.; low in manganese, and 15 per cent. water.

Rotten-Stone.

BARNWELL, Feb. 26.—Q.: Can you give me the name and contents of this ore? Does it carry phosphates? L. T.

A.: The sample is soft and earthy; it carries no phosphates; it is reddish brown in color; it is used in polishing brass, silver, glass, Britannia metal, etc. When rubbed it gives off a peculiar odor, owing to the 10 per cent. of carbon present. With the carbon are: Alumina, 86 per cent., and silica, 4 per cent. Rotten-stone is, "supposed to be derived from the decomposition of shale or siliceous limestone," and we give a clear description of it for the reason it is of value in the polishing industries stated, and used as a "healing" powder to some little extent withal.

Baryte.

NEEDLES, Feb. 26.—Q.: Sample comes from a locality not many miles from here. Please name the ore? C.L.M.

EARLY RISER BILLY M'KINLEY, TAFT'S BIG CAMPAIGN MANAGER.

Says the President Is Sure of Renomination and Election—Is Trolley King of the World and Goes With-out Coffee and Cigars to Be in Best Trim for the Fray. Capacity for Making Friends.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Every morning in the week except Sunday, when he is given an hour in bed, William Brown McKinley arises at 6:30 o'clock. Dr. McKinley, the private trainer of President McKinley, is already in the house. Within a few minutes Mr. McKinley is moving forward and backward, takes deep breaths and short breaths and has himself into a free sweat and a cold glow. Then he has breakfast, which he is permitted to drink hot water, and is sent to business without his cus-tomary cigar.

One of the penalties Mr. McKinley is paying as manager of Mr. Taft's campaign. Smoking is no hardship to him, for he has, when he is at home, which is not often, he has done a good deal of it by 9 a.m. Details are attended to by that time. Thence onward and forward, takes deep breaths and short breaths and loses himself into a free sweat and a cold glow. Then he has breakfast, were on the banks of the Mississippi River, opposite St. Louis. The Chicago and Alton, weary of hitting at the empty air, made a friend of McKinley and joined him in a working arrangement.

William B. McKinley.

At St. Louis, however, he met another kind of opposition. When he asked for trackage rights over one of the two river bridges he was treated pleasantly but not seriously by the terminal company. Electric roads were a novelty, he was told, and the bridges ought not to be cluttered up with a make-believe transportation system even to accommodate a man who, outside of his ridiculous notions about trolley lines, was a sane and worthy citizen. Instead of fighting him, the terminal company was laughing at him. "But I'll give you a fair price for the privilege," McKinley answered, "and a satisfactory guarantee that the rent will be paid." Still no bargain could be made. Inside of a year and a half McKinley had a bridge of his own across the Mississippi River. It cost $3,000,000, and is said to be the finest bridge between Sly Paul and New Orleans. He cut the tolliage on pedestrians and teams and broke into a monopoly long enjoyed by the terminal company.

FISH AND ICE MILLIONARIES.

"Where," I asked him, "did you get the money with which to build the lines of the Illinois Traction Company, and to acquire your many street railroads, water works, and gas and electric lighting plants?"

"From Philadelphia originally and then from Maine, and later from Canada and England. There is a great deal of money in Maine. People have been living there for a long time. Ice and fish have enriched many men, while timber, of course, has been another source of wealth."

"When did you begin dealing in public utilities?"

"At the age of 26. I built a water works for the towns of Champaign, where I live, and Urbana, the suburbs of which come together. Next, I started an electric lighting plant. Trolley lines followed naturally."

Short and pudgy, gray-eyed and bald-headed, Mr. McKinley does not seem by his walk or talk to be particularly energetic. But he starts every day early in the morning and works into the night when necessary. Low of voice, actually retiring in disposition, he goes about in the world without arousing any antagonisms that cannot be settled. It is said that he never gives an employee a direct order. "I think," he will say, "that it might be well for us to do so and so." If the employee is quick and intelligent he will accept the suggestion as a command to be obeyed with the loss of as little time as possible. The McKinley habit is to leap fences and take the fields instead of following the road where the walking may be smoother, but the distance considerably greater. If his own plan is not the best by which to work out a result he is enthusiastic and large-minded enough to try another. "Our superintendent," he said to me, "knows more about the electric railway business than I do." Rarely indeed, is a constructor so generous and unegotistical.

SEVEN KINDS OF BREAKFASTS.

Many stories are afloat in Champaign which reveal Mr. McKinley's temperament and character. He gave the town a Presbyterian church in honor of his father, and the University of Illinois, which is located there, a hall in honor of his mother, and also a building for the Young Men's Christian Association. It is said that when he starts to a ball game he drives his automobile through the street until he picks up half a dozen friends, all of whom become his guests for the afternoon, and sometimes for the evening. His dinner parties were celebrated in Illinois long before he got into politics, came to Congress, and gave his dining-room a Washington reputation. He has seven kinds of breakfasts. Men invited to his house may take their choice. Politicians from all over the United States are sampling them now every morning.

"Some rich men collect paintings," so runs the Champaign explanation, "and some collect books, bric-a-brac, and tapestries. Billy McKinley just collects friends."

Several women called on McKinley one hot July morning. They were organizing a church fair for the month of October and hoped to raise $2100 for a new heating apparatus. They meant to sew and work all summer. Tickets were $1 apiece. Mr. McKinley's name was wanted at the top of the subscription paper. "I'll sign, of course," he said, "and with pleasure." Going out of doors and looking at the paper, the women found that he had subscribed $2100. They went back. "Don't say another word," he replied after hearing their thanks and apologies. "Forget the fair. It's too hot to work anyway. I'll pay for the whole business."

Not having children of his own, Mr. McKinley bestows his affections on his nieces. They have a spaniel named Tama. The dog loafs at McKinley's office when McKinley is at home. One August day Tama, made restless and miserable by the heat, looked into McKinley's face and seemed to say something. "That dog," McKinley remarked to his clerks and stenographers, "wants his hair cut."

CUTS TAMA'S HAIR IN AN ALLEY.

It was a busy afternoon, with telephone calls coming in from Chicago, St. Louis, Springfield and Danville, but McKinity took Tama into an alley near by, and there he was found by a messenger working patiently on the dog with a pair of office scirrors. "You see," said the man who told me the story, "Billy McKinley can't bear to think that any living thing is unhappy or uncomfortable. Tama is one of the recognized characters of Champaign. His one weakness is for candy, cake, and ice cream—he is a regular sot in that respect. When there is a church festival or a charity fair, Tama walks from table to table begging sweets from his friends and acquaintances. McKinley thinks the dog may make a nuisance of himself and so when he is in Champaign and there is a festival coming, he sends $1 to the managers with the request that Tama be given all that he wants to eat and then sent home. Nobody can beat Billy in the Nineteenth Illinois district when it comes to running for Congress. But he was friendly and kind to man and beast before he got into politics."

It was in the spring of 1905 that Mr. McKinley took his place in the House of Representatives. Mr. Taft, then Secretary of War, started for the Philippines that summer on a tour of inspection. A large company of public men accompanied him. Nicholas Longworth, Bourke Cockran, and Swager Sherley, of Louisville, went along and each became engaged to be married on that gay and notable voyage. Mr. McKinley, though a stranger in Congress, was invited to join the excursion.

"It was then," he said to me, "that I made the acquaintance of the leading members of the House of Representatives. One cannot do much in this world without acquaintances. I accomplished more on the trip to the Philippines than I could have accomplished by five years of ordinary experience here in Washington. I came into personal contact with Mr. Taft, was on shipboard with him for ninety days, and found him to be a great man intellectually and an honest man, simply honest, transparently honest, and that's the sort of a man every one respects."

GAVE WASHINGTON DINNERS.

On his return from the Philippines, Mr. McKinley began his dinners that have since given him a wide reputation for hospitality. One year he took Speaker Cannon, Vice-President Sherman, and a large party of Congressmen on a tour to Cuba, Porto Rico, Venezuela, and the Isthmus of Panama. The trip lasted for twenty-eight days and Mr. McKinley paid all of the expenses. He managed Speaker Cannons' campaign for the Presidency in 1904. Cannon lives at Danville, in the county east of Champaign, and Mr. McKinley's electric road runs into that city. "We were sincerely for Cannon," he said, "and voted for him at the convention to the very end. After the nomination was made, Mr. Taft sent for me from Hot Springs. He wanted me to be treasurer of the national committee. It was an unwise suggestion and I declined the place. After his election I called at the White House. 'I'll not run after you,' I told the President, 'but if I want anything I shall let you know. If you need any help just send me word.'"

"You were the son," I said, "of a Presbyterian clergyman?"

"Yes, and the grandson of another one. Ages ago, an ancestor of mine, and a McKinley, came over from the north of Ireland. I have lived in Champaign for fifty-three years, or ever since I was two years old. My father moved there from Petersburg, preached in the village church, and lived at the edge of town on eleven acres of land. I can't remember the time when I couldn't harness a horse and milk a cow. My father began teaching me Latin when I was eight years of age. His health broke down and he went to New Mexico as a missionary to the Indians, leaving his family in Champaign.

CLERKED IN A DRUG STORE.

"I was a student at the University of Illinois at the time of the Chicago fire. We had been trained in the manual of arms, and three companies of the students were sent to Chicago as guards. I was ill all of the following winter with typhoid fever. On getting well, I went into a drug store for $2 a week. In two years my uncle, J. B. McKinley, took me into his bank as a book-keeper at $40 a month. He loaned eastern money to farmers on mortgages. It was a big business. But I wasn't particularly brilliant as an accountant. I recollect that my books at the end of the first year wouldn't balance within $40,000."

"What did your uncle do?"

"Nothing. He knew that everything was all right, and I was too busy making the wheels go round to waste any time in hunting for paper errors. On my coming of age I was admitted to a partnership in the business, the firm being called J. B. & W. B. McKinley. I had been getting, as I said, $40 a month, but I made as much more by trading around outside the bank. From 1875 to 1885 our farmers had a good many wet seasons. Drainage then was a new and untried problem in that vicinity. A number of the farmers sold their land and moved away. I bought every farm I could, using my own money and borrowing wherever I found a willing lender. My first big deal concerned 640 acres. I bought it for $15 an acre, and sold it at a profit of $6400. That transaction was really my financial start. I bought and sold land right along, but I kept 5000 acres, and own it yet. Farms are safe property. They don't go out of style, no man can carry them away, and they don't burn up. Still, the net return is not over 4 per cent. I lease my land to renters and rarely see it, being busy in other directions."

"When did you enter politics actively?"

"About eight years ago. Men asked me to run for Congress. The suggestion was new, but not displeasing, and I was nominated. I have been telling my constituents ever since that I like to represent the min Washing-

Money-Making Alfalfa Land

At $70 Per Acre With Free Water

In the Heart of a Natural Gas District

Here is a chance to secure California's finest alfalfa land—soil that will produce record crops to the acre—at the lowest price for which land of this character was ever offered. Get ready right now to go with us and see this wonderfully rich $70 land. Positively the the last of its kind left in the State at this price. Adjoins some of the best income-producing alfalfa and dairy ranches of the entire State. Has a bountiful free water supply—remember, you get water with this land ABSOLUTELY FREE. And remember, that underlying this land is a rich vein of odorless natural gas, suitable for light, heat, fuel and power purposes. You can develop a generous supply right on your own land at a very moderate cost. Dairy ranchers in this district are receiving from $150 to $1500 per month for milk sold to the local creamery. Alfalfa, dairying, hogs and chickens on this $70 land is a money-making combination that cannot be surpassed in California. Alfalfa is a permanent dividend payer. It is always SURE. The demand is increasing yearly. Alfalfa prices are soaring. Dairy products are as staple as the hills—and present prices will never be lower. This land is level as a table—requires no grading or fertilizing. At present it is covered with a prolific growth of tule plants, which proves its sedimentary origin. It is similar in composition to the overflow deposits on the banks of the Nile. Excellent transportation facilities—best of schools, commercial and educational advantages.

Only a short trip from Los Angeles. Two special excursions at low rates will leave from our offices (personally conducted) this week. Register at once for excursions, as only a limited number of people will be taken. Write, telephone or call for reservations immediately.

Six-year-old Date Palm Bearing 160 Lbs. Ripe Dates

DATES

Pay $1000 to $3000 Per ACRE Annually

The United States Government Has Proven, After 8 Years' Experimenting, That

Millions of Dollars Can Be Produced Annually From Growing Dates on a Commercial Scale Right Here in Southern California

We have been on the ground for the past three years, and have been waiting for positive proof. The results obtained by the government, and several private date growers, in the form of thousands of pounds of delicious, ripe dates, of the very finest varieties, will convince any sane person, that date culture is destined to become as important a product as any fruit grown on the American continent.

The Time for Action Has Arrived

Three years ago we purchased four hundred and eighty acres of choice land—(the best adapted to date culture in the United States)—located midway between the two government experimental date groves, in Riverside County. Only one hundred and thirty miles from Los Angeles.

We have developed 250 miner's inches of flowing water from deep artesian wells, and have been improving the land in every way. We have a large acreage planted to alfalfa and grain.

We Also Have Thousands of Date Palms Growing in Our Own Land

We are now planting the entire four hundred and eighty acres to date palms. Dates will pay from one thousand to three thousand dollars per acre, annually. Our date grove will produce an income of at least

A Half Million Dollars Annually

This will assure dividends of three hundred per cent. per annum.

Date trees are planted 50 to the acre, and the most conservative estimate of their production is 200 pounds to the tree, making a total of 10,000 pounds to the acre, which at the low price of ten cents per pound makes $1000 per acre.

Small Capitalization Means Large Dividends

While our date palms are maturing, we are operating the ranch as a hog ranch. We have it fully stocked, and will be able to pay at least eight per cent. dividends annually until our date palms begin to produce. We will have 1000 hogs ready for the market within a few months.

Enough stock has been sold to positively assure the financial success of our company.

This is NOT A SPECULATION, but a gilt-edge investment, with absolutely no risk attached to it.

Don't Miss This Opportunity to Investigate

Over 100,000 shares have been sold to this date.

We only wish to sell a few thousand shares of stock, in order to further improve the property.

ADDS ZEST TO POLITICAL LIFE.

Legislature and Campaign to Open Simultaneously.

Arizona Governor Gives Out Suggestion of Economy.

Two United States Senators Are to Be Elected.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 16.—With the opening of the State Legislature in Phoenix next Monday also is timed the actual start of the fall political campaign. Arizona has had more than her share of elections and political activity the past couple of years, with campaigns almost overlapping each other, but none of them had the eruptive indications of the campaign now about due, for it will be the first at which the people of Arizona have had a chance to vote for President.

The Legislature is a known quantity, overwhelmingly Democratic, with enough work for a ninety-day session already laid out by the constitutional convention, mainly along the line of ultra-populism. There is doubt over the Speakership, which may go either to A. R. Lynch of Solomonville or Sam Bradner of Benson, but M. G. Cunniff, a prominent member of the constitutional convention, will be the unanimous Democratic choice for president of the State Senate. It is understood that the legislators are apt to be surprised when they proceed to distribute clerkships broadcast, without regard to the need of the offices created or the competency of the appointed ones. It is being privately whispered that Gov. Hunt will demand economy in the clerkship and printing lines which have been such notorious grafts in many Territorial Legislatures. The Legislature might overrule him in this, but it would be bad politics to do so.

WILL ELECT SENATORS.

Senators-elect Ashurst and Smith will not take their seats in the United States Congress before the first week in April. Though the ceremony of election in Arizona is only a legislative ratification of a vote already cast its method is prescribed in the Federal statutes. On the second Tuesday after the meeting of the Legislature that body will assemble in joint session and will elect the Senators singly. If the earliest possible action is taken the joint session will be held March 24. It is unlikely that there will be any delay, as there are hopes that the Arizona Senators, already determined upon, may be selected and may take their seats before those from New Mexico, where a long and bitter struggle within the Legislature is predicted. Thus the long terms may be gained for Arizona.

Little is being heard now of the three-year tenure of office, advocated by leading Democrats soon after the December election, and it is probable that absolute instruction will be given by the Legislature for the holding of a general State election in November, in conjunction with the Presidential election.

Close upon the heels of the Phoenix City election, the Democrats on May 24 will hold a Presidential preference primary, at which will be elected the delegates to the Baltimore convention and the voters will also express first, second and third preferences for President, incidentally choosing also a State National committeeman. The districts, each electing a delegate, will be Maricopa county, Cochise county, Pinal, Graham, Gila and Greenlee counties, Yuma, Santa Cruz and Pima counties, Yavapai and Mohave counties, Coconino, Navajo and Apache counties.

HUNT NOT A CANDIDATE.

Gov. Hunt has refused to be considered as a candidate for delegate in the group of which his home county of Gila is a part, but there is no lack of candidates. For National Committeeman already are announced Eugene Brady O'Neill, Reese M. Ling and S. J. Michelson of Phoenix and J. K. Bowen of Bisbee. Michelson is the present incumbent.

At the present writing there would seem probability that the instructions of the Democratic primary in Arizona will be for Champ Clark. The support of all other candidates is scattering.

On the Republican side, there is much talk of opposition between the Taft and Roosevelt wings of the party, though no actual clash yet has occurred. Roosevelt clubs have been organized in a number of Arizona towns. The headquarters of the movement is in Phoenix, under the active direction of Dwight B. Heard, a local capitalist, who will ask to be made national committeeman for the State. Mr. Heard and former Gov. Kibbey are working for a direct primary, such as provided by the Democrats. It is appreciated, however, that the time available is very short in which to put into action such a radical change in the usual party procedure.

Taft headquarters will be opened in Phoenix this week, in immediate charge of Robert A. Kirk, late assistant secretary of the Territory, who carried to Washington the report of the State returning board. J. Alonzo Hubbell, chairman of the State committee, and ex-Congressman Ralph H. Cameron have been reported as on the way to Phoenix, here to assist in the Taft campaign. Another strong Taft supporter is Col. W. S. Sturges of Pima county, Republican national committeeman for Arizona and a candidate for re-election. There is an impression that the State committee strongly favor the President.

SMALLPOX UNDER CONTROL.

PUBLIC MEETINGS BARRED.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) March 11.—According to Health Officer Greene, the smallpox situation at Douglas is now under control and few new cases have been reported during the past week. All public gatherings have been prohibited and schools, churches and theaters have been closed. All immigrants from Mexico are being vaccinated, as well as a large portion of the population in each of the border towns. All mail matter is being fumigated before dispatch and to be sure of results Douglas mail again is fumigated on arrival at Bisbee.

Altogether the situtions is hardly a pleasant one from a business viewpoint. No trouble whatever has been encountered in enforcing quarantine regulations. The people have been admirably respondent to every request of the authorities. It is expected that the epidemic will have run its course within ten days.

Smallpox is one of the commonest of winter diseases in Northern Mexico, where mothers frequently expose their children in order that they may be through with an experience considered almost an essential feature of their lives. This year, however, the disease has been unusually epidemic. It has been met with forceful measures, backed by the physicians of the railroad company and the municipal authorities. No less than 5000 persons have been vaccinated in Guaymas and vaccination has been freely offered in all other towns. Hermosillo, oddly enough, seems to have entirely escaped the epidemic, no cases whatever having been reported from that point.

STRUGGLE WITH TRACHOMA.

Following the lead of Phoenix, the school authorities of Bisbee have been making a close investigation of the prevalence of trachoma among the children of the city. Sixty cases were found in the schools. The children afflicted have been segregated, will be separately taught and will be surgically treated where necessary at public expense.

The local street railway company is having serious trouble at a point just below the city with spreading and dropping etracks, due to the settlement of mine workings below. At one point the bed of the track has sunk eighteen inches within a year.

Business men of Bisbee, Lowell and Warren have organized the Warren District Commercial Club, with H. D. McVay as chairman and Jesse Yoakum as secretary. The club will seek to forward the business interests of the city and will first put all possible effort behind a proposition to bring the transcontinental highway along the international border, through Douglas, Bisbee and Tombstone.

At the current term of the Superior Court at Tombstone will be heard the case of Gleeson vs. the estate of Martin Costello, involving mining property near Gleeson approximately valued at $1,000,000.

ANARCHY IN SONORA.

Hundreds of Americans are coming out of Sonora, telling uniformly that the outlying districts are in a state of anarchy, no stable government existing to keep down disorder. Consequently bands of robbers are forming, looting wherever they will under the name of the revolution. About the only organized military or police force of value is a squadron of rurales at Magdalena. This body has been kept in an excellent state of discipline by Col. Emelio Kostellitzky, who has just retired to private life after thirty years service, surrendering the command to Col. Juan C. Cabral, who commanded the Madero forces in Cananea during the late successful rebellion.

Owing to the unsettled condition along the border, traffic between Douglas and Agua Prieta now is suspended at 6 o'clock by agreement between the American and Mexican authorities.

GRINDELL'S BODY FOUND.

Again the body of Thomas Grindell has been discovered. This time the find appears authentic. Seri Indians have discovered in a cave on the mainland west of Tiburon Island the skeleton of a man with a lot of papers. It is probable that Indians will be called upon to guide an expedition to the place. Grindell was the head of an illy prepared expedition to Tiburon Island, about twelve years ago. The water supply ran out about the time the party reached the desert shore of the Gulf of California and only one survivor managed to make his way down the coast to a settlement, he saving his life by condensing salt water in a small teapot.

Last Thursday in the Gardner shaft of the Copper Queen Company John Fredine, a miner, was killed by the fall of a slab of ore from the roof of a stope.

Owing to a row in the City Council over the construction of a roadway to the upper part of the city, Alderman Jakob Schmid has resigned. As another Alderman is absent in Mexico and still two places more are vacant, the resignation leaves the Council without a working quorum. Schmid has been prevailed upon to make a quorum for the transaction of absolutely essential business but will not consider a number of matters upon which he holds decided opinions in opposition to those of his remaining fellow-members.

Hereafter only thirty saloon licenses will be issued in Bisbee and no licenses are to be transferable from one place to another.

WOMEN DISPLAY PUBLIC SPIRIT.

Porterville Feminine Contingent Map Out Plans for Year's Work and Elect New Officers.

PORTERVILLE, March 12.—Officers of the Ladies' Improvement Club were chosen for the coming year at a meeting of the Executive Committee held in their rooms in the Chamber of Commerce Club this afternoon.

Those who will serve the organization for the ensuing term include Mrs. J. C. Trefry, president; Mrs. Tyler-Gywinn, vice-president; Mrs. Ida M. Partridge, secretary, and Mrs. George G. Murry, treasurer.

On the advisory board are named Mrs. V. D. Knupp, Mrs. W. E. Sprott and Miss Mildred Mitchell.

Mrs. Trefry, the president, will name the standing committees in due course.

Beside having mapped out a series of improvements for the Luther Burbank Park, as well as having assumed care of the park for the ensuing year, the ladies have a charity committee and a committee in whose charge is the care of children of the poor, in addition to special work which is taken up from time to time.

That road oil will make a highway which is equal to the best asphalt road, if properly used, despite reports of road experts to the contrary, has been shown by an experimental stretch of street, a quarter of a mile in length, which was laid by the street department of this city and which has every appearance of being as good as roads which cost $50,000 per mile. The road with which the city has experimented will cost not to exceed $4000 per mile, depending largely on the accessibility of rock.

This road is laid with a foundation of coarse granite, finer and finer stone being used in the various layers. Next to the top is laid a thin binder of oil and sand. Each layer of material is thoroughly compacted, some loam being used if the rocks do not appear to bind readily. After the oils and coat is placed the road is used for several weeks. It is then smoothed up, and a final coating of the heaviest asphaltic oil, mixed with sharp gravel, is used for the surfacing.

The quarter-mile of road experimentally laid was placed across an old slough which has defied all road-making efforts thus far. Road experts who have examined the work, which has now been subjected to months of the heaviest traffic, state that it is a complete success and to all appearances equal to the best asphalt.

The Delays of Justice.

[London Chronicle:] A man has been arrested in Australia for a murder committed at Chiswick in 1908. Legal records supply instances of a longer interval than this between the crime and the arrest. The leading case is that of Eugene Aram, who was hanged for the murder of Clarke fourteen years after the offense. In the eighteenth century a man named Horne was executed for the murder of his child thirty-five years after the crime. There is also the well-known case of Gov. Wall, who was hanged in 1802 for a murder committed in 1782. But Sir James Stephens recalls what is surely the most remarkable case on record. He prosecuted, as counsel for the crown, in 1863, a man who was charged with stealing a leaf from a parish register sixty years before.

Black Oak Mill.

The new roller mill and cyanide plant at the Black Oak mine have been practically completed and operations are about to start. An eight-drill compressor has been installed and other mine machinery added to the plant. The company is receiving electricity from the Phoenix Lake power plant, and everything is in readiness for a profitable era. Crosscutting is under way from the 1600-foot level to intersect the rich vein developed on the 1400 and 1500-foot levels. Work is progressing rapidly and the management hopes to soon attain the objective point. On the upper levels the new vein shows up splendidly and sufficient ore is said to be blocked out to insure the steady operation of the mill for an extensive period. With the new equipment it is expected to recover in excess of 85 per cent. of total gold values.

Interest in High Grade.

Interests associated with the Ft. Bidwell Consolidated Mines Company announce the intention of the company to resume production within a short time. The late storm will postpone activity to some extent, but it is expected to have work well under way by June 1. Particular attention will be devoted to the development of the rich shoots opened on the Mountain View claim, while the Sugar Pine claim will also be vigorously worked. The five-stamp mill is ready to go into action. The deal for the sale of the Big Four to Seattle people is still pending, according to late reports. The Modoc Mines Company is reported to be completing arrangements for vigorous work. Denver people are showing increasing interest, while Los Angeles, Reno and Salt Lake capitalists are on the ground. The district has been formally organized and a provision enacted warning "Dagoes and Asiatics" that High Grade is a white man's camp.

CLIFTON DISTRICT.

ARIZONA COPPER WORK.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CLIFTON (Ariz.) March 15.—Several hundred men are now at work on the site of the Arizona Copper Company's new reduction plant, south of this city, leveling the ground and putting in the necessary railroad tracks from the near-by Arizona and New Mexico Railroad. The contract for the steel work has been given to the Kansas City Structural Steel Company. The first deliveries are to be in May. A contract has been given for the roasters, which are to be of the Herreschoff air-cooled type. The stack is to be twenty-two feet in diameter and 300 feet in height, to insure carrying away the fumes from the vicinity of Clifton.

The Shannon Company is operating its smelter below Clifton with a greater output than known for years, producing about 800 tons a month exclusively from the company's mines, including about 5000 tons a month, brought in from the mines at Gleeson.

QUICKSILVER OUTPUT.

CALIFORNIA'S PRODUCT.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

The California State Mining Bureau has just issued a bulletin showing the State's output of quicksilver during the year 1911. Among other things the bulletin says:

"Contrary to predictions generally made at the end of the year, the quicksilver output for 1911 shows a considerable increase over that of 1910. The production for 1911 was 19,109 flasks, valued at $879,205 in flasks of seventy-five pounds, figured at $46.01 per flask, which was the average price for the year received in the San Francisco market. This is an increase in quantity of 1444 flasks, and in value of $80,203, over 1911.

"The largest production came from San Benito county, followed by Santa Clara, Lake, San Luis Obispo, Napa, Sonoma, Santa Barbara, Trinity and Colusa counties, in the order named. The following counties also contain quicksilver deposits, some of which promise to become producers at an early date: Kings, Monterey, El Dorado, Fresno, Shasta, Solano, Stanislaus and Yolo.

"Unusual activity has been apparent among operators and owners of quicksilver mines during the past year, and at the present time the outlook for a further increase in the 1912 production is favorable. During the last twelve months a fifteen-ton furnace has been built in Lake county; work on a twenty-ton furnace in San Benito county has been started, and a twenty-four ton furnace has been completed in Sonoma county, in addition to the reduction plants already in operation in these counties. New furnaces with twenty-four and forty tons capacity, respectively, have also been erected in Monterey and Fresno counties.

"The 1911 quicksilver production has not been exceeded since 1905, when the product was sold for $886,081. The output was valued at $712,334 in 1906; $663,178 in 1907; $763,520 in 1908; $773,788 in 1909, and $799,002 in 1910."

GOLD BULLION FROM TOM REED.

PRODUCTION INCREASED WITH LOWER GRADE ORE.

Over Two Hundred Thousand Dollars Worth of Ore Secured in Less Than Three Months—Progress at the Leland Mine and Other Properties.

KINGMAN (Ariz.) March 15.—Gold bullion valued at $55,000 was received here this morning from the Tom Reed mine at Oatman, which is steadily adding to an already remarkable record of production extending over the last four years. The latest shipment represents a run of three weeks and brings the total output for December, January and the first three weeks of February to $217,000. While the grade of ore being treated at present is considerably lower than that of several years ago, the total production has been materially increased by raising the tonnage and reducing the overhead charges.

In the mine itself the former comparatively short shoots of very rich ore have developed into large bodies of good milling ore. For example, on the 500-foot level there has been opened in virtually new ground a shoot averaging twenty feet in width. While the 500 level is being stoped cross-cutting is in progress on the 750 and 850-foot levels, neither of which has as yet been opened. A new shaft to be used for development work has been sunk 450 feet at a point 1800 feet west from the original working shaft. About 110 men are mining and milling 4000 tons of ore per month, yielding an average of about $70,000. All in all the situation at the Tom Reed, which is owned almost entirely by Pasadena and Los Angeles men, is unusually satisfactory and what was formerly a small mine with very rich ore has settled down into a big mine with large continuous bodies of good milling ore.

At the Leland mine Superintendent B. B. Porter reports his shaft down 250 feet. Preparations have been completed for installing a compressor

Home Builders

Shares Advance on April First

—they must keep on increasing in price as long as "Home Builders" Continues its Substantial Growth

[37]

Dividends Every 3 Months

THE accumulation of valuable resources; earning more interest alone than is paid out in dividends, putting away in reserve about two dollars for every one paid out in those dividends; building reputation by doing more than promised, thus creating good-will; making the stockholders safe, through conservative investments and sane business methods, all, are potent factors in the establishment of intrinsic value to "Home Builders" shares, and which can have but the one result, and that is, maintaining an increased value to and market for, those shares.

The price of "Home Builders" shares is not advanced arbitrarily to give them speculative value, but the increases made are based upon the money showing made by the corporation.

Shareholders who have been in the company for the four years of its existence have been paid in cash dividends (payable every three months) $60 for each $100 invested. The $100 has grown to $255 in value, but even in the face of this increase in share value (a condition which is sure to continue) "Home Builders" presents its shares to you for their consistent earning value and not their buying and selling speculative purchase.

They are good to hold because they are safe and return good earnings—the advance is only secondary as an investment.

[38]

ON MAY FIRST (the beginning of the eighteenth quarter,) the annual cash dividend rate will be increased to 18 cents on each share. On July 31st, the first dividend at that rate will be declared. The rate will remain at 18 cents on each share until profit growth justifies another increase.

During the sixteen quarterly (three months) periods, or the four years, the dividend rate has been increased six times. The rate paid every three months is now 4½ cents on each share. After May 1st it will be 4½ cents on each share.

Shares bought today will be earning one cent more after May 1st. "Home Builders" has never missed a quarterly (three months) dividend since it started, February, 1908. Sixteen times the stockholders have received checks for their portion of profits as paid in dividends, the total amount paid being $148,706.36, and the amount placed in surplus, $415,139.98, which is almost three to one, and which also belongs to the common shareholder.

With such fair accounting and distribution of the large profits and interest earnings; with this prodigious growth, there can be but one result—continual increase in share value and advancing dividend earnings.

[39]

YOU will agree with us, that "Home Builders" must have keen, competent management to accomplish so much in four short years. It has superior officers and directors—a body composed of fifteen men chosen by the stockholders. These men are successful because they follow conservative lines and appreciate the "wisdom in a multitude of counsel." They are sure before they go ahead and their determination is to make "Home Builders" safe, whether it be large or small. No one ever lost a cent through investment in "Home Builders." To continue that record is certain under such management.

To provide added protection, the "General Agency" gives its written guaranty supplying facilities and funds, making the way easy for you to convert your shares into cash — assuring at least 8 per cent. earnings, as well as creating a loan value for your use in case of emergency.

Opening Day

Kenilworth in Glendale

THE EDWARDS & WILDEY COMPANY desire to announce the opening sale of KENILWORTH ADDITION, on Monday, March the 18th. During the delay experienced in acceptance and filing of the official map, 49 lots have been reserved, leaving but 59 lots available for selection. Last Monday, the plat of KENILWORTH ADDITION was accepted and recorded, and contracts of sale and deeds are now being delivered for the lots reserved.

In view of the extraordinary sale of KENILWORTH, it would seem superfluous to advise our friends and clients to make their selections immediately, or at least to go out at our expense to view the property—which is about the same thing in most cases.

We have never resorted to "paid puffs" or brass-band methods in selling our subdivisions, yet probably no other firm can point to such a genuine and instantaneous success as that achieved in KENILWORTH. Over 90% of the persons viewing the property have purchased lots.

THIS new residence, 1 block BEYOND Kenilworth, is typical of the fine homes which are being erected all around our tract. Here you find splendid neighbors. Glendale is an ideal place to take your family and bring up your children. Kenilworth, in Glendale, is convenient to car lines, schools and churches. It is supplied with gas and electricity.

Affirmation.

MIXES REALTY AND RELIGION.

OKLAHOMA DIVINE FINDS THAT THEY HARMONIZE.

Norman Preacher Replies to the Presiding Elder Who Doubted That a Man Could Be a Good Pastor and Land Agent at One and the Same Time.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NORMAN (Okla.) March 10.—Whether or not a man may deal in real estate and retain his religion is answered in the affirmative by the Rev. J. R. Smith, Methodist, of Norman. His answer was provoked by a statement made in a sermon here by Dr. O. F. Sensabaugh, presiding elder of the Oklahoma City District M. E. Church South, that "no Methodist preacher ought to handle real estate and could not do so without injury to others and to himself."

"I am of the opinion that the thrust was aimed at me," says Mr. Smith, the only minister in the audience. "Indirectly it was a thrust at all real estate men and a denunciation of their business. For if a business is so corrupt that a minister cannot touch it, then no one should. It is a fact that some men graft in real estate, but you find grafting in all lines of business, even in the ministry itself. But should all ministers and all people be classed as grafters because of this condition?

"All our cities are built and all new countries are settled through the agency of the real estate man. I'm not willing to have these forerunners of civilization characterized as a set of mean fellows without discrimination. I would not open my mouth in reply to the elder, but I am here among strangers and I do not want to have the people of Norman look upon me as a grafter. For eighteen or nineteen years I gave my entire time to the ministry. I have seen over 2000 souls converted. I have built churches and parsonages. I loved the work and still love the work, but I was forced out because I could not get a living and educate my children. My least salary was $134 and my greatest was $600 per annum.

"I would drop the real estate business any minute the powers that be would give me a station where I can get a living and complete the education of my children. It's mighty easy for a man who draws $2500 per annum and who has a parsonage furnished and access to splendid schools and all modern conveniences to talk consecration, self-sacrifice and self-abnegation and advise against the real estate business, but the fellow who has five children to raise and educate has more than theory confronting him. He is up against the real thing.

on the sale of lots.

"Now let me say that the very church to which the elder and I belong is in the real estate business and has used hundreds of our preachers to sell lands. The Wesley College in Oklahoma City, the Hargrove College in Ardmore and the Women's College in Muskogee, have been built through the sale of real estate. And now the whole Methodism of Texas is trying to build a great institution of learning in Dallas in which real estate forms a large part. Polytechnic College in Fort Worth depended largely ton, and that I will not decline a renomination, no matter how often it is offered."

"What kind of a Republican are you?"

"Oh, I am like all the rest of the Republicans in the Nineteenth district. We believe in a protective tariff. I visit each of the 150 towns and villages every year, traveling in an automobile and talking to the people. I can't make a speech, but I can stand up and converse for ten minutes with people whom I respect. My constituents approve the protective principle, but they do not want manufacturers to make unreasonable profits. They produce grain, hay, and live stock and prefer to sell what they raise and grow in the home market. They would rather do that than depend on the foreign market.

AS HE PUTS IT TO CONSTITUENTS

"So they are glad to see manufacturing communities prosper and workingmen receive good wages. They don't pretend to know whether the tariff schedules in the Payne-Aldrich law are too high or too low. They are willing to submit that question to a board of experts. On going among them I say: 'We want adequate protection for our own products but free trade in everything else.' They see the point and smile, but I tell them, 'this country is 3500 miles wide and 1500 miles long, and I suppose we shall have to make concessions to and consult the millions of Americans who are not so fortunate as to live in the Nineteenth district.' Thus I understand my constituents, and they understand me.

"I was asked to call at the White House. Mr. Taft's request was a great surprise to me. He said that he would like to have me look after his interests in Washington until next June. Until next June, remember. The matter was settled at once, though I hesitated. We are conducting the campaign in a knowledge that there is to be an election in November. We are not going to do a thing that will injure the party at the polls. We do not mean to say an unkind word about any one. Whoever the candidate may be, he will find that President Taft and his friends are still sound Republicans, and will do all they can for the Republican ticket."

"Do you actually think Mr. Taft will be renominated?"

"I am absolutely sure of it."

"But Col. Roosevelt—"

"He is the smartest man in the world. There are specialists who know more than he does about certain subjects, but he knows more things than anybody else on earth."

"But will Mr. Taft be re-elected?"

"He cannot be defeated. No Democrat can carry the State of New York, and without New York the Democrats cannot elect a President. That is my opinion and the opinion of leading New York Democrats as stated to me by themselves."

"Will the trusts oppose Mr. Taft?"

"They are opposing him."

"In behalf of whom?"

"You cannot trap me into saying a disagreeable word about any human being—not at this juncture."

and another 100 feet will be sunk more easily. On the 250-foot level both east and west drifts average from $12 to $33 per ton across the width of the drift and the width of the ledge has not yet been determined.

Manager F. T. Powell reports a good strike in the Iowa at 180 feet. Drifting at this level has been in progress for some time without proving any ore and was about to be discontinued when a short cross-cut opened five feet of high-grade milling ore. Drifting on this the past few days has shown a widening of the ore to eight feet and the limit is not yet reached. Powell has also bonded the adjoining Lazy Boy group of prospects and is getting good ore.

The Tom Reed, Jr., near the Carter mine, has just set up a hoist and started sinking a shaft this morning.

The Crown City is drifting in both directions on the 350-foot level. Open cuts on the surface show a large ledge with good ore.

Harry Knight has let a contract to drain the Mojave shaft and will sample the mine.

E. A. Haggott, manager of the Neglected group at Silver Creek, has bonded the old Hardy mine and will begin work there soon.

MIAMI CONCENTRATOR.

LARGE DAILY RUNS MADE.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) March 15.—About 3000 tons of ore a day are being put through the Miami Company's concentrator, with all six units in operation. The recovery is in excess of the estimates of the management, averaging about 75 per cent. of the assay value. An experimental mill has been started below the works, designed to save values in the tailings. If the process is a success, a much larger plant will be put into operation within a short time.

BISBEE DISTRICT.

BIG STRIKE OF ORE.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) March 15.—The most important mining item of the past fortnight in this locality has been a strike on the 400 level of the Shattuck. The new ore body has been found to be seventeen feet in width. Though it has been penetrated only a short distance along the vein the ore already on the dumps is estimated to be worth at least $20,000. It is copper glance, mixed with green carbonate, and the values contained sample $157 a ton. Within the same fault, about 800 feet away, in the same mine, a similar strike was made a few days ago. The ground is extremely hard, needing machine drills. Already there are predictions that the Shattuck will resume active operations at once, with a force of at least 200 men.

On the 1300 level of the Briggs shaft of the Calumet and Arizona Company a body of ore has been cut for thirty-five feet that runs not less than 30 per cent. copper. In one shipment of twenty-five carloads the average assay was 41 per cent.

During February the Copper Queen Company shipped to the smelter more than 47,000 tons, and the monthly payroll was $20,000 greater than in January.

TRANSVAAL IS AN ACTIVE MINE.

SEVENTY MEN ARE EMPLOYED ON SONORA PROPERTY.

Bisbee Miners Take a Lease on the Joriguita Mine East of Nacozari—West Coast Smelting Company Planning to Build a Railroad to Gulf of California.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) March 15.—Though located down in the disturbed district of Sonora, work is being prosecuted steadily on the well-known Transvaal mine, near Cumpas, where about seventy men have been kept at work for three years, developing what is undoubtedly a great property, but which can hardly be operated successfully without better transportation facilities than now afforded. The Southern Pacific has a line surveyed into Cumpas, but has stopped work from the south on account of the revolution.

A number of Bisbee miners headed by J. B. Johnson and Harry Finitti have taken a lease on the Joriguita mine, twenty-five miles east of Nacozari. This mine is an antigua, extensively worked by the Spaniards. John Watson, the present owner, has sunk a modern shaft and has drifts 250 feet under the old workings, with ore running up to $250 to the ton in silver, gold and lead.

Twenty men are employed on the property of the Nacozari Consolidated Company, and a ten-drill air compressor lately has been installed. In a tunnel at the depth of 280 feet lately was struck a new body of lead-silver ore six feet wide.

The Santa Rosalia mine has been closed down, though a number of Mexican leasers are still at work.

The reverberatory furnace on the Truinfo mine will be started soon on a large quantity of rich ore. The company is short of flux, and has been compelled to purchase such ores from neighboring properties.

Forty pertenencias in the Ures district, twenty miles from La Colorada, have been sold to George Bannister for $35,000 gold. The mine is a lead-silver property, and its ores are susceptible to concentration.

An eleven-inch vein of ore, said to run $200 in gold, beside good values in silver, is being worked at the depth of sixty feet on property owned by L. R. Rubio, thirty miles south of Nogales. The ore is being handled by arastra.

High-grade native copper ore is being opened up on the Verde Grande property, near Barranca, a mine now under bond to the Copper Queen Company.

The West Coast Smelting and Refining Company, sometimes known as the Tecolote, which has mines forty miles northwest of Carbo, is planning to construct a railroad to the Gulf of California, a distance of sixty miles, and to erect a reduction plant of 1000 tons daily capacity, with facilities for electro concentration and smelting. The company has a body of zinc-copper ore sixty feet wide averaging 4 per cent. copper and 13 per cent. zinc.

BULLETIN NUMBER 3

Growing Beans

Between young walnut trees on Van Nuys-Lankershim lands. Both crops raised entirely without irrigation. Profits under such conditions are naturally large.

American Beet Sugar Company has at present 5000 acres planted to beets. The officials of this company are extremely enthusiastic over the prospects, and will plant 10,000 acres to beans and beets. Van Nuys-Lankershim lands are good for diversified crops.

We want practical farmers and beet and bean men. We have many choice 10, 20, 40-acre tracts from which selections can be made. Easy terms. 20% discount to builders. We favor farmers, not speculators. Right now the demand is exceptionally strong for Van Nuys-Lankershim property. Better make your selection early!

OWENSMOUTH, THE NEWEST TOWN IN VAN NUYS-LANKERSHIM.

Watch for big opening date in next Sunday's papers.

This will not be a general real estate office, but will handle only and exclusively property in which the office is directly interested, or which is managed, controlled or owned by H. J. Whitley, the general manager of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Co., the developers of the entire Van Nuys-Lankershim property.

From time to time under heading "Van Nuys-Lankershim News" this office will publish bulletins of development work accomplished and projected on these lands as we consider it of interest and benefit to the buying public to be informed at first hand of such improvements. Free auto trips of inspection from office.

WANTED—GREGG, GRAHAM AND STIDger Shorthand, Touch Typewriting, Bookkeeping, Telegraphy. Largest Commercial College and strongest faculty in Los Angeles. "FREE BOOKS" are included with Six-Month scholarships. Free diploma to graduates. Young men and women desiring a thorough business education, who are satisfied with substance rather than show, will find this school an institution whose methods are in accordance with reason and sound judgment. Originally established by the Southern Pacific Company as a telegraph school, this institution has developed into one of the leading commercial colleges in the West. Young men desiring to begin a railroad career who could not be admitted to the school three months ago owing to retrenchment by various railroads will now be taken care of. We can now provide for an additional enrollment of one hundred students who come with the age limit of 25 years. We supply clerks, stenographers and book-keepers to nearly ONE THOUSAND OFFICES. MACKAY BUSINESS COLLEGE, 720 South Broadway, between 7th and 8th. Main 4396.

WANTED—MEN AND WOMEN OVER 35. I want to talk with every man and woman in this city, who is over 35 years of age, WHO HAS NOT MADE GOOD. When you are ill you visit your physician. If it is a tooth you visit a dentist, if it is "FAILURE TO MAKE GOOD" there is a reason for it and you should see a SPECIALIST, get the advice of a man who devotes his life to cases JUST LIKE YOURS. I have nothing to offer in railroad work. It is true that there are many cases where age is a positive advantage in office work. To enroll with us for a Commercial or Stenographic Course will enable you to take a step in the right direction. It will enable us to meet the demands of our clients. FRANK D. MACKAY, Mgr., Mackay Business Colleges, Los Angeles and Sacramento.

FOR SALE—
GUARANTEED MOTORCYCLES.
We sell more GUARANTEED REBUILT and OVERHAULED motorcycles than all other dealers combined. Why? Because we stand behind every machine we sell and not only guarantee each motorcycle against defective parts, the same guarantee is given to NEW machines, but also guarantee against misuse of parts and, above all, we guarantee SATISFACTION.
A REBUILT motorcycle, if rebuilt by the MOTORCYCLE EXCHANGE, Inc., is more than likely as good as a new machine. We use only such parts as cannot be hurt from wear or tear, such as frames, forks, tanks, etc., but every part that has any wearing surface is renewed, such as bushings, bearings, pistons and rings, cones, cups, balls, tires, inner tubes, saddles, chains or belts, etc. All parts are entirely re-enameled or nickeled, making the machine absolutely as good as new, both in appearance and actual workmanship and material.

Our repair shop is open day and night. Supplies and sundries of all kinds at all hours, except between 5 p. m. Sundays and 7:30 a. m. Monday.

THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF LUTHER TRANT.

BY EDWIN BALMER AND WILLIAM M'HARG.

The Fast Watch.

POLICE CAPTAIN CROWLEY stamped into the North Side Police Station an hour later than usual and in a very bad temper. The customary pile of morning papers flaying him in stinging front-page columns covered his desk. He glanced them over, grunting; then swept them to the floor and let himself drop heavily into his chair.

"He's got to be guilty!" The big first struck the table top desperately. "It's got to be him!" He had checked the last word as the door swung open, only to utter it more forcibly as he recognized the desk sergeant.

"Kanlan, eh, Ed?" the desk sergeant ventured. "You have him at Harrison-street station again, the boys tell me."

"Yes, we have him."

"You got nothing out of him yet?"

"No, nothing—yet!"

"But you think it's him?"

"Who said anything about thinking?" Crowley glanced to see that the door was shut. "I said it's got to be him! And—it's got to, whether or no, ain't it?"

A month before, Randolph Bronson—the city prosecuting attorney for whose unpunished murder Crowley was under fire—had dared to try to break up and send to the penitentiary the sixteen men who formed the most notorious and dangerous gambling "ring" in the city. It grew certain that some of the sixteen would stick at nothing to put the prosecutor out of the way. The Chief of Police particularly charged Crowley, therefore, to see to Bronson's safety in the North Side precinct, where the young attorney boarded. But Crowley had failed; for, within twelve days of the warning, early one morning Bronson had been found dead a block from his boarding-house—murdered. Crowley had been unable to fix a clew upon a single one of the sixteen. He had confidently arrested them all at once, but after his stiffest "third degree" had to release them. Now, in desperation, he had rearrested Kanlan.

"Sure," said the desk sergeant, "Kanlan or some one's got to be guilty soon—whether or no. But if you ain't got the goods on Kanlan yet, maybe you'd want to talk to a lad that's waiting in front."

"Who is he? What does he know?"

"Trant's his name—from the university, he says. And he says he can pick our man."

"What is he—student?"

"He says some sort of perfesser."

"Professor!" Crowley half-turned away.

"Not that kind, Ed." The sergeant bent one arm and tapped his biceps. "He's got plenty of this, and he's got hair, too"—the sergeant glanced at Crowley's red head—"as red as any, Cap."

"Send him in."

"Luther Trant, Capt. Crowley," Trant introduced himself. "For two years I have been conducting experiments in the psychological laboratory of the university."

"Psycho—Lord! Another clairvoyant!"

"If the man who killed Bronson is one of the sixteen men you suspect, and you kill let me examine them properly, I can pick the murderer at once."

"Examine them properly! Saints in heaven, son! Say! that gang needed a stiff drink all around when we were through examining them, and never a word or a move gave a man away!"

"Those men, of course not!" Trant returned hotly. "For they can hold their tongues and their faces, and you looked at nothing else! But while you were examining them, if I, or any other trained psychologist, had had a galvanometer contact against the palms of their hands, or——"

"A palmist, Lord preserve us!" Crowley cried. "Say, don't ever think we needed you. We got our man yesterday—Kanlan—and we'll have a confession out of him by night. Sergeant!" he called, as the door opened to admit a man, "do you know what you let in—a palmist." But it was not the sergeant who entered. "A-ah! Inspector Walker!"

"Morning, Crowley," Trant heard the quiet response behind him as he turned. A giant in the uniform of an inspector of police almost filled the doorway.

"Come with me, young man," he said. "Miss Allison was gassing with me outside here and we heard some of what you've been saying. We'd like to hear more."

Trant looked up at the intelligent face and followed. A young woman was waiting outside the door. As the inspector pointed Trant toward a quiet room in the rear of the building, she followed. Inspector Walker fastened the door behind them. The girl had seated herself beside the table in the center, and as she turned to Trant she raised her veil above her brown, curling hair, and pinned it over her hat. He recognized her at once as the girl to whom Bronson had become engaged barely a week before he had been killed.

"I was coming in with Inspector Walker to see Capt. Crowley," the girl explained to Trant, "when I overheard you telling him that you think this—Kanlan couldn't have killed Mr. Bronson. I hope this is so."

Trant looked to Walker. "Miss Allison's father was Judge Allison, the truest man who ever sat on the bench in this city," Walker responded. "His daughter knows she must not try to prevent us from punishing a man who murders; but neither of us wants to believe Kanlan is the man—for good reasons. Now, what was that you were telling Crowley?"

"I was trying to tell Capt. Crowley of a simple test which must prove Kanlan's guilt or innocence at once, and if necessary, then find the guilty man. I have been conducting experiments to register and measure the effects and reactions of emotions. A person under the influence of fear or the stress of guilt must always betray signs. A hardened man can control all the signs for which the police ordinarily look; he can control his features, prevent his face flushing noticeably. But no man, however hardened or trained to control himself, can prevent many minute changes which by scientific means are measurable and betray him hopelessly. No man, however on his guard—to take the simplest test—can control the sweat glands in the palms of his hands, which always moisten under emotion."

"A scared man sweats; that's so," Walker assented.

"So psychologists have devised a simple way of registering the emotions shown through the glands in the palms of the hand by means of the galvanometer. I have one in the box I left with the desk sergeant. It is merely a device for measuring the varying strength of an ordinary electric current. The man tested holds in each hand a contact metal wired to the battery. When he grasps them a weak and imperceptible current passes through his body or—if his hands are very dry—perhaps no current at all. He is then examined and confronted with circumstances or objects connected with the crime. If he is innocent the objects have no significance in his mind, and cause no emotion. His face betrays none; neither can his hands. But if he is guilty, though he still manages to control his face, he cannot prevent the moisture from flowing from the glands in his palms. Understand me; I do not mean an amount of moisture noticeable to the eye, but it is enough to make an electric contact through the metals which he holds—enough to register very plainly upon the galvanometer, whose moving needle traveling in the scale betrays him pitilessly!"

The inspector shook his head skeptically.

"I recognize that this is new to you," said Trant. "But I am telling you no theory. Using the galvanometer properly, we can this morning determine—scientifically and irrefutably—whether or not Kanlan killed Mr. Bronson, and later, if it is not he, which of the others is the assassin. May I try it?"

Miss Allison, more white than before, had risen and laid her hand upon Trant's sleeve.

"Oh, try it, Mr. Trant!" she cried. "Try — try anything which can stop them from showing through this gambler, Kanlan, and Mrs. Hawtin that Mr. Bronson——" She broke off, and turned to the inspector. Walker was looking Trant over again. The psychologist faced the police officer eagerly.

"I'll take you to Kanlan," the inspector granted at last. "As things are going with him, you can't hurt, and maybe you can help. Every one knows Kanlan would have put out Bronson; but not—I am certain—that way. I was born in the basement opposite Kanlan's. If Mr. Bronson had been attacked in broad day with a detective on each side of him and all of them had been beaten up or killed, I'd have been the first to step over to Kanlan and say: 'Jake, you're wanted.' But Bronson was not caught that way. The man that killed him waited till the house was quiet, until Crowley's guards were asleep, and then somehow or other got him out alone in the street at 2 o'clock in the morning, and struck him dead from a dark doorway.

"But I'm not taking you to Kanlan only to help save him from Crowley. It's to help Miss Allison, too. For the only clew Crowley or anyone else has to the man who murdered Bronson is in connection with the means of getting Bronson out of the house that way. Crowley has discovered that a Mrs. Hawtin, whom Kanlan can control through her gambling debts to him, is living a few doors beyond the place where Bronson's body was found. Crowley claims he can show Mrs. Hawtin was a friend of Bronson's, and—" The inspector hesitated, glancing at the girl.

"Captain Crowley's case," said Miss Allison, "is based on the charge that after Randolph—Mr. Bronson—had returned to his rooms from seeing me that evening, he went out again two hours later to answer a summons from this—this Mrs. Hawtin. So long as Captain Crowley can convict some one for this crime, they seem to care nothing how they slander and blacken the name of the man who is killed—as little as they care for those left who—love him."

"I see," said Trant. "But before I can examine Kanlan, or help you in any other way, Miss Allison," he explained gently, "I must be sure of my facts. It is not too much to ask you to go over them with me? No, Inspector Walker. If I am to help Miss Allison, I cannot spare her now."

"Please do not, Mr. Trant," the girl begged bravely.

"Thank you. Mr. Bronson, I believe, was still boarding on Superior street at a bachelors' boarding house?"

"Yes," the girl replied. "It is kept by Mrs. Mitchell, a very respectable widow with a little boy. Randolph had boarded with her for six years. She had once been in great trouble and he was kind to her. He often spoke of how she gave him motherly care."

"Motherly?" Trant asked. "How old is she?"

"Twenty-seven or eight, I should think."

"Thank you. How long had you known Mr. Bronson, Miss Allison?"

"A little over two years."

"Yes; and intimately, how long?"

"Almost from the first."

"But you were not engaged to him until just the week before his death?"

"No; our engagement was not made known till just two days before his—death."

"Inspector Walker, how long before Mr. Bronson was killed was any of the 'ring' likely to put him out of their way?"

"For two weeks at least."

"It fits Crowley's case, of course, as well as—any other," said Trant, thoughtfully, "that two days after the announcement of his engagement was the first time anyone could actually catch him alone. But it is worth noting, inspector. Mr. Bronson called upon you that evening, Miss Allison? Everything was as usual between you?"

"Entirely, Mr. Trant. Of course we both recognized the constant danger he was in. I knew how and why he had to be guarded. His regular man, from the city detail, had been with him all day downtown; and Capt. Crowley's man came with him to our house. Mr. Bronson went back to his boarding-house with him precisely at half past ten."

"He reached the boarding-house," Inspector Walker took up the account, "a little before 11 and went at once to his room. At 12:30 the last boarder came in. Crowley's man immediately chained the front door and made all fast. He went to the kitchen to get something to eat, he says, and may have fallen asleep, though he denies it. However, until after Bronson's body was found, we have made certain, there was no alarm inside or out."

"There is no doubt that Mr. Bronson was in the house when it was locked up?"

"None. The last boarder, as he went to his room, saw Bronson sitting at his table going over some papers. He was still dressed, but said he was going to bed immediately. An hour and a half later—with no clew as to how he went out, with no discoverable reason for his going out except that given by Crowley—a patrolman found Bronson's body on the sidewalk a block east of his boarding-house. He had been struck in the forehead and killed instantly by a man who must have waited for him in the vestibule of a little electro-plating shop."

"Must have, inspector?" Trant questioned.

"Yes; he chose this shop doorway because it was the darkest place in the block."

"At what time was that—exactly?" The papers say the attack was made ten minutes after 2 o'clock—that the watch in his pocket was broken and stopped by his fall at exactly ten minutes after 2. Is that correct?"

"Yes," the inspector replied. "The watch stopped at 2:10; but, in spite of that, the exact time of the murder must have been nearer 2 than ten minutes later, for Mr. Bronson's watch was fast."

"What?" Trant cried. "You say his watch was fast?"

"It was noticed two days ago," the inspector explained, "that the record shows that the patrolman who found Bronson's body rang up from the nearest patrol box at five minutes after 2. If the attack was made just before, the watch must have been at least ten minutes fast, so we have the time, after all, only approximately."

"I see." Trant turned to the girl. "It is strange, Miss Allison, that a man like Mr. Bronson carried an incorrect watch."

"He did not. It was always right."

"Was it right that evening?"

"Why, yes. I remember that he compared his time with our clock before leaving."

Trant leaped up, excitedly. "What? What? But still," he calmed himself, "whether at 2 or ten minutes after 2, the main question is the same. You, too, Miss Allison, can you give no possible reason why Mr. Bronson might have gone out?"

"I have tried a thousand times in these terrible two weeks to think of some reason, but I cannot. Our house is in a different direction than that he took. The car line to the city is another way. He knew no one in that direction—except Mrs. Hawtin."

"You knew that he knew her?"

"Of course, Mr. Trant. He had convicted her once for shoplifting, but, like everyone whom his place had made him punish, he watched her afterwards, and, when she tried to be honest, he helped her as he had helped a hundred like her—men and women—though his enemies tried to discredit and disgrace him by accusing him of untrue motives."

"Inspector Walker," said Trant tensely, "I understand that all of the sixteen men of the ring claimed alibis. Was Kanlan's one of the best or the worst?"

The inspector hesitated. "I am sorry to say, the very worst."

To his surprise, Trant's eyes blazed triumphantly. "Miss Allison," said he, "I had not expected till I had tested Kanlan to be able to assure you that he is not guilty. But now I think I am safe in promising it—provided you are sure that Mr. Bronson's watch was right when he left you that night. And, Inspector Walker, if you are also certain that the murderer waited in the vestibule of that electro-plating shop, it will be soon, indeed, that we can give Crowley a better—or rather a worse—man to send to trial in Kanlan's place. When can I go with you to Harrison street to prove this?"

"I shall see Miss Allison home, and meet you at Harrison street in an hour."

"You will let me know the result of the test at once, Mr. Trant?"

"At once, Miss Allison." Trant took his hat and dashed from the station.

* * * * *

Harrison-street police station, Chicago, is headquarters for the first police division in the third city of the world. But from all the dozen diversities brought to the Harrison-street station daily, for two weeks none had challenged in interest the case against Jake Kanlan, the racing man and gambler, rearrested and held for the murder of Bronson. Trant appreciated this, as, with his galvanometer and batteries in a suit case, he pushed his way among patrolmen, detectives and reporters into the station. At once he caught sight of the giant inspector, Walker.

"You're late." Walker led him into a side room. "I've been putting in the time telling Sweeney here." Walker introduced him to one of the two men within, "and Capt. Crowley, how you mean to work your scheme. We've been waiting for you an hour!"

"I'm sorry," Trant apologized. "I have been going over the files of the papers just before and after the murder. And I must admit, Capt. Crowley, that Kanlan had as strong a reason as any for wanting Bronson out of the way. But I found one remarkably significant thing." He pulled a folded newspaper from his pocket and handed it to them. "I mean this paragraph at the bottom of the front page."

The captain read it eagerly, then leaned back and laughed. "Sure, I saw it," he derided. "It's that old Johanson fake, Sweeny—and he thought it was a clew!" The inspector took the paper.

"Threatener of Bronson Breaks Jail," was the heading and under it was this short paragraph:

"James Johanson, the notorious Stockyards murderer, whom City Attorney Bronson sent up for life three years ago, escaped from the penitentiary early this morning and is thought by the officials to be making his way to this city. His trial will be remembered for the dramatic and spectacular denunciation of the Prosecuting Attorney by the convicted man upon his condemnation, and his threat to free himself and 'do for' Bronson."

"You see the date of the paper?" said Trant. "It is the five o'clock edition of the evening before Bronson was murdered! Johanson is reported escaped and at once Bronson is killed."

Crowley snickered patronizingly. "So you thought you could string us with that?" he jeered. "You might better have kept us waiting a little longer, young man, and you'd have found out that Johanson couldn't have done it, for he never escaped. It was a slip of a sneak thief that escaped and he was on his way back to Joliet before night. The World got the name wrong, that's all, son."

"I was quite able to find that out, too, before coming here, Capt. Crowley," Trant said quietly, "both that Johanson never escaped and that all evening papers except the World had the name correctly. Even the World corrected its account in its later edition. And I did not say that Johanson himself had anything to do with it. But either you must claim it a strange coincidence that, within eight hours after a report was current in the city that Johanson had broken out and was coming to murder Bronson, Bronson was actually murdered, or else you must admit the practical certainty that the man waiting to murder Bronson saw this account, and, not knowing it was incorrect, chose that night to kill the attorney, so as to lay it to Johanson. But come let us test Kanlan."

"I haven't told Jake what you're going to do to him," Walker volunteered, as he led the three to the cells below. Sweeny, at Crowley's nod, had brought with him a satchel from the upper office.

The galvanometer consisted merely of a little dial with a needle arranged to register on a scale an electric current down to hundredths of a milliampere. Trant attached two wires to the binding posts of the instrument, the circuit including a single cell battery. Each wire connected with a simple steel cylinder electrode. With one held in each hand, and the palms of the hands slightly dampened to perfect the contact, a light current passed through the body and swung the delicate needle over the scale to register the change in the current. Walker, and even Capt. Crowley, saw more clearly now how, if it was a fact that moisture must come from the glands in the palm of the hand under emotion, the changes in the amount of the current passing through the person holding the electrodes must register upon the dial, and the subject be unable to conceal his emotional change when confronted with guilty objects. Kanlan, comprehending nothing, but assured by Walker's nod that the test was fair, put out his hands for the electrodes.

"You're wrong, friend," he said, quietly. "I don't know your game. But I ain't afraid, if it's on the square. Of course, I ain't sorry he's dead, but—I didn't do it!"

Trant glanced quickly at the dial. A current, so very slight that he knew it must be entirely imperceptible to Kanlan, registered upon the scale; and having registered it, the needle remained steady.

"Watch it," he commanded; then checked himself. "No; wait." He felt in his pocket. Removing the newspaper which he had there, still folded at the account of the escape of the convict Johanson, he looked about for some place to put it, and then laid it upon Kanlan's knee. He took a little phial from his pocket, uncorked it as if to oil the mechanism about the galvanometer, but spilled it on the floor. The stifling, sickening odor of banana oil pervaded the cell; and as Kanlan smiled at his clumsiness, Trant took his watch from his pocket and—with the gamester still watching him curiously—slowly set it forward an hour. The needle of the galvanometer dial, in plain view of all, waited steady in its place. The young psychologist glanced at it satisfiedly.

"Well, what's the matter with the show?" Crowley jeered. "Commence."

"Commence, Capt. Crowley? I have finished it." They stared at him as though distrusting his sanity. "You have seen for yourself the needle stand steady in place," Trant continued. "Inspector Walker"—he turned to the friendly superior officer—"I understand, of course, when I asked you to bring me here that, even if my test should prove conclusive to me, yet I could scarcely hope to have the police yet accept it. I shall let Miss Allison know that Kanlan can have had no possible connection with the crime against Mr. Bronson; but I understand that I can clear Kanlan in the eyes of the police only by giving Capt. Crowley." Trant bowed to that astounded officer, "the real murderer in his place."

"You say you have made the test, Trant?" Walker challenged, in stupefaction. But before Trant could answer, Crowley pushed him aside, roughly, and stooped to the satchel which Sweeny had brought.

"Of course he hasn't Walker," he answered, in disgust. "He doesn't dare to, and is throwing a bluff. But I'll show him, with his own machine, too, if there's anything to it at all." The captain stooped and, pulling from the opened valise a photograph of the spot where the murder was committed, he dashed it before Kanlan's face. Instantly, as both the captain and inspector turned to Trant's galvanometer needle, the little instrument showed a reaction. Up it crept, higher and higher, over the scale of the dial, as the sweat, surprised by the guilty picture from the gambler's hands, made the contact with the electrodes in his palms and the current flowed through his body.

"See! So it wasn't all a lie!" Crowley pointed triumphantly to the instrument. He stooped again to the satchel and put a photograph of the body of the murdered attorney before the suspect's eyes. The stolid Kanlan still held the muscles of his face firm and no flush betrayed him; but again, as Crowley, Sweeny and Walker excitedly stared at the galvanometer needle it jumped and registered the stronger current Crowley with a victorious grunt, lifted the blood-stained coat of the murdered attorney and rubbed the sleeve against Kanlan's cheek. At this, and again and with each presentation of objects connected with the crime, the merciless little galvanometer showed an ever-increasing reaction. Trant shrugged his shoulders.

"Jake, we got the goods on you now!" Crowley took the gambler's chin roughly between his tough fists and pushed back his head until the uneasy eyes met his own. "You'd best confess. You killed him!"

"I did not!" Kanlan choked.

"You're a liar! You killed him. I knew it, anyway. If you were a nigger you'd have been lynched before this!"

For the first time since Crowley took the test in his own hands, Trant, watching the galvanometer needle, started in surprise. He gazed suddenly at Kanlan's olive face, surmounted by his curly black hair, and smiled. The needle had jumped up higher again, completing Crowley's triumph. They filed out of the cell, and back to the little office.

"So I proved him on your own machine," Crowley rejoiced openly, "you four-flushing patent palmist!"

"You've proved, Captain Crowley," Trant returned quietly, "what I already knew, that in your previous examinations with Kanlan, and probably with the rest also, you have ruined the value of those things you have there value of those things you have therefor any proper test, by exhibiting them with threats again and again. That was why I had to make the test I did. I tell you once more that Kanlan is not the murderer of Bronson. And I am glad to be able to tell Miss Allison the same thing, as I promised her, at the very earliest moment."

"Not yet," Inspector Walker commanded. "You'll tell Miss Allison nothing until we know more about this case."

"I don't ask you to release Kanlan yet, Inspector," Trant said quietly. Crowley laughed offensively. "That is not until I have proved for you the proper man in his place." He drew a paper from his pocket. "I cannot surely name him yet; but picking the most likely of them from what I read, I advise you to rearrest Caylis."

Crowley burst into loud laughter. "He chose Caylis, Sweeny, did you hear that?" Crowley gasped. "That's in the same class as the rest of your performance, young fellow. Say, I'm sorry not to be able to oblige you, but, you see, Caylis was the only one of the whole sixteen who couldn't have killed Bronson; for he was with me—talking to me—in the station, from half past one that morning, half an hour before the murder, till half past 2, a half hour after!"

Trant sprang to his feet excitedly. "He was?" he cried. "Why didn't you tell me that before? Inspector Walker, I said a moment ago that I could not be sure which of the other fifteen killed Bronson; but now I say arrest Caylis—Caylis is the murderer!"

Capt. Crowley and Sweeny stared at him again, as if believing him demented.

"I would try to explain, Inspector Walker," said Trant, "but believe me, I mean no offense when I say that I think it would be absolutely useless now. But—" he hesitated, as the inspector turned coldly away. "Inspector Walker, you said this morning you knew Kanlan from his birth. How much negro blood is there in him?"

"How did you know that?" cried Walker. "He's always passed for white. He's one-eighth nigger. But not three people know it. Who told you?"

"The galvanometer," Trant replied, quietly, "the same way it told me that he was innocent and Crowley's test useless. Now, will you rearrest Caylis at once and hold him till I can get the galvanometer on him?"

"I will, young fellow!" Walker promised, still staring at him. "If only for that nigger blood."

But Crowley had one more shot to make. "Say, you," he interrupted "you threw a bluff about an hour back that the man who killed Bronson got the idea from the World. Sweeny, here, has been having these fellows shadowed since weeks before the murder. Sweny knows what papers they read." He turned to the detective. "Sweeny, what paper did Kanlan always read?"

"The World."

"And Caylis—what did he never read?"

"The World," the detective answered.

"Well, what have you for that, now, son?" Crowley swung back.

"Only thanks, Capt. Crowley, for that additional help. Inspector Walker, I am willing to rest my case against Caylis upon the fact that he was with Crowley at 2 o'clock. That alone is enough to hang him, and not as an accessory, but as there obviously was an accessory—and what Crowley has just said makes it more certain—perhaps I had better make as sure of that accessory, and also get a better answer for the real mystery, which is why and how Bronson left his house and went in that direction at that time in the morning before I give Miss Allison the news for which she is waiting."

He took his hat and left them staring after him.

* * * * *

An hour later Trant jumped from a North Side car and hurried down Superior street. Two blocks east of the car line he recognized from the familiar pictures in the newspapers the frescoed and once fashionable front of the Mitchell boarding-house where Bronson had lived. He was seeing it for the first time, but with barely more than a curious glance, he went on toward the place, a block east, where the attorney's body had been found. He noted carefully the character of the buildings on both sides of the street.

There was a grocery between two old mansions, beyond the next house a cigar store, then another boarding-house and the electroplater's shop before which the body was found. The little shop, smelling strongly of the oils and acids used in the electroplater's trade, was of one story. Trant noted the convenient vestibule flush with the walk, and the position of the street lamp which would throw its light on anyone approaching, while concealing with a dark shadow one waiting in the vestibule.

The physical arrangement was all as he had seen it a score of times in the newspapers, but as he stared about, the true key to the mystery of Bronson's death came to him magnified a hundred times in its intensity. Who waited there in that vestibule and struck the blow which slew Bronson, he had felt from the first would be at once answerable under scientific investigation. But the other question, how could the murderer wait so confidently there, knowing that Bronson would come out of his house alone at that time of the night and pass that way, was less simple of solution.

He glanced beyond the shop to the house where, Inspector Walker had told him, the questionable Mrs. Hawtin lived. Beyond that he saw a sign—that of a Dr. O'Connor. He swung about and returned to the house where Bronson had boarded.

"Tell Mrs. Mitchell that Mr. Trant, who is working with Inspector Walker, wishes to speak with her," he said to the maid, and he had a moment to estimate the parlor before the mistress of the house entered.

A white-faced, brown-eyed little boy of 7, with pallid cheeks and golden hair, had fled between the portieres as Trant entered. The room was not at all typical of the boarding-house. Its ornament and its arrangement showed the imprint of a decided, if not cultivated, feminine personality. So he was not surprised when the mistress of this house entered, pretty after a spectacular fashion, impressing him with a quiet reserve of passion and power.

"I am always ready to see anyone who comes to help poor Mr. Bronson," she said.

The little boy, who had fled at Trant's approach, ran to her. But even as she sat with her arms about the child, Trant tried in vain to cloak her with the atmosphere of motherliness of which Miss Allison had spoken.

"I heard so, Mrs. Mitchell," said Trant. "But as you have had to tell the painful details so many times to the police and the reporters, I shall not ask you for them again."

"Do you mean," she looked up quickly, "that you bring me news instead of coming to ask it?"

"No, I want your help, but only in one particular. You must have known Mr. Bronson's habits and needs more intimately than any other person. Recently you may have thought of some possible reason for his going out in that manner and at that time, other than that held by the police."

"Oh, I wish I could, Mr. Trant," the woman cried. "But I cannot."

"I saw the sign of a doctor—Dr. O'Connor—just beyond the place where he was killed. Do you think it possible he was going to Dr. O'Connor's, or have you ever thought of that?"

"I thought of that, Mr. Trant," the woman returned, a little defiantly. "I tried to hope, at first, that that might be the reason for his going out. But, as I had to tell the detectives who asked me of that some time ago, I know that Mr. Bronson so intensely disliked Dr. O'Connor that he could not have been going to him, no matter how urgent the need. Besides, Dr. Carmeachal, who always attended him, lives around this corner, the other way."

"I see," Trant acknowledged, thoughtfully. "Yet, if Mr. Bronson disliked Dr. O'Connor, he must have met him. Was it here?" He leaned over and took the hand of the pallid little boy. "Perhaps Dr. O'Connor comes to see your son."

"Oh, yes, Mr. Trant," the child put in eagerly. "Dr. O'Connor always comes to see me. I like Dr. O'Connor."

"Still, I agree with you, Mrs. Mitchell," Trant raised his eyes calmly to meet the woman's sudden agitated ones, "that Mr. Bronson could scarcely have been going to consult Dr. O'Connor for himself in such a fashion and—at half past one."

"At two, Mr. Trant," the woman corrected.

"Ten minutes after, to be exact, if you mean when the watch was stopped!" The woman arose suddenly, with a motion sinuous as that of a tiger. It was as though in the quiet parlor a note of passion and alarm had been struck. Trant bowed quietly as she rang for the maid to show him out. But when he was alone with the maid in the hall his eyes flashed suddenly.

"Tell me," he demanded, swiftly, "the night Mr. Bronson was killed, was there anything the matter with the telephone?"

The girl hesitated and stared at him queerly. "Why, yes, sir," she said. "A man had to come next day to fix it."

"The break was on the inside—I mean, the man worked in the house?"

"Why—yes, sir." The maid had opened the door. Trant stopped with a smothering exclamation and picked up a newspaper that lay [illegible] spread it open and saw that [illegible] 5 o'clock edition of the World.

VOTE OF ALARM ARRESTS ASCENT.

KER OF PEACE IN EUROPE AFFECTS STOCK MARKET.

ulation of Friction Between ssia and Austria Reaches Wall ree—Large Part of Week's s Obliterated—Minor Shares e More Than Standards.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—An alarming note from London, hinting at international crisis, probably responsible for the arrest of the upward movement of the stock mar- ket. This note indicated some set-back to the peace of Europe and proposed to deal with relations between Russia and Austria.

Russian securities were weak in London, where a further slump in Canadian Pacific and industrials was witnessed. Conservative account in that mar- ket especially in mining shares. There is much over-extended and weak- ness reached the gilt- edge railway issues. There was some recovery from the early decline, which was followed by another sell- ing movement, with increased activity. The new low level obliterated a large part of the week's gains, and in some cases all advantage was lost. Low- priced railway issues and minor in- dustrials were relatively stronger than the standard stocks.

The bank statement was interesting for the actual decrease in loans in spite of the increase which was due because of the greater activity in stocks. In cash the loss is more than $2,500,000 and deposits were increased by about $4,361,000.

Bonds marked the first increase in prices for two months and puts cash re- serves substantially $17,000,000 as against $41,700,000 in the early part of the year. The bond market today was irregular, in keeping with the activity in securities. Total sales, par value, $4,361,000.

Government 2's and the 4's advanced one-half per cent, and the 2's coupons 4 per cent, on call, during the week.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS

A firm market generally closed the week's business. Receipts along all lines were moderate and this served to keep the market in excellent shape. The recent rains have in no wise affected quotations and it is asserted by those in a position to know that the market will not show any material break for at least several weeks.

The feature of the day's trading was another advance of 25 cents a hundred weight on onions. This market showed an advance of 50 cents over the previous week, and indications are that prices will soar owing to light supplies. Yellow Danvers, Oregons, Australian Browns and Nevadas, the four varieties now in market, sold at $2.50 flat per hundred weight. Receipts were two sacks.

The egg market advanced 1 cent on all grades. Candled selects went to 23 cents, case counts to 20 cents, seconds to 18 cents and pullets were marked at 17 cents per dozen. The market during the week followed an erratic course, due to weather conditions. The market was only steady under the revised quotations. Receipts were 504 cases.

The butter market closed firm at quoted figures. Only one advance on this staple was shown early in the week and that was 2½ cents on creamery extras and firsts to 32½ cents per pound. Indications are that the future trend of the market will be upward, owing to the firm market in San Francisco, and only limited receipts from that source coming in. Local production is insufficient to meet the demand, and eastern shipments are light. Arrivals were 47,762 pounds.

Cheese was firm. The prevailing high quotations on all varieties of cheese is due to a practically bare market on all kinds. About the only variety held in storage is twins. The shortage is not confined to the local market, but the same conditions prevail in the eastern markets where quotations are only 1 cent below the local market. There is very little northern fresh stock held in the market and the market was very firm at 21 cents. Receipts were 3111 pounds.

Highlands, Lompocs and Oregon spuds were firm under the recent advance in quotations, as were other grades which remained unchanged, with a marked tendency toward still higher prices in the near future is apparent. Receipts during the week have been liberal, but this has had no effect in weakening the market. Arrivals were 1940 sacks.

The sweet potato market was steady to firm. There was a good market for first-class stock at quoted figures, but inferior stock sold at whatever retailers were willing to pay. Receipts were 85 sacks.

The bean market closed firm. No receipts were reported in.

There was a scarcity of green vegetables and this served to keep the market in good shape. The scarcity was due to the recent heavy rains, and the inability of ranchers to pick their stock under these conditions.

That the beginning of the week will see abundant supplies along this line there can be no doubt, as reports from growers are to the effect that the rains have benefited growing stock materially, notwithstanding that most vegetables are grown by irrigation locally. No change in quotations was shown.

The fruit market was featureless. Apples moved well at the old range of prices.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE.

Feature of the Local Market is the Sale of Merchants' National at one Thousand.

The sale of five shares of Merchants' National bank stock at 1000 a share was easily the feature of the trading on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday. Security Savings was also bid up to 440, and Citizens' National to 232.50.

The trading in the oil list was confined to Mexican Petroleum Company preferred at $83, California Midway, Jade and Union. The trading was light. The activity in the mining department was also light.

SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGE.

Unusual Dullness Prevails on the Mining Market—News from Some of the Camps.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—The usual week-end dullness prevailed on the mining exchange today, prices showing but a few points change either way. In the Goldfields, Consolidated closed 1.45 bid, 1.50 asked; Florence, 64 bid, 3 off. In the Tonopahs, Belmont shows a loss of 20 in the bid prices, closing 10.80 bid. Jim Butler gained 12, closing 75 bid. Montana shows a gain of 10¢, North Star a gain of 1. In the Manhattans, Big Four is off 1. In the Comstocks, Consolidated Virginia is up 3. Confidence, 1; Ophir, 2½; Union, 2½; the balance unchanged.

In the outlying camps, Peak shows a gain of 10, Nevada Hills 7½, Round Mountain lost 1.

VAGUE HINTS OF TROUBLE.

CHICAGO WHEAT TRADERS EXERCISE CAUTION.

They Hear that All Is Not Well in the Inner Circles of the British Government and as a Result the Market Closes Steady, With Prices Up.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 16.—Vague hints of trouble ahead for the British government served today to make sellers of wheat use caution. As a result, the market closed steady with prices the same as last night to 1-8c advance. Latest trading left corn 5-8 to 3-4c down, oats off a shade to 3-4 @ 7-8 and hog products varying from unchanged figures to a rise of a nickel. May wheat ranged from 1.00 7-8 to 69 3-8 to 70⅛c with the close steady, 1.01 1-8@1-4; exactly the same as 24 hours before. May corn ranged from 69-83 to 70⅛c with the close steady, but ¾ net lower at 695-8. Cash grades were weak. No. 2 yellow, was quoted at 67⅛@3-4c for car lots. Top

OCEAN-TO-OCEAN CAR ON THE SANTA FE TRAIL.

Ever Eastward.

DIVISIONS ARE TO BE FORMED.

The "Times" Car to Follow Old Santa Fe Trail.

Important Links Are to Be Formed This Week.

Pomona and Ontario the Next Stopping Points.

Ready for a good roads campaign that will extend from Los Angeles to New York The Times car will be used this week to organize divisions in Ontario and Pomona. These two important links in the great chain that is to stretch across the continent are to be forged by President John S. Mitchell, of the Ocean to Ocean Highway Association.

The Times car is now at Alhambra. The next stop will be at Pomona. This car will not be seen again in Los Angeles until its great mission is performed. The high-powered motor will be kept under wraps. No record run will be made. This journey will occupy months but will be thorough.

The call of the highway boosters has been heard. From the towns along the old Santa Fe trail the request has been heeded and divisions are to be formed. From the highways and byways the call to arms is urgent, and the road builders are for the big fight which is to result in the building of this great highway.

FEDERAL AID.

The route chosen by the good roads convention at Phoenix will be followed. The ocean to ocean highway men will be invited to join this good roads campaign. With thousands of men who are prominent in the business life of the nation, working for this big project it is expected that not only State aid but Federal aid can be secured for this undertaking that will mean so much, not only to the motor world, but to the farmers and business men of this country.

This tour is undertaken in the interests of the men of the soil. There is no desire whatever to make this highway exclusively for automobiles. The farmer will be benefited. His produce can be hauled to market by mules or horses at a faster rate over a macadam highway than over the present rods.

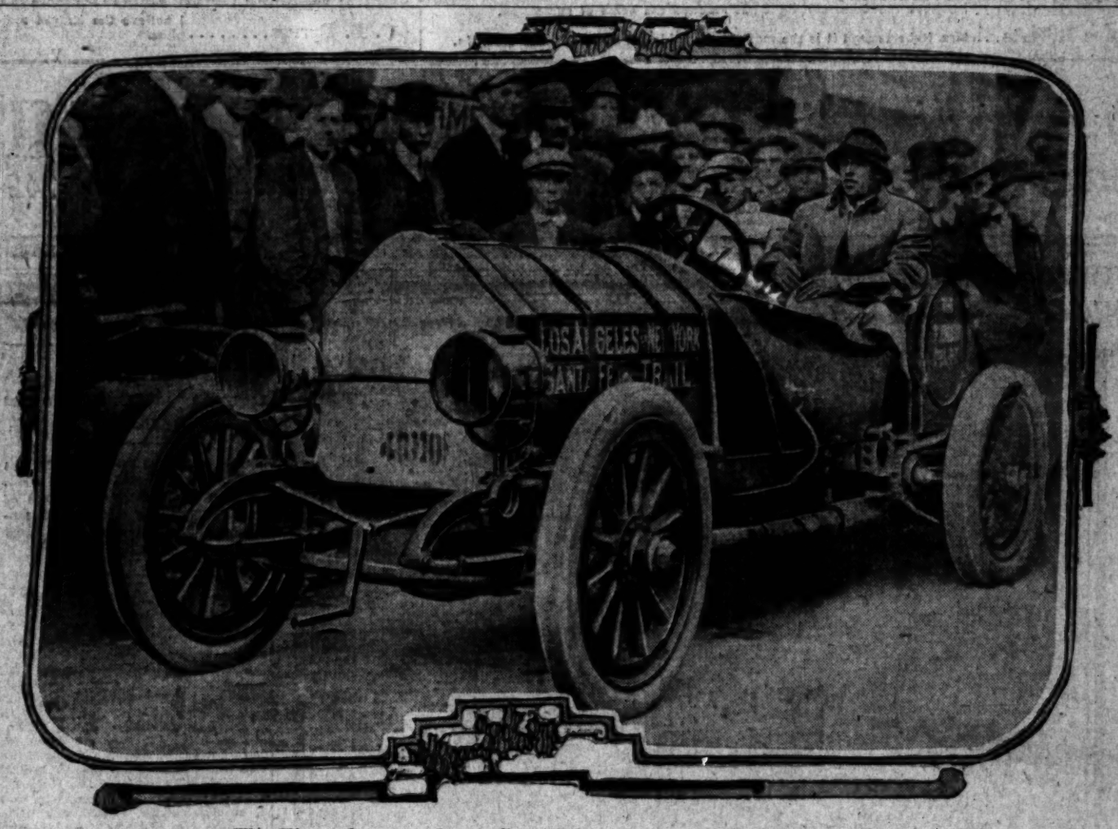
Carrying the banner of ocean to ocean highway into the desert, the car may be lost for days at a time and possibly for weeks, but it will keep moving forward. Having once put his hand to the plow the organizer for this mighty project will not look backward and the wheels of The Times car will not be reversed.

SCOUT CAR.

Charles H. Bigelow, left yesterday morning in a scout car for the Whitewater River country where he will get the latest report on the road work there. He will drive as far as the Imperial Valley and with Harry Stewart of Brawley and Robert Wade will do scout duty for The Times pilot car.

When the Redlands division was formed Mont P. Chubb, president, and George Wilder and other officers of the Redlands good roads body decided to get immediate action on the California end of the national boulevard. This action is to be taken for the purpose of thoroughly exploring that part of the national highway from Mecca to Brawley.

Lines will be run for a permanent rock road skirting the hills into Palm Springs, thence to Indio and to Mecca.



The Times Ocean-to-Ocean Special Receiving Its "Marching Orders."

The big car is shown as it was about to leave on its long mission over the Santa Fe trail to organize divisions of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association.

swinging into line. The welcome accorded the car and its crew has been such that the campaign in Southern California already has become one of great interest to the farmer and others.

This is not a boost for any motor car. This trip is not to be made to advertise The Times. There is no selfish motive in this great undertaking which business men agree is next in importance to the building of the Panama Canal. The national highway is to be built and the men along the Santa Fe trail are to build the 4000-mile turnpike.

When the car reaches Yuma it will have been thoroughly established that a great highway can be built over the Banning route. The car will not be shipped, and will not be driven over railroad right of ways, but will cover the road. Automobilists will be given the latest data on road conditions and will be told whether they can cross the route at this season of the year.

There is a demand from the East for knowledge concerning the Santa Fe trail. This will be given, but much more than this is to be accomplished if possible. In each town in which the divisions are to be formed money is to be raised to build the road. This building will be temporary, but will result, it is believed, in opening a highway over which motor cars can tour this year.

The Times car should reach Denver in time for the Good roads convention to be held there. It should be in many of the larger cities where the highway builders are to gather to discuss ways and means of making the macadam highway across the continent.

After crossing the Colorado River a division is to be formed in Yuma and another at Dome. Then the cities and towns in Arizona will be visited and divisions formed to Springerville on the New Mexico line. There the residents of the other new State will be given the good roads slogan. Then New Mexico will be formed and each State through which the Santa Fe trail passes will be drawn into line.

A road engineer will accompany the party. After the preliminary surveys are completed, consulting road engineers will have a chance to give estimates of the cost of building a permanent road along the entire California end of the proposed route.

Division workers who are to organize in every town along the Banning route will be asked to work toward the one object of making the California end of the national highway passable at all seasons of the year. Not later than April4 an exact report of the work already done and the estimate of the amount of money needed to complete the highway will be presented to the executive committee of the Ocean to Ocean Highway Association.

AT WHITEWATER.

The work at Whitewater point, now being pushed forward as rapidly as possible, should be completed Saturday. Just the moment the route from Mecca to Brawley is laid out and made passable Bigelow and Wade will establish camp at Flowing Wells and work will be commenced on the road from Brawley to Mammoth. Here it is necessary to place boards in the Mammoth Wash.

This means a temporary work of the right kind on the route chosen by the Phoenix convention for the California end of the national highway. The Times will be the first to pass over the Whitewater road and the first machine to cross the new Mammoth wash road.

The car is no longer a pathfinder, but is an organizing special. When Yuma is reached, a road over which any automobile can tour, will be left behind. Then it will be possible to drive from Yuma to Los Angeles over a good turnpike. Now many places are washed out and the Whitewater River is impassable. The Whitewater and the San Felipe River are two of the dangerous places which are to be made perfectly safe by the gangs of workmen already doing the temporary work.

Three Knockouts.

EASY VICTORY FOR RIVERS.

Mexican Wins in Walk from Chicago Fighter.

White Was Lacking in Punch and Cleverness.

Fight Became Slaughter Near the End.

BY J. ALEX SLOAN.

Little Joe Rivers, fighting Mexican, and pride of Los Angeles' fight followers, climbed another notch nearer the top of the pugilistic ladder, yesterday afternoon, at Vernon fight arena, when he won a decisive victory over Jack White of Chicago, out pointing and out-generaling him in every round, and finally beating him so badly that Referee Charlie Eyton refused to count the required ten in the twelfth round, declaring Rivers an easy winner.

Knockdowns and knockouts became so common that White's sprawling figure on the floor smacked of no novelty, whatever, and in the twelfth round, when the battle was terminated by the referee, the Chicago fighter and the audience were both glad that the end had come.

This much can be said in favor of the defeated pugilist: No gamer boy ever stepped into the ring and the overwhelming number of Irish fight transpresent, who regarded the green tights and the Jewish face of White as an ill omen at the start to say nothing of the inconsistency of the combination, remained to praise his gameness at the finish, for no famed son of Erin ever stood a severer test.

No sooner had the battle started than White had tipped his fighing hand. He fell for the Mexican's clever feinting and after the first round the question switched from "Who will win?" to "How long will he last?"

For the first eight rounds Rivers played for an opening and time after time would shove his distorted but determined face into the glove of White. He seemed to have no fear whatever of the Hebrew's punching powers, and was ever willing to stop any number of punches to send home his favorite right, which was kept in readiness for the telling wallop throughout the entire battle.

In the second and third rounds White fell for Rivers's tactics and in each session he took the count. In the second round a straight hard right to the jaw caused the five thousand spectators to jump to their feet, for it looked as though the end was at hand. But the gong sounded and with the assistance of his seconds, White managed to get back to his corner, where the restoratives brought him around for another knockout wallop in the third. He took the full count of nine and then climbed to his feet and gamely stalled off the Mexican for the remainder of the round.

White gave his supporters considerable hope by showing up better in the fourth. In the fifth and sixth rounds he continued to improve and in the seventh he broke pretty close to even landing a couple telling punches on Rivers's jaw.

In the eighth Rivers switched his tactics and started to feint anr box. He planted blow after blow to the Chicago lad's face and when the gong rung White was again well in SOLDIER ELDER DEFIES JOHNSON.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

Freddy Bogan, who is managing and training Soldier Elder for Millionaire Anderson of San Diego, passed through Los Angeles yesterday on his way to New York. Freddy had a certified check in his pocket for $25,000 to back Elder in a match with Jack Johnson. He will give Johnson $40,000 to fight Elder—win, lose or draw.

Freddy says: "This is no tin-horn talk, here is the money and it will be placed in some responsible persons hands as soon as Johnson says it is a go.

"I believe that Elder has a chance with Johnson. While Jim Cameron is not in Johnson's class as a fighter he is a good, defensive one, and if Elder can hit him, we feel pretty sure that he will hit Johnson, and if he does, the same thing will happen to Jack that Cameron got."

An offer of this kind should bring Johnson back into the ring if anything will. But I do not believe that an offer twice that size will bring him back as long as he can make an easy dollar.

LOS ANGELES HIGH WINS.

Alhambra Ball Sharps Fall Victims to the Prowess of Local Players in One-Sided Game.

The Los Angeles High baseball team defeated the Alhambra High on the latter's grounds, yesterday, by the score of 10 to 2. The feature of the game was the playing of French of the winners, who made a double play unassisted, and who robbed Alhambra of a few hits. Meyers pitched a strong game for Los Angeles, allowing only two hits, while his team poled out ten hits. Los Angeles High team is to meet the Vernon regulars Tuesday at Washington Park.

The line-up:

Los Angeles High—French, shortstop; Shafer, first base; Adair, second base; Salinsky, third base; Mars, centerfield; Meyers, pitcher; Hawley, right field; Harlow, left field; Hill, catcher.

SHOW FOR COMPETITORS.

Automobile shows have been as common this winter as Presidential candidates, but none of them has lacked in interest in its own community. It remained for A. L. Maxwell, who handles the Premier car at Lawrenceville, Ill., and at Vincennes, Ind., across the Wabash River, to put on one of the most unique of all expositions, however. He decorated the big rooms over his garage and salesrooms artistically, and invited all his competitors to participate. There was no charge for space, and Mr. Maxwell paid for the music. Seventeen high-class cars were shown together with many accessories, and altogether the show was a big success. The attendance was big on each of the three days, and several cars were sold, while others will be disposed of as a result of the Maxwell enterprise. He applies the same methods in his business at all time

Margin Over U.S.C. Trojans Was Small.

Shattuck Breaks Hammer Throw Record.

U.S.C. Wins Six Firsts in Running Events.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

The sun went down yesterday on one of the most soul stirring track and field meets ever staged on the famous Bovard cinder trail, when the knight of the oval from the University of California battled royally with the knights of the University of Southern California. It was a great fight with the Trojans on the uphill end all the way but not a man faltered and when the final count was taken the score stood Berkeley 66 1-3, U.S.C. 55 2-3, the Norsemen winning by the narrow margin of ten and two-thirds points. This fact was decided surprise to all the local fans and was far better than their most optimistic dope called for.

Dean Cromwell's men took six first out of the nine track events, while Walter Christie's Bears came home in front on every field event on the calendar and it was in this department of the affair that the North wapped it to the South.

There was not an idle moment during any of the races and many of the events brought the 2500 purple-faced fans, crazy to their feet, as the struggling runners fought for the yards and the tape at the finish. All six of the firsts won by the U.S.C. men came as surprises to the California rooters, who were sure that the men from the northern alma mater would win the meet by a margin of at least twenty-five points.

The crowd began to drift onto the field at 2 o'clock and when the oski wow wow of California broke over the track and was answered by the 'varsity from the color splashed bleachers of U.S.C. an air of expectancy began to pervade the air. The California old guard was out in force and filled an entire section of the grand stand and spent the afternoon splitting the welkin. When the crowd was settled, the result of the hammer throw was announced and when Mr. Stonire said that Shattuck was credited with a heave of 160ft. 4in., the stands went crazy, U.S.C. and Berkeley man joining in a mighty shout for the stocky little man who is now the greatest college hammer thrower in the United States. Despite the fact that this was a good record, when it was announced that Rice also took second with a heave of 156ft., giving Fred Kelly of U.S.C. a lone unit for third, a gloom settled for a time over the Gold and Cardinal of U.S.C. The mile came next and H. Wood from California rambled over the line fifteen yards in front of Linton Smith of U.S.C., who got second. Crabbe took thir. More points for the northern Blue and Gold. The score board looked all California and the wise ones was saying, "I told you so."

THE DASHES.

Then the 100-yard dash was served up and U.S.C. reported with a slam that was heard all over the west end when the result was announced; Throop first and Cookman second, Fut Wood taking third. Wood was not, however, running up to his form and if he had been Mr. Throop would have been pressed a little harder for first. Eight points and great rejoicing in the Trojan tiers. Throop won his race at the forty-five-yard mark going out in front and staying there. Johnny Cookman came from behind and just nosed Wood out for the second ribbon.

The high hurdles saw the North come into its own once more. This Maclise person is some runner and when he made fifteen and four-fifths against a head wind and on a slow track we take our hats off to him. Fred Kelly was only a yard and a half behind and was running faster than he has ever traveled before this season. Wallace came third and was close up. California seems to have a hurdle fame and we are glad that Eddie Beeson was not on the job. Three points looked pretty good here.

THE POLE VAULT.

During this the pole vault was going on and a nice thing they had with it, too. Smith of California won, with a jump of 11ft., 6in. Watkins seemed unable to get the hump yesterday and never pressed him close, the rest of the points were divided between Cookman, Watkins and Taylor of California. The fact that Watkins did not win was something of a disappointment to the U. S.C. people, but all was forgotten when the 440 was called.

Hodge and Meyer toed the scratch. Meyer, the Berkeley man, looked confident when he found that Vic Hodge was a green freshman. Davis of U.S.C., was also in the race.

The runners were off, Hodge getting a slight lead and taking the pole on the first curve. If only a freshman, Vic showed rare head work. He came out of the gate on the back stretch two yards in front then made Meyer run outside to get the pole, after which he let the Berkeley man break the wind all down the hard back stretch. On the curve he began to pick up, and the U.S.C. rooters came to life with a yell that split the heavens. Vic was gaining. On the last part of the curve he put his head down and swung into the second lane. Neck and neck they raced for thirty yards amid a terrible storm of cheers, then Hodge forged slowly in front while putting on a wonderful finishing sprint. He was going away from

RUN---YOU KNOCKERS---RUN

For Here Is the Truth Regarding the STEARNS-KNIGHT Direct From the Men Who Own Them---Not the Unfounded Statements of Men Interested in the Sale of Other Cars or Motors

J. J. Davis	I thought my car perfect when new, but it is getting better with use.
A. E. Higgins	The engine is a wonder. It is a perfect car in every way, strong, sturdy and handsome.
W. D. Manley	I very much prefer it to my old six-cylinder of the poppet valve type.
F. E. Small	Running like a bird. Finest car built.
R H. Grune	I have nothing but praise to give your magnificent car.
C. L. Bundy	The Madam is satisfied with her car, and that is enough for me.
A. M. Neal	Can drive two miles while I was going one with my old car, and apparently not running any faster.
Chas. Bond	The two Stearns-Knights delivered to me have given me greater satisfaction than any of the many cars I have ever owned.
A. L. Schwarz	No more poppet valves for me if this is a sample of the Knight motor.
Alfred Springer	My Stearns-Knight car certainly has more than met my expectations.
R. C. Gillis	I have owned many cars, but this is the only one I would now condescend to drive myself.
C. J. Carpenter	There is not a car equal to this Stearns-Knight.
E. L. Doran	Both Mrs. Doran and myself agree that the Stearns-Knight is the most satisfactory and delightful car that we have ever owned or ridden in.
S. S. Sewall	I am getting 17 miles to a gallon of gasoline and car running perfectly.
G. N. Talbot	There is absolutely no other car to be considered.
Dr. C. B. Thomas	I have bought the five-passenger for my wife and will buy a roadster for myself.
J. C. Udall	It is as flexible as any six, and I am more than pleased with it.
W. P. Peck	Since driving my Stearns-Knight my standard of an automobile has risen one hundred per cent.
E. B. Smith	It is the smoothest running car I ever got into.
J. L. Mothershed, Jr.	I believe the Stearns-Knight has reached the acme of perfection.
C. Wesley Roberts	Mrs. Roberts says it is the most comfortable car she has ever ridden in.
Phillip Wilson	Its flexibility, smoothness of operation and silence are simply revolutionary.
B. W. Jewell	It fills the bill of perfection in the matter of a perfect car.
W. T. S. Hammond	I am better pleased with my Stearns-Knight than any car I ever owned.
R. B. Hull	Through negligence I ran my Stearns-Knight without oil, but could not stick or harm the sleeves.
E. Barnett	I believe that in the near future all the manufacturers of high-grade cars will follow the Stearns Company in adopting the truly wonderful Silent Knight motor.
G. A. Kellogg	It is silent, powerful, durable and comfortable. This tells the story.
L. K. Newman	My belief is that the Stearns-Knight is the best car for all purposes, built in this country.
E. H. Bliss	The motor develops a resiliency in starting, stopping and changing speeds which I have never before experienced in any gasoline propelled vehicle.
M. M. Van Brunt	The longer I run the car the more power it develops.
J. H. Fisher	I will take two hours off at any time to show the superior quality of the Stearns-Knight.
J. S. Speer	I believe the Stearns-Knight even better than you claim.
F. E. Brown	It spoils one for thinking that any other car has merit.
P. M. Price	I am more than pleased with the car, and would have no other for general purposes.
Chas. A. Hanna	It is by far the best value for the money obtainable in a new car.
H. M. Gorham	Marvelous!
J. B. Newman	Four thousand miles and not the slightest trouble with car or tires.
H. S. Hawkins	Have bought 12 cars trying to find the one that entirely satisfied me, and I believe the Stearns-Knight fills the bill.
Carlin G. Smith	It glides as smoothly as a sailboat in a brisk breeze.
C. P. Byrnes	I believe the Knight motor is undoubtedly the coming motor in automobiles.

HIGHWAY PLAN SOUNDS GOOD.

Lincoln Memorial May Be Macadam Turnpike.

Automobile Association of America in Line.

Big Boosters Ready for Gettysburg Road.

Emphasizing its practical character and supplying cost figures to show that the $2,000,000 appropriation would be amply sufficient to build an exceptional seventy-two-mile road from Washington to Gettysburg, the advocates of the Lincoln Memorial Highway contributed much information to the Library Committee of the House of Representatives, at the March 5 hearing given Congressman Borland's measure. From the many questions put to those who appeared before the committee it was plainly evident that the Lincoln Highway was something which interested Chairman Bearden and his associates.

An appeal for the highway was made by Gen. John R. Black, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, who in the course of his remarks said: "At our annual encampments we have unanimously indorsed the proposition to have the proposed Lincoln Memorial take the form of a great boulevard from Washington to Gettysburg, and if it is built, it will be only a question of time before it is extended to Richmond, binding the North and South."

Chairman George C. Diehl of the American Automobile Association National Good Roads Board, who is also an experienced roads engineer, supplied practical facts in connection with the actual building of the highway. Chairman Diehl effectually shattered a recent exaggerated estimate of $24,000,000 for the road and $3,000,000 annually for upkeep put forward by advocates of an architectural form of memorial. "I have carefully gone into the subject of the cost of construction," said Mr. Diehl, "and I estimate the cost of a forty-foot road, with a twenty-four-foot strip of macadam, treated with a bituminous binder, at $20,000 a mile. This would make the cost of the seventy-two-mile stretch about $1,500,000, and the cost of maintenance would be $750 a mile, including the renewal of the surface of the road every ten years."

In Diehl's opinion the right of way in all probability would not cost the Federal government anything as the value of property would be so greatly enhanced by the construction of such a great memorial project that the people would gladly donate the necessary proportion required for an expressive memorial road.

At the afternoon session of the hearing Logan Waller Page, director of the office of public roads of the Department of Agriculture, appeared before the committee at its request, and his estimates of construction and maintenance practically coincided with Mr. Diehl's figures. Mr. Page supplied the committee with a mass of pertinent roads information generally.

A communication from Chairman Longstreth of the A.A.A. Touring Board accentuated the fact that Gettysburg is a veritable hub of automobile routes, and is included in one of the main lines between East and West, and is likewise included on a similar trunk-line highway between the North and South.

The American Automobile Association was represented by President R. P. Hooper, Chairman Diehl, and Chairman Batcheider. Others present included J. H. Ralston, counsel for the American Federation of Labor, who said that his organization favored a highway in preference to any other form of memorial; William T. Creasy, master of the Pennsylvania State Grange, who stated that the National Grange was also on record as favoring the Lincoln Highway; ex-Representative James P. McCleary of Minnesota, who was for ten years chairman of the House Library Committee and is now president of the Lincoln Memorial Highway Association; Congressman Talbott of Maryland; Gen. Hopkins of the G.A.R. Lincoln Memorial Highway Committee; Gen. Andrews, Grand Commander of the G.A.R.; Congressman Lafean of Pennsylvania; and Glenn Brown of the American Institute of Architects, who did not take advantage of the opportunity to support the $24,000,000 estimate set forth in the circular letter sent out by his association.

Farmers Out in the Country Where a Motor Car and a Motor Truck Are Supreme.

This is a scene on the roads of the newly-developed lands in New Mexico, where thousands of acres of alfalfa are now ready for the reaper. Here is a new market for motors of all kinds.

More Motor Cars.

Motor cars are to play important parts on two railroads in New Orleans territory. The Ellisville branch of the New Orleans, Mobile and Chicago Railway, where the traffic does not justify the use of the entire equipment of a regular steam service, is to be operated with motor cars. Ellisville, Ovett and Crottstown will have then frequent service. The Grand Island Railway, which runs down the river to the gulf coast, also intends to replace the regular steam equipment with motor cars

PRESIDENT'S SISTER BUYS ALCO TOURER.

Mrs. Frank L. Perin of Cincinnati, sister of President Taft, recently purchased a six-cylinder Alco touring car. Mrs. Perin visited the automobile show at Cincinnati and was attracted by the car and immediately began arrangements for the purchase of it as soon as the exhibit closed. The machine has long straight lines and has a broad white stripe about the body. An electric bulb concealed beneath the tonneau door illuminates the step at night.

OAKLAND BRANCHES EXTEND.

Many States Covered by This Organization Which is Growing at Rapid Rate.

George E. Daniels, general manager of the Oakland Motor Car Company, has made the announcement that the sales organization of the company has extended its branch office operations to three big territories. The branch offices are at Atlanta, Ga., managed by Morgan Morgans; Kansas City, Mo., under the direction of T. N. Shamhaugh, and San Francisco, managed by Henry L. Hornberger.

The territory covered by the Atlanta branch reaches over nine States, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Arkansas and Florida. The Kansas City branch covers Missouri, Kansas, New Mexico, and the Texas Panhandle. The San Francisco territory covers territory consisting of the northern part of California and the State of Nevada.

MICHELIN BUYS LOZIER.

Prominent Tire Man Selects Handsome Car of the Lakewood Pattern for Fast Drives.

The purchase of a Lozier car by Hauvette Michelin of the Michelin Tire Company again proves the value of long distance speed contests as proof of the dependability of a motor car. Michelin stated to the Lozier representative that his decision was practically made by close observation of the Lozier's record in racing events.

The car that was delivered to Michelin was a six-cylinder Lakewood, finished in a serviceable gray. The prominent tire man as head of the American Michelin Company at Milltown, N. J., is, in addition, a partner in the foreign concern of that name, and intends using the car for the drive from New York to Milltown, which he makes several times a week. He desired a car that could make the trip with comfort as well as cover the distance rapidly, and Michelin believes his new car will serve for both purposes.

HIGHWAY IN VIRGINIA.

It is estimated that Virginia's part of the Quebec-to-Miami highway can be constructed for $200,000. Of this Richmond will raise $75,000 and the balance will be raised by personal subscriptions throughout the State. Other States through which the highway passes—New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida—have completed their part of the road.

The value of the motor industry in New England today is placed at $100,000,00

A Good One.

NEW MOON CAR IS A HUMMER.

EIGHT IN WEIGHT AND HAS CLASSY LINES.

Agency Opened Here With Bright Prospects for the Present Season. The Forty-Horsepower Is One of the Offerings for the Nineteen-Twelve Season and Has Many Points of Interest.

One of the interesting cars that has appeared on automobile row is the new Moon. L. C. Buxton, one of the well-known young automobile dealers is agent for the car. He has outlined a campaign that should be a winner. In speaking of the weight of the Moon Buxton has an interesting line of talk.

He is an enthusiast who believes in his product. He has had experience with several of the higher-priced lines and is capable of judging for himself. He can see a future for the Moon line. G. W. Wilder of Redlands, who owns a Moon roadster, is also one of the boosters for this car. He recently completed a trip through the Imperial Valley and through the Devil's Canyon.

When the average buyer visits the salesroom of almost any one of the leading manufacturers of automobiles and asks the weight of a car, the usual reply to the question is: "Oh, the car weighs about 3000 pounds." This has come to be recognized as the standard weight of a four or five passenger motor car although the weight is entirely arbitrary.

Weight is one of the most important questions to be decided in buying an automobile. If a car weighs more than it should it makes the tires wear out sooner. It also makes more of a strain upon the transmission and bearing parts, and seriously enters into the life of the car itself.

One reason for the weight of a car being more than it should is the substitution of cast iron for aluminum, where the latter could and should be used. Cast iron costs 2½ cents a pound and aluminum costs 35 cents a pound, so the human temptation to substitute the cheaper material is obvious.

The new Moon "40" is one of the standard cars. It is a light weight model. It would be a good plan for the intending buyer to scratch the paint, if need be, in the transmission case, for example, and see whether cast iron or aluminum is underneath.

The new Moon "40" has been properly called "The Character Car," because it is universally conceded to include more attributes making for a popular satisfaction than any other $1800 car.

MAKES UPKEEP RECORD.

Great Western Travels Ten Thousand Miles on Few Gallons of Gasoline.

A remarkable record for low upkeep is reported by Mr. T. J. Henderson of 2922 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, Calif.

After eighteen months of hard service during which time he has driven his Great Western car over 10,000 miles Henderson declares that he has never spent one cent on the car for repairs, and that it uses less gasoline than any one of the six other machines that he has owned. He also says that it runs smoother and takes the hills better than when it was new.

Bert Davis, who has for some time been connected with the Oldsmobile agency, has been added to the forces of the Great Western Motor Car Company. In commenting upon the plan for the Lincoln Memorial Highway, no one has expressed the proposition more to the point than Congressman Charles B. Smith of New York, who voices this sentiment:

"I wish to state that I am in favor of the plan for a Lincoln Memorial highway. I may add that the character of monument proposed by certain architects and other well-meaning persons as a tribute to the glory of Lincoln, fails to accord with the popular idea of the martyred President. I know of no better way to honor a man who sprung from the humblest of our citizenship, and ever remained a consistant defender of human rights, in the broadest sense, than to erect in his memory a great highway, where thousands might enjoy the healthful freedom, in symbolic celebration and commemoration of the principles for which Lincoln lived and died."

Much interest is attached to the hearing of the measure, which will take place March 2 before the Library Committee of the House of Representatives.

READY FOR BIG MOVE.

Motor Car Maintenance Company Needs More Room as Soon as Possible.

The Motor Car Maintenance Company of No. 1128 South Olive street will move to East First street, May 1. Since September 1, 1910, when this concern started, their business increased until they were forced to move to larger quarters. Once more they are obliged to move on account of increased business, but Bert Chapman, the man really responsible for all this increase, says he will now have room enough at his new location for at least a year.

The new building is a concrete and brick structure with a 200-foot frontage on First street and 120 feet deep. There will be 24,000 square feet of floor space and 720 feet of pits. The building is so arranged that every car will stand over a pit. Nothing but commercial vehicles will be taken care of and there will be day and night service.

Chapman has built this business up from practically nothing until now he has for maintenance sixty-seven commercial vehicles and one of the largest and best-equipped commercial garages west of Chicago.

Polytechnic High School.

There was a novice track meet at Praeger Park this afternoon for the new fellows of the Poly High. About forty-five turned out in suits, and events were all full, some having to be run in heats. Events: One-mile run, Friedenburg first, Bennett second, Johnson third, time 5m. 15s.; 50-yard dash, Minnear first, Fullaway second, Jones third, time 5 4-5s.; 100-yard dash, Minnear first, Jones second, Fullaway third, time 11s.; 220-yard dash, Fullaway first, Jones second, Minnear third, time 27s.; 440-yard dash, Allen first, Reed second, Reichling third, time 55 1-5s.; 880-yard run, Allen first, Friedenberg second, Murray third, time 2m. 19s.; shotput, Fullaway first, Morris second, Oertly third, distance 36ft. ½in.; broad jump, Harey first, Fullaway second, Oertly third, distance 19ft. 3in.

While many chauffeurs' schools prefer to designate themselves "colleges," or "academies," there is one such institution in Chicago which frankly styles itself a "chauffeur factory."

SPEEDWAY IS MOTOR MECCA.

Vast Crowd Expected at Indianapolis in May.

Plans Is Made to Receive a Hundred-Thousand.

Many Secure Accomodations at Racing Center.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

INDIANAPOLIS, March 14.—Thirty-four square miles of floor space in one hotel is what visitors to the second annual 500-mile international sweepstakes race will find when they come to the Indianapolis motor speedway, Memorial Day, May 30. This entire city is being formed into a moster hostelry to care for the 100,000 visitors expected here to witness the world's motor contest, and thousands of the best private homes of the Hoosier capital are being merged into one great lodging-house for the motorists who are expected from other parts of the country.

The speedway management organized a department, which is arranging accommodations for guests. Thousands of rooms have already been obtained for the nights of May 29 and May 30, and reservations are being made through the management by spectators who will come from every State.

The Indianapolis business men, in a recent meeting, arranged to co-operate with the speedway management, and to provide every person with accommodations, whether in hotels or private homes. Every hotel office will be a branch of the speedway bureau and will have rooms assigned to it from the main office at speedway headquarters. It is estimated that the full 100,000 visitors can be accommodated easily in this manner.

The city government of Indianapolis will also work to give aid to the visiting throngs. Police will be assigned as guides to show the visitors to their apartments and scores of messengers will be engaged in addition to help in housing the city's guests. A system has been arranged at the speedway so that every visitor who makes request for reservation in advance will be advised before he starts for Indianapolis just where he will be located.

BIG CROWD.

It is believed this will relieve the congestion which was attendant upon handling the vast crowd last year. In 1911 hundreds arrived at the last minute and failed to get the best accommodations so the task of doing away with this unpleasant feature has been started three months before the date of the race.

The advance seat sale for the race indicates that the crowd this year will surpass that of last year. The seating capacity at the speedway is more than 50,000, and about 10,000 seats have been reserved already. There are fourteen entries in for the race, with tentative entries of fifteen more. The field is to be limited to thirty starters.

CARTERCAR JOURNEY TO THE LAND OF PLENTY.

BY WARREN VANCE.

MANY tours have been made over Southern California since automobiles came into service, but I believe no more interesting trip has ever been made than the one our Cartercar wireless crew has just finished. Starting from Los Angeles on Wednesday, February 28, we drove to a point near San Juan Capistrono and set up the wireless outfit in order to make our first test. Our wireless apparatus had been donated for use on this trip by the Polytechnic High School and the Woodill-Hulse Electric Company of Los Angeles, and was selected by Jessie and Warren Buffum of Boston, Mass., and J. B. Walker, a wireless expert connected with the Woodill-Hulse Company. We are greatly indebted to this company for our equipment and for the excellent service rendered by Walker on this trip.

Our first test proved successful and we reloaded our outfit and started for San Diego, where we arrived about midnight. The following day we made a test near Tia Juana, Mex., and operated near San Diego until Saturday morning. Then we filled our water bags, took on a good supply of oil and gasoline, tires and food and started for the desert. At Campo, on the Mexican border, we made another set up, but owing to cold weather and unfavorable conditions we were not as successful as we had hoped. Operator Walker and Warren Buffum worked the entire night endeavoring to get into communication with the outside world.

Walker said he could get no "O. K." to any message, but informed us that we might be heard just the same. We have since learned that he was correct, as the government station at Point Loma and the Polytechnic High School at Los Angeles say they heard us many times, but we got on reply. We left Campo on Sunday morning, March 3, for Jucumba and the Mexican desert, setting up our outfit whenever we found favorable conditions. We were more or less successful in our operations, proving beyond doubt that a wireless message can be sent by power generated from the motor of a Cartercar. The distance one can send a message is governed only by the size and power of your wireless equipment. The peons were not alone in their amazement on learning what we were doing. Signor Aguilar, Mexican Consul at Calexico, Judge Rubulcava and Maj. Cantu of Mexicali, Mex., drove several miles to witness our experiment, and when Operator Walker placed the receiver to their ears, and they could hear the distinct dot and dash of the wireless code, they told me they could scarcely believe it. These three Mexican officials assisted us greatly in our work and we found them excellent company.

At the famous C-M ranch, in charge of Sydney McHarg, we drove our cars through field after field of the most luxuriant alfalfa I have ever seen. Thousands of head of cattle, sheep, horses and hogs were feeding in these fields and the contrast between the stock on this ranch and that on the range in the drouth-stricken regions was painfully noticeable. This million-acre ranch, with its 10,000-acre alfalfa field, and its 5000-acre barley field, was as wonderful to me as our wireless telegraph. A good story is told at the C-M, which will illustrate the size of the ranch. An employee was asked about delivering some merchandise at one of the "stations" on the ranch, and he said: "Well, I'm starting this morning and will get a boat on the Gulf tomorrow morning, and should be there tomorrow night; it's only about 125 miles." A great deal of this 125 miles in Mexican territory can later be put under cultivation as all the land needs is water, and there is plenty of it in the Colorado River.

We stopped several times on our return through the Imperial Valley to inquire the price of land, the yield of cotton, which, by the way, is becoming a prominent factor in the Imperial Valley products, the number of crops of alfalfa cut during the year and the average yield of barley. Think of it, baled alfalfa, $30.00 per ton, and barley at 2 cents per pound.

With the Imperial Valley, surrounded as it is by a desert, set apart from other agricultural sections, and with mountains on all sides where cattle, horses, sheep and goats are grazed during the grass season and taken to this valley to fatten for market, there is no way to calculate to what extent this region may grow in wealth. One noticeable thing in this section is the number of automobiles and the manner in which they are brought into service. In some localities automobiles are bought and used for pleasure only, but not so in the Imperial Valley.

I noticed ranchers hauling grain and vegetables and even hogs to market in automobiles, equipped for this purpose. In some cases they were regular trucks, but others had purchased touring cars or roadsters and had equipped the car with some special body to suit their needs. In all cases this showed thrift and progressiveness which you will find standing out most prominently in this land of the future.

Our return through San Diego to Los Angeles by way of Devil's Canyon and the coast route was a record-breaker, not for speed but for dampness. On Saturday, March 9, the party drove from San Diego in one of the most severe rainstorms with which California has ever been blessed, but we were all willing to be drenched, knowing the inestimable wealth that was being added to the country we were almost sailing through.

Says Deft Not Accepted.

MORELAND CHALLENGE TO RESULT IN OVERLAND RUN.

WATT MORELAND'S challenge issued against any truck for an economy contest to San Francisco and return has been accepted and yet has not been accepted. When Curtiss Colyear posted the $1500 that apparently cinched the deal, he made a proviso that has apparently called off all negotiations. Colyear wants to use distillate.

The Gramm truck man agreed to accept this challenge, providing that Moreland would not restrict him to the use of gasoline for fuel. This Moreland positively refused to do, taking the position that this proposition was contrary to the letter and spirit of his challenge. Moreland, thinking he could agree with Colyear, gave the Gramm man a two-weeks' extension in order for him to accept the challenge.

Moreland states that his object in issuing this challenge was to demonstrate the economy of a truck operated with California distillate over the standard gasoline truck, and he insisted that Colyear, as the agent for the Gramm truck, operate his commercial truck under the same conditions upon which the factory guarantees.

Colyear, Moreland and the automobile editor of The Times held a meeting and tried to come to terms. Moreland was willing to make practically any concession except to allow Colyear to use distillate. Colyear refused to accept this proposition.

Moreland has spent five years perfecting the Moreland distillate gasifier, and is anxious to demonstrate the economy of his distillate truck.

Moreland, manager of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, plans to make the run from Los Angeles to San Francisco and return. He says no gasoline truck agent has accepted his challenge, and he is preparing a gasoline truck which he will run against his distillate truck of the same capacity, his idea being to demonstrate the economy of the distillate truck.

This run will start as soon as the mountain grades are passable, and will be under the control of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association and The Times, with a committee of well-known merchants who will act as judges and observers.

Long Run.

PACKARD HITS SNOW AND ICE.

Raton Pass Has No Terrors in Midwinter.

Crosses Santa Fe Trail Over National Highway Route.

Miles of Desert Passed on Remarkable Trip.

After a six weeks' battle with snow, mud and sand in the wilds of New Mexico and Arizona, Henry B. Joy, president of the Packard Motor Car Company, is satisfied with the Packard "Six." He has just returned to his home in Detroit. The trip was made with a standard "six" chassis, carrying a special camp body and equipment.

Leaving Denver late in January, Joy drove over the famous Raton Pass to El Paso, thence to the Roosevelt dam and the Grand Canyon, ending the tour at Yuma.

"For twenty-three miles beyond Raton it was first and second speed work all the way through mire and snow, mostly deep mud," said Joy. "Then we came to a washed out bridge and made a long detour.

"Three miles out of Wagon Mound, we plunged so deeply into mud and snow that it took us two hours to extricate the car. After toiling in the muck with shovels, we managed to pull out on our own power.

SANTA FE TRAIL.

"Further on we noted that valuable work is being done in reconstructing the old Santa Fe trail. Excellent progress is being made in building a modern motor car road between Santa Fe and Albuquerque.

"I would like to refer to just one climb, a five-mile ascent known as Yarnell Hill, north of Stanton, Ariz. Our 'six' made it on low gear only by 'jumping it,' that is speeding up the motor and then dropping in the clutch and making anywhere from three to twenty feet. The grades ranged from 20 to 30 per cent.

"From Prescott to Ash Fork the good going was good and then came the most critical stage of the journey. Not a drop of water between Ash Fork and the Grand Canyon! There are many trails and it is easy to go wrong.

"On numerous occasions the failure of a part would have meant a perilous foot journey on short rations over many mountainous and desert miles. Never before have I subjected a car to such strains, road shocks and outrageous toil. I believe this test proves the stamina of the vehicle from the motor through all connections to the ground."

Joy was accompanied by M. J. Budlong, manager of Packard branches, and H. H. Mills, sales manager at the factory.

Two Packard "Sixes" are being driven back to the factory in Detroit from the experimental camp at Waynesboro, Ga. Day and night shifts have been running up mileage on these cars for the greater part of the winter.

Since the return of President Joy, the Packard company has jumped into the spring trade with a special sales competition involving the Packard dealers in New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Motor-driven fire apparatus will be purchased by Columbus, O. The City Council has authorized a bond issue of $50,000 for the purpose.

In the Future.

NO HORSES FOR COMING CITY.

HORSELESS AGE NOT FAR FROM PRESENT DAY.

General Motors Man Makes Prophecy Which Sounds Good to the Builders and Sellers of Trucks in This Country—Words May be True Though Stranger Than Fiction.

Gleeson Murphy, vice-president of the General Motors Truck Company, declares that the year of 1912 will be the greatest for the motor truck. He believes that the horseless city is not far away, perhaps will be seen within the present generation. According to Murphy, the commercial industry is forging ahead with remarkable rapidity, in leaps and bounds, and with the number of orders ahead which his company has it is certain to be a busy year.

"Municipalities, corporations and even smaller firms, who have use for only a single job, are changing their horse equipment for the new as speedily as it can be brought about," said Murphy. "New York City is to spend $716,000 for the purchase of 150 pieces of self-propelled fire apparatus, and it is expected within a short time that the entire horse-drawn equipment will be changed. This decision was reached only after a thorough investigation into the mechanical efficiency of the motor truck, for the city officials felt the necessity of being absolutely certain as to the reliability and that it could be depended upon each day. The fact that they have appropriated this amount of money proves the claims of manufacturers were well founded and that the investigation was satisfactory."

The Chicago Automobile Club has determined, if possible, to stage four team matches during the coming summer. The leading event will be the fifth annual interclub match with the Chicago Athletic Association, which probably will take place in June.

It has been computed that American car owners spend over $200,000,000 per year touring in Europe. This enormous expenditure suggests the reason why the people go abroad to tour. They go because they have roads over there and because there are things to see.

Minneapolis and St. Paul motorists are already talking of uniting forces for a joint show in 1913.

BIG FACTORY NEEDS THE ROOM.

STEVENS-DURYEA PLANT TO BE ENLARGED AGAIN.

Forty Acre Tract for This Big Plant, and Buildings are Stretched Out Over Large Area to Avoid Raising the Machines in Expensive Elevators.—Plan Is a Big One.

In the new factory of the Stevens-Duryea in East Springfield, Mass., will be the first motor car plant to be built on scientific lines. Special attention is being given to economy in methods of building, such as the arrangement of the plant and in mechanical design of each department. On the forty-acre tract to be used for the factory one of the first buildings to be erected will be of one story and will be 500 feet long and 80 feet wide, but will give the same area of floor space as other factories have by adding stories above. This idea is followed so as to avoid moving heavy parts, by elevators, and risking a mechanical disarrangement of the partly finished machinery.

A principle of the Stevens Duryea factory for years has been that of economy and reduced cost of production. It lead to J. Frank Duryea introducing the casting of cylinders in pairs and it was partly responsible for his devising the unit power plant which in assembling a motor car can be handled as a single part, instead of being a number of separate parts each carefully adjusted which must be readjusted after they are set into the chassis; and it was partly responsible too, for the adoption of the principle of attaching the power plant in its casing into the frame flexibly—the so-called "three-point support" which makes it possible for one man to lower the power plant in its casing into the frame and fasten it there in a few minutes, the free end of the casing permitting sufficient play to put out of account the minute variations in thickness of metal, in some cases 1-16 of an inch variation subjects a frame to strain when the power plant is rightly fastened. This makes assembling of simpler cars a slow process full of possibilities of going wrong.

ALCOHOL FOR AUTOS.

Fuel Is Not So Cheap But It Is Serviceable and Will Give Good Results.

There is no reason why alcohol should not be used for propelling automobiles, if it can be obtained sufficiently cheap. Experiments made with alcohol fuel for internal combustion motors have given good results, yet the use of this fuel seems to increase slowly where the price of alcohol is considerably below that of gasoline. Some years ago, when the high tax on alcohol production was waived, the general expectation was that the use of this fuel would make enormous strides. With denatured alcohol as a free product, one looked forward to a greatly increased production, and a consequently lower price.

The price has been somewhat reduced, and it is selling now for 75 cents a gallon; but, in any case, the production has not been increased as most people expected, who were then interested in the field. The chief reason for their disappointment lies in the fact that the raw material for alcohol is too costly in this country to permit of using large quantities of it for denatured alcohol. Sugar-cane molasses is extensively used, but beet molasses is more advantageously applied as cattle food; and potatoes, though originally found in America, command a much higher price here than across the Atlantic.

Regulations.

WHITE LIGHTS ON VEHICLES.

Free Entrance Into State to be Advocated.

Strict Rules for Traffic Along Public Highways.

Seventy-Five Cents Charge Per Horse-Power.

If a bill just introduced in the Legislature of the State of Maryland, by Senator Goslin becomes a law, several changes will be made in the automobile law of the State, which will be of interest to most automobilists. Motorists residing in the District of Columbia will be especially concerned in the bill since its enactment would allow them free entrance into the State of Maryland, doing away with the necessity of taking out the license now required.

Many of the recommendations adopted on Road Users' Day under the direction of the Touring Club of America, during the American Road Congress, have been incorporated in the measure, also, a reciprocity provision granting absolute freedom to motorists of other States and Territories to enter Maryland whenever they choose. The same privilege is extended to Maryland autoists by other States; the exception being New Jersey, where the Assembly has passed by a decided majority, the Stickel reciprocity bill, which it is expected will pass the Senate within a few days, and when signed by Governor Wilson will grant to non-resident tourists the free entrance to the State of Maryland, doing away with the taking out of licenses, now required.

One of the recommendations advocated by the Touring Club and which is included in the Maryland measure, is a provision that all vehicles on the public highways, between the time of one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise, display at least one white light, visible from both front and rear, and sufficient to be visible for at least a distance of 200 feet. Other features having the support of the Touring Club provide that no warning signal shall be used except as a warning of danger, and the prohibiting of the use of the muffler cut-out at any time within the limits of any city, town or village in Maryland. It will change the system of licensing pleasure cars, providing for a fee on the basis of 75 cents per horse-power of each motor vehicle to be calculated as provided in the present statute.

NO MORE TAGS.

The progress of the measure in the Legislature will be watched with interest as its enactment would eliminate the necessity of securing the non-resident tag or marker from the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, which, under the present law permits residents of other States to tour Maryland for two periods of seven consecutive days in each year. While no fee is charged for the tag, which is procurable at the Touring Club in New York, it makes it hard for automobilists desiring to tour in the State, who must secure the tag in advance, and affix it to the rear of the machine before entering the State.

MORE LAWS.

Another feature is one which provided for the appointment of, not to exceed five deputy motor vehicle commissioners, subject to the approval of the Governor, as well as assistants and deputies who may be delegated by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, to go into any part of the State for the purpose of enforcing the law, and they will have the power to arrest, without warrant, in cases of infraction of the motor vehicle law.

As there are many new measures effecting the use and operation of automobiles pending in the Legislature of New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland it is the opinion that favorable action will be taken, and for the first time in the history of automobiling there will practically be established among all the eastern States a uniform basis as regards non-resident touring privileges in all requirements.

There are at present only 726 cars in Porto Rico, and as the population is 1,118,000, the island is proving a fine market for good cars. Practically all the cars are American made.

Plans are under way now to dedicate the Missouri cross-State highway in June. This is the highway from St. Louis to Kansas City. Road districts have been formed along the whole route, with the exception of about twenty miles.

So successful was the show given by the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Dealers' Association that the organization is planning to revive the Atlanta hill climb. This event usually opened the hill-climbing season in America, and always was successful.

ABBOTT-DETROIT
STILL PLUGGING.

ROUND THE WORLD CAR IS MOVING ON ITS WAY.

Dr. Percival Now in Missouri on One of the Greatest Trips Ever Undertaken in a Motor Car and He Expects to Roll Up a Mileage That Will Astound the Motor World.

Dr. Charles G. Percival, the New York physician who is making the 100,000-mile journey in the Abbott Detroit "Bulldog," is still on his way. With the crew he has for the past week been ploughing through the muddy roads of Missouri. Dr. Percival, during his tour through Missouri, has encountered few private highways over which he says it is impossible to go only by paying the toll which is demanded. In many instances there are heavy log chains which bar the way.

"Missouri has toll roads in Boone, Lincoln, and Pike counties," said the tourist in speaking of his experience. "They vary from five to twenty-five miles in length, and probably cost at the time they were built $4000 a mile to construct. They still charge 4 cents a mile for automobiles to travel over them.

"The Boone county toll road dates back to 1850, when railroads were few and dirt roads impassable the greater part of the year. The caretaker of these roads is a busy man and spends his time hauling gravel while his wife takes the toll. In some parts of the State they sell regular commutation tickets."

Deputy Attorney Trinkle of Harrisburg, Pa., has given an opinion to the State Highway Department that fire motor apparatus owned by boroughs or townships and under the control of such municipalities at all times shall be granted registration and license tags by the State, free of charge.

JOHNNIE KILBANE
HAS AUTO BUG.

The latest photograph of Johnny Kilbane and his manager, Jimmy Dunn, shows the little fighter indulging in the first real pleasure stunt since he acquired distinction in the fighting world.

Kilbane has been too busy in the past attending to his ring business to fall for the gasoline bug, but now he says that he is going to take a vacation and forget the challengers while he enjoys himself.

Kilbane is planning a tour of his native State, Ohio, in a Case car with a party of his boyhood friends who never before rode in a machine. He says:

"I am not going to forget the kids who were my pals when I didn't have anything but ambition and then they enjoy the automobile more than the people who own machines."

HILTON WILL PLAY.

International Golf Champion Coming to America to Defend His Title This Summer.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The Executive Committee of the United States Golf Association settled all doubts yesterday as to conditions governing the next amateur championship. The new ruling provides that anyone who thinks he is deserving of rating somewhere from scratch to six, will be given a chance to prove his claim by playing over a course of recognized merit with a scorer on three different days. The three scores must be signed by the club secretary and sent to the association headquarters thirty days before the championships.

"If the players average for the three scores, warrants it, he can be started in the tournament.

In a letter to the Executive Committee, Harold Hilton, the English international golf champion, announces definitely that he will again this year visit America to defend his title. This time he will be accompanied by a large party of prominent British amateurs.

Hilton expresses pleasure at the change in the championship dates, explaining that "for some reason or other, Britons have come to regard with terror the American climate in July and August."

Fred Herreshoff will leave New York on April 6 to compete in the British championship at Westward Ho. Herreshoff, it will be remembered, carried Hilton to the thirty-seventh hole in the sensational final round of the amateur championship at Apawamis last September.

The Del Monte Country Club of California was elected to full membership yesterday.

STADIUM CARD
REAL HUMMER.

Balke Ready to Turn Several More of His Fast Tricks.

De Rosier's Machine Once More to be Seen in Action.

Former Champ Still in Dangerous Condition.

Three days of sunshine has put the motorcycle rough riders in fine fettle and some more of the heart-stopping programme is likely to be offered at the Stadium track this afternoon.

Tending to support this statement is the reappearance today of Raymond Seymour on the fastest motor he has ever had under him and the appearance for the first time since the new pipan opened of Mortimer J. Graves, who will have one of the fastest mounts that has ever been over the boards. Just to get his racing eye back and to learn the kinks of the new track, which is banked higher than any other on which he has ever ridden, Graves was out Friday and yesterday afternoon on the machine on which Jake De Rosier almost lost his life.

Two motors are at Graves's command and it will not be determined finally until he appears on the boards this afternoon just which factory he will represent. It is certain, however, that he will be among today's racers and this fact, alone, insures some more of the close riding that made spectators stand in their seats and gasp in horrors as the racers flashed by.

KNOWS TRICKS.

Graves is the one rider who has the full measure of Balke's tricks. It is Graves who made Balke a good Indian on the old Coliseum course by riding him so close that he wore the rear tire of Balke's motor down to the fabric and dangerously close to the exploding point.

That the riding will be the fiercest in point of speed that has been shown since the season begun is assured by the tremendous speed that has been shown during the last three days by Seymour's new machine. It arrived in Los Angeles from the Springfield factory Monday noon, and within two hours had turned the pipan three times in thirty-nine and two-fifths seconds. This means that it is equaling the record time hung up by Hasha more than a month ago. As this was done in practice, it is more than likely that something under this will be shown when he is hard pressed by Graves and Balke.

BALKE SMILES.

Balke, who fell in front of De Rosier last Sunday and caused the latter to be sent to the hospital with several broken bones, will be back in the racing this afternoon. He was so slightly injured in the mishap of a week ago that he was ready to ride almost before the repairs to his motor had been completed. His most serious damage was the skinning of one finger on his right hand. This has healed and he is as fit as ever for racing.

From the Crocker-street Hospital comes reports that De Rosier is not doing as well as he should. He has developed a fever, due, the physicians say, to the broken thigh and knee, and this is militating in some degree with his more rapid recovery. His condition, however, is not regarded as dangerous by the doctors and his ultimate recovery is expected.

STAR PITCHERS
HARD TO SECURE.

CLUB OWNERS ARE VERY LUCKY TO GET ANY.

Lajoie Declares They Are Far More Valuable Than Hard-Hitting First Basemen—Cleveland Has Had but Two Real Flingers in Ten Years in Gregg and Joss.

It has been contended by many that good hard-hitting first basemen were about the scarcest article on the diamond, but now comes Larry Lajoie in a statement in which he declares that the history of the game shows that pitchers are the hardest to get.

"Lots of people thought Barney Dreyfuss was crazy when he paid $22,500 for Marty O'Toole last fall," remarked Lajoie. "I don't know whether Barney paid that much in cash or not, but if Marty comes through for Pittsburgh it was money well spent. If I were a club owner and had a pitcher offered me that I absolutely knew would be a star in the big league, I don't think I would hesitate at paying $50,000. It would be money well spent, but I doubt if many club owners will agree with me.

"But they spend the money just the same in the effort without getting the star pitcher. When I came to Cleveland Somers and Kilfoyl had Addie Joss. He had cost them nothing, and he proved to be one of the best pitchers and ball players the game ever knew. But after they got Joss they invested a good deal more than $50,000 in pitchers without getting another man the equal of Joss, until Gregg was bought. See my argument? The average club owner will think nothing of paying from $2000 to $5000 apiece for pitching recruits, who, he hopes, will make good. Nine times out of ten the money is thrown away, while the tenth time he may get only a fair pitcher. My contention is that if the opportunity is presented, a club owner should not hesitate about paying the price for a star. He'll not only save money by not having to buy so many second-raters, but he will also make it up at the gate.

"Go back through your memory. In ten years Cleveland has had two real star pitchers—Joss and Gregg. Chicago has had Ed Walsh and Wash has been the one man to keep the White Sox out of the cellar. St. Louis has not had any. New York had Chesbro, and later on Russell Ford. Philadelphia had Waddell, Plank, Bender and Coombs. Washington has had only one—Walter Johnson, while Joe Wood is the only one developed by Boston, although O'Brien looks as if he might be another one. Cy Young and Bill Dineen were stars when they joined our league.

"I agree with Addie Joss when he said that pitching was the biggest part of the game. If I had had Vean Gregg to work along with Addie back in 1908 we would have played the Cubs for the world's pennant, but one star pitcher rarely wins a pennant, especially if that star is a man who needs at least three days in between his games.

"Yes, sir, star pitchers are mighty scarce. You can go out and get the outfielders who can throw, bat and run the bases; you can get the infielders who can field with a lot of speed and hit fairly well, but you have got to go some to dig up two great pitchers in two or three seasons, to say nothing of in one year. No use talking, but Philadelphia was lucky when it grabbed Alexander and Chalmers the same season and got them cheap, at that.

"You say the clubs owning the star pitchers would not sell. Perhaps not, but if some of the magnates were to lump together the money they throw away in buying pitchers promiscuously and were to offer it for one star pitcher, the magnate owning that pitcher would do a lot of thinking before he turned down the offer."

PACKARD HITS SNOW AND ICE.

Raton Pass Has No Terrors in Midwinter.

Crosses Santa Fe Trail Over National Highway Route.

Miles of Desert Passed on Remarkable Trip.

After a six weeks' battle with snow, mud and sand in the wilds of New Mexico and Arizona, Henry B. Joy, president of the Packard Motor Car Company, is satisfied with the Packard "Six." He has just returned to his home in Detroit. The trip was made with a standard "six" chassis, carrying a special camp body and equipment.

Leaving Denver late in January, Joy drove over the famous Raton Pass to El Paso, thence to the Roosevelt dam and the Grand Canyon, ending the tour at Yuma.

"For twenty-three miles beyond Raton it was first and second speed work all the way through mire and snow, mostly deep mud," said Joy. "Then we came to a washed out bridge and made a long detour.

"Three miles out of Wagon Mound, we plunged so deeply into mud and snow that it took us two hours to extricate the car. After toiling in the muck with shovels, we managed to pull out on our own power.

SANTA FE TRAIL.

"Further on we noted that valuable work is being done in reconstructing the old Santa Fe trail. Excellent progress is being made in building a modern motor car road between Santa Fe and Albuquerque.

"I would like to refer to just one climb, a five-mile ascent known as Yarnell Hill, north of Stanton, Ariz. Our six made it on low gear only by 'jumping it,' that is speeding up the motor and then dropping in the clutch and making anywhere from three to twenty feet. The grades ranged from 20 to 30 per cent.

"From Prescott to Ash Fork the good going was good and then came the most critical stage of the journey. Not a drop of water between Ash Fork and the Grand Canyon! There are many trails and it is easy to go wrong.

"On numerous occasions the failure of a part would have meant a perilous foot journey on short rations over many mountainous and desert miles. Never before have I subjected a car to such strains, road shocks and outrageous toil. I believe this test proves the stamina of the vehicle from the motor through all connections to the ground."

Joy was accompanied by M. J. Budlong, manager of Packard branches, and H. H. Hills, sales manager at the factory.

Two Packard "Sixes" are being driven back to the factory in Detroit from the experimental camp at Waynesboro, Ga. Day and night shifts have been running up mileage on these cars for the greater part of the winter.

Since the return of President Joy, the Packard company has jumped into the spring trade with a special sales competition involving the Packard dealers in New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Motor-driven fire apparatus will be purchased by Columbus, O. The City Council has authorized a bond issue of $50,000 for the purpose.

The Packard "Six" Camp Car,

In the Future.

NO HORSES FOR COMING CITY.

HORSELESS AGE NOT FAR FROM PRESENT DAY.

General Motors Man Makes Prophecy Which Sounds Good to the Builders and Sellers of Trucks in This Country—Words May be True Though Stranger Than Fiction.

Gleeson Murphy, vice-president of the General Motors Truck Company, declares that the year of 1912 will be the greatest for the motor truck. He believes that the horseless city is not far away, perhaps will be seen within the present generation. According to Murphy, the commercial industry is forging ahead with remarkable rapidity, in leaps and bounds, and with the number of orders ahead which his company has it is certain to be a busy year.

"Municipalities, corporations and even smaller firms, who have use for only a single job, are changing their horse equipment for the new as speedily as it can be brought about," said Murphy. "New York City is to spend $716,000 for the purchase of 150 pieces of self-propelled fire apparatus, and it is expected within a short time that the entire horse-drawn equipment will be changed. This decision was reached only after a thorough investigation into the mechanical efficiency of the motor truck, for the city officials felt the necessity of being absolutely certain as to the reliability and that it could be depended upon each day. The fact that they have appropriated this amount of money proves the claims of manufacturers were well founded and that the investigation was satisfactory."

The Chicago Automobile Club has determined, if possible, to stage four team matches during the coming summer. The leading event will be the fifth annual interclub match with the Chicago Athletic Association, which probably will take place in June.

It has been computed that American car owners spend over $200,000,000 per year touring in Europe. This enormous expenditure suggests the reason why the people go abroad to tour. They go because they have roads over there and because there are things to see.

Minneapolis and St. Paul motorists are already talking of uniting forces for a joint show in 1913.

BIG FACTORY NEEDS THE ROOM.

STEVENS-DURYEA PLANT TO BE ENLARGED AGAIN.

Forty Acre Tract for This Big Plant, and Buildings are Stretched Out Over Large Area to Avoid Raising the Machines in Expensive Elevators.—Plan Is a Big One.

In the new factory of the Stevens-Duryea in East Springfield, Mass., will be the first motor car plant to be built on scientific lines. Special attention is being given to economy in methods of building, such as the arrangement of the plant and in mechanical design of each department. On the forty-acre tract to be used for the factory one of the first buildings to be erected will be of one story and will be 500 feet long and 80 feet wide, but will give the same area of floor space as other factories have by adding stories above. This idea is followed so as to avoid moving heavy parts, by elevators, and risking a mechanical disarrangement of the partly finished machinery.

A principle of the Stevens Duryea factory for years has been that of economy and reduced cost of production. It lead to J. Frank Duryea introducing the casting of cylinders in pairs and it was partly responsible for his devising the unit power plant which in assembling a motor car can be handled as a single part, instead of being a number of separate parts each carefully adjusted which must be readjusted after they are set into the chassis; and it was partly responsible too, for the adoption of the principle of attaching the power plant in its casing into the frame flexibly—the so-called "three-point support" which makes it possible for one man to lower the power plant in its casing into the frame and fasten it there in a few minutes, the free end of the casing permitting sufficient play to put out of account the minute variations in thickness of metal, in some cases 1-16 of an inch variation subjects a frame to strain when the power plant is rightly fastened. This makes assembling of simpler cars a slow process full of possibilities of going wrong.

ALCOHOL FOR AUTOS.

Fuel Is Not So Cheap But It Is Serviceable and Will Give Good Results.

There is no reason why alcohol should not be used for propelling automobiles, if it can be obtained sufficiently cheap. Experiments made with alcohol fuel for internal combustion motors have given good results, yet the use of this fuel seems to increase slowly where the price of alcohol is considerably below that of gasoline. Some years ago, when the high tax on alcohol production was waived, the general expectation was that the use of this fuel would make enormous strides. With denatured alcohol as a free product, one looked forward to a greatly increased production, and a consequently lower price.

The price has been somewhat reduced, and it is selling now for 75 cents a gallon; but, in any case, the production has not been increased as most people expected, who were then interested in the field. The chief reason for their disappointment lies in the fact that the raw material for alcohol is too costly in this country to permit of using large quantities of it for denatured alcohol. Sugar-cane molasses is extensively used, but beet molasses is more advantageously applied as cattle food; and potatoes, though originally found in America, command a much higher price here than across the Atlantic.

Regulations.

WHITE LIGHTS ON VEHICLES.

Free Entrance Into State to be Advocated.

Strict Rules for Traffic Along Public Highways.

Seventy-Five Cents Charge Per Horse-Power.

If a bill just introduced in the Legislature of the State of Maryland, by Senator Goslin becomes a law, several changes will be made in the automobile law of the State, which will be of interest to most automobilists. Motorists residing in the District of Columbia will be especially concerned in the bill since its enactment would allow them free entrance into the State of Maryland, doing away with the necessity of taking out the license now required.

Many of the recommendations adopted on Road Users' Day under the direction of the Touring Club of America, during the American Road Congress, have been incorporated in the measure, also, a reciprocity provision granting absolute freedom to motorists of other States and Territories to enter Maryland whenever they choose. The same privilege is extended to Maryland autoists by other States; the exception being New Jersey, where the Assembly has passed by a decided majority, the Stickel reciprocity bill, which it is expected will pass the Senate within a few days, and when signed by Governor Wilson will grant to non-resident tourists the free entrance to the State of Maryland, doing away with the taking out of licenses, now required.

One of the recommendations advocated by the Touring Club and which is included in the Maryland measure, is a provision that all vehicles on the public highways, between the time of one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise, display at least one white light, visible from both front and rear, and sufficient to be visible for at least a distance of 200 feet. Other features having the support of the Touring Club provide that no warning signal shall be used except as a warning of danger, and the prohibiting of the use of the muffler cut-out at any time within the limits of any city, town or village in Maryland. It will change the system of licensing pleasure cars, providing for a fee on the basis of 75 cents per horse-power of each motor vehicle to be calculated as provided in the present statute.

NO MORE TAGS.

The progress of the measure in the Legislature will be watched with interest as its enactment would alliminate the necessity of securing the non-resident tag or marker from the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, which, under the present law permits residents of other States to tour Maryland for two periods of seven consecutive days in each year. While no fee is charged for the tag, which is procurable at the Touring Club in New York, it makes it hard for automobilists desiring to tour in the State, who must secure the tag in advance, and affix it to the rear of the machine before entering the State.

MORE LAWS.

Another feature is one which provided for the appointment of, not to exceed five deputy motor vehicle commissioners, subject to the approval of the Governor, as well as assistants and deputies who may be delegated by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, to go into any part of the State for the purpose of enforcing the law, and they will have the power to arrest, without warrant, in cases of infraction of the motor vehicle law.

As there are many new measures effecting the use and operation of automobiles pending in the Legislature of New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland it is the opinion that favorable action will be taken, and for the first time in the history of automobiling there will practically be established among all the eastern States a uniform basis as regards non-resident touring privileges in all requirements.

There are at present only 726 cars in Porto Rico, and as the population is 1,118,000, the island is proving a fine market for good cars. Practically all the cars are American made.

Plans are under way now to dedicate the Missouri cross-State highway in June. This is the highway from St. Louis to Kansas City. Road districts have been formed along the whole route, with the exception of about twenty miles.

So successful was the show given by the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Dealers' Association that the organization is planning to revive the Atlanta hill climb. This event usually opened the hill-climbing season in America, and always was successful.

Figures Don't Lie

There were 19,299 automobiles registered in the State of California during 1911. 2,551 were Studebaker, E-M-F and Flanders cars, or every Seventh (7th) car sold in the State was Studebaker product.

1581 were the total registrations of our nearest competitor. Second nearest competitor had only 1249. So much for the year 1911.

STUDEBAKER CARS have been shipped into the State of California during the first 6 MONTHS of our contract year extending from Sept. 1st, 1911, to March 1st, 1912.

2157 Automobiles represent 359½ carloads of 6 in a car, or is equivalent to

10 Mammoth Trainloads

These cars have all been shipped into the State of California alone—they have not been distributed over Arizona, Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

The popularity of Studebaker, E-M-F and Flanders Cars is found in the fact that they represent the greatest Automobile Value on Earth.

ABBOTT-DETROIT STILL PLUGGING.

ROUND THE WORLD CAR IS MOVING ON ITS WAY.

Dr. Percival Now in Missouri on One of the Greatest Trips Ever Undertaken in a Motor Car and He Expects to Roll Up a Mileage That Will Astound the Motor World.

Dr. Charles G. Percival, the New York physician who is making the 100,000-mile journey in the Abbott Detroit "Bulldog," is still on his way. With the crew he has for the past week been ploughing through the muddy roads of Missouri. Dr. Percival, during his tour through Missouri, has encountered few private highways over which he says it is impossible to go only by paying the toll which is demanded. In many instances there are heavy log chains which bar the way.

"Missouri has toll roads in Boone, Lincoln, and Pike counties," said the tourist in speaking of his experience. "They vary from five to twenty-five miles in length, and probably cost at the time they were built $4000 a mile to construct. They still charge 4 cents a mile for automobiles to travel over them.

"The Boone county toll road dates back to 1850, when railroads were few and dirt roads impassable the greater part of the year. The caretaker of these roads is a busy man and spends his time hauling gravel while his wife takes the toll. In some parts of the State they sell regular commutation tickets."

Deputy Attorney Trinkle of Harrisburg, Pa., has given an opinion to the State Highway Department that fire motor apparatus owned by boroughs or townships and under the control of such municipalities at all times shall be granted registration and license tags by the State, free of charge.

Balke Ready to Turn Several More of His Fast Tricks.

De Rosier's Machine Once More to be Seen in Action.

Former Champ Still in Dangerous Condition.

Three days of sunshine has put the motorcycle rough riders in fine fettle and some more of the heart-stopping programme is likely to be offered at the Stadium track this afternoon.

Tending to support this statement is the reappearance today of Raymond Seymour on the fastest motor he has ever had under him and the appearance for the first time since the new piepan opened of Mortimer J. Graves, who will have one of the fastest mounts that has ever been over the boards. Just to get his racing eye back and to learn the kinks of the new track, which is banked higher than any other on which he has ever ridden, Graves was out Friday and yesterday afternoon on the machine on which Jake De Rosier almost lost his life.

Two motors are at Graves's command and it will not be determined finally until he appears on the boards this afternoon just which factory he will represent. It is certain, however, that he will be among today's racers and this fact, alone, insures some more of the close riding that made spectators stand in their seats and gasp in horrors as the racers flashed by.

KNOWS TRICKS.

Graves is the one rider who has the full measure of Balke's tricks. It is Graves who made Balke a good Indian on the old Coliseum course by riding him so close that he wore the rear tire of Balke's motor down to the fabric and dangerously close to the exploding point.

That the riding will be the fiercest in point of speed that has been shown since the season begun is assured by the tremendous speed that has been shown during the last three days by Seymour's new machine. It arrived in Los Angeles from the Springfield factory Monday noon, and within two hours had turned the piepan three times in thirty-nine and two-fifths seconds. This means that it is equaling the record time hung up by Hasha more than a month ago. As this was done in practice, it is more than likely that something under this will be shown when he is hard pressed by Graves and Balke.

BALKE SMILES.

Balke, who fell in front of De Rosier last Sunday and caused the latter to be sent to the hospital with several broken bones, will be back in the racing this afternoon. He was so slightly injured in the mishap of a week ago that he was ready to ride almost before the repairs to his motor had been completed. His most serious damage was the skinning of one finger on his right hand. This has healed and he is as fit as ever for racing.

From the Crocker-street Hospital come reports that De Rosier is not doing as well as he should. He has developed a fever, due, the physicians say, to the broken thigh and knee, and this is militating in some degree with his more rapid recovery. His condition, however, is not regarded as dangerous by the doctors and his ultimate recovery is expected.

JOHNNIE KILBANE HAS AUTO BUG.

The latest photograph of Johnny Kilbane and his manager, Jimmy Dunn, shows the little fighter indulging in the first real pleasure stunt since he acquired distinction in the fighting world.

Kilbane has been too busy in the past attending to his ring business to fall for the gasoline bug, but now he says that he is going to take a vacation and forget the challengers while he enjoys himself.

Kilbane is planning a tour of his native State, Ohio, in a Case car with a party of his boyhood friends who never before rode in a machine. He says:

"I am not going to forget the kids who were my pals when I didn't have anything but ambition and then they enjoy the automobile more than the people who own machines."

HILTON WILL PLAY.

International Golf Champion Coming to America to Defend His Title This Summer.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The Executive Committee of the United States Golf Association settled all doubts yesterday as to conditions governing the next amateur championship. The new ruling provides that anyone who thinks he is deserving of rating somewhere from scratch to six, will be given a chance to prove his claim by playing over a course of recognized merit with a scorer on three different days. The three scores must be signed by the club secretary and sent to the association headquarters thirty days before the championships.

"If the players average for the three scores, warrants it, he can be started in the tournament.

In a letter to the Executive Committee, Harold Hilton, the English international golf champion, announces definitely that he will again this year visit America to defend his title. This time he will be accompanied by a large party of prominent British amateurs.

Hilton expresses pleasure at the change in the championship dates, explaining that "for some reason or other, Britons have come to regard with terror the American climate in July and August."

Fred Herreshoff will leave New York on April 6 to compete in the British championship at Westward Ho. Herreshoff, it will be remembered, carried Hilton to the thirty-seventh hole in the sensational final round of the amateur championship at Apawamis last September.

The Del Monte Country Club of California was elected to full membership yesterday.

There are now fifty-two dealers in motor trucks in Boston, as compared with twenty-one a year ago.

STAR PITCHERS HARD TO SECURE.

CLUB OWNERS ARE VERY LUCKY TO GET ANY.

Lajoie Declares They Are Far More Valuable Than Hard-Hitting First Basemen—Cleveland Has Had but Two Real Flingers in Ten Years in Gregg and Joss.

It has been contended by many that good hard-hitting first basemen were about the scarcest article on the diamond, but now comes Larry Lajoie in a statement in which he declares that the history of the game shows that pitchers are the hardest to get.

"Lots of people thought Barney Dreyfuss was crazy when he paid $22,500 for Marty O'Toole last fall," remarked Lajoie. "I don't know whether Barney paid that much in cash or not, but if Marty comes through for Pittsburgh it was money well spent. If I were a club owner and had a pitcher offered me that I absolutely knew would be a star in the big league, I don't think I would hesitate at paying $50,000. It would be money well spent, but I doubt if many club owners will agree with me.

"But they spend the money just the same in the effort without getting the star pitcher. When I came to Cleveland Somers and Kilfoyl had Addie Joss. He had cost them nothing, and he proved to be one of the best pitchers and ball players the game ever knew. But after they got Joss they invested a good deal more than $50,000 in pitchers without getting another man the equal of Joss, until Gregg was bought. See my argument? The average club owner will think nothing of paying from $2000 to $5000 apiece for pitching recruits, who, he hopes, will make good. Nine times out of ten the money is thrown away, while the tenth time he may get only a fair pitcher. My contention is that if the opportunity is presented, a club owner should not hesitate about paying the price for a star. He'll not only save money by not having to buy so many second-raters, but he will also make it up at the gate.

"Go back through your memory. In ten years Cleveland has had two real star pitchers—Joss and Gregg. Chicago has had Ed Walsh and Wash has been the one man to keep the White Sox out of the cellar. St. Louis has not had any. New York had Chesbro, and later on Russell Ford. Philadelphia had Waddell, Plank, Bender and Coombs. Washington has had only one—Walter Johnson, while Joe Wood is the only one developed by Boston, although O'Brien looks as if he might be another one. Cy Young and Bill Dineen were stars when they joined our league.

"I agree with Addie Joss when he said that pitching was the biggest part of the game. If I had had Vean Gregg to work along with Addie back in 1908 we would have played the Cubs for the world's pennant, but one star pitcher rarely wins a pennant, especially if that star is a man who needs at least three days in between his games.

"Yes, sir, star pitchers are mighty scarce. You can go out and get the outfielders who can throw, bat and run the bases; you can get the infielders who can field with a lot of speed and hit fairly well, but you have got to go some to dig up two great pitchers in two or three seasons, to say nothing of in one year. No use talking, but Philadelphia was lucky when it grabbed Alexander and Chalmers the same season and got them cheap, at that.

"You say the clubs owning the star pitchers would not sell. Perhaps not, but if some of the magnates were to lump together the money they throw away in buying pitchers promiscuously and were to offer it for one star pitcher, the magnate owning that pitcher would do a lot of thinking before he turned down the offer."

RECORD LIST FOR BIG RACE.

Santa Monica Road Race to Be Great Classic.

Ten Thousand Dollars and Trophies the Prizes.

Manager Young Lining Up the Motor Giants.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Five Stutz racing cars for the Santa Monica road race. This is the latest bulletin posted by those who are boosting for the big road race. While this may sound extravagant it is at least practically certain that three of the class machines will be sent away in the big meet Saturday, May 4.

With the light car race assured and with an entry list for this event that will eclipse any ever carded for an automobile race in the West, the Santa Monica road race has attained the place it deserves. The $10,000 grand prize classic will be a $12,000 race if the entries continue to come in as they have of late and if two-thirds of the cars already promised are started.

Active work has been begun on the course. It is to be made the fastest road race course on earth. The citizens of Santa Monica are a unit in desiring the race this year and there is every reason to believe this contest will have everything else of the kind backed off the boards.

Three giant Fiat cars were entered yesterday by Attorney E. E. Hewlett. This assures a field in the big car event that will be hard to beat. David Bruce Brown is now in communication with Hewlett and expects to leave for the Coast within two weeks.

Brown's Fiat, the car that won the Grand Prize race at Savannah, is here. It is good for 100 miles an hour. The Simplex should arrive within a week from the factory. The Fiat that Caley Bragg will drive is here already. This means a race with high-powered cars tearing off a clip that will bring another track record to Santa Monica.

NATIONAL TO START.

Earle Y. Boothe is authority for the statement that at least one National, and possibly two, will be started in the great race at Santa Monica. Boothe realizes that it will be a drawing card to have the world record-breaking National in the races this year. The car is to be one of the big hummers that should start as a favorite against the field.

Faster than ever is the verdict the National factory experts give concerning this car. They are satisfied that the new racer will be better than last year's car. John J. Aitkin is making every effort possible to be here with a team of National cars. He is flushed with his remarkable victories last year and believes he can come back and turn the trick once more.

One Marmon and possibly two Marmon cars is the hope of the Marmon agents. C. E. Gilhousen, the local agent, is preparing to enter a Marmon himself if the factory cannot be persuaded to send a car out here. The victories of the Marmon last year makes this stylish machine one of the favorites.

Sydney Smith is one of the boosters for the big race. He attended the Savannah Grand Prize race and says the Santa Monica course is not only faster, but is much safer than the Grand Prize course, over which the Fiat was driven to such a wonderful victory. He says he is certain that another world's record will be pulled at the meet.

YOUNG A WINNER.

A. M. Young, manager for the big race, has completed his preliminary arrangements and now it only remains for the entries to roll in. The entry list is to close April 25. By that time it is believed a long list of cars can be shown for each of the four events carded for the race day.

With the Shriners here in force Young estimates that the attendance this year will break all records. He looks for more than 100,000 spectators. At first he did not favor a light-car race. With the prospect of fifteen entries in the midget meet he was forced to admit that the attraction is one of the greatest.

Dick Ferris has offered his handsome trophy again for the free-for-all. This is one of the finest cups ever given for a motor race and is worth $1000. It has been won first by the Apperson, then by the Roxier, last year by the National, and this year it is up again. Ferris is always keen for this race.

The Jacob Jepsen trophy is also offered for the medium-car race and is one of the handsome cups which was offered last year. It is a perpetual trophy and is worth the effort to win the cup. Jepsen believes this is to be the greatest Santa Monica road race ever held.

The Chanslor & Lyon trophy is up for the light-car event. This is a striking cup, which will be fought for by the largest field ever entered in a light-car battle. This race will be fiercely contested and will mean a fight between cars that will include many of the popular makes.

Here are the possible entries: The Maxwell, purchased by a Los Angeles business man, who expects to enter the car; the Buick "Thirty" and the Buick "Forty," an additional Simplex, a Hudson, and a Dorris, which may be entered by L. R. Carpenter, the Dorris and Abbott-Detroit agent.

While many factory cars are to be entered, this race is to be a thriller because of the number of private entries from millionaires who are particularly interested in this race.

BALLS AND STRIKES.

The Boston club's ground-keeper, Geno Foster, has been re-engaged. The season of 1912 marks Foster's thirty-third year at the old Boston grounds. Gene is 74 years old, but looks about 50, is some billiard player and is cleaning them up daily at the Adams House rooms.

"A ball player who doesn't want more money is a curiosity," says Barney Dreyfuss. Likewise a myth.

President Garry Herrmann of the Cincinnati club, has decided to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors inside the Cincinnati ball park this year. He says the time is approaching when this rule will prevail in all of the major league cities.

Al Jube, the New York ball tosser, who was last year signed by the New York club and later sent to Reading, is coaching the New York University squad.

Catcher "Nig" Clarke is out with a statement that he cannot stand for the city of St. Louis at a less salary than $5000 per annum.

Bob Spade, the Reds' old pitcher, has opened a wet goods emporium in Cincinnati and intends to start an annex near the ball park, as the Cincinnati management has decided not to sell anything but temperance drinks at the ball park this season.

Word was received during the past week from Seattle that "under no consideration would George Capron, Minnesota University star, sign with the Pittsburgh club, as reported."

Jim McAleer's observations that ball players and not managers make winners has a second from Roger Bresnahan, who says: "If a ball player hasn't his heart in his work, if he doesn't play the game because he loves it, the best manager in the world cannot make a good player out of him."

The Jersey City club has received the signed contract of Harold Janvrin, late of the Boston Red Sox.

Outfielder Noah Henline of the Baltimore team has refused to accept a transfer to Troy and announces his retirement from the game.

Pitcher "Rube" Vickers of Baltimore says his new bender, which he calls the "turkey trot," will stop the .300 hitters if the Baltimore police don't suppress it.

Pitcher Vickers of Baltimore has entered into partnership with R. A. Fagen, a well-known turfman, to open a cafe on Baltimore street in the moving-picture district.

Pitcher Frank Smith is not going to teach baseball in Berlin. He has signed his 1912 Cincinnati contract.

Cap Anson has opened his vaudeville season and will carry his act South with the Cubs. Cap does a monologue and some buck and wing dancing, and carries his own scenery, which he wears at every performance.

Homer Hildebrand, the old Pittsburgh utility man, who could play any position from catcher to right field, until his arm went back on him, is now running a successful stock ranch in Day county, South Dakota.

Pitcher Gaspar of the Reds has leased his famous studio at Lemars to a fellow artist, and will devote all his energies to pitching winning ball for the Reds this year. He will take Mrs. Gaspar to Cincinnati with him and make his home there during the season.

CARDS VS. OLYMPICS.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, March 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Cardinal track team will meet the strong Olympic Club in the first outside meet to be held on the campus this season tomorrow afternoon. Ralph Rose, J. O. Miller, Snedigar, Check Gerharet and many other stars are to wear the winged "O" and Stanford will have to come through strong in order to win. Captain Coleman '12 may be kept out of the sprints as his injured leg is not yet in good shape. After the meet Saturday the contests with U.S.C. and Pomona the latter part of the month will be the next events of importance.

London finally has forbidden muffler cut-outs. The ordinance goes into effect March 31. Strangely enough, the ordinance exempts motorcycles.

Colorado automobile dealers are smiling, for more snow fell than in any other February for years, and crops depend greatly on the winter moisture.

Arrangements have been completed by the Wolverine Automobile Club of Detroit, Mich., for the run to Indianapolis May 28, on the occasion of the 500-mile race.

Good Advice.

CLARKE SAYS IT IS MOSTLY "BUNK."

PITTSBURGH LEADER TELLS MUCH OF SPRING TRAINING.

Declares That Long Walks and Handball Games Are the Real Things for Condition—Much of the Time Spent on Present Systems Is Nothing But Lost Motion.

Much of the whole training system in vogue in the National and American leagues is just so much "bunk," according to the opinion of Manager Fred Clarke of Pittsburgh.

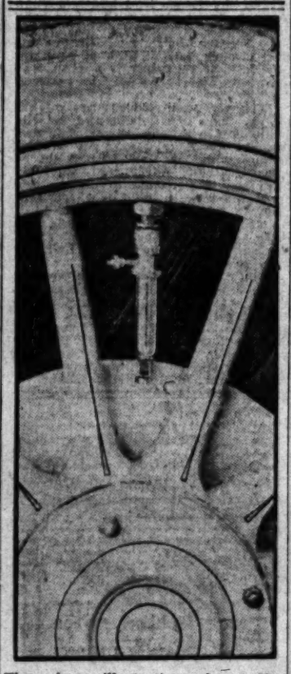
"If a ball player is a ball player," Clarke says, "it is like swimming—he can always play with a moderate amount of practice. What he needs more than anything else at the start of the season is endurance. Long walks over hills, handball games and that kind of training gives the player endurance, wind and vigor and takes off the superfluous flesh."

Dr. William E. Keane, club physician of the Detroit Tigers, is of practically the same opinion as Clarke. Keane believes the training trips of the clubs should be reduced greatly in length, and that a great amount of hard and tedious work could be eliminated if the players would take systematic exercise during the winter months. This does not mean, Keane says, that the men should keep in training twelve months in the year, as many of the college men do, but he does mean that a little exercise taken every day would be a splendid thing, especially for the ball tossers who are disposed to take on flesh during the winter months.

The work on the training trips is divided into two classes. In the first place, the men get ready for practice; then comes the practice itself. Anyone who has been compelled to take off weight by the wholesale knows that there is little joy connected with either of these features of the pre-season workouts. Usually after each training trip is closed the fat boys say they will never again allow themselves to get out of shape. But the next spring the same old tale of woe is heard.

"Just imagine what a benefit and saving it would be," Clarke says, "if the men could be sent South every year at somewhere near their playing weights. They would be boiled out and fit as fiddles in a comparatively short time. As it is now, it takes them a full week or ten days to get into shape to handle the ball and bat again. This week or ten days is a complete loss."

Nevertheless, this useless, but necessary, expenditure of money must come every spring, the managers say, and they ought to know.



The above illustration shows the JUSLOOK TIRE GAUGE permanently attached to a tire. Pressure is determined by just looking at the Gauge Bar. Top line denotes 50 lbs., each line following is 10 lbs., additional, the gauge now shows 80 lbs. A demonstration of the JUSLOOK will be made for three days at Chanslor & Lyon's, beginning Monday, 18th, and at Featherstone's balance of the week.

We Guarantee Every Rambler for Ten Thousand Miles

Subject to the conditions of our signed guarantee which we will give with each car.

Ten thousand miles! Think what it means!

Step into the Rambler in New York and journey across four states to Chicago. Take your bearings and strike due west across seven states to the Golden Gate.

Run down the Coast to Los Angeles. Turn back over the mountains and on through eight hundred miles of desert to El Paso. Then on to New Orleans and back, by way of Atlanta, through eight states to the city of New York.

Strike out again cross country for Chicago. Then drive your car straightway across the American continent to San Francisco. Yet you have not exhausted the ten thousand mile Rambler guarantee backed by a company of known stability.

We make this guarantee to prove to you our unbounded confidence in every single part that goes into every Rambler car.

The first Rambler Cross Country that left the factory made a three thousand mile test trip through nine states, over the mountains of Pennsylvania to New York, Albany, Boston and back to the factory.

Since then the fame of the Cross Country has spread, and its service has extended to every state in the Union, to every province of Canada, to Mexico, to Australia, South America, Europe and the Orient.

Everywhere this Rambler has gone its performance has strengthened our confidence in its ability to fulfill this guarantee. That is why we do not hesitate to give it.

Eleven years of success in motor car building has so established the stability of this company in manufacturing and financial resources as to make definitely known the responsibility back of this guarantee.

Such a car with this guarantee, backed by such a company whose liberal policy is so widely known, are the reasons why you should have a Rambler.

Just sit down and write us a postal or send the coupon, asking for the catalog. It tells all about the Cross Country and the other 1912 Rambler models.

"Warren 12-30" Stock Car Sets New Non-Motor-Stop Record

By completing 49 days of incessant running without a single repair and but one simple adjustment, the Warren 12-30 stock car has set a record never before attained by any automobile. The test was made over all kinds of roads in all kinds of weather—day and night—never a stop. It is a significant tribute to the marvelous efficiency of the "Warren" motor—nearly 18,000 miles constant running never revealing a weakness.

And through all this grueling test, the average consumption of gasoline was nearly 17 miles per gallon.

Some satisfaction in buying such a car—in knowing in advance that you are absolutely getting more value for your money—more real responsible service—more economical upkeep, more real satisfaction than you can possibly buy in any other car at anywhere near the "Warren" price.

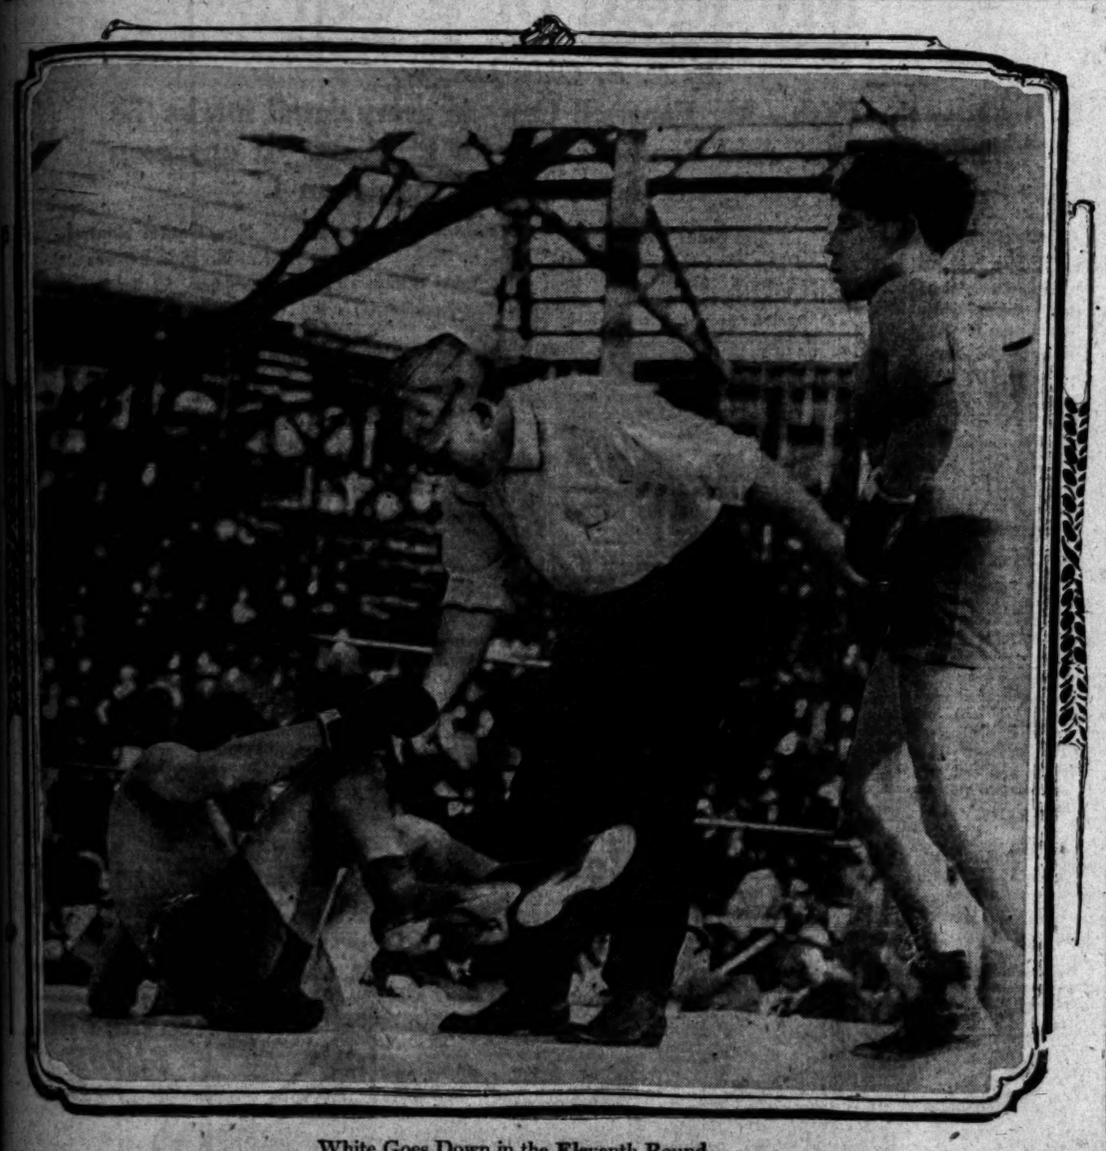
Rivers's Cleverness Outmatched White's Courage.



White Goes Down in the Eleventh Round.

Rivers has just landed a terrific right back of White's ear. The bell saved him from a knockout at that time.

The Details.

VAN COURT DESCRIBES THE FIGHT BY ROUNDS.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

E RIVERS, the great little Mexican fighter, hung another scalp to his belt when he knocked out Jack White of Chicago in twelve rounds in their scheduled twenty-round fight at Vernon yesterday afternoon.

The fight, while at times one-sided, was interesting from the fact that White was always dangerous. He had a knockout punch in either hand, but was not clever enough or strong enough to land it.

It was a gruelling one from his point of view. From the second round he was a constant receiver of straight and hard blows rained on his head and body. Rivers did not escape by any means, but most of the punishment that he took were on his body and did not leave their mark.

White was knocked down five times in all. Once in the second, fourth, seventh, eleventh and finally out for the count in the twelfth. The knockdown registered in the tenth was more the result of being off balance than the force of the blow.

Rivers was seen dodging low to avoid a knockout and as he did so, Rivers would land between the shoulders and he would shake his hands and his knees. He would then step back from a punch in the clinches and clear the end of the same would nearly always went down again. The referee refused to favor him, in-as-much as most of the knockdowns happened at the end of the round.

In the fourth round, after he had been floored by Jack down, White called the referee the same, or else he imagined he did. After the bell rang ending the round, a hard right-hand blow that landed on the back of the ear. This was a foul from Harry Gilmore. Referee Eyton, the referee, also called it a foul that very properly should have been allowed, as White was not expecting the blow.

White again showed his improvement as a fighter so much in his cleverness in his hitting. His hardest punches were with his right hand, but his most punishing ones were with his left. He shot them in straight and with terrific force, and the blows occasionally landed left-hand swinging counters to the body. But White landed more than Joe did.

OPINION OF FIGHTERS.

Rivers appeared to be in better condition for a twenty-round fight than White. Joe was trained down fine and never showed to better advantage. This is owing perhaps to the fact that he has not overworked and not reduced during his training. He was also in good condition, but was to be a trifle fine for a fight. He also showed as much as any man that ever entered the ring. Charlie Eyton refereed the fight in the main and told the Gilmore boys he had better throw up the sponge as a token of defeat, but White would not do it; I know when I am beaten. And they gave him all he asked for. The following seconded by the Gilmore boys, Fred and Harry, Roy Moorhead and Kid Snyder. The fighting trunks and shoes in honor of St. Patrick's day were seconded by Joe Levy, Billy Aldridge and his Soldier Elder, Willie Ritchie, Joe Meyers and Loui Rees were introduced to the crowd which was a large one.

It was announced that Elder was on his way to New York to challenge Jack Johnson. Freddy Bogan, his trainer and manager, has a certified check for $25,000 as a side bet and his backer, Mr. Anderson of San Diego, offers Johnson $40,000 if he will make the match and bet him the $25,000 on the side to fight in private or public. Bogan says that it is no tin horn money but the real goods and will be put up in New York as soon as he arrives there. This offer should make Jack come back into the ring if anything will. But I believe that he never will fight again for twice that amount as long as he can make an easy dollar.

FIGHT BY ROUNDS.

Round 1—White swung his left at Rivers's jaw but the blow was blocked. Joe lands a god left hook to Jack's eye that reddened it. Rivers jabs and lands several good ones. White countering on Joe's body with left-hand swings. Both are boxing fine.

Round 2—Jack swings his left at Rivers's head, but Joe blocks it neatly. Rivers jabs his left to White's face several times, and is boxing fast. Joe dropped White with a right-hand punch to his ear, and he took the full count. When he got up he rushed Rivers and they were mixing it at the bell. They had to be separated by the referee.

Round 3—Both boys are boxing hard and fast. Then a slug for a time. White lands a hard left swing to Joe's stomach. Rivers then knocked White down with a left-hand swing to the jaw. When he got up, Joe nearly dropped him again near the ropes as the bell rang and White went to his corner in a bad way.

Round 4—It is a good fight. White swings both hands hard at Rivers's jaw, but only lands on his arms and elbows. Rivers is hitting much harder. Jack rushes again but cannot land any of his swings. Joe had White on the ropes at the bell. As the bell rang, White said something to Joe. Joe was furious and let go a hard right-hand punch that landed behind Jack's ear. Gilmore claimed foul, but it was not allowed by Eyton. The crowd hoots Rivers.

Round 5—Joe came up mad and rushed White. Both appear strong. Jack lands a hard left swing to Joe's stomach. Then they mix it in the corner. Rivers then feints, jabs and makes White miss a lot, and is crowding Jack around the ring.

Round 6—White seems a little nervous and Rivers very cool. Joe feints again and keeps White guessing. White lands a left swing to Rivers's body. Jack misses a hard right-hand swing to the head and later lands three left swings to Joe's body, but they do not seem to hurt Joe. Rivers lands a hard right to Jack's jaw. They then have a hard mix and later Rivers lands a hard straight left to Jack's face at the bell.

Round 7—Rivers comes up stronger than Jack. Joe lands a left and right to Jack's face and then another right to his ear. In the clinch Rivers lands three right-hand blows over Jack's kidneys. Joe then lands a left and right to Jack's head and they are mixing it at the bell.

Round 8—White comes up with his mouth bleeding. Rivers lands two left-hand swings on White's body and head. Joe is jabbing all the time. He then lands a hard right to Jack's body and a left swing to his jaw. Then another hard right reaches White's jaw as the bell rang and he goes to his corner weak but game as any man could.

Round 9—Joe lands a left swing to Jack's chin and in the clinch puts in the three more on his kidneys. Joe feints White into knots and he seems to be all in. Three more hard ones are placed on Jack's kidneys in a clinch.

It is all Rivers.

Round 10—Rivers is pressing Jack hard. Jack, in attempting to duck a hard punch, ducks low and Joe lands a hard one between his shoulders that puts him down on his hands and knees. Rivers seems to be unable to reach Jack's chin, no matter how hard he tries. It was Joe again all through this round.

Round 11—Jack is weak and Joe is strong. It is only a matter of a short time for Joe to finish the contest. Joe keeps leading and Jack is trying to counter his blows but is too weak. Joe put Jack down with a hard right to the ear and he took the count of nine. When he got up he knocked him down again just before the bell rang. Jack was all in, and it was wrong for his seconds to send him up again. It was a shame to send such a game boy up for more unnecessary punishment. Eyton wanted them to throw up the towel, but White begged for another round.

Round 12. Jack came up weak but dead game. Joe lost no time in putting him down again and Eyton never attempted to count, but promptly declared Rivers the winner.

THE PRELIMINARIES.

The first preliminary, between Battling Chico and Joe Walker, was given to Chico. Chico came very near knocking Walker out in the first round. Walker did not seem to have any confidence in himself at the start. But as the fight progressed he did better and had all the better of the fifth round, but good knocked down as the bell rang. Chico was given a well-earned decision at the end of the sixth round. But if Joe Levy is thinking of sending him up against such classy boys as Eddy Campi or Jimmy Fox, he had better change his mind, and wait until Chico learns more and has more experience.

The second ten-round preliminary, between Dick Wheeler and Paul Roman, was awarded to Roman at the end of the tenth round. Wheeler appeared in a pair of fighting trunks that would never be allowed a kid to go swimming in back of a San Pedro lumber yard.

But he won the fight just the same.

In the first round he nearly dropped Roman and the round was all Wheeler. It was all Wheeler from the first round up to the fifth, then both were tired. The sixth was Roman's. The seventh even, Dick had the worst of eighth and nearly had his eye closed. Wheeler had a shade again in the ninth but Roman was the stronger of the two. The tenth and last was all Wheeler but the referee gave the decision to Roman, and nobody seemed to know why. Roman was the aggressor but was receiving the most punching. A draw would have satisfied the crowd better, but Dick won by a big margin on points, and it looked as though he was entitled to it. Nevertheless, Blake is an honest fellow and the best referees in the country make mistakes.

EASY VICTORY FOR RIVERS.

the rear. In the ninth and tenth Rivers continued to plaster jabs on White's face and body and especially the latter which tended to weaken White more than ever. Just before the gong sounded Joe swung the hardest blow of the battle and landed on White's kidneys which send him sprawling to the floor.

The eleventh round brought White up weaker but gamer than ever and Rivers more determined to end the agony of his opponent. A terrific right to the jaw lifted White off his feet and turned him turtle. His jaw struck with a terrible thud on the padded floor, but he revived in time to come back for more punishment. He covered as well as he could until just before the gong struck and he was again lifted clear off his feet and sent to the floor, knocked cold with another right wallop from Rivers.

The restoratives were applied but White was so tired and weak when he stepped to the center of the ring for the twelfth round that it was apparent that he could not go through the session unless Rivers took pity on him.

Joe Rivers doesn't know what the word pity means in either English or Mexican and he went after White with the same dogged determination that had marked his milling throughout. White came back with a dying effort and started to slug in hopes that he might connect, but he stopped another hard swing with his jaw and his body was hammered with rights and lefts as he fell to the floor the worst defeated man Rivers has probably ever beaten.

White's gameness was marvelous and he made many friends by his determination to stay until there was no fight left in him. As Referee Eyton lifted Rivers hand refusing to give the count, the entire audience was satisfied that the end had come.

NEW HEAD FOR THOMAS.

Humpage Humps to the Top of the List and Plans Busy Campaign for Classy Car.

E. P. Chalfant, who, for some time, has been president of the E. R. Thomas Motor Car Company, has withdrawn from the company and F. R. Humpage has been chosen to replace him. Humpage and Chalfant together with W. L. Gleason and J. J. Ramsey went to the Thomas factory a year ago to take charge of affairs and the consistent and harmonious work of these men have placed the Thomas company indisputably in a foremost place among the makers of high-grade cars. Gleason takes the office of vice-president and Ramsey continues as secretary and treasurer.

Only one year ago Humpage and his associates took charge of the Thomas plant and a complete working organization was immediately created by gathering together a group of men who had had long experience in the automobile industry. What has been accomplished by the work of these men is best shown by the 1912 Thomas Six-Forty. It is giving satisfactory work in the hands of the owners and has been received enthusiastically by the motoring public at the automobile shows.

WHITE WON'T QUIT.

Game Lad Refuses to Throw Up Sponge in Face of an Overwhelming Defeat.

It was the interval between the eleventh and twelfth rounds of the contest yesterday between Joe Rivers and Jack White.

The latter had been floored three times for the count. An artery had been split in his upper lip and blood was spurting in little jets from his mouth.

"Say, old kid, better let me throw the sponge into the ring," gasped Harry Gilmore, Jr., White's manager.

"Not on your life," hiccoughed White, between spitting mouthfuls of blood. "I'll get him yet."

This, in a nutshell, tells of the wonderful display of gameness of Jack White of Chicago, who, yesterday withstood one of the worst pummellings ever witnessed in the Vernon Arena since the historic battle when Billy Papke almost butchered the late Stanley Ketchel.

He never quailed before the onslaught of the terrible Mexican and fought back with might and main until he was stretched flat on his face on the canvass and the house was screaming like all possessed.

White proved himself a good fighter, but it was that blow in the second round that turned the trick. Rivers had struck like lightning and White fell flat with a look of astonishment on his face.

From then on to the end in the fatal twelfth round, Rivers did not give White a moment to recover.

Harry Gilmore and his brother, Fred Gilmore, who had brought the plucky little Chicago lad here to meet Rivers, were quivering with chagrin over the way the battle was going. They would meet White after each round half way across the ring and would clasp him, in their arms as a mother would her child.

White, alone of the men in his corner, did not show any doubt as to his final ability to whip Rivers. The Gilmores would stall when the bell would sound and endeavor to steal every second to permit their man to recuperate. White would struggle to his feet at the sound of the bell and push aside his managers and stride to the center of the ring to meet Rivers.

His gameness showed in the fact that he was the aggressor for fully half of the rounds, and although it was almost suicide to go after Rivers, he continued doggedly at his work and took his thrashing like a man.

In the fifth round White turned to Gilmore and said, querulously, "If I could only get my head clear I could get that fellow, but I am dizzy."

Gilmore, who knows of the excellent record of White, did not want to see a good man take an unnecessary beating when he was not clearly himself, and suggested that he throw in the sponge.

White turned to Gilmore savagely and said:

"If you throw that sponge into the ring before I tell you to you will have to fight me."

Gilmore smiled and patted his man on the back and the bell sounded for the round to start.

It is thought that White was nauseated toward the latter rounds by swallowing too much blood.

In the eleventh round, when he had been floored by a terrific blow and had been saved by the bell, he started for his corner and his seconds cried out to him, as he came staggering toward them:

"Here we are Jack. Right over here."

As he lay back in his chair and Gilmore was urging that he be allowed to throw the sponge into the ring, White flashed up for a second with his old-time spirit, and said:

"If I can just reach his jaw once fellows, it will be all over."

Last night White was down street with his managers, and outside of a badly swollen lip and a slightly discolored eye, seemed none the worse for the awful beating he received.

My Ideal of a Car

By R. E. Olds, Designer

Reo the Fifth—My Farewell Car—in every detail marks the best I know. And I've built cars for 25 years. If any man can build a car better he's a better man than I.

To the Men Who Have Faith in Me

Automobile makers say it is simply impossible to give the best in a car for $1,055.

I agree with them.

This price, I believe, can not be continued. Our contracts with dealers provide for advance.

But I promise you this:

Reo the Fifth, while I direct the making, will embody the best of which I am capable, regardless of price or profit.

Men Look to Me

Tens of thousands of men, in the past quarter century, have used cars of my designing.

They have come to have faith in me. They believe that I know.

Reo the Fifth is my finest car, the cap-sheaf of my career. And myriads of men will remember me by it, whatever new cars the Reo plant may bring out.

You who look to me can rest assured that this car marks my limit.

The Final Touch

I have spent 18 months in designing this Farewell Car.

I searched the whole motor car world for ideas for it. In it I embodied the best I had learned from the 23 models which I built before it.

I never before gave such care to a car. Nor has any other man, I think.

Never have I stood for such big margins of safety—never insisted on such careful inspection.

Never before have I gone so far to get the final touch.

Look for Yourself

The lines of the car show its up-to-dateness.

The body is finished with 17 coats. The lamps are enameled. Even under the hood you'll find the engine nickel trimmed.

Note the deep upholstering, made of genuine leather, filled with genuine hair.

Note the car's roominess. Note the big wheels. The car is overtired.

Note the absence of petty economies.

The Parts Which Tell

But the parts which tell in the long run are the hidden parts of a car. Men's final judgment will depend on them.

I use Nickel Steel in the axles and driving shaft, and I make them much larger than necessary. I use Vanadium steel for connections.

Each lot of steel, to make sure of it, is analyzed before I use it.

The gears are tested in a crushing machine of 50 tons' capacity.

The magneto is tested under conditions which very few can stand.

The carburetor is doubly heated, to avoid the troubles due to low-grade gasoline.

Roller bearings are used—Timken and Hyatt—where ball bearings once sufficed. There are only three ball bearings in this whole car, and two are in the fan.

So in every part. All the precautions taught me by experience are employed in this Reo the Fifth.

New Center Control No Side Levers

Then here, for the first time, is a cane-handle control. All the gear shifting is done by slightly moving this lever in each of four directions.

Both brakes are operated by foot pedals, and one pedal also operates the clutch.

So there are no side levers—there is nothing in the way of the front doors.

This arrangement permits the left side drive, heretofore possible in electric cars only. The driver sits as he should sit, close to the cars he passes and on the up side of the road.

These are conveniences found today in Reo the Fifth alone.

Ask for the Book

Our Book points out all the perfections, and pictures the various bodies. Every motor car lover should have it, for this is one of the interesting cars.

The New Era.

JUBILEE FOR MANY FARMERS.

Dry Year Scare No Longer Menaces Motor Trade.

Men of the Soil Ready for Many Commercial Cars.

Hard Tasks Are Performed; Horses Not Needed.

That the farmer is king this year every motor car dealer is ready to admit. When the croakers were grumbling about a dry year the dealers looked dubious. The city trade was good, but it did not satisfy them. This was particularly true of the light car men.

When the rain came down in torrents it not only made the heart of the farmer glad, but it washed the cobwebs from the minds of the motor men who had been worrying without daring to admit they were at all scared. Then the campaign which is to send many machines into the farming districts was begun in earnest.

With the bright sunlight of the past few days automobile row has been a busy place. One of the interesting sales was made by Walt Moreland of the local Moreland truck factory. Moreland noticed two farmers in his factory and after expressing a hope for a good year, he was about to leave when the larger of the two men said.

"Say what do you ask for that red truck."

Moreland stated his figure and almost before the words were out of his mouth the farmer had bought the car. This is only one of many such instances which made the past week one of the best of the year for the dealers in both trucks and touring cars. Sales are being made in carload lots.

At the Vance-Canavan Company the week has been the best in the history of the concern. Warren Vance has just completed his journey into the Imperial Valley. He found there a market so vast that it was hard he says to comprehend the possibilities of the region where a 10,000 acre field of alfalfa is not a novelty.

VANCE BOOSTS.

Vance has sold two carloads of Cartercars this week. He closed with the Marquette agency and is negotiating for still another. This all in one week. He says it is possible, for the first time this year to get cars. Now he is out for a record. He should sell at least 200 Cartercars this season.

BIG MARKET.

"The Imperial Valley is just opening up" said Vance when speaking of the possibilities in the valley. "The market there is immense. We dealers will sell thousands of motor cars to the farmers who are prospering. When we took our Cartercars through and showed them what those machines will do it was one of the greatest demonstrations ever given.

"Now that they know there is nothing a Cartercar will not do we have closed five sales. These sales were made to men who did not know the Cartercar until they had a chance to watch it plow its way through the sands and then over the muddy roads.

ALCO GIANT.

Standing on the corner of Twelfth and Main streets, Friday, Dan Kim-

Three Trucks Which Now Command the Interest of Farmers.

This trio of commercial cars, with scores of other makes, are in great demand by the men of the soil who are even now preparing to haul their produce to market. Above is the Moreland three-ton truck, in the center the Ford light delivery, and below, the Cartercar, one of the few friction-driven trucks on the market in Los Angeles.

brell of the Mills Brasing Works counted seventy-four auto trucks in thirty minutes as they passed up and down the paved street, loaded with everything from flour to pianos. Ned Cutting drove a Grabowsky from this city to Chino with a trailer last week and after loading six tons of oil, made the run back to Los Angeles in eight hours.

The stage line which ran from Mesa City, Ariz., to the Roosevelt Dam, is no more. The distance of sixty miles is now covered by an auto stage, which makes the trip in one day, doing the work of twenty horses.

Four horses were used on a relay and five relays were necessary to cover the desert and mountain roads. Besides the run of passengers, Bud Norton, the driver of the truck, hauls freight.

Palmer Bros. of San Diego have been hauling thirty-six-inch pipe in twelve-foot lengths, which weigh three tons each. A four-horse team hauled one length at a time and made one trip each day, but with a big Akro truck three lengths weighing nine tons are hauled at a load and six trips are made in a day. This means one truck to seventy-two horses.

PACKARDS WIN.

The Wreden Produce Company has taken to the motor truck. The company's two new Gramm wagons are attractive and do the work of seven teams.

W. F. Wood of the Packard truck camp, drove a three-ton, motor up to Fullerton and proved that the motor truck is practical on the ranch as well as in the city with its paved streets. He went out in the orange groves of the C. C. Chapman ranch and loaded 180 boxes onto the car, rushed them over to the packing-house and sold the truck. The rancher had contended that motor trucks were not practical in his line of business, but now he "don't see how I got along without."

E. Scripps has a three-ton Packard truck on his Miramar ranch, and there is nothing that it is not used for. Going to town for supplies, hauling lumber, and taking heavy loads from place to place is the duty of this auto farm wagon.

THE MORELAND.

Watt Moreland of the Moreland Distillate Motor Truck Company, has created a sensation among the citrus fruit growers of San Bernardino and Redlands by springing an auto cultivator, which has been worked out with practical success among the groves of Highland.

When this new farming implement goes on the market, it will be a combination cultivator, furrower and roller. The price will be between $500 and $600, within reach of the average grower, and the saving of labor, horse feed and the price of cultivator machines now in use will make it a practical as well as popular implement.

The cultivator will be equipped with the Moreland patented gasifier, which enables it to use engine distillate instead of gasoline, thereby lowering the cost of operation two-thirds.

The Moreland cultivator will fill a long-felt need among the growers of the State. The young trees are low and it is almost impossible to work a team in the groves, but the motors, which are built low to the ground, can be run close to the trees without danger. Another feature of the distillate engine will be the way it can be run during the summer months when it is needed most, and the horse has to be spared.

Not the Real Thing.

[Lippincott's:] From a city apartment little Jack was going for the first time to spend Christmas at his grandfather's farm. As he ran up the steps of the old house his grandmother caught him up in her arms and put him down, rosy and laughing, before the great log fire in the living-room.

"Isn't that fine, Jackie boy?" she said. "You don't have big log fires like that in New York, do you?"

The boy looked with wide-eyed delight at the huge logs as they blazed and crackled in the generous old fireplace, but he was staunchly loyal to his "six rooms and bath."

"It's nice, grandma, but it's only an imitation gas log, isn't it? We have real ones in my house."

The proposed use of the Mississippi River levees for touring is being received with considerable favor by motorists living in the Valley States.

The owner who sells his car and buys a new one must purchase a new license in Wisconsin, according to a ruling by the Attorney-General of that State.

A motor car line, in lieu of street car service, is the prospect for Laporte, Ind. It is the intention to serve all parts of the city by means of large buses.

MOTOR CAR IN WEST.

Doing Great Work in Developing Nation's Vast Resources on Desert and in Fertile Valleys.

One of the biggest factors in the wonderful development of the great West is the motor car. The automobile has come into its own on the great ranches, it is assisting materially in the building of new towns and railroads, and everywhere enterprise and energy is to be found the automobile is in evidence. The hustling westerners have quickly learned that the motor car is a time and labor-saving device and in the West, where big and wonderful things are being done, nothing is as valuable as time.

Not long ago it was very important that D. F. Smith, right of way agent for the Great Northern Railroad Company, at Lewiston, Mont., should go to Great Falls, 130 miles, confer with his superior officers and be back in time to file important papers at the Courthouse when the clerk's office opened the next morning. His only hope lay in a 6-60 Premier and as the roads were far from the best there was some uncertainty. With Harry Allen at the wheel, however, the trip, both ways, in all 260 miles, was made in ten hours and twenty minutes. Mr. Smith was able to present his papers for record a few hours ahead of a competitor and thereby save his company several thousand dollars. He then purchased a Premier.

Frank Strouf of Lewiston, called the wheat king of Montana, and the king of Bohemians, manages 14,000 acres of land, much of which is under cultivation, by the aid of his two Premier cars. C. E. Shoemaker of Lewiston, Mont., who, besides being one of the great land-holders, conducts a farm loan business, has three Premiers in constant use and he holds the mileage record for that State. David Hilger, who has just founded the new town of Hilger, owns and operates both a 4-40 and 6-60 Premier. Walter J. Winnett, of Winnett, Mont., a town he established on a portion of one of his great ranches, has driven a Premier for years and has just placed his order for a new 6-60 Premier for the use of his family. He will keep the old car for his own use as he expresses the belief that he could get no other its equal.

A blue ribbon automobile racing event in the East this summer will be the three-day speed programme on the beach at Old Orchard, Me., scheduled for July 5 and 6.

A Universal Language.

[Chicago Record Herald:] The universal language is still a long way off, but we are getting somewhere near the universal symbols—in print. In Europe, Russia stands aloof with a printed language which is a mixture of Latin, Greek and Slavonic characters. Greece retains its classic letters and Germany clings to the Gothic. But the rest of us rub along with this kind of type. Yet the handwriting—you may learn easily enough to read the Russian. But it requires a special education to read a letter written by hand by a Gersent by Gompers and company, to the man, a Russian, a Greek, when it comes to an Englishman. And, of course, the same difficulty occurs in Athens, Petersburg and Berlin.

Thrills.

L. A. HIGH WINS FROM POMONA---HARD FIGHT.

BY A SCORE of 58 to 46 L. A. High won over Pomona High in a hard-fought track meet at Bovard Field yesterday morning. The rain men persisted in jumping the gun in most of the races. The 100-yard dash started off with three Pomona men in the lead, leaving Johnson at the starting place. Little Clyde's fighting spirit won him third place however. The Pomona runner, however, finish first, with Stone, another Pomona man, second. Nichols of Pomona did remarkably well in the high jump, winning first at 6ft. Things looked rather gloomy for the Blue and White squad when the Pomona bunch ran away with most of the points in the first three runs. However, things took a better turn when Berger of L. A. romped home with the 440 in 52 4-5s. This was a great improvement in Morgan's running, and he promises to do better. Johnson made up for his defeat in the century by walking away with the 220-yard dash in 23 2-5s. Johnson French followed in second, with Walker of Pomona third.

Berger, a L. A. boy, certainly made good in the low hurdles, beating his closest competitor by about twenty yards. He is a fast runner and is learning to clear the hurdles in good form. Nichols, captain of the Hill Toppers, won the shot put at 44ft. 11in. He also gave an exhibition in the discus throw, sending it 115 feet. The relay race was said to be the most exciting event of the day. The Pomona men led by about six feet till the last 220 yards, when Johnson again showed his speed and won the race for L. A. by about 25 feet. The track was in fine condition and the weather could not have been better. This made up for last Saturday when the Pomona boys came down in the rain and were prevented from holding a meet.

Results were as follows:

Mile run—Martin (P.,) first; Selburg (L.A.,) second; Doyle (L.A.,) and Pruit (P.,) tied for third. Time, 4m. 56 2-5s.

The 100-yard dash—Maurer (P.,) first; Stone (P.,) second; Johnson (L.A.,) third. Time, 10 1-5s.

The 120-yard hurdles—Rodman (L.A.,) first; Hume (P.,) second; Brant (L.A.,) third. Time, 18 1-5s.

The 440-yard dash—Berger (L.A.,) first; Parker (P.,) second; Threlkeld (L.A.,) third. Time, 52 4-5s.

The 220-yard dash—Johnson (L.A.) first; French (L.A.,) second; Walker (P.,) third. Time, 23 2-5s.

The 880-yard run—Simpson (L.A.,) first; Walker (P.,) second; Maguire (L.A.,) third. Time, 2m. 10 2-5s.

The 220-yard hurdles — Brooks (L.A.,) first; Rodman (L.A.,) second; Parker (P.,) third. Time, 27 3-5s.

Relay, half-mile—L.A. winners; Dell, French, Burger, Johnson. Time, 1m. 34 4-5s.

High jump—Nichols (P.,) first; McFie (L.A.,) second; Lewis (P.,) and Berger (L.A.,) tied for third. Height, 6ft. 1¼in.

Shot put — McFie (L.A.,) first; Douglas (L.A.,) second; Clark (P.,) third. Distance, 44ft. 11in.

Pole vault—Clark, Nichols and Cresswell of Pomona tied for first. Height, 9ft. 6in.

Broad jump—Nichols (P.,) first; Brooks (L.A.,) second; Hume (P.,) third. Distance, 20ft. 5½in.

Final score—L.A.H.S., 58; Pomona H. S., 46.

All One Way.

ERRY'S ANGELS BLANK HENRY AND CORNETT NINE

BY GREY OLIVER.

LOS ANGELES, 3; Henry & Cornett, 0.

The Angels tried themselves out on the H. & C. team yesterday at Washington Park, and showed they had cuts from a good amateur team with Joe Seaton pitching. There was nothing brilliant in the game that, but the Loo Loos played perfect ball.

The real good one showed in the box and that was Laird, at first base, who had twelve outs and a few of them were pippers. He undoubtedly do if he can learn to bat for he is fast at the bag and knows how to play it.

Seaton pitched the entire game for the Cornetts, and did very good work. He held the Loo Loos to six hits but it happened that the only two of these counted for runs. Two pass and Lober's double to right in the first run and two errors and an out made the second. A pass, sacrifice and two singles scored the final run in the game.

Smith, Slagle and Halla heaved for the Angels and while Halla was touched up in the last two innings, the support kept the runs from coming in. Three scattered singles made off Check in the first innings and two off Slagle in the last three, but there was no danger at any time. None of the H. & C. boys got by second base at any time, and naturally they could not score a run.

The fielding feature of the day was the put at second base by Bigando in the ninth inning, and this was a left-handed stab of a hot grounder. Metzger made a fine out at third and figured in a double play at first in the eighth inning, but all the other chances in the game were comparatively easy. The H. & C. boys had three errors but none of them were costly.

BERKELEY WON GREAT MEET.

Meyer when they crossed the tape. This was one of the greatest quarter-mile races ever seen here and Hodge is now there as a 440 man.

CALLED TO THE MARK.

The din died a natural death just as the 220 men were called to the mark. Here Wood and Throop faced each other again. They ran even to the curve then Wood went ahead by about eighteen inches, causing a terrible groan to come from the U.S.C. bleachers. Was their idol going be beaten? On the last fifty yards Throop went out like mad and won the race by about three yards with one of the greatest bursts of speed that he has shown this season. The time was slow, but the race was A1.

The 220-yard hurdles brought the weary fans to their feet once more as Kelly and Maclise fought it out only a yard apart. Maclise the wonder took the tape, but Kelly was right there. Mac won in 25 and 4-5 seconds, which is the best time made this season on the local track and the fact that Fred had him scared all the way shows that the big boy can keep up with the fastest company in the country.

Right here be it known that this Berkeley team, when it is right, is the best track and field squad in the United States, that is if records can be taken as any criterion. They would show any of the big fellows something take it from us.

The half-mile produced another fit among the U.S.C. rooters, though not until the last lap. Ormond Smith of Berkeley led out for the first lap and looked as though he was going to cop the first five points without a struggle. On the last lap Tipton began to creep up and when they went out of sight on the first turn behind the buildings, he was gaining rapidly. The runners burst through the gate on the other side of the field, breast to breast; then Tipton took the lead rousing the Trojan rooters to another frenzy pitch. Smith came back and picked up on the curve but Tipton had some more of that old Crossing-the-Delaware stuff and slammed her on in the home stretch winning with several yards to spare. This was absolutely unlooked for and Tipton was nearly cheered deaf.

SWIGGETT ROMPS HOME.

Well now we come to that banner event, the two-mile. One Charles Swiggett romped home fifty yards ahead of Crabbe and Torrance. The surprise in this event was terrible. Not only did Charles win by a city block but Arthur Torrance of U.S.C. took second away from Crabbe the much talked of two-mile from Berkeley. This was the best part of the event, as Swiggett was doped to win after a hard fight, but as it was he never was worried at all. This two-mile rave is getting to be one of the big card events on the programme these days and every race this season has been worth the price of admission.

The final spasm was the half-mile relay and was nearly too much for the fans, who were already in a sad state of strangulation. Hodge started for U.S.C. against Wallace of Berkeley and after losing the pole he made it up and gave Hansen a two-yard start by his great finish. Meyer and Hansen ran even, Hansen giving Johnny Cookman the same lead over Maclise of Berkeley. Maclise pulled up with a awful finish and gave Fui Wood of Berkeley a two-yard start on Waldo Throop. Throop ran behind all the way around the curve with the men in the bleachers pleading with cracked voices for more speed, but Throop was not ready for the burst yet. Little Waldo gathered himself to gether in the last seventy yards and came across with one of the most thrilling finishes ever seen in a relay. Wood ran his best, but Throop was better. You could not stop Throop yesterday, he had speed and it would have taken an Arthur Duffy to beat him. He came over the tape with the last five points of the meet after making up two and a half yards on one of the best sprinters on the Pacific Coast. Selah.

THE RESULTS.

The results of yesterday's meet were as follows:

Mile run—Wood (C.,) first; Smith U.S.C.,) second; Crabbe (C.,) third. Time, 4m. 34 4-5s.

The 100-yard dash—Throop (S.C.,) Cookman (S.C.,) second; Wood (C.,) third. Time, 10 1-5s.

Hammer throw—Shattuck (C.,) first; Rice (C.,) second; Kelly (S.C.,) third. Distance, 160ft. 3in.

Pole vault—Smith (C.,) first; Cookman (S.C.,) Taylor (C.,) Watkins (S.C.,) tied for second. Height, 11ft. 6in.

High jump—Hill (C.,) first; Taylor (C.,) second; Watkins and Chaffee (S.C.,) tied for third. Height 6 ft.

120-yard hurdles—Maclise (C.,) first; Kelly (S.C.,) second; Wallace, (C.,) third. Time, 15 4-5s.

440-yard dash—Hodge (S.C.,) first; Meyer (C.,) second; Davis (S.C.,) third. Time, 52 2-5s.

Shot-put—Hale (C.,) first; Rice (C.,) second; Kelly (S.C.,) third. Distance, 45ft. 4 3-4in.

Broad jump—Kretsinger (C.,) first; Earl (S.C.,) second; Hill (C.,) third. Distance, 22ft. 2 3-4in.

220-yard dash—Throop (S.C.,) first; Wood (C.,) second; Cookman (S.C.,) third. Time, 22 4-5s.

220-yard hurdles—Maclise (C.,) first; Kelly (S.C.,) second; Wallace (C.,) third. Time, 25 4-5s.

880-yard run—Tipton (S.C.,) first; Smith (C.,) second; L. Wood (C.,) third. Time, 2m. 4s.

Two-mile run—Swiggett (S.C.,) first; Torrance (S.C.,) second; Crabbe (C.,) third. Time, 10m. 22 2-5s.

Half-mile relay, four men, 220 yards each—Won by the University of Southern California team (Hodge, Hansen, Cookman, Throop;) California team, second (Wallace, Meyer, Maclise, Wood.) Time, 1m. 33 1-5s.

From the Inside.

DOUBLE CURING FOR GOODYEARS.

NEW PROCESS EXPLAINED BY MAN WHO KNOWS.

Laymen Are Given Chance to Learn Some of the Inside Workings of a Big Factory Where Automobile Shoes Are Made in Quantities. Sounds Good to Those Who Know.

"To laymen there may be something of mystery in the talk of a tire manufacturer about 'double curing' a tire for an automobile or motorcycle, but the tire man himself considers it perfectly simple," says L. C. Rockhill, of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

"The makers of the Goodyear tire divide the one-cure, full-moulded process of their competitors into two parts. The 'No-Rim-Cut' tire for instance, passes through the following process between the time it leaves the tire maker's hands and the time it is ready for shipment:

"Before it is cured the rubber of a tire is soft and plastic. It becomes still softer and more plastic for a time when subjected to the steam-heat of the curing process.

"The first curing process for a Goodyear tire is in a tire mould. This is continued just long enough to give the tire its shape and to insure that the layers of fabric and gum of the carcass have been cemented together thoroughly. Then the tire is taken out of the mould and carefully inspected. This mid-cure inspection makes it possible to detect pinches, unsuspected accidental folds in the fabric or any other inperfection that might occasionally creep in. There is no chance for this inspection in tires that are completed all in one cure.

"When a Goodyear tire has passed this inspection at the end of the first cure, the surface is roughened and the heavy rubber tread attached. When the tread is in position an air bag is placed inside the carcass and the tire is wrapped firmly in a long strip of damp muslin. Then the air bag is inflated so the tire, in the final cure, will be distended and take exactly the shape it will take when in use, later on. By this means the tire is cured in just the right shape and the possibility of later, unbalanced strains, is eliminated.

"To this cure and the quality of materials used, and to the uniform results that are obtained through the use of tire-making machines, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company attributes much of the popularity of No-Rim-Cut tires and the satisfaction they bring to tire users."

Wins In Hardest of all Tests—Hill Climbing

We have entered Great Western cars in contests in the past to prove something. We wanted to know if our ideas of engine building, construction and relative weight of car would show the superiority in the performance of the car that we expected. We were right. The Great Western has come out victorious in scores of hill climbing tests. These tests show the real worth of a car.

The Great Western Forty is master of the hills and this means: Development of full rated horse power; faultless construction; lightness and strength; elimination of waste energy, and full and economical use of fuel and oil.

All these important qualities have been tested out time and again by ourselves and the enthusiastic owners of Great Western cars, and they are found in fullest measure in this sturdy car of every day service.

The United States Government chose the Great Western for the hard work of the Indian country, over its rough prairies and steep hills.

The Great Western Forty is a thing of beauty also. Its splendid straight-line body is finished to a mirror-like brilliancy by our method which is the result of 18 special processes. Its roomy tonneau is trimmed in black walnut and upholstered in the finest of hand-buffed leather with large high-backed and comfortable seats.

The Great Western has automatic engine starter; Solar electric headlights; demountable rims; Typhoon signal horn; ventilated windshield; attachment compartment under rear seat accessible from outside; robe and foot rails; detachable fore-door; gasoline gauge, and every other advance feature that a car of such quality should have.

Call us up. Let us send you a copy of the beautiful 1912 catalog, but better still come here and see this beautiful car and let us take you out for demonstration. There will be no obligation on your part at all and it will be a genuine pleasure to show you what the Great Western car really is.

CLEARING HOUSE No. 11

It has been advertised that this challenge has been accepted. One local dealer has advertised that he has shied his hat in the ring; he also shies at our challenge by insisting that we let him use distillate as fuel, which is contrary to the way his factory guarantees and sells their trucks. In the presence of Mr. Burt Smith, auto editor of The Times, Mr. Watt Moreland, Manager of the Moreland Distillate Motor Truck Company, and Mr. W. W. Wurzburger, Sales Manager, this gasoline motor truck dealer admitted that he would have no chance in an economy contest with the Moreland Distillate Motor Truck, owing to the great difference of the price of gasoline and distillate. We cannot force any gasoline motor truck dealer to accept this challenge, but we purpose to further demonstrate to the business men of Southern California that Moreland Distillate Motor Trucks can be operated on less than one-half the fuel cost of any gasoline motor truck sold in Southern California, by running a gasoline and a distillate truck to San Francisco and return. This will be under the direct management of some of the best known business men of Los Angeles.

THE OUT-DOOR BOY

CONDUCTED BY ARTHUR LEE

We are publishing today the personal records of the twenty boys who have made the best showing so far in The Times Camp series of track and field meets. There are ten boys listed in both junior and senior divisions. These records are on file in The Times office and will be preserved as official grammar school records until they are broken by some one else. The "high ten" in each division will receive honorable mention from time to time, in these columns. These records are published as a result of a continuous demand from grammar school boys from all over Southern California to know what boys are credited with the best performances in the various track and field events.

VICTOR LANEY.

Victor Laney (senior) of Thirtieth-street school has a tie record in the 100-yard dash with Frank Worthen of Long Beach at 11 2-5s. While his other records are not all the best, they are ahead of all city boys so far. Victor's record in the 220-yard dash is 26 1-5s, the 352-yard dash 43 3-5s.; high jump, 4ft. 11in.; broad jump, 14ft. 8in.

FRANK WORTHEN.

Frank Worthen (senior,) Long Beach, so far has more records to his credit than any other senior. Frank stepped the 50-yard dash in 5 4-5st, the 100-yard dash in 11 2-5s, the 220 in 24 1-5s, put the shot (seven pounds) 41ft. 10in. and got 17ft. 2¼ in. away from the broad jump take off.

HAROLD M'CRACKEN.

Harold McCracken (senior,) Long Beach, won a trip to The Times Camp by his ability to keep anybody else from getting between him and the fleet-footed Worthen in the sprints, and beating him out in 352 and establishing a record of 46s. flat for the fifth of a mile. His jump of five feet in air gave him that record also.

RAY OSTERGARD.

Ray Ostergard (senior,) Palms, put the shot 29ft. 11in., reached 14ft. 7in. in the broad jump.

ADAIR JAMESON.

Adair Jameson (senior) got to the tape in the 50-yard dash in 6 1-5s.

Bryant Dodge, Thirtieth-street school, holds the city shot-put record with a heave of 41ft. (seven pounds.) Guy Allen (senior,) Santa Monica, has a mark of 6 3-5s. to his credit in the 50-yard dash.

Frank Ranier (senior,) Palms, is credited on our book with doing the 220 on a circular track in 29s.

Dewey Manley ran the 100-yard dash in 11 3-5s.

FRED HANEY.

Fred Haney (junior,) Thirtieth-street school, holds a tie record of 6 3-5s. with Merriatt Van Sant of Santa Monica in the 50-yard dash. Fred's other records are 11 4-5s. in the 100, 29 2-5s. in the 220-yard dash, 36ft. in the shot-put.

JIM BLUETT.

Jim Bluett (junior) is coming to be a strong contender with Haney for sprint honors, and is already outdoing him in the 352 and high jump. Jim's time in the 352 is 48 1-5s. and his high jump record is 4ft. 2in.

MERRIATT VAN SANT.

Van Sant (junior,) the juvenile star of the Santa Monica, meet only entered three events, but has a record of 6 2-5s. in the 50-yard dash; 12s. flat in the 100, and 4ft. 3in. in the high jump.

JAMES HOLLINGSWORTH.

James Hollingsworth (junior) of the Jefferson school annexed one good record of 31s. in the 220-yard dash. He made the 100 in 12s.

ERNEST HARTMAN.

Ernest Hartman (junior,) Jefferson school, won his trip to The Times Camp by putting the shot 29ft. 3in., high jumping 4ft. 2in., broad jumping 14ft. 2in.

VIVIAN RATCHWIG.

Vivian Ratchwig (junior,) San Pedro, won his trip to The Times Camp by doing the 50 in 6 3-5s., the 220 in 28 2-5s., the 352 in 48 1-5s. and jumping 14ft. 3in. in the broad, and putting the shot 29ft. 3in.

LELAND BARTON.

Leland Barton (junior,) Long Beach, won a trip to The Times Camp by chasing Ratchwig around the track and winning alternately. His time in the 50 was 6 3-5s. and in the 100 12 1-5s. Jack Kilburn also ran the 50 in 6 1-5s.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ATHLETIC LEAGUE.

A new Sunday-school Athletic League is now being organized among nearly every Sunday-school in the city for the purpose of promoting all kinds of athletic sports among the Sunday-school boys of every denomination.

Y. P. Rothwell has been actively engaged in familiarizing the athletic leaders in each Sunday-school with the plans of organization. The first of a great series of athletic contests that are scheduled will be a big union track meet of all the teams in the Southern California Sunday-school Athletic League at the new Y.M.C.A. field, Saturday, April 13, at 2 p.m. This meet will be held under the auspices of the Track and Field Committee of the Southern Pacific Branch of the A.A.U. The boys are to be divided into four classes (according to weight,) as follows: Eighty-five-pound class, 95-pound class; 115-pound class, and unlimited. There will be gold, silver and bronze medals, and a four-day trip to The Times Camp at Catalina Island to the boy in each division that scores the highest number of points in the meet, in addition to the cup trophy for the team that scores the greatest number of points. The meet should be a hummer and will do a great deal to promote clean sport in the Sunday-schools.

[Resolutions of thanks to The Times were passed at a recent meeting of the new league, expressing their appreciation of the four Times Camp trips that are offered. The copy of which follows:]

"We take this occasion to thank The Times for the offer of Times Camp prizes to the boys making the highest number of points in each division in the Sunday-school meet, April 13; also the publicity they are giving the meet and the offer of a cabinet in which to keep athletic records. Arthur Lee, conductor of the 'Out-Door Boy,' is a whole-souled booster of athletics for boys, whose vigorous campaign for promotion of clean sport for boys is deserving of public appreciation."

SOUTH PARK BAPTIST.

The new South Park Baptist Church will have a basketball room. Pastor C. O. Johnson is an old college athlete and will go heart and soul into the athletic training of his boys for the Sunday-school meet. Ten athletic pastors make 500 athletic boys and 500 athletic boys makes a crackerjack meet.

ORCHARD AVENUE.

D. H. Black, an old William Jewell athlete and baseball fiend, will "big brother" the Orchard Baptist Sunday-school squads. Black has not forgotten that he was once a boy and that baseball was meat and drink to him then. He will see that the Orchard Baptist bare knees line up in due form at the crack of the gun, April 13.

IMMANUEL PRESBYTERIAN.

Immanuel Presbyterian Sunday-school bunch will be "on the mark" when the gun fires off the first fifty-yard dash at the Y.M.C.A. Field, out on Stephenson avenue, at 2 p.m., April 13. Arthur Lee is receiving the old guard at this point. The enthusiasm there don't wash out. The bunch is catching the old speed fever again and will make a mighty push for the leading places in the Union Meet. Paul McWilliams, who won the A.A.U. grammar school hundred, is a member of the school, and is boosting for the meet.

ATHERTON BAPTIST.

Bert Smith has the Atherton Baptist squad training for the big Sunday-school meet. Bert is an old quarter-miler, who used to be hard to catch. He knows the game and his boys are going after the trophy with his old-time enthusiasm for athletic sports.

John Alexander, expert on boys' work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, indorses the Sunday-school athletics. Athletics appeals to 75 per cent. of the boys and is the most attractive of all activities with the Men and Religion Forward Movement, Y.M.C.A., A.A.U., and the daily newspapers pulling together, the Sunday-school Athletic Meet should be a great success from standpoint of entries. The programme is full of dash and popular events and the experience of the "men behind" in pulling off track meets warrants the prediction that spectators will pronounce this the great athletic festival of the year.

PRACTICAL WORK.

Model training institutes open to athletic leaders of all denominations will be held Thursday at 4:30 and 7:30 p.m. at First Baptist Church, Seventh and Flower, and Saturday at 4:30 and 7:30 p.m. at First Congregational Church, Ninth and Hope. Admission free. Free information about the Sunday-school Athletic Meet will be given.

Sunday morning the athletic plans will be outlined by Y. P. Rothwell at the Church of the Messiah and Memorial Baptist Church.

NUGGET OF GOLD.

A nugget of gold found where least expected was our experience yesterday in passing back through St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral Episcopal Church, No. 523 South Olive street. We ran right into an athletic court. The boys were playing indoor baseball. Ernest Douglas, choir master, was umpiring. Here is a wise leader and a wise church. Mr. Douglas calls his athletic club the Safety Valve. He showed us the rules printed on a large card, the name is "The Choir Boys' Athletic Club." The boys are young. None have yet reached the change of voice period where the voice slips from a chisel to a screw. In consequence of our visit, these boys will be in the Sunday-school meet for the school trophy, the medals for first, second and third places, and The Times Camp vacation trips for the boy in each class scoring the most points in the various events.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The First Baptist Church has a thriving athletic club which meets Friday evenings in a large room equipped for basketball. Preparations are under way for shower baths and other equipment. Ray Southwick is in charge and is preparing a bunch of athletes for the big Sunday-school meet at Y.M.C.A. field, April 13, at 2 p.m. He is installing jumping-beds and jumping-standards on the grounds back of the church. The alley is lighted for night practice. Dr. Cassius M. Carter, the pastor, is a friend of the boys and Sunday-school athletics.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL.

Four of the staunch friends of Sunday-school athletes are Dr. Day and Harold S. Tuttle, director of boys' work of the First Congregational. Their boys will enter the big meet and will have electric-lighted ground adjacent to the church for training headquarters. This church has been selected as a meeting place for the Congregational Athletic League composed of pastors, superintendents and athletic representatives of the denomination which meets at 8 p.m., the first Monday of each month.

PILGRIM CONGREGATIONAL.

A. D. Cooper is in charge of boy athletics at Pilgrim Congregational, Forty-sixth and Normandie. He gives Saturday afternoon to the boys, conducting their activities on the church grounds. Cooper is an ex-Y. M.C.A. athlete and will have a bunch of husky athletes in the eight-five, 100 and 115-pound, and unlimited classes. His prospects are good for several medals and his boys say they will land the trophy for most points. With the enthusiastic support of the pastor, Rev. Tyler Dennett, these boys are going to be heard from April 13.

FREMONT BAPTIST.

Will M. Banbury, manager of Fremont Baptist Athletic Club writes for entry blanks for the big meet and states that they have just closed a successful season of indoor baseball championship games and are now entering upon the basketball series. Last year they strung electric lights across the church yard and have been enabled, thereby, to play ball at night. Fremont also built a room at the back of the church for athletic and social uses. The girls have made use of it also and have a thriving gym club.

CHURCH OF MESSIAH.

Rev. Stanley Ross Fisher is an old Yale athlete. He led the bunch in jumping, and the church of Messiah Sunday-school boys will jump, run and throw for the Sunday-schol trophy in the union meet, April 13. He will be "on the job" with his boys at their weekly tryouts from now on, and the old familiar "get on your marks! Get set!" (bang) will be heard on Saturday afternoons in the rear of the church. Lok out for C. of M., S.S.A.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST.

Rev. A. S. Barrier of Memorial Baptist Church will have a bunch of athletes entered in the meet for Times Camp trips.

Indoor Ball.

When these boys clashed Fourteenth-street copped the plum and went home smiling. They won by a score of 16 to 7, which was an easy victory for the winners. Twentieth-street needs a little more system and then they ought to be able to re-catch the fruit by playing hard and steady.

Indoor Ball.

Castelar won a victory over the Custer-street boys by a score of 7 to 6. The ball was kept well in the hands of the players and runs were hard to get. Much rivalry is shown between these schools.

Basketball.

Hurrah for Fourteenth-street again. They won from Custer in a basketball game—score 44 to 6. As we all know that Custer lost his last fight with the Indians, it seems as though Fourteenth-street were a little more than mere red men as they completely wiped them off the floor.

Fourteenth-street seniors also massacred Thirtieth-street seniors by a score of 12 to 11. They took their scalps when they entered the second period. The Thirtieth-street boys have a nice little squad of basketball heavers and are more or less classy when shooting for the basket, but evidently Fourteenth-street punctured their class with their victory.

Hike!

We all like to stroll around the mountains and take long walks into the woods when we get a chance, but the Custer school boys will be the lucky ones when they make a hike to Mt. Wilson. They will start by car and go to Sierra Madre and from there will journey to the mount. Much fun is expected, as when they reach the top a snowball battle will take place on the summit. The boys will choose sides and then go at it, throwing the frozen dew at each other with much force and speed. Other sports will take place along with the snowball battle, which will keep the boys thinking what's coming next. Mr. Jessen and B. Cursey will take charge of the boys and see that no one is lost, strayed or stolen while upon the glacial dome of Wilson. They will return in the evening and probably go right to their beds, as sleep is always a welcome guest when home from a hike.

Handball.

Fourteenth-street school won a series of games from Twentieth-street. A. Sims and G. Howitz formed the Fourteenth-street boys, while Joe Blum and Macrhetti formed the team for Twentieth-street. Felix and Beasley acted as umpires and the games were interesting all through. The scores for Fourteenth were 11 to 1 and 11 to 5; while the victory that Twentieth-street won was 10 to 11. These teams will play other teams of their class, and want games.

Page Military Academy.

The boys of the Page Military Academy walloped their faculty in the national pastime to the tune of 8 to 7 last Wednesday afternoon. Dutcher and La Port were the hide swatters for the profs., while Ybarrando, kid brother of the former St. Vincent's star, was the scientific heaver who kept the faculty batsmen puzzled. The line-up was:

Baseball.

The Twentieth-street boys defeated the Seventh-street fellows by a score of 21 to 13. Twentieth took the lead in the first part and kept it all through the game. Much excitement was encountered during the middle of the game, when it looked as though Seventh street would take the lead, but was unsuccessful in gaining the victory.

Indoor Ball.

The Olive and Grafton special schools played a good ball game which ended in the plum for Olive. It was played on Olive grounds and much class was shown by both teams. The score was 9 to 5 in favor of the Olive team, and cheering was often heard from the rooters that stood for each school and also those who witnessed some of the spectacular playing.

Indoor Ball.

Twentieth-street put their heads on the block when they tried to cop the game they played Wednesday with Fourteenth-street boys. The former waited on their own diamond until the butchers arrived and then went at it with great speed until they got into a rally when Fourteenth-street boys walked away with the game. It was a hard lost game to Twentieth-street, but as Fourteenth-street is taking all that comes before them, of course they couldn't afford to let the losers have this one.

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

The Zenith in Tires

This tire—the final result of 13 years of tire making—marks the utmost in pneumatic tires.

It now outsells all others.

Over one million have been used to date, on some 200,000 cars.

In the past 24 months the demand for this tire has increased by 500 per cent.

All because it cuts tire cost one-half.

The Hookless Tires

The old-type tire, since bicycle days, has hooked into the rim flange.

No-Rim-Cut tires do not.

Your removable rim flanges are simply reversed when you adopt this tire. They present a rounded edge to the tire. And this rounded edge never rim-cuts a tire.

The Extra Size

We make these tires 10 per cent. over the rated size. This to give you an over-tired car—to save the blow-outs due to overloading.

This 10 per cent. oversize, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent. to the tire mileage.

This oversize feature, plus the No-Rim-Cut feature, cuts tire upkeep in two. Tens of thousands of users have proved that.

Yet these patent tires now cost no more than other standard tires.

We Control It

We control by patents the only way to make this type of tire satisfactory.

Our Tire Book tells you why.

Thus the demand for this new type centers on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

These tires have been proved out by 200,000 users. And any of them will tell you to adopt them.

Emergency Deals.

WHY JACKSON WAS TRADED.

Gave Up Famous Joe in Order to Win Pennant.

Also Took Chance When They Got Beaumont.

Willie Got Downey for Lehr for Same Reason.

It has been the history of baseball that many times baseball managers have obtained players for emergency deals to build on. For instance, a manager will see that he has the class to try a pennant. One of his positions is covered by a player of indifferent ability. The youth may show enough, but lacks steadiness and poise at critical moments.

What does the manager do? Does he release or chases the youth, and gets the veteran player from another club? It doesn't matter if the veteran is a star, he will take him just the same, for he realizes that he will at least get the right thing at the right time.

The best exemplification of this method is Connie Mack's experience of 1911. Connie had a fine chance for the pennant, but was convinced that his chances were jeopardized by a weakness in left field. Neither the veteran Hartsel nor the youth Heitmuller could fill the bill, and Connie in midseason had to scratch around for a suitable man.

It was found that he could obtain Bris Lord, but at the expense of giving up Eddie Jackson, Mack's property, who had been a sensation in the Southern League. Connie realized Jackson's value, but he also realized that he could get a reliable man in 1910, if he were going to win the pennant. He decided to wait until Jackson was ripe.

When the trade was made, Lord came to Philadelphia and at once bolstered the weak outfield. The result was that the Athletics won the pennant and the world's championship in 1910. Jackson by winning this honor, but he obtained a dependable man in Lord, who last year added to the .300 class in hitting.

This was not the first time Mack had made this play. In 1907 Mack gave Detroit $7000 and $10,000 in cash to get Bill Donovan, and Collins. Mack saw that he had a chance for the championship, and made the deal to strengthen his club at third base, a weak spot.

Detroit was not as fortunate as in 1910. It didn't win the pennant, but was nosed out by Detroit. However, the addition of Collins served the purpose of putting the Mackmen in the lead. Collins' coming here added new strength to the team, and Collins cost thousands of dollars into the coffers of Mack failed to make the deal the club would have made very much money that year, but as it was it was a fortune.

Connie Mack is quick to see the value of the emergency player. He traded Outfielder Beaumont after that player had been turned down by Pittsburgh and Boston. Chance knew Beaumont had not permanent asset in the field, but that he might prove valuable in a pinch.

As a matter of fact, Beaumont gave Chance to win a pennant in 1907, and so did Pitcher Lew Richie. Likewise Chance purchased Kitty Bransfield from the Phillies. Chance figured that Bransfield, a veteran first baseman, might save the pennant for the Cubs.

It was unfortunate that Bransfield broke his leg in one of his first games with the Cubs, and had no opportunity to help the Cubs make a whirlwind finish. But Chance had played his part right, and it was no fault of his that Kitty should be disabled.

The Phillies know that Downey isn't a star, but they realize that he ought to be a better man than Lehr in a pinch. When the deal was made, Lehr was a much more valuable player than Downey, but in Downey is the man they want in the long run.

GOLF NOTES.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

The fifteenth annual meeting of the Philadelphia, the U.S.G.A. has passed several interesting golfing decisions. The most striking was the conviction expressed by Member Britton of the Chevy Chase that there was a world-wide golf ball trust which was responsible for the ever-rising price of balls, and a resolution was passed authorizing the Executive Committee to investigate the patents under which the balls are manufactured and sold, with a view to establishing the advisability of adopting a standard ball.

England and Scotland are about to pass resolutions, according to London golf papers, so that if the trust really exists this is likely for it to begin to look to its laurels.

Courtesies.

The courteous cordiale has been extended. The Royal and Ancient and St. Andrews has promised to alter, revise any rules in accordance with the United Golf Association and has reciprocates by agreeing to make any drastic innovation, such as the abolition of the stymie or the limitation of the use of the putter, without likewise extending the courtesies and consultations to us.

This is also strengthened by Britain's announcement that it certainly contest the international amateur championship with us, while a large contingent of American golfers are going over for the British amateur championship, forward Mo in June. These include Fred Herreschoff, Jr., runner-up on this side to Hilton, "Chick" Evans, and others.

Evans is regarded as one of the best drivers extant, and the Briton was only beaten at the last Hilton last year puts him in the front rank of the world's players.

Evans has been a runner-up in the United States championship, and in the last occasion was beaten by Hilton in 1911. Since then he has developed a very fine player, and his drives are now said to be long and straight. We certainly will have a better representative in point of weight and here's good luck to him.

The American Championship.

Let us see and say of the other championships that may come over here. The United States champions have also been invited to extend their visit to the western event, which takes place at Denver. The date of the latter has been set expressly that it may not conflict with the national event but allow of the visitors taking in both.

As the foreign players will be as far inland as Chicago, it will certainly be as far inland as Chicago, it will certainly come on to Denver, and they all express themselves as gratefully endeavoring to accept the invitation.

Professional Tournaments.

The biggest professional event of the year, "The News of the World" $2000 tournament is to take place on the Mid-Surrey links on October 2, 3 and 4. This is generally regarded as the professional championship of the world, for it always attracts the great professionals from near and far to a much greater extent than even the open championship. James Baird won it last year, with Edward Ray as the runner-up. Vardon, the open champion of the world, was put out in the semi-finals by James Braid after one of the most exciting matches in history.

But an earlier professional event in which great interest centers is the "Sphere and Tatler" foursomes on May 14, 15 and 16. Herd and Braid-beer won them last year. The number of players allowed to qualify from each country is strictly limited and Ireland has another handicap in that she is limited to two, against Wales's 4.

Then comes the Professional International at Muirfield, which is to follow immediately upon the heels of the Open Championship in order that the foreign visitors for both events can accomplish them in one visit.

Freak Golf.

Freak golf has received so many snubs from the great golf writers of the world that one wonders how Harry Vardon could dare to enter the lists. His latest achievement was to play from the hotel lawn at Le Touquet down to the sea front, a distance of ten furlongs, going "out" in 11 and "home," up-hill, in 14!

English Women's Championship.

This, the first English championship for women, is to take place at the Princess Club on April 22, and it is creating quite a wide interest. Any woman of English parentage is eligible from any part of the world, and the Scotch Miss Dorothy Campbell and the Irish Miss Leitch will be properly on their mettle to maintain their golfing prestige. It is noteworthy that so far the largest number of entries have come from Calcutta, India, which provides no less than nine contestants already.

Arctic Golf.

During England's recent experience of a good, old-fashioned winter, when for weeks the land was covered with snow, there was an illuminating outcry in the papers for a red ball! The golfers' enthusiasm was by no means quenched; not even two feet of snow brought him to the place where he regarded golf as out of the question for a day or two. His only disgust was at the fact that no maker had been enterprising enough to provide a red ball for this emergency. Pathetic stories of hurriedly painted balls are recorded from all parts of the country, and gory trails on favorite clubs tell their own sad tale of impatience while the paint dried.

No wonder the clergy have started preaching against golf in the pulpits, and large employers are rising up and declaring they will not employ a man who plays golf, since no man can serve two masters! No wonder the government ascribes its shortage of officers to the competition of golf! Very soon the game of games will be put in a class with opium and alcohol, such are its devastating fascinations.

Fully 1200 cars, worth $2,000,000, were sold during the week of the Omaha show, according to estimates compiled by dealers.

Sound Sense.

FARMING IDEA PROPER THING.

Coast League Finally Adopts Long-Deferred Scheme.

Expects Soon to Handle Its Own Optional Agreements.

Only Way It Can Cover Up Any Promising Players.

BY GREY OLIVER.

"I wish I had time to form a league up in the San Joaquin Valley," sighed Hap Hogan, the other day, as he stood looking at the big flock of young ball players he has on the Vernon pay roll. "I'll bet I could get protection for it and I'll make another bet that I could make $50,000 in five years. We ought to have such a league for the good of the Coast League if for nothing else.

"Why, if there was such a league now I could send it no less than ten players from the Vernon team."

In these statements Hap really makes the greatest base hits of his life and there is not a fan on the Coast who will not agree that the new Valley League opens big possibilities for the Coast League.

The big leagues have long since used the Eastern League and American Association as farms for players they could not use and it is high time the Coast League was getting busy along the same lines. Do you get me? There is no doubt in my mind but that at least a dozen probable diamonds in the rough are lost every year to the Coast League because it has no regular farming clubs.

Some of the Coast League teams have sent out men on optional agreements but the practice has not been a common one, for the very good reason that there did not seem to have been any effort made to locate such farms in advance and none of the magnates, with the exception of McCredie of Portland, had the money to expend on any minor club, for they have been a number of years recovering from the effects of the San Francisco earthquake.

The Coast League will have to come to the farm or "optional agreement" idea in order to protect itself from the ravages of the big leagues. Those organizations protect themselves and why should not every other league do the same? The baseball business, as it is run these days, is a big trust, even if Hermann does deny it, for competition appears to be strangled. The big leagues have entrenched themselves with rules and regulations and the Coast League will be forced sooner or later to do something to protect itself.

A farming league is the best thing and the Coast League is losing prestige and money as long as it does not secure one. The trip of Hogan and Berry to Fresno may result in something, however, and if they can organize such a league in the San Joaquin Valley they will have accomplished more for themselves and the league than they could by winning two pennants.

The St. Paul Fire Department has bought for $6000 a combination chemical engine, hook and ladder and hose-cart to carry twelve men.

Ford

The cost of an automobile is not what you pay for it, but what you keep on paying.

The car that shows the greatest economy of repairs, runs the longest on a set of tires, rides the farthest on a gallon of fuel, is the best buy, provided the initial cost is right.

That car is the FORD MODEL T. It is the lightest weight motor car in the world—size, power and capacity considered—60 pounds to each horse power; is built throughout of vibration-resisting Vanadium steel; goes 25 miles on one gallon of gasoline, and from 5,000 to 10,000 miles on a single set of tires.

Don't buy a Ford just because its initial cost is right. Buy it because the cost of maintenance stays right.

Ford branches and dealers in all cities, towns and villages are at your elbow with Ford Service for Ford Owners.

Ford Model T Touring Car, 4 cylinders, 5 passengers, fully equipped, f.o.b. Detroit..... $690

THE OUT-DOOR BOY

CONDUCTED BY ARTHUR LEE

We are publishing today the personal records of the twenty boys who have made the best showing so far in The Times Camp series of track and field meets. There are ten boys listed in both junior and senior divisions. These records are on file in The Times office and will be preserved as official grammar school records until they are broken by some one else. The "high ten" in each division will receive honorable mention from time to time, in these columns. These records are published as a result of a continuous demand from grammar school boys from all over Southern California to know what boys are credited with the best performances in the various track and field events.

VICTOR LANEY.

Victor Laney (senior) of Thirtieth-street school has a tie record in the 100-yard dash with Frank Worthen of Long Beach at 11 3-5s. While his other records are not all the best, they are ahead of all city boys so far. Victor's record in the 220-yard dash is 26 1-5s, the 352-yard dash 43 2-5s.; high jump, 4ft. 1in.; broad jump, 14ft. 3in.

FRANK WORTHEN.

Frank Worthen (senior,) Long Beach, so far has more records to his credit than any other senior. Frank stepped the 50-yard dash in 6 flat, the 100-yard dash in 11 2-5s, the 220 in 24 1-5s, put the shot (seven pounds) 41ft. 10in, and got 17ft. 2½ in. away from the broad jump take off.

HAROLD M'CRACKEN.

Harold McCracken (senior,) Long Beach, won a trip to The Times Camp by his ability to keep anybody else from getting between him and the fleet-footed Worthen in the sprints, and beating him out in 352 and establishing a record of 46s. flat for the fifth of a mile. His jump of five feet in air gave him that record also.

RAY OSTERGARD.

Ray Ostergard (senior,) Palms, put the shot 39ft. 11in., reached 14ft. 7in. in the broad jump.

ADAIR JAMESON.

Adair Jameson (senior) got to the tape in the 50-yard dash in 6 1-5s.

Bryant Dodge, Thirtieth-street school, holds the city shot-put record with a heave of 41ft. (seven pounds.) Guy Allen (senior,) Santa Monica, has a mark of 6 3-5s. to his credit in the 50-yard dash.

Frank Ranier (senior,) Palms, is credited on our book with doing the 220 on a circular track in 29s.

Dewey Manley ran the 100-yard dash in 11 2-5s.

FRED HANEY.

Fred Haney (junior,) Thirtieth-street school, holds a tie record of 6 2-5s. with Merriatt Van Sant of Santa Monica in the 50-yard dash. Fred's other records are 11 4-5s. in the 100, 29 2-5s. in the 220-yard dash, 36ft. in the shot-put.

JIM BLUETT.

Jim Bluett (junior) is coming to be a strong contender with Haney for sprint honors, and is already outdoing him in the 352 and high jump. Jim's time in the 352 is 48 1-5s. and his high jump record is 4ft. 2in.

MERRIATT VAN SANT.

Van Sant (junior,) the juvenile star of the Santa Monica, meet only entered three events, but has a record of 6 2-5s. in the 50-yard dash; 12s. flat in the 100, and 4ft. 3in. in the high jump.

JAMES HOLLINGSWORTH.

James Hollingsworth (junior) of the Jefferson school annexed one good record of 31s. in the 220-yard dash. He made the 100 in 12s.

ERNEST HARTMAN.

Ernest Hartman (junior,) Jefferson school, won his trip to The Times Camp by putting the shot 29ft. 8in., high jumping 4ft. 2in., broad jumping 14ft. 2in.

VIVIAN RATCHWIG.

Vivian Ratchwig (junior,) San Pedro, won his trip to The Times Camp by doing the 50 in 6 3-5s., the 220 in 28 2-5s., the 352 in 48 1-5s. and jumping 14ft. 3in. in the broad, and putting the shot 30ft. 2in.

LELAND BARTON.

Leland Barton (junior,) Long Beach, won a trip to The Times Camp by chasing Ratchwig around the track and winning alternately. His time in the 50 was 6 3-5s. and in the 100 12 1-5s. Jack Kilburn also ran the 50 in 6 1-5s.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ATHLETIC LEAGUE.

A new Sunday-school Athletic League is now being organized among nearly every Sunday-school in the city for the purpose of promoting all kinds of athletic sports among the Sunday-school boys of every denomination.

Y. P. Rothwell has been actively engaged in familiarizing the athletic leaders in each Sunday-school with the plans of organization. The first of a great series of athletic contests that are scheduled will be a big union track meet of all the teams in the Southern California Sunday-school Athletic League at the new Y.M.C.A. field, Saturday, April 13, at 2 p.m. This meet will be held under the auspices of the Track and Field Committee of the Southern Pacific Branch of the A.A.U. The boys are to be divided into four classes (according to weight,) as follows: Eighty-five-pound class, 95-pound class; 115-pound class, and unlimited. There will be gold, silver and bronze medals, and a four-day trip to The Times Camp at Catalina Island to the boy in each division that scores the highest number of points in the meet, in addition to the cup trophy for the team that scores the greatest number of points. The meet should be a hummer and will do a great deal to promote clean sport in the Sunday-schools.

Resolutions of thanks to The Times were passed at a recent meeting of the new league, expressing their appreciation of the four Times Camp trips that are offered. The copy of which follows:]

"We take this occasion to thank The Times for the offer of Times Camp prizes to the boys making the highest number of points in each division in the Sunday-school meet, April 13; also the publicity they are giving the meet and the offer of a cabinet in which to keep athletic records. Arthur Lee, conductor of the 'Out-Door Boy,' is a whole-souled booster of athletics for boys, whose vigorous campaign for promotion of clean sport for boys is deserving of public appreciation."

SOUTH PARK BAPTIST.

The new South Park Baptist Church will have a basketball room. Pastor C. O. Johnson is an old college athlete and will go heart and soul into the athletic training of his boys for the Sunday-school meet. Ten athletic pastors make 500 athletic boys and 500 athletic boys makes a crackerjack meet.

ORCHARD AVENUE.

D. H. Hinck, an old William Jewell athlete and baseball fiend, will "big brother" the Orchard Baptist Sunday-school squads. Black has not forgotten that he was once a boy and that baseball was meat and drink to him then. He will see that the Orchard Baptist bare knees line up in due form at the crack of the gun, April 13.

IMMANUEL PRESBYTERIAN.

Immanuel Presbyterian Sunday-school bunch will be "on the mark" when the gun fires off the first fifty-yard dash at the Y.M.C.A. Field, out on Stephenson avenue, at 2 p.m., April 13. Arthur Lee is receiving the old guard at this point. The enthusiasm there don't wash out. The bunch is catching the old speed fever again and will make a mighty push for the leading places in the Union Meet. Paul McWilliams, who won the A.A.U. grammar school hundred, is a member of the school, and is boosting for the meet.

ATHERTON BAPTIST.

Bert Smith has the Atherton Baptist squad training for the big Sunday-school meet. Bert is an old quarter-miler, who used to be hard to catch. He knows the game and his boys are going after the trophy with his old-time enthusiasm for athletic sports.

John Alexander, expert on boys' work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, indorses the Sunday-school athletics. Athletics appeals to 75 per cent. of the boys and is the most attractive of all activities with the Men and Religion Forward Movement, Y.M.C.A., A.A.U., and the daily newspapers pulling together, the Sunday-school Athletic Meet should be a great success from standpoint of entries. The programme is full of dash and popular events and the experience of the "men behind" in pulling off track meets warrants the prediction that spectators will pronounce this the great athletic festival of the year.

PRACTICAL WORK.

Model training institutes open to athletic leaders of all denominations will be held Thursday at 4:30 and 7:30 p.m. at First Baptist Church, Seventh and Flower, and Saturday at 4:30 and 7:30 p.m. at First Congregational Church, Ninth and Hope. Admission free. Free information about the Sunday-school Athletic Meet will be given.

Sunday morning the athletic plans will be outlined by Y. P. Rothwell at the Church of the Messiah and Memorial Baptist Church.

NUGGET OF GOLD.

A nugget of gold found where least expected was our experience yesterday in passing back through St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral Episcopal Church, No. 523 South Olive street. We ran right into an athletic court. The boys were playing indoor baseball. Ernest Douglas, choir master, was umpiring. Here is a wise leader and a wise church. Mr. Douglas calls his athletic club the Safety Valve. He showed us the rules printed on a large card, the name is "The Choir Boys' Athletic Club." The boys are young. None have yet reached the change of voice period where the voice slips from a chisel to a screw. In consequence of our visit, these boys will be in the Sunday-school meet for the school trophy, the medals for first, second and third places, and The Times Camp vacation trips for the boy in each class scoring the most points in the various events.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The First Baptist Church has a thriving athletic club which meets Friday evenings in a large room equipped for basketball. Preparations are under way for shower baths and other equipment. Ray Southwick is in charge, and is preparing a bunch of athletes for the big Sunday-school meet at Y.M.C.A. field, April 13, at 2 p.m. He is installing jumping-beds and jumping-standards on the grounds back of the church. The alley is lighted for night practice. Dr. Caesius M. Carter, the pastor, is a friend of the boys and Sunday-school athletics.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL.

Four of the staunch friends of Sunday-school athletes are Dr. Day and Harold S. Tuttle, director of boys' work of the First Congregational. Their boys will enter the big meet and will have electric-lighted ground adjacent to the church for training headquarters. This church has been selected as a meeting place for the Congregational Athletic League composed of pastors, superintendents and athletic representatives of the denomination which meets at 8 p.m., the first Monday of each month.

PILGRIM CONGREGATIONAL.

A. D. Cooper is in charge of boy athletics at Pilgrim Congregational, Forty-sixth and Normandie. He gives Saturday afternoon to the boys, conducting their activities on the church grounds. Cooper is an ex-Y. M.C.A. athlete and will have a bunch of husky athletes in the eight-five, 100 and 115-pound, and unlimited classes. His prospects are good for several medals and his boys say they will land the trophy for most points. With the enthusiastic support of the pastor, Rev. Tyler Dennett, these boys are going to be heard from April 13.

FREMONT BAPTIST.

Will M. Banbury, manager of Fremont Baptist Athletic Club writes for entry blanks for the big meet and states that they have just closed a successful season of indoor baseball championship games and are now entering upon the basketball series. Last year they strung electric lights across the church yard and have been enabled, thereby, to play ball at night. Fremont also built a room at the back of the church for athletic and social uses. The girls have made use of it also and have a thriving gym club.

CHURCH OF MESSIAH.

Rev. Stanley Ross Fisher is an old Yale athlete. He led the bunch in jumping, and the church of Messiah Sunday-school boys will jump, run and throw for the Sunday-schol trophy in the union meet, April 13. He will be "on the job" with his boys at their weekly tryouts from now on, and the old familiar "get on your marks! Get set!" (bang) will be heard on Saturday afternoons in the rear of the church. Lok out for C. of M., S.S.A.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST.

Rev. A. S. Barrier of Memorial Baptist Church will have a bunch of athletes entered in the meet for Times Camp trips.

Indoor Ball.

When these boys clashed Fourteenth-street copped the plum and went home smiling. They won by a score of 15 to 7, which was an easy victory for the winners. Twentieth-street needs a little more system and then they ought to be able to re-catch the fruit by playing hard and steady.

Indoor Ball.

Castelar won a victory over the Custer-street boys by a score of 7 to 6. The ball was kept well in the hands of the players and runs were hard to get. Much rivalry is shown between these schools.

Basketball.

Hurrah for Fourteenth-street again. They won from Custer in a basketball game—score 44 to 6. As we all know that Custer lost his last fight with the Indians, it seems as though Fourteenth-street were a little more than mere red men as they completely wiped them off the floor.

Fourteenth-street seniors also massacred Thirtieth-street seniors by a score of 13 to 11. They took their scalps when they entered the second period. The Thirtieth-street boys have a nice little squad of basketball heavers and are more or less classy when shooting for the basket, but evidently Fourteenth-street punctured their class with their victory.

Hike!

We all like to stroll around the mountains and take long walks into the woods when we get a chance, but the Custer school boys will be the lucky ones when they make a hike to Mt. Wilson. They will start by car and go to Sierra Madre and from there will journey to the mount. Much fun is expected, as when they reach the top a snowball battle will take place on the summit. The boys will choose sides and then go at it, throwing the frozen dew at each other with much force and speed. Other sports will take place along with the snowball battle, which will keep the boys thinking what's coming next. Mr. Jessen and E. Cursey will take charge of the boys and see that no one is lost, strayed or stolen while upon the glacial dome of Wilson. They will return in the evening and probably go right to their beds, as sleep is always a welcome guest when home from a hike.

Handball.

Fourteenth-street school won a series of games from Twentieth-street. A. Sims and G. Howitz formed the Fourteenth-street boys, while Joe Blum and Macrhetti formed the team for Twentieth-street. Felix and Beasley acted as umpires and the games were interesting all through. The scores for Fourteenth were 11 to 1 and 11 to 5; while the victory that Twentieth-street won was 10 to 11. These teams will play other teams of their class, and want games.

Page Military Academy.

The boys of the Page Military Academy walloped their faculty in the national pastime to the tune of 8 to 7 last Wednesday afternoon. Dutcher and La Port were the hide swatters for the profs., while Ybarrando, kid brother of the former St. Vincent's star, was the scientific heaver who kept the faculty batsmen puzzled. The line-up was:

Students — Wilkenson, catcher; Ybarrando, pitcher; Howard, first base; Botiller, second base; Preston, third base; Rieder, shortstop; Mead, left field; Balestier, center field; Shietz, right field.

Faculty—La Port, catcher; Dutcher, pitcher; Stewart, first base; Gibbs (captain,) second base; Lee, third base; Humphrey, shortstop; Pierce, left field; Huise, center field; Smith, right field.

Baseball.

The Twentieth-street boys defeated the Seventh-street fellows by a score of 21 to 13. Twentieth took the lead in the first part and kept it all through the game. Much excitement was encountered during the middle of the game, when it looked as though Seventh street would take the lead, but was unsuccessful in gaining the victory.

Indoor Ball.

The Olive and Grafton special schools played a good ball game which ended in the plum for Olive. It was played on Olive grounds and much class was shown by both teams. The score was 9 to 5 in favor of the Olive team, and cheering was often heard from the rooters that stood for each school and also those who witnessed some of the spectacular playing.

Indoor Ball.

Twentieth-street put their heads on the block when they tried to cop the game they played Wednesday with Fourteenth-street boys. The former waited on their own diamond until the butchers arrived and then went at it with great speed until they got into a rally when Fourteenth-street boys walked away with the game. It was a hard lost game to Twentieth-street, but as Fourteenth-street is taking all that comes before them, of course they couldn't afford to let the losers have this one.

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

The Zenith in Tires

This tire—the final result of 18 years of tire making—marks the utmost in pneumatic tires.

It now outsells all others.

Over one million have been used to date, on some 200,000 cars.

In the past 24 months the demand for this tire has increased by 500 per cent.

All because it cuts tire cost one-half.

The Hookless Tires

The old-type tire, since bicycle days, has hooked into the rim flange.

No-Rim-Cut tires do not.

Your removable rim flanges are simply reversed when you adopt this tire. They present a rounded edge to the tire. And this rounded edge never rim-cuts a tire.

The Extra Size

We make these tires 10 per cent. over the rated size. This to give you an over-tired car—to save the blow-outs due to overloading.

This 10 per cent. oversize, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent. to the tire mileage.

This oversize feature, plus the No-Rim-Cut feature, cuts tire upkeep in two. Tens of thousands of users have proved that.

Yet these patent tires now cost no more than other standard tires.

We Control It

We control by patents the only way to make this type of tire satisfactory.

Our Tire Book tells you why.

Thus the demand for this new type centers on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

These tires have been proved out by 200,000 users. And any of them will tell you to adopt them.

Emergency Deals.

WHY JACKSON WAS TRADED.

Gave Up Famous Joe in Order to Win Pennant.

Mack Took Chance When They Got Beaumont.

Connie Got Downey for Lehr for Same Reason.

In the history of baseball many times baseball managers have obtained players for emergency and to build on. For instance, a manager will see that he has the chance for a pennant. One of his positions is covered by a player of indifferent ability. The youth may show enough, but lacks steadiness and poise at critical moments. What does the manager do? Release or chance the youth, and get a veteran player from another team? It doesn't matter if the veteran is past his prime, he will take him just the same, for he realizes that he will at least do the right thing at the right time.

The best exemplification of this method is Connie Mack's experience in 1910. Connie had a fine chance for the pennant, but was convinced that his chances were jeopardized by a weakness in left field. Neither the veteran Murphy nor the youth Heitmuller could fill the bill, and Connie in midseason had to scratch around for a suitable man.

It is said that he could obtain Bris Lord but at the expense of giving up Eddie Collins, Mack's property, who was a sensation in the Southern league. Connie realized Jackson's value, but he also realized that he needed a reliable man in 1910, if he was going to win the pennant. He decided to wait until Jackson was ripe. Then the trade was made. Lord came to Philadelphia and at once bolstered the shaky outfield. The result was that the Athletics won the pennant and the world's championship in 1910. Mack had lost Jackson by winning this pennant, but he obtained a dependable man in Lord, who last year added to the .300 class in hitting.

This was not the first time Mack had worked this plan. In 1907 Mack gave Harry Lord and $10,000 in cash to Boston for Jimmy Collins. He knew that he had a chance for championship, and made the deal to strengthen his club at third base, his weakest spot.

Mack was not as fortunate as in 1910. He didn't win the pennant, but was nosed out by Detroit. However, the addition of Collins served the purpose of pitting the Mackmen in front. His coming here added new strength to the team, and Collins was thousands of dollars into the clutches. But Mack failed to make the deal. The club would have made very little money that year, but as it was it was a fortune.

Mack Chance is quick to see the value of the emergency player. He had Outfielder Beaumont after that player had been turned down by Cincinnati and Boston. Chance knew that he had no permanent asset in Beaumont, but that he might prove valuable in a pinch.

As a matter of fact, Beaumont gave Chance to win a pennant in 1914, and did. Pitcher Lew Richie, whom Chance purchased Kitty League from the Phillies. Chance thought that Bransfield, a veteran first baseman, might save the pennant for the Cubs.

It was unfortunate that Bransfield broke his leg in one of his first games with Chicago, and had no opportunity to help the Cubs make a whirlwind finish. But Chance had played his hand right, and it was no fault of his that Kitty should be disabled.

The Phillies know that Downey isn't a star, but they realize that he ought to be a steadier man than Lehr in a pinch. And the deal was made. Lehr may some day become a much more valuable player than Downey, but in Downey is the man they want in an emergency.

GOLF NOTES.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

On the eighteenth annual meeting of the U.S.G.A. has been an unusually interesting one for vouching decisions. The most startling was the conviction expressed by Alexander Britton of the Chevy Chase Club that there was a world-wide golf ball trust which was responsible for the ever-rising price of balls, and a resolution was passed authorizing the Executive Committee to investigate the patents under which the balls are manufactured and sold, with a view to establishing the advisability of adopting a standard ball.

England and Scotland are about to take similar resolutions, according to the London golf papers, so that if such a trust really exists this is the time for it to begin to look to its laurels.

Amateur Courtesies.

A most astute cordiale has been established. The Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews has promised not to make or revise any rules in future without first consulting the United States Golf Association and the latter reciprocates by agreeing not to make any drastic innovation, such as the abolition of the stymie or the prohibition of the use of the schoolboy, without likewise expressing opinions and consultations on St. Andrews.

This amity is also strengthened by Harriman Fraser's announcement that he will certainly contest the amateur championship next year, while a large contingent of American golfers are going over for the British amateur championship at Westward Ho in June. These include Fred Herreschoff, Jr., Fraser's runner-up on this side last year, Hilton, "Chick" Evans, and others. "Chick" Evans, indeed is regarded as one of the most powerful drivers extant, and the only man that can be said to have only beaten at the game by Hilton last year puts him in the finest rank of the world's golfers.

Evans has since been runner-up in the United States championship, and in the former occasion was beaten by Chandler in 1911. Since then he has become a very fine player, and his friends are now said to be quite as his driving. We certainly should have a better representative than Evans except and here's good luck to him.

The Western Amateur Championship. Should Hilton and any of the other British players that may come over to play for the United States championship have also been invited to extend their visit to the western event, which takes place at Denver. The date of the latter has been set expressly that it may not conflict with the national event but allow of the visitors taking in both.

As the foreign players will be as far inland as Chicago, it will certainly be as far inland as Chicago, it will certainly come on to Denver, and they all express themselves as gratefully endeavoring to accept the invitation.

Professional Tournaments.

The biggest professional event of the year, "The News of the World" $2000 tournament is to take place on the Mid-Surrey links on October 2, 3 and 4. This is generally regarded as the professional championship of the world, for it always attracts the great professionals from near and far to a much greater extent than even the open championship. James Baird won it last year, with Edward Ray as the runner-up. Vardon, the open champion of the world, was put out in the semi-finals by James Braid after one of the most exciting matches in history.

But an earlier professional event in which great interest centers is the "Sphere and Tatler" foursomes on May 14, 15 and 16. Herd and Braid-beer won them last year. The number of players allowed to qualify from each country is strictly limited and Ireland has another handicap in that she is limited to two, against Wales's 4.

Then comes the Professional International at Muirfield, which is to follow immediately upon the heels of the Open Championship in order that the foreign visitors for both events can accomplish them in one visit.

Freak Golf.

Freak golf has received so many snubs from the great golf writers of the world that one wonders how Harry Vardon could dare to enter the lists. His latest achievement was to play from the hotel lawn at Le Touquet down to the sea front, a distance of ten furlongs, going "out" in 11 and "home," up-hill, in 14!

English Women's Championship.

This, the first English championship for women, is to take place at the Princess Club on April 22, and it is creating quite a wide interest. Any woman of English parentage is eligible from any part of the world, and the Scotch Miss Dorothy Campbell and the Irish Miss Leitch will be properly on their mettle to maintain their golfing prestige. It is noteworthy that so far the largest number of entries have come from Calcutta, India, which provides no less than nine contestants already.

Arctic Golf.

During England's recent experience of a good, old-fashioned winter, when for weeks the land was covered with snow, there was an illuminating outcry in the papers for a red ball! The golfers' enthusiasm was by no means quenched; not even two feet of snow brought him to the place where he regarded golf as out of the question for a day or two. His only disgust was at the fact that no maker had been enterprising enough to provide a red ball for this emergency. Pathetic stories of hurriedly painted balls are recorded from all parts of the country, and gory trails on favorite clubs tell their own sad tale of impatience while the paint dried.

No wonder the clergy have started preaching against golf in the pulpits, and large employers are rising up and declaring they will not employ a man who plays golf, since no man can serve two masters! No wonder the government ascribes its shortage of officers to the competition of golf! Very soon the game of games will be put in a class with opium and alcohol, such are its devastating fascinations.

Fully 1200 cars, worth $2,000,000, were sold during the week of the Omaha show, according to estimates compiled by dealers.

Sound Sense.

FARMING IDEA PROPER THING.

Coast League Finally Adopts Long-Deferred Scheme.

Expects Soon to Handle Its Own Optional Agreements.

Only Way It Can Cover Up Any Promising Players.

BY GREY OLIVER.

"I wish I had time to form a league up in the San Joaquin Valley," sighed Hap Hogan, the other day, as he stood looking at the big flock of young ball players he has on the Vernon pay roll.

"I'll bet I could get protection for it and I'll make another bet that I could make $50,000 in five years. We ought to have such a league for the good of the Coast League if for nothing else.

"Why, if there was such a league now I could send it no less than ten players from the Vernon team."

In these statements Hap really makes the greatest base hits of his life and there is not a fan on the Coast who will not agree that the new Valley League opens big possibilities for the Coast League.

The big leagues have long since used the Eastern League and American Association as farms for players they could not use and it is high time the Coast League was getting busy along the same lines. Do you get me? There is no doubt in my mind but that at least a dozen probable diamonds in the rough are lost every year to the Coast League because it has no regular farming clubs.

Some of the Coast League teams have sent out men on optional agreements but the practice has not been a common one, for the very good reason that there did not seem to have been any effort made to locate such farms in advance and none of the magnates, with the exception of McCredie of Portland, had the money to expend on any minor club, for they have been a number of years recovering from the effects of the San Francisco earthquake.

The Coast League will have to come to the farm or "optional agreement" idea in order to protect itself from the ravages of the big leagues. Those organizations protect themselves and why should not every other league do the same? The baseball business, as it is run these days, is a big trust, even if Hermann does deny it, for competition appears to be strangled. The big leagues have entrenched themselves with rules and regulations and the Coast League will be forced sooner or later to do something to protect itself.

A farming league is the best thing and the Coast League is losing prestige and money as long as it does not secure one. The trip of Hogan, and Berry to Fresno may result in something, however, and if they can organize such a league in the San Joaquin Valley they will have accomplished more for themselves and the league than they could by winning two pennants.

The St. Paul Fire Department has bought for $6000 a combination chemical engine, hook and ladder and hose-cart to carry twelve men.

Ford

The cost of an automobile is not what you pay for it, but what you keep on paying.

The car that shows the greatest economy of repairs, runs the longest on a set of tires, rides the farthest on a gallon of fuel, is the best buy, provided the initial cost is right.

That car is the FORD MODEL T. It is the lightest weight motor car in the world—size, power and capacity considered—60 pounds to each horse power; is built throughout of vibration-resisting Vanadium steel; goes 25 miles on one gallon of gasoline, and from 5,000 to 10,000 miles on a single set of tires.

Don't buy a Ford just because its initial cost is right. Buy it because the cost of maintenance stays right.

Ford branches and dealers in all cities, towns and villages are at your elbow with Ford Service for Ford Owners.

Blessed Memories.

POLO PLAYERS OF THE PAST.

F. J. Mackey Is Dean of All the Real Ones.

Every Team He Brought Out Was a Winner.

California Now the Mecca of Winter Players.

BY MARTIN REDMAYNE.

California is now becoming the recognized Mecca of winter polo-playing enthusiasts, and it may be interesting to revive the memory of some of those experts in the galloping game who first visited us, and to whose practice and precept not a little of the present flourishing condition of polo in California is due.

The first name that occurs to me is that of the grand old man of polo, F. J. Mackey. Though having come to California for more than ten years in succession, he might more be classed as a resident than a visitor. Mr. Mackey says he is not going to play polo any more, though even last season he put up the game of his life playing for Coronado against Pasadena. But his prowess in and his generous support of the game here are too well known to need dilating on. Suffice it to say that as a veteran he undoubtedly holds the record and in his younger days he was good enough for any company.

The next visitor I remember was T. B. Dryborough, in his younger days a cool and resourceful back with a great knowledge of the game. Though somewhat overshadowed as a player by the fame of his younger brother, "W. J.," who met his death on the polo field—yet as the author of the standard work on polo, he was listened to with reverence mingled with awe by novices who met him out here.

In the following year, I think, Mr. Mackey brought out his first team from England, consisting of Capt. Nell Haig, Messrs. C. T. Garland, Williams and himself. This team, with Mr. Ezra in place of Mr. Williams, defeated all comers in California, including Burlingame. Of Nell Haig one might write pages. He rode well over 200 pounds, but being a fine horseman with beautiful hands, his ponies did not feel his weight as much as that of many a lighter man. I saw him ride a little Argentine pony three periods in the final of the Inter-Regimental at Burlingham and in those days they were ten minute periods. A terrific hitter, he always played back, and was the cheeriest and most encouraging back for a beginner to play in front of. He had rather a severe stammer, which on one occasion got him into trouble. Having missed the ball in front of the ladies' seats at Ranelagh and let out a big d—n, he was reproved by the umpire, but repeated the offence a minute later and excused himself thus, "Awful sorry, old chap, but I began to say it the other side of the ground and couldn't finish it till I got to this side, don't you know."

MACKEY'S SECOND TEAM.

The next team brought out by Mr. Mackey included the late Capt. C. C. de Crespigny, F. Menzies and Sir G. Prescott. They defeated the Riverside team, 10 to 0, but Riverside did not feel quite so bad about this when they subsequently beat Burlingame 10 to 4.

This was the best team but one that ever visited California in my opinion. Capt. De Crespigny, when well mounted, was one of the best backs of his day. A fine horseman, both on the polo ground, between the flags and across country, he could ride anything and positively preferred a jumping pony to a smooth, galloping one.

In this, his Number 3, Mr. Menzies did not resemble him, for though a finished player and a beautiful dribbler, he would ride nothing but a made pony. On such, however, he was a hard man to catch, being as slippery as an eel. Sir G. Prescott was a useful one and altogether this was a well-balanced and a fine team.

The first English polo player to visit Coronado was, I think, Frank Bellcville. He was then recovering from a serious accident and did not play much. He, however, umpired on several occasions and greatly amused the crowd by saying in his mildest tones to a hard-riding Los Angeles player, who was rather free with his elbows: "I say, you really mustn't do that; you play like a blooming prize fighter."

The following year saw the beginning of the Canadian invasion, composed of Maj. C. G. Ross, now almost a Californian, and T. B. Jenkinson.

The latter, a beautiful horseman and very busy player, got more out of slow ponies than most men, and incidentally broke up more sideboards in a day than most clubs in a season, by his way of galloping over and onto them.

The team brought out by Mr. Mackey in 1908 included F. A. Gill, "Dan" Ross and Maj. "Austy" Rotherham, who are fresh in our memories. The latter never really showed his true form in California, being handicapped by a sprained wrist, but even so, he was a wonderful shot at goal, and rode with the dash and abandon characteristic of all Irish polo players. "Dan" Ross, of the silver hair and charming brogue, was a typical, all-round Irish sportsman and like his teammates, was very popular with the fair sex. While the rest of the two teams would be waiting for the throw-in, Dan would be engaged in a strenuous flirtation on the sidelines, till his captain shouted in stentorian tones, "Oh, come on Dan, break away from the ladies."

Of "Gillon" it is enough to say that he is one of the best and most popular players who ever came here and there is no more hard-working or foxier No. 3 now playing, while as a manager of tournaments his tact is unrivalled.

The Bryn Mawr team from Philadelphia also played at Coronado this year, composed of Messrs. Alec Brown, W. T. Huhn, W. Drury and C. Wheeler. A fine team, but indifferently mounted, they were distinguished for their hard riding and good stick work. Drury and Wheeler being especially good, but were beaten by both the English team and Burlinghame.

In the following year, Gill returned, accompanied by Maj. Lee and Capt. Hurndall of the Twentieth Hussars and Maj. Hobson of the Twelfth Lancers, all bringing their own ponies. They beat every team in California with the greatest ease and showed themselves the finest team ever soen on this Coast. Maj. Lee, whose regiment under his leadership had twice won the interregimental, is probably the best back who has been seen here and with "Crillon," No. 3; Hurndall, a dashing lightweight, No. 2, and Hobson, a clever and unselfish No. 1, they were a very hard combination, besides being always religiously in training.

This year also witnessed the appearance and sad death at Coronado of a very fine young Canadian player, Dustin Freeman, who if he had lived, would undoubtedly have risen to the front rank.

The next year saw the advent of Lord Tweedmouth (now again with us,) and Lord Innes-Kerr from England, both powerful heavyweights, the latter the No. 2 of the Blues—last year the best team in England—and of Malcolm Stevenson from the East. The latter, one of the finest players I have ever seen, is destined infallibly to represent America against England in the future. A beautiful hitter, all-round, he rides a nice weight, is always busy and as quick as a cat.

This pretty well exhausts the list of visitors who have played much in California of recent years. It would be hard, indeed, to rank them in order of merit, as some, alas, are dead, and some have given up the game, but they make a list of good players and good sportsmen it would be hard to beat, and to them, one and all, California polo players owe a lasting debt of gratitude.

Very Attractive.

BIG MONEY FOR HARNESS RACES.

MANY RICH PURSES OFFERED IN WESTERN CIRCUIT.

Detroit and Kalamazoo Head the List, With Cleveland and Dallas Next in Importance—Final Meet of the Season Is to Be Held at Phoenix First Week in November.

Last week the stewards of the Great Western circuit convened in Chicago and organized the following schedule for 1912.

Date.	Place.	Prize money.
July 2-5—Marshall, Mich.		$ 10,000
July 8-12—Grand Rapids, Mich.		25,000
July 15-19—Kalamazoo, Mich.		40,000
July 22-26—Detroit, Mich.		40,000
July 29-Aug. 2—Cleveland, O.		30,000
Aug. 5-9—Decatur, Ill.		15,000
Aug. 13-16—Peoria, Ill.		15,000
Aug. 20-23—Galesburg, Ill.		15,000
Aug. 26-30—Des Moines, Iowa		15,000
Sept. 2-6—Hamline, Minn.		25,000
Sept. 9-13—Milwaukee, Wis.		20,000
Sept. 16-20—Open.
Sept. 23-27—St. Louis, Mo.		25,000
Sept. 30-Oct. 4—Sedalia, Mo.		22,000
Oct. 7-11—Springfield, Ill.		25,000
Oct. 7-11—Muskogee, Okla.		12,000
Oct. 15-18—Dallas, Tex.		20,000
Nov. 4-12—Phoenix, Ariz.		20,000
		$385,000

Several new members appear for the first time, including the opening one, Marshall, Mich., whose dates are July 2-5. St. Louis, Mo., comes in with a strong meeting of grand circuit caliber, giving $25,000 in stakes and purses. Sedalia, whose meeting is given in connection with the Missouri State fair, also is a newcomer; likewise the Iowa State fair, whose meeting is held at Des Moines. There have been several other changes in the schedule, but these three towns constitute the new members admitted.

Dallas, Tex., comes in with $20,000 for their State fair meeting, this being the largest amount given in Texas in the history of the harness racing. As usual, the circuit will close at Phoenix, Ariz., where the first State fair of the new commonwealth will be held.

A perusual of the circuit line-up gives an impression of its extent and importance, no less than $385,000, being scheduled to be awarded for harness racing. There is but one week's intermission in the circuit, that being September 16-20, and it is announced that this dat is likely to be claimed.

It will be seen that three half-mile tracks are represented in the circuit—that of Marshall, Des Moines and Muskogee; but all these are first-class half-mile tracks, and will give meetings of Great Western circuit caliber.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEET.

Y.M.C.A. Field Will Be Scene of First League Contest of the Year. Under Auspices of A.A.U.

The first annual track and field meet of the Southern California Sunday School Athletic League will be held on the new Y.M.C.A. field Saturday morning, April 6, the first race starting at nine o'clock.

This promises to be one of the greatest junior field days of recent years, and as there is no scholarship requirement and the classes are divided into the four following sections, 85 pounds, 100 pounds, 115 pounds and the unlimited class, there is every reason to believe that there will be a goodly array of talent ranging from the boy of the lower grades of the grammar school to the clever performer of the high school track squad.

Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the place winners in each event, and the competition will be so arranged as to attract an army of coming stars.

The athletic interest created among the school boys of Southern California by the Times Camp meets will add materially to the great Sunday School League affair. Practically every grammar school athlete in this end of the State has taken up track sport since the Times series was first announced, and the flying start will be a great help in the arranging of affairs in this meet of April 6.

An entry fee of five cents will be charged for each race. This sum will go to help defray expenses of the meet, such as the printing of entry blanks, and purchase of medals.

The whole field day programme will be held under the auspices of the track and field commission of the Amateur Athletic Union. Y. P. Rothwell, who has charge of the athletic work in all the Sunday Schools of the Los Angeles Church Federation, will give practically all his time to the coming contests, and his long experience gives a certain sure success aspect to the great undertaking.

The events will be, 50 yards dash for 85 and 100 pound class. 60 yard run for 85 and 100 pound class. 70 yard run for 85 and 100 pound class, 100 yard dash for 115 pounds and unlimited classes. Broad jump, high jump, 8 pound shot put.

A 220 yard relay race will be run by 4 men teams of the 85 pound class; 440 relay for 100 pounders; the same distance will be allotted to the 115 pound quartettes and eight men teams of the unlimited class will run the 880.

Entries can be filed with H. H. Eling, 435 South Spring street or at the Sporting desk of the Times.

Needed Innovation.

PLEA FOR POOR GOLFER OF VERY LIMITED MEANS.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

GOLF is at once the most fascinating and the most expensive of games and on every hand I am meeting men that would dearly love to enjoy its delights, but are entirely barred from doing so on account of the expense.

Here golf is an impossible luxury unless one is a member of one or the other of the country clubs. There is no course where the stranger may go with his bag of clubs and, upon payment of a small green fee, enjoy a day's golf without being beholden to anybody. If he should be invited down to one of the clubs by a friend he is haunted by the knowledge that his friend's hospitality is a very costly affair and that he will be the most objectionable form of sponger if he takes advantage of that friend's invitations to any extent.

And Los Angeles and Pasadena are full of good-class men and, in many cases, good golfers, who have to forego the delights of their favorite game on account of the terrible expense with which it is attended.

In Scotland old St. Andrews prides itself upon the fact that its course is free to all for nine months in the year—only during July, August and September are green fees charged and then for the purpose of avoiding congestion rather than for making money. Yet the great old club loses no prestige in the world and its legitimate members have a status that no other club can provide.

It would be impossible for any local club to be generous to that extent, for the upkeep is far more costly here, and the conditions totally different. But it has occurred to me—and tentatively I place the suggestion before the three large local clubs—that it might perhaps be possible to allow one day a week, or perhaps two a month, upon which non-members could be granted the privileges of their links upon the payment of a nominal fee, without the necessity of an introduction. If each of the clubs found itself able to accord this privilege and arranged each for different days the golfers of small means would derive an inestimable boon and one which I feel very confident would be most gratefully appreciated.

Even under those circumstances golf is costly enough, the balls and the clubs requiring a larger outlay than any of the other games, barring polo; but such generosity on the part of the clubs would at least bring the game of games within reach of many a wistful yearner.

It is urged on all sides that the clubs have a right to be as exclusive and as expensive as they like and no one questions that right who has once enjoyed membership in any one of them. And it is true that it would be particularly unfortunate if the non-members who were granted the use of the course should mutilate the greens and leave the course in such a condition as to mar it for the legitimate members. But it is also true that in the main golfers are the very nicest class of people and less likely to abuse any privileges accorded them than any other section of the community.

On several occasions lately I have met easterners and Englishmen who have been dreadfully chagrined to find golf a luxury beyond their means in this part of the country and I am always being asked where the public links are to be found!

London is surrounded by public links, one of the best known being Tooting Bec Common, upon which any enthusiast may play a round when the fancy seizes him, absolutely gratis. But, of course, the upkeep of such a course in England (the municipality is responsible for it,) is comparatively trifling in England, where watering is accomplished by nature and grass grows more thickly and not so long and stays put all year around.

But perhaps if the club day were to prove inexpedient, it might be possible for Los Angeles to establish public golf links where play could be enjoyed by all and sundry for a nominal green fee. Here where there is so much space, it should not be such a very impossible thing to ask.

At all events, the fact remains that golf is becoming a great factor in the life of the community, not only in America, but all over the world, and since it is a game that calls for skill, energy, self-control and self-command, a game that keeps men in the open air, makes them considerate of each other, courteous, law-abiding, sportsmanlike, a game that makes essentially for good fellowship and large-mindedness, it is certainly a game to be encouraged in all classes of the community.

If women could be encouraged to play golf more and bridge less, to walk around the links instead of for everlastingly sitting under cover; to use their intellects for attaining skill in the game rather than in devising scandal about their friends and neighbors, it would certainly be a good thing for the city. At present only a very small circle of women can enjoy golf in this part of the world, owing chiefly to the expense of country club membership, but bridge and scandal are easily accessible recreations, with no bars of expense or exclusiveness.

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

The 1912 convention of the National Gas Engineers' Association will be held in Milwaukee, from June 17 to 22. About 700 delegates will attend. An exposition of motors of all types will be held.

The pay-as-you-enter automobile omnibus line recently started in Watertown, N. Y., to cover a residential district from which street cars are excluded, is reported a thorough success even under trying winter conditions.

The Hotel Brazos, Houston, Texas, has put into service an electric bus capable of seating fourteen and of carrying baggage on top of the vehicle. It is provided with electric lights and has a speed of eleven miles an hour.

The movement to secure a State road between Chicago and the western portion of Illinois, via Starved Rock and Deer Park, is receiving impetus from the newly-organized Illinois Valley Automobile Club, formed at Ottowa.

It is reported by hide dealers in Texas that the development of the automobile business has created a new and extensive demand for the higher grade hides. These hides are used for manufacturing tops of the higher-priced cars.

The Atlanta agencies and dealers who took part in the recent Atlanta show, financing it in advance, will get a 25 per cent. rebate.

April 13 has been selected as the date for the annual parade of the Motor Truck Club in New York. Six or seven cups will be furnished by the club for the winners in various classes.

THE JUMP-UPS

VERSES BY PAUL WEST. DRAWINGS BY WM. H. LOOMIS

1.—Despite poor, awkward, blund'ring JIM, ambitious GENEVIEVE
Made progress in society that you would scarce conceive;
And as in entertaining one of course must do one's share,
She planned to give a dinner, an elaborate affair.

2.—So JIM once more was coached and drilled and primed for the event,
And showed such vast improvement that his lady was content.
"He'll do, I'm sure!" she murmured as she took the hostess' place
And surveyed the brilliant gathering of beauty, wealth and grace.

3.—Behind JIM'S chair stood JIMPSON, like a sentinel on watch,
But JIM essayed his knives and forks without a hitch or botch;
And GENEVIEVE, across the board, at last, with calm elation
Decided it was safe to join her guests in conversation.

4.—She heard them all discoursing, as these social climbers do,
About their genealogies. She let their boasts go through;
And when they asked her questions of the Jump-Ups' pedigree,
She promptly built, with ready wit, a fancy fam'ly tree.

5.—She dug up kings, and lords, and earls, and finally, with a wrench
She made JIM'S father out to be a "Member of the Bench."
(He really was a cobbler, but that detail she suppressed,
As she noticed the impression she was making on the rest.)

6.—And then, just then, behind her chair she heard a dreadful sound:—
"Tell JIM an' GEN his folks is here!" The guests all turned around,
And there, in jeans and homespun, she beheld, to her dismay,
JIM'S parents from the country, and she knew not what to say!

7.—"Wal, JIM! Wal, GEN!" she heard them shout, as o'er the floor they sped.
She heard JIM yell, "Hi, Pop! Hi, Maw!" and then her senses fled.
And to the snick'ring comments of the guests on every side
She gave one cry and fainted in a burst of outraged pride.

8.—When she came to the guests had gone. Upon her couch she lay;
She saw the "old folks" watching her; she heard JIM softly say,
"Did I do anything, my dear?" In tears she smiled at him,
And said, "I guess I need a guide far more than you, dear JIM!"

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

WHEN TO BEGIN TRAINING A CHILD.

A FEW weeks ago a letter came to me from a correspondent touching upon a topic which never fails to compel my interest. I shall not quote verbatim, but give the substance of the inquiry.

Briefly it was this: Was her boy, 3 years old, of an age when his training might begin? She thought so; his father thought not. He believed in waiting until the child was old enough to know right from wrong, and that a chance should be given for the boy to develop his own individuality before the parents undertook to bring him in line with theirs. What was my opinion about it?

My first sentiment was one of pity, not unmixed with amusement. Poor parents, to have waited until now to begin training; and poor child! who had been unblessed with discipline until he was 3 years old! What a hard time lies before all of them. That was the pity, and the amusement was at the absurdity of the idea that training should be postponed until the child knew right from wrong. As well say he should not be taught to walk until he had a knowledge of his muscles, his anatomy, the laws of gravitation and a few of the other details which make walking possible and practicable! As sensible as to put off teaching him to read until he had a comprehension of language and literature!

Since my opinion was only asked I have no hesitation in giving it frankly. The child's training, in my judgment, should begin as soon as he is born. I am not sure but that it should, in a measure, antedate his birth. Those of us who have faith in pre-natal influences believe that our thought and our habits may affect the unborn child, and for this cause we strive to discipline ourselves, to make ourselves what we would like those children to be in sweetness, in courage, in self-control. Does it seem reasonable that we should thus drill ourselves for their sake, only to renounce all training when the child is actually in our hands to mold and to direct?

Obedience the First Principle.

So, to my mind, the properly brought up child should learn obedience while he is still too young to know what he is taught. He should never have the idea of refusing to obey.

I am fully aware that this is likely to provoke a cry of protest from some of the new school of child trainers. It is not the first time I have come to "grips" with them. The theory that a child should be allowed to follow the impulses of its own nature is abroad in the land, and the unpleasant, disobedient, unruly, unpopular children we find on every side are testimonies to the breadth of the propaganda.

Let us look at the matter calmly and sensibly, beginning with a few analogies or illustrations. Is there anything worth having which is not trained? In the animal kingdom, is the unbroken horse or dog useful or agreeable? If we are to get the best service from any animal, does he not have to be taught habits of obedience? In the vegetable kingdom is the plant, the tree, the vine which follows its own bent the one which bears best fruit, or is most useful or ornamental, or the one which has been pruned, cut back, grafted, and trained?

Analogy is not argument? Perhaps not. Let us go further. If you are seeking an employé to do any sort of work, which is the more valuable to you, the one who has no habits of work, of self-control, of established good morals, or the one who has been trained in all of these until they have become second nature?

Granted, then, that training is of value, why, in the name of common sense, do you wait until the child's mental and moral muscles have stiffened before you begin giving him this benefit? You begin bending the twig, pruning the vine, training the animal while the branches and muscles are tender. Is there any sense in waiting until there are habits formed to be unlearned and customs established to be radically altered? One thing more: Do you like the untrained product so far as children are concerned? Do you find them nice to live with? For I don't.

Ways of Undisciplined Child.

I dined at the house of a friend not long ago. Little Janet was at the table. It was an hour when children should be in bed, but Janet had said she did not want to go to bed, and she did want to sit up. So there she was with us, and if I were inclined to slang I would say she was there "with both feet," literally as well as figuratively. She kicked the table steadily, paying so much attention to the mild protests of her parents as she did to their suggestions that she should eat this or that. She hammered her plate with her fork, she sang into her tumbler (have I said she was 6 years old?), laughed and sang at her mother's remonstrances, ignored her father's commands, and made as much a nuisance of herself as any child well could.

It was not her brother, but one of another family where I was visiting, who, at the age of 5, broke up an afternoon call because the visitors came in just as his mother was beginning to sing to him. His loud wails rendered conversation impossible; his mother's gentle request that he would go out to see his nurse for a few minutes he met by throwing himself on the floor and yelling furiously. And, as we left the house his mother helped him to his feet and said, "There, there, Freddie, don't cry any more. Mamma will sing to you now."

These are two instances out of many which give force in my mind to the statement I once heard made by a wise mother: "I never had patience enough to have a disobedient child." The marvelous patience of the parents who will argue with children, cajole them, endure their tantrums, and bear with their tempers never ceases to fill me with wonder. Why do they stand these things? Is it love for the children, or is it sheer laziness?

If it is love, it certainly is not a wise affection. For the children who are untrained are not happy.

From One Point of View.

You question that. Have you ever noticed the difference between the youngsters who have it all their own way and those who have been educated to obedience? To look at it from only one point of view, is not such a scene as I have noted—and scenes like this are an everyday matter in many households—productive of more pain and misery than any amount of judicious early training?

Not so many years ago I was taken by a friend to the dancing class where her little daughter was to display some of the skill she had learned in certain character dances. With us went the 4 year old brother of the small performer. For the first two or three numbers he was content to sit quietly with us in a chair against the wall and watch the exercises, but after a while the music and the sight of the flying feet fired him with emulation. Out into the floor he went, among the dancers, doing some funny little steps of his own, bobbing and ducking in a way which was amusing to the spectators but extremely disconcerting to the dancers.

His mother dived out after him and brought him back, but he refused to stay by her. He wriggled from her grasp, was off again and was again brought back.

"Leonard, you must stay here!" she insisted. "Listen, there's a big policeman downstairs, and he'll come and put you in a back closet if you don't mind. Yes, he will!"

But Leonard knew that policeman of old and refused to be intimidated, and finally had to be taken home, kicking, struggling, and screaming, as he was borne from the room.

"I am so mortified!" said the mother, as we reached the shelter of the dressing room. "I am just teaching Leonard to mind, and I can't do a thing with him yet!"

Methods That Follow Neglect.

These are the methods to which the average parent resorts when she has neglected her child's babyhood discipline. Leonard had been permitted to gain his own notions of what constituted right and wrong, and, since they differed entirely from those of his mother, he had trouble coming to him when she endeavored to change his attitude towards life and circumstance.

This emphasizes one feature of the postponed training—its unkindness to the child. At the first it is as easy to give him good habits as bad. Every year makes it harder for him to conform his own undisciplined nature to elder wisdom. By the time he reaches the stage where his mental and moral muscles are hardened any change means a wrench which is bound to be accompanied by pain.

Even those parents who hope most for their children in the way of an easy life are not so dull as to think that no contradictions are likely to arise. You may wish your child to be carried to the skies—eventually—on flowery beds of ease—but do you for a moment suppose that this is going to happen? Don't you know that he will be called upon to endure hardness, and are you not fully aware that he would be a pulpy and worthless member of society if he escaped conflict? Then why do you wait until he must undergo the roughness of a harsh and unsympathetic world instead of accustoming him to the recognition of constituted authority while he is still pliable?

Wherever or whatever we are, we must yield obedience to some power. When your boy goes to school he must obey the teacher; he must defer to certain customs of his fellows or be punished or sent to Coventry. Are you willing he should get through that experience unbuttressed by any previous knowledge of deference to authority?

As he grows older and undertakes business a profession, any kind of work, he is under a director, a ruler, an employer. To him, too, he must resign his own will, his own ideas, if he is to be a success in learning the details of the work in which he is engaged. He must bow to the laws of the land or get into trouble. He must obey the laws of nature or suffer. He must conform to the will of God or lose the best of life here and hereafter. How are you fitting him for any or all of these allegiances if you fail to train him to obey you, to trust your wisdom, to believe that you know best what he should do until he is old enough to weigh and compare for himself?

Discipline Not Harshness.

One great mistake made by many of the parents who object to training young children is the notion that discipline connotes harshness. It need be nothing of the kind.

"How did you bring your sons up to be so obedient and dutiful?" I heard some one ask a mother the other day. "They defer to you in everything, and yet there isn't a bit of the milksop about them, and they are not at all afraid of you. You seem to be such friends, and yet I have heard you say you have strong ideas about obedience. How did you manage it?"

"I made them obey absolutely; I was strict in my discipline; I tried to be entirely just, and I just loved them to death," was the answer.

So long as your children are persuaded that devoted love is the cause and accompaniment of the discipline you need not be afraid that they will drift away from you, if you make justice one of the foundations of your training. Begin with your tiny baby and, as you drill him in regular habits of eating and sleeping, accustom him to the method of obedience. When the time comes—as it may—when he will attempt a small revolt, don't give way, but hold your own. Avoid issues as much as possible, but when they come meet them squarely.

Don't be afraid you are going to break your child's will or cramp his individuality so long as you study and pray to understand him and follow justice in your rulings. One of the troubles with this country is that we have too much individuality and too little deference to the laws made by those we choose to be wisdom for us. Don't encourage anarchy and free thought in your own nursery, but start your child well on the way towards good citizenship by teaching him that his own will is not the final decision and that the

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

Marion Harland.

THE space usually occupied by the Helping Hand will this week be given up to a symposium, suggested by the query of a young wife as to the feasibility of providing good and nourishing food for a family of two upon $4 per week.

It is not practicable to print all the replies drawn out by the ingenious confession of what she rightly assumes must be her lifelong profession. I have selected representative letters and leave the consideration of these to a jury of the peers of the practical housekeepers who have stepped forward to counsel.

They will please accept my thanks for their generous and kindly response to my appeal to the constituency.

No. 1 is from Kansas City, Mo., a part of our territory that is wide awake to the importance of our work and for the housemothers of America. We have numerous and intelligent correspondents there to whom the department owes much of its efficiency.

"Having been for some time a faithful reader of the Helping Hand, and having derived much benefit therefrom, I should like to be of some use in turn.

"I inclose a list of purchases with the prices of the same which I am paying in Kansas City, Mo., together with the daily menus which said purchases will supply. As you see, the total exceeds $4 by 20 cents, but as nearly half the corn starch, lard, and oat meal would be left at the end of the week the real cost for that time would fall short of the sum named by 'Nora.'

Suggestions Based on Experience.

"As the suggestions are all based upon actual experience, I am sure they are practicable.

"My husband does no heavy work, but is under constant mental strain, therefore requires as much nourishment as a day laborer, if physiological experts are to be credited. Our appetites are rather hearty than otherwise, but I never exceed the 'four dollar' limit unless we have guests. I often manage to introduce a dainty salad or some other delicacy.

"In making my list, I presuppose Nora's cupboard to be bare of everything but baking powder and a few flavoring ingredients.

"I find canned milk much cheaper and more trustworthy than fresh milk, but if this be unpalatable, fresh milk may be bought, carefully skimmed for use on cereals, and the rest would suffice for soups and puddings. I find salt pork, properly freshened and daintily cooked, an inexpensive substitute for bacon.

"Of course the menus I suggest could only be prepared from the stock of groceries mentioned by careful supervision of measuring and serving, but with the liberal supply of bread and butter provided each meal should prove ample for two people of normal capacity. You say, 'two or three.' If the third were another big, hearty John, perhaps the table would be cleared before appetites were appeased. I am supposing the third to be a cosy, rosy little 'John Jr.' In this case the meals will be sufficient—until he reaches the 'growing age.' After that—no man knoweth. A boy's appetite is truly formidable!

"You asked for an opinion of 'A Practical Housekeeper's Menu.' I will frankly say that I consider it deficient in variety and in nutrition. Perhaps more experienced eyes than mine will see worse faults in that which I submit.

"Pardon this long letter! 'Nora's' appeal recalls vividly my own endeavors during the first few months of housekeeping.

"Once supplied with staples, of course, much better meals could be provided for four dollars.

"It is cheaper to buy staples in larger quantities. I try to set apart a portion of the week's money for that purpose, as it saves much in the end. One is limited by beginning the week with a bare cupboard and providing for one week only. I had dried fruits cheaper and more satisfactory than canned unless one puts up one's own fruits.

"I hope this may be of some assistance to 'Nora' and perhaps to others as well.

"A CORDIAL FRIEND."

Letter from Iowa.

No. 2 writes from Davenport, Ia. Recently we had an answer from New York City. So far as in me lies I shall report to "Nora" from different sections of the country.

"My husband and I do light housekeeping and so have no baking done at home. I use a two burner gas stove and inclose a menu for the week which I think rather attractive. It may be got up for $4.50 per week.

"My husband is foreman in a 'plant' here and lunches at their restaurant at the rate of 90 cents for six luncheons. I think that if I could do my own baking and he could take all his meals at home I could bring expenses down to $4 per week. I inclose prices, also, as if any one doubts that the menu may be provided at the price named—or even if you think that 'Nora' or any other housewife could profit by reading the list, please print the same.

"Of course, it requires careful buying. As, for instance, the 30 cent boiling piece of meat must be all good lean meat to last for three dinners and still leave some for luncheon. I watch advertisements and always trade at trustworthy places. My husband and I are hearty eaters and are growing stout.

"FOOD EXPENSES FOR A WEEK.

"Cheese, 5 cents; oysters, 10; crackers, 5; doughnuts, 6; seven quarts of milk, 50; potatoes [25 cents a peck], 20; beef [to boil, at 10 cents a pound], 30; squash [a 10 cent squash lasts three meals], 6; butter [a pound lasts a week], 35; 10 cent package of tapioca, 2; four eggs at 28 cents a dozen, 9; bread, 15; two oranges, 5; three and one-half pounds of sugar for 25 cents 15; brown sugar, 8; cake, 15; cookies, 10; flour [25 cent package], 15; 10 cent package cornstarch, 2; can of salmon, 15; steak, 10; can of corn, 7½; pork, 15; sausage, 10; lard, 6½; cream puffs, 5; salt, pepper, and vanilla, 5; coffee [we do not like it strong], 7; tea [I am the only one who drinks it], 5; onions, 20; Mr. B.'s luncheon, 90; can of molasses, at 15 cents, I used a teaspoonful at a time, 2; total, $4.50.

"Mrs. B."

I conscientiously refrain from commenting upon any one of the menus and estimates collected in The Helping Hand. But a sigh of envy heaved my bosom as I read the list of our Iowa member's groceries and meats. This very day I am paying 50 cents a dozen for eggs and 15 cents a pound for coarse lean meat for soup stock!

Blessed among women are the Iowan housewives!

Anent New York Prices.

No. 3 writes a friendly letter [and throughout its length upon one side of the page] and in a clear round hand. She gives us New York prices—confessedly the highest upon the continent.

"To Nora: Not using tea, I cannot say how much more that would be, but the figures I set down here are for the best in our market. Excepting EGGS! The price for them is prohibitive. The best bring 60 cents a dozen. There are localities where the figuring upon my list might be cut down one-third.

"A pot roast may be dished up a second time for stew with tomatoes, onions and potatoes. Everybody knows that corned beef makes a delicious hash and supplies cold cuts for luncheons and for sandwiches. Left-over bread may be wrought into nice puddings, but it must be thoroughly dried first. Roll it into crumbs, add an egg, three tablespoonfuls of evaporated milk, and a teacupful of water. Your three cans of milk make seven quarts if diluted as directed. You may have boiled onions, baked, boiled, or stewed potatoes. Save a small portion of your can of tomatoes to be stewed with bread crumbs.

"I cannot begin to tell you of the variations you may have and enough nourishing food for two strong, healthy people. I have kept my husband and myself in good food for $4 a week for over a year. And this right here in this city of New York! We have not had the same old thing over and over again, either!

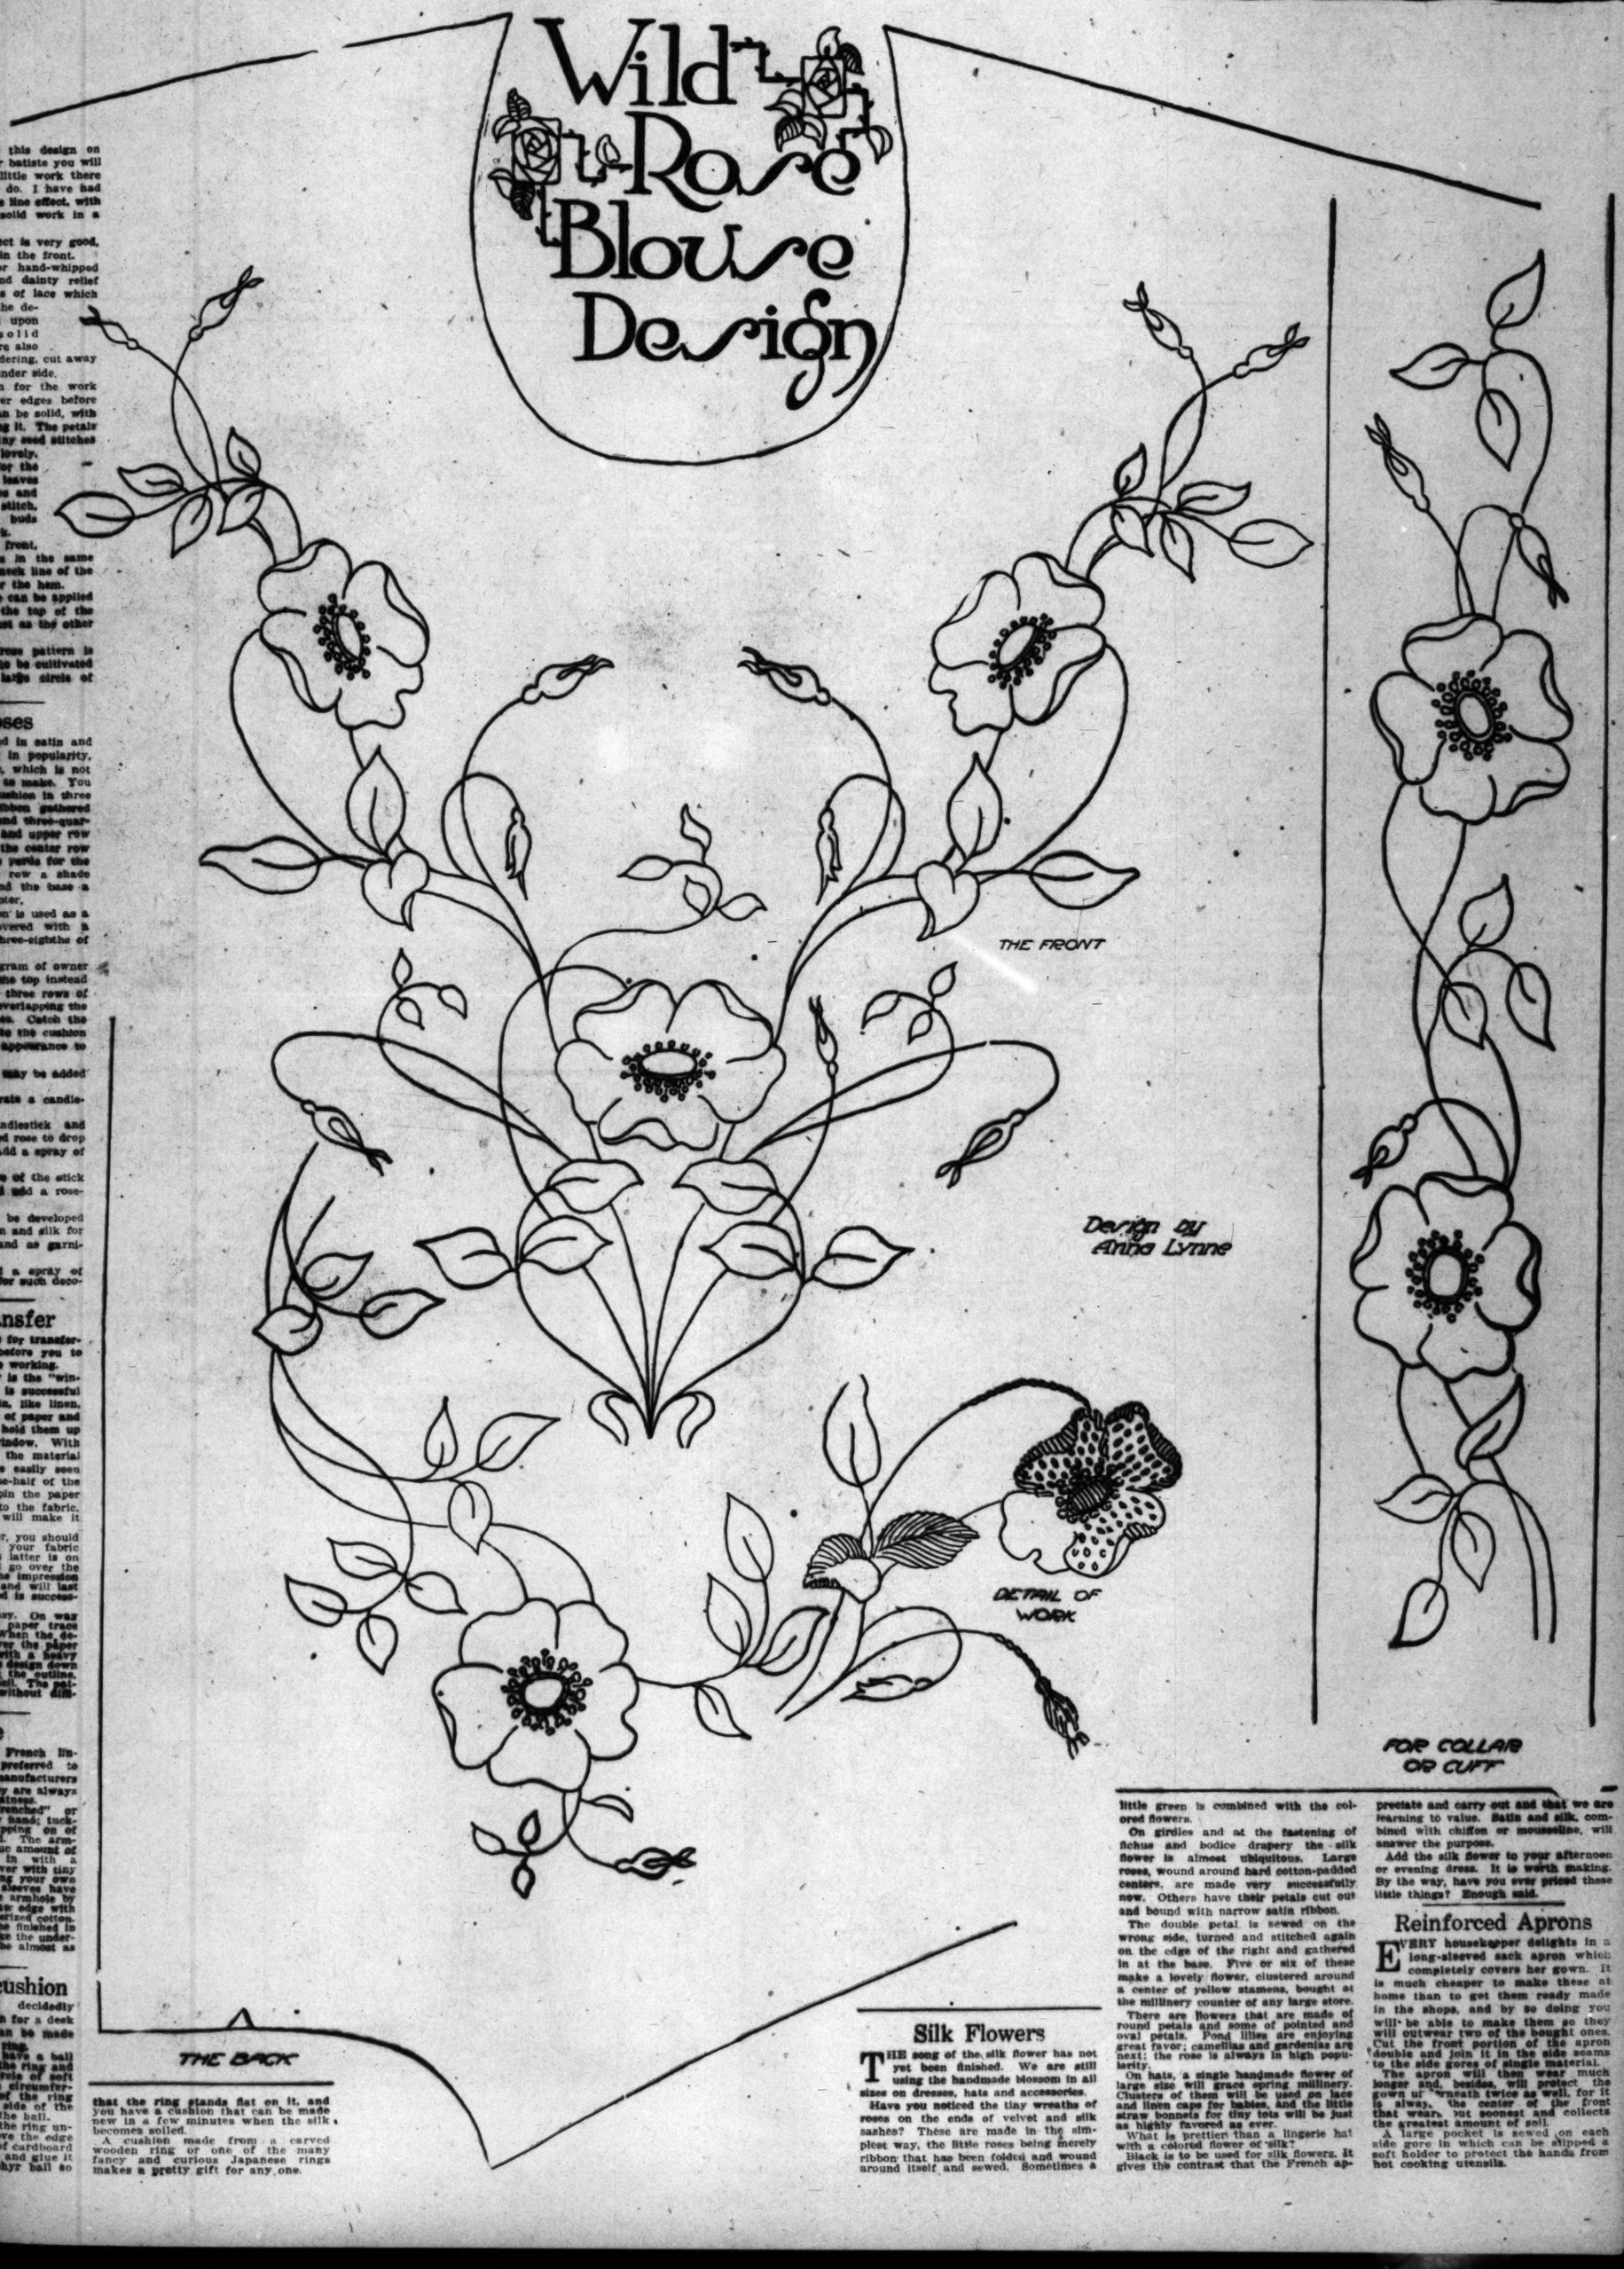
By ADELAIDE BYRD

Wild Rose Blouse Design



THE FRONT

Design by Anna Lynne

FOR COLLAR OR CUFF

DETAIL OF WORK

THE BACK

WHEN you trace this design on linen, lawn or batiste you will realize how little work there is for you to do. I have had a deeper hoop to the line effect, with and there some solid work in a fancy way.

The pointed yoke effect is very good, saving all the work in the front. The cuffs and collar or hand-whipped ruffles give cool and dainty relief to the sleeve. The roses of lace which are basted over the design are then worked upon with pearl, by fine, solid stitches on the edges are also outlined. After embroidering, cut away the material from the under side. Use mercerized cotton for the work and roll the turned-over edges before working. The center can be solid, with the petals surrounding it. The petals may be filled in with tiny seed stitches and the whole effect is lovely.

Use outline stitches for the stems and work the leaves in solid stitches and the calyx half in seed stitch, half outlining. The buds are to be solid work.

In working the front, begin with the backs in the same way. Notch in the neck line of the back for the turn for the hem.

A long, straight strip can be applied for the collar or on the top of the cuff. It is worked just as the other parts.

In addition, the wild rose pattern is pretty, and bids fair to be cultivated by one of my large circle of friends.

Satin Roses

ROSES reproduced in satin and ribbon are growing in popularity, especially the rose, which is not complicated, but easy to make. You can have a rose pincushion in three shades of pink satin ribbon gathered together. Use one yard and three-quarters for the shirred top and upper row of roses, one yard for the center row of roses and five-eighths yards for the base. Make the center row a shade darker than the cup and the base a shade deeper than the center.

Have a five-inch cushion is used as a foundation. This is covered with a ruffle shirred in rows three-eighths of an inch apart.

Before you begin, the monogram of owner may be embroidered on the top instead of the ribbon. Then the three rows of roses are applied, each overlapping the other, to hide the stitches. Catch the roses in several places to the cushion to give a more natural appearance to them.

A few sprays of green leaves may be added to the cushion with.

Another nice idea is to decorate a candlestick to match a rose.

Buy a simple glass candlestick and tie a pink, yellow or red rose to drop from the socket. Add a spray of foliage.

Tie the rose to the base of the stick with a green ribbon and add a rose-colored shade.

Roses of all sizes can be developed from small pieces of satin and silk for trimming the coiffure and as garnitures for evening frocks.

Do not neglect to add a spray of leaves to all roses used for such decoration.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window" method. This is successful if the material is thin, like linen, lawn, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a soft pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. A strong light behind will make it easy.

If you have carbon paper, you should place a sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on the right side. With a sharp pencil go over the outlines of the design. The impression will be light in fine lines and will last while. This method is successful on any material.

Another way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the design before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and rub the pattern with a heavy pencil. Then place the design down on the goods and redraw the outline. This will be transferred without dimming.

Lingerie

THE reason why the French lingerie blouses are preferred to those made by the manufacturers in this country is that they are always finished with exquisite neatness. The seams are always "trenched" or overcast; they are put in by hands; tucking and the whipping on of lace are done by hand. The armholes come in for a due amount of attention, being put in with a fine seam or whipped over with tiny stitches. If you are making your own blouse, after the sleeves have been set in, finish the armhole by overcasting the raw edge with fine mercerized cotton. The whole seam can be finished in this manner, if you like the undergarments to be almost as fine as the blouse.

A Dainty Pincushion

A UNIQUE and decidedly dainty pincushion for a desk or writing table can be made of a silver napkin ring.

Wind until you have a ball large enough to slip into the ring and fill it tightly. Cut a circle of soft silk three times wider in circumference than the opening of the ring and run over one side of the ring all around the ball.

Then run through the ring until the side rises above the edge of the ring and glue it to the bottom of the zephyr ball so that the ring stands flat on it, and you have a cushion that can be made new in a few minutes when the silk becomes soiled.

A cushion made from a carved wooden ring or one of the many fancy and curious Japanese rings makes a pretty gift for any one.

Silk Flowers

THE song of the silk flower has not yet been finished. We are still using the handmade blossom in all sizes on dresses, hats and accessories.

Have you noticed the tiny wreaths of roses on the ends of velvet and silk sashes? These are made in the simplest way, the little roses being merely ribbon that has been folded and wound around itself and sewed. Sometimes a little green is combined with the colored flowers.

On girdles and at the fastening of fichus and bodice drapery the silk flower is almost ubiquitous. Large roses, wound around hard cotton-padded centers, are made very successfully now. Others have their petals cut out and bound with narrow satin ribbon.

The double petal is sewed on the wrong side, turned and stitched again on the edge of the right and gathered in at the base. Five or six of these make a lovely flower, clustered around a center of yellow stamens, bought at the millinery counter of any large store.

There are flowers that are made of round petals and some of pointed and oval petals. Pond lilies are enjoying great favor; camellias and gardenias are next; the rose is always in high popularity.

On hats, a single handmade flower of large size will grace spring millinery. Clusters of them will be used on lace and linen caps for babies, and the little straw bonnets for tiny tots will be just as highly favored as ever.

What is prettier than a lingerie hat with a colored flower of silk?

Black is to be used for silk flowers. It gives the contrast that the French appreciate and carry out and that we are learning to value. Satin and silk, combined with chiffon or mousseline, will answer the purpose.

Add the silk flower to your afternoon or evening dress. It is worth making. By the way, have you ever priced these little things? Enough said.

Reinforced Aprons

EVERY housekeeper delights in a long-sleeved sack apron which completely covers her gown. It is much cheaper to make these at home than to get them ready made in the shops, and by so doing you will be able to make them so they will outwear two of the bought ones. Cut the front portion of the apron double and join it in the side seams to the side gores of single material.

The apron will then wear much longer and, besides, will protect the gown underneath twice as well, for it is always the center of the front that wears out soonest and collects the greatest amount of soil.

A large pocket is sewed on each side gore in which can be slipped a soft holder to protect the hands from hot cooking utensils.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

WHEN TO BEGIN TRAINING A CHILD.

A FEW weeks ago a letter came to me from a correspondent touching upon a topic which never fails to compel my interest. I shall not quote verbatim, but give the substance of the inquiry.

Briefly it was this: Was her boy, 3 years old, of an age when his training might begin? She thought so; his father thought not. He believed in waiting until the child was old enough to know right from wrong, and that a chance should be given for the boy to develop his own individuality before the parents undertook to bring him in line with theirs. What was my opinion about it?

My first sentiment was one of pity, not unmixed with amusement. Poor parents, to have waited until now to begin training; and poor child! who had been unblessed with discipline until he was 3 years old! What a hard time lies before all of them. That was the pity, and the amusement was at the absurdity of the idea that training should be postponed until the child knew right from wrong. As well say he should not be taught to walk until he had a knowledge of his muscles, his anatomy, the laws of gravitation and a few of the other details which make walking possible and practicable! As sensible as to put off teaching him to read until he had a comprehension of language and literature!

Since my opinion was only asked I have no hesitation in giving it frankly. The child's training, in my judgment, should begin as soon as he is born. I am not sure but that it should, in a measure, antedate his birth. Those of us who have faith in pre-natal influences believe that our thought, and our habits may affect the unborn child, and for this cause we strive to discipline ourselves, to make ourselves what we would like those children to be in sweetness, in courage, in self-control. Does it seem reasonable that we should thus drill ourselves for their sake, only to renounce all training when the child is actually in our hands to mold and to direct?

Obedience the First Principle.

So, to my mind, the properly brought up child should learn obedience while he is still too young to know what he is taught; he should never have the idea of refusing to obey.

I am fully aware that this is likely to provoke a cry of protest from some of the new school of child trainers. It is not the first time I have come to "grips" with them. The theory that a child should be allowed to follow the impulses of its own nature is abroad in the land, and the unpleasant, disobedient, unruly, unpopular children we find on every side are testimonies to the breadth of the propaganda.

Let us look at the matter calmly and sensibly, beginning with a few analogies or illustrations. Is there anything worth having which is not trained? In the animal kingdom, is the unbroken horse or dog useful or agreeable? If we are to get the best service from any animal, does he not have to be taught habits of obedience? In the vegetable kingdom is the plant, the tree, the vine which follows its own bent the one which bears best fruit, or is most useful or ornamental, or the one which has been pruned, cut back, grafted, and trained?

Analogy is not argument? Perhaps not. Let us go further. If you are seeking an employé to do any sort of work, which is the more valuable to you, the one who has no habits of work, of self-control, of established good morals, or the one who has been trained in all of these until they have become second nature?

Granted, then, that training is of value, why, in the name of common sense, do you wait until the child's mental and moral muscles have stiffened before you begin giving him this benefit? You begin bending the twig, pruning the vine, training the animal while the branches and muscles are tender. Is there any sense in waiting until there are habits formed to be unlearned and customs established to be radically altered? One thing more: Do you like the untrained product so far as children are concerned? Do you find them nice to live with? For I don't.

Ways of Undisciplined Child.

I dined at the house of a friend not long ago. Little Janet was at the table. It was an hour when children should be in bed, but Janet had said she did not want to go to bed, and she did want to sit up. So there she was with us, and if I were inclined to slang I would say she was there "with both feet," literally as well as figuratively. She kicked the table steadily, paying as much attention to the mild protests of her parents as she did to their suggestions that she should eat this or that. She hammered her plate with her fork, she sang into her tumbler (have I said she was 6 years old?), laughed and sang at her mother's remonstrances, ignored her father's commands, and made as much a nuisance of herself as any child well could.

It was not her brother, but one of another family where I was visiting, who, at the age of 3, broke up an afternoon call because the visitors came in just as his mother was beginning to sing to him. His loud wails rendered conversation impossible; his mother's gentle request that he would go out to see his nurse for a few minutes he met by throwing himself on the floor and yelling furiously. And, as we left the house his mother helped him to his feet and said, "There, there, Freddie, don't cry any more. Mamma will sing to you now."

These are two instances out of many which give force in my mind to the statement I once heard made by a wise mother: "I never had patience enough to have a disobedient child." The marvelous patience of the parents who will argue with children, cajole them, endure their tantrums, and bear with their tempers never ceases to fill me with wonder. Why do they stand these things? Is it love for the children, or is it sheer laziness?

If it is love, it certainly is not a wise affection. For the children who are untrained are not happy.

From One Point of View.

You question that. Have you ever noticed the difference between the youngsters who have it all their own way and those who have been educated to obedience? To look at it from only one point of view, is not such a scene as I have noted—and scenes like this are an everyday matter in many households—productive of more pain and misery than any amount of judicious early training?

Not so many years ago I was taken by a friend to the dancing class where her little daughter was to display some of the skill she had learned in certain character dances. With us went the 4 year old brother of the small performer. For the first two or three numbers he was content to sit quietly with us in a chair against the wall and watch the exercises, but after a while the music and the agat of the flying feet fused him with emulation. Out into the floor he went, among the dancers, doing some funny little steps of his own, bobbing and ducking in a way which was amusing to the spectators but extremely disconcerting to the dancers.

His mother dived out after him and brought him back, but he refused to stay by her. He wriggled from her grasp, was off again and was again brought back.

"Leonard, you must stay here!" she insisted. "Listen, there's a big policeman downstairs, and he'll come and put you in a back closet if you don't mind. Yes, he will!"

But Leonard knew that policeman of old and refused to be intimidated, and finally had to be taken home, kicking, struggling, and screaming, as he was borne from the room.

"I am so mortified!" said the mother, as we reached the shelter of the dressing room. "I am just teaching Leonard to mind, and I can't do a thing with him yet!"

Methods That Follow Neglect.

These are the methods to which the average parent resorts when she has neglected her child's babyhood discipline. Leonard had been permitted to gain his own notions of what constituted right and wrong, and, since they differed entirely from those of his mother, he had trouble coming to him when she endeavored to change his attitude towards life and circumstance.

This emphasizes one feature of the postponed training—its unkindness to the child. At the first it is as easy to give him good habits as bad. Every year makes it harder for him to conform his own undisciplined nature to elder wisdom. By the time he reaches the stage where his mental and moral muscles are hardened any change means a wrench which is bound to be accompanied by pain.

Even those parents who hope most for their children in the way of an easy life are not so dull as to think that no contradictions are likely to arise. You may wish your child to be carried to the skies—eventually—on flowery beds of ease—but do you for a moment suppose that this is going to happen? Don't you know that he will be called upon to endure hardness, and are you not fully aware that he would be a pulpy and worthless member of society if he escaped conflict? Then why do you wait until he must undergo the roughness of a harsh and unsympathetic world instead of accustoming him to the recognition of constituted authority while he is still pliable?

Wherever or whatever we are, we must yield obedience to some power. When your boy goes to school he must obey the teacher; he must defer to certain customs of his fellows or be punished or sent to Coventry. Are you willing he should get through that experience unbuttressed by any previous knowledge of deference to authority?

As he grows older and undertakes business a profession, any kind of work, he is under a director, a ruler, an employer. To him, too, he must resign his own will, his own ideas, if he is to be a success in learning the details of the work in which he is engaged. He must bow to the laws of the land or get into trouble. He must obey the laws of nature or suffer. He must conform to the will of God or lose the best of life here and hereafter. How are you fitting him for any or all of these allegiances if you fail to train him to obey you, to trust your wisdom, to believe that you know best what he should do until he is old enough to weigh and compare for himself?

Discipline Not Harshness.

One great mistake made by many of the parents who object to training young children is the notion that discipline connotes harshness. It need do nothing of the kind.

"How did you bring your sons up to be so obedient and dutiful?" I heard some one ask a mother the other day. "They defer to you in everything, and yet there isn't a bit of the milksop about them, and they are not at all afraid of you. You seem to be such friends, and yet I have heard you say you have strong ideas about obedience. How did you manage it?"

"I made them obey absolutely; I was strict in my discipline; I tried to be entirely just, and I just loved them to death," was the answer.

So long as your children are persuaded that devoted love is the cause and accompaniment of the discipline you need not be afraid that they will drift away from you, if you make justice one of the foundations of your training. Begin with your tiny baby and, as you drill him in regular habits of eating and sleeping, accustom him to the method of obedience. When the time comes—as it may—when he will attempt a small revolt, don't give way, but hold your own. Avoid issues as much as possible, but when they come meet them squarely.

Don't be afraid you are going to break your child's will or cramp his individuality so long as you study and pray to understand him and follow justice in your rulings. One of the troubles with this country is that we have too much individuality and too little deference to the laws made by those we choose to be wisdom for us. Don't encourage anarchy and free thought in your own nursery, but start your child well on the way towards good citizenship by teaching him that his own will is not the final decision and that the only power which can happen to any one is the power which can happen to any one to recognize the fact that he is bound to obey some power he is bound to obey.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

Marion Harland.

THE space usually occupied by the Helping Hand will this week be given up to a symposium, suggested by the query of a young wife as to the feasibility of providing good and nourishing food for a family of two upon $4 per week.

It is not practicable to print all the replies drawn out by the ingenious confession of what she rightly assumes must be her lifelong profession. I have selected representative letters and leave the consideration of these to a jury of the peers of the practical housekeepers who have stepped forward to counsel.

They will please accept my thanks for their generous and kindly response to my appeal to the constituency.

No. 1 is from Kansas City, Mo., a part of our territory that is wide awake to the importance of our work and for the housemothers of America. We have numerous and intelligent correspondents there to whom the department owes much of its efficiency.

"Having been for some time a faithful reader of the Helping Hand, and having derived much benefit therefrom, I should like to be of some use in turn.

"I inclose a list of purchases with the prices of the same which I am paying in Kansas City, Mo., together with the daily menus which said purchases will supply. As you see, the total exceeds $4 by 20 cents, but as nearly half the corn starch, lard, and oat meal would be left at the end of the week the real cost for that time would fall short of the sum named by 'Nora.'

Suggestions Based on Experience.

"As the suggestions are all based upon actual experience, I am sure they are practicable.

"My husband does no heavy work, but is under constant mental strain, therefore requires as much nourishment as a day laborer, if physiological experts are to be credited. Our appetites are rather hearty than otherwise, but I never exceed the 'four dollar' limit unless we have guests. I often manage to introduce a dainty salad or some other delicacy.

"In making my list, I presupposed Nora's cupboard to be bare of everything but baking powder and a few flavoring ingredients.

"I find canned milk much cheaper and more trustworthy than fresh milk, but if this be unpalatable, fresh milk may be bought, carefully skimmed for use on cereals, and the rest would suffice for soups and puddings. I find salt pork, properly freshened and daintily cooked, an inexpensive substitute for bacon.

"Of course the menus I suggest could only be prepared from the stock of groceries mentioned by careful supervision of measuring and serving, but with the liberal supply of bread and butter provided each meal should prove ample for two people of normal capacity. You say, 'two or three.' If the third were another big, hearty John, perhaps the table would be cleared before appetites were appeased. I am supposing the third to be a cozy, rosy little 'John Jr.' In this case the meals will be sufficient—until he reaches the 'growing age.' After that—no man knoweth. A boy's appetite is truly formidable!

"You asked for an opinion of 'A Practical Housekeeper's Menu.' I will frankly say that I consider it deficient in variety and in nutrition. Perhaps more experienced eyes than mine will see worse faults in that which I submit.

"Pardon this long letter! 'Nora's' appeal recalls vividly my own endeavors during the first few months of housekeeping.

"Once supplied with staples, of course, much better meals could be provided for four dollars.

List of Purchases.

"WEEKLY BILL FOR MARKETING.

"To provide the meals hereinafter set down.

Butter	.40	Milk [canned]	.25
Bread	.50	Coffee	.25
Lard	.12½	Tea	.15
Sugar	.10	Cocoa	.15
Eggs, 1 doz.	.40	Cornstarch	.10
Flour	.10	Onions	.10
Apples [6]	.10	Can tomatoes	.10
Prunes	.15	Oranges [3]	.10
Oatmeal	.10	Bananas [6]	.15
Corn flakes	.10	Macaroni	.10
Potatoes	.20	Cheese	.15
Salt pork	.10	Soup bone	.15
Kidneys [2]	.10	Hamburger steak	.15
	$2.20		$1.90

Total $4.20

"It is cheaper to buy staples in larger quantities. I try to set apart a portion of the week's money for that purpose, as it saves much in the end. One is limited by beginning the week with a bare cupboard and providing for one week only. I had dried fruits cheaper and more satisfactory than canned unless one puts up one's own fruits.

"I hope this may be of some assistance to 'Nora' and perhaps to others as well.

"A CORDIAL FRIEND."

Letter from Iowa.

No. 2 writes from Davenport, Ia. Recently we had an answer from New York City. So far as in me lies I shall report to "Nora" from different sections of the country.

"My husband and I do light housekeeping and so have no baking done at home. I use a two burner gas stove and inclose a menu for the week which I think rather attractive. It may be got up for $4.50 per week.

"My husband is foreman in a plant here and lunches at their restaurant at the rate of 90 cents for six luncheons. I think that if I could do my own baking and he could take all his meals at home I could bring expenses down to $4 per week. I inclose prices, also, so if any one doubts that the menu may be provided at the prices named—or even if you think that 'Nora' or any other housewife could profit by reading the list, please print the same.

"Of course, it requires careful buying. As, for instance, the 30 cent boiling piece of meat must be all good lean meat to last for three dinners and still leave some for luncheon. I watch advertisements and always trade at trustworthy places. My husband and I are hearty eaters and are growing stout.

"FOOD EXPENSES FOR A WEEK.

"Cheese, 5 cents; oysters, 10; crackers, 5; doughnuts, 6; seven quarts of milk, 50; potatoes [25 cents a peck], 20; beef [to boil, at 10 cents a pound], 30; squash [a 10 cent squash lasts three meals], 5; butter [a pound lasts a week], 35; 10 cent package of tapioca, 2; four eggs at 25 cents a dozen, 9; bread, 15; two oranges, 5; three and one-half pounds of sugar for 25 cents 15; brown sugar, 8; cake, 15; cookies, 10; flour [25 cent package], 15; 10 cent package cornstarch, 2; can of salmon, 15; steak, 10; can of corn, 7½; pork, 15; sausage, 10; lard, 6½; cream puffs, 5; salt, pepper, and vanilla, 5; coffee [we do not like it strong], 7; tea [I am the only one who drinks it], 5; onions, 2½; Mr. B.'s luncheon, 90; can of molasses, at 15 cents, I used a teaspoonful at a time, 2; total, $4.50.

"Mrs. B."

I conscientiously refrain from commenting upon any one of the menus and estimates collected in The Helping Hand. But a sigh of envy heaved my bosom as I read the list of our Iowa member's groceries and meats. This very day I am paying 50 cents a dozen for eggs and 15 cents a pound for coarse lean meat for soup stock!

Ahem! New York Prices.

No. 3 writes a friendly letter [and throughout its length upon one side of the page] and in a clear round hand. She gives us New York prices—confessedly the highest upon the continent.

"To Nora: Not using tea, I cannot say how much more that would be, but the figures I set down here are for the best in our market. Excepting EGGS! The price for them is prohibitive. The best bring 60 cents a dozen. There are localities where the figuring upon my list might be cut down one-third.

"A pot roast may be dished up a second time for stew with tomatoes, onions and potatoes. Everybody knows that corned beef makes a delicious hash and supplies cold cuts for luncheons and for sandwiches. Left-over bread may be wrought into nice puddings, but it must be thoroughly dried first. Roll it into crumbs, add an egg, three tablespoonfuls of evaporated milk, and a teacupful of water. Four cans of milk make seven quarts if diluted as directed. You may have boiled onions, baked, boiled, or stewed potatoes. Save a small portion of your can of tomatoes to be stewed with bread crumbs.

"I cannot begin to tell you of the variations you may have and enough nourishing food for two strong, healthy people. I have kept my husband and myself in good food for $4 a week for over a year. And this right here in this city of New York! We have not had the same old thing over and over again, either!

Her List of Purchases.

"Here is my list of purchases, set down honestly:

Three and one-half pounds of sugar	.22
One pound of coffee	.25
One pound of butter	.42

For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD

Wild Rose Blouse Design

WHEN you trace this design on linen, lawn or batiste you will realize how little work there is for you to do. I have had in mind keep to the line effect, with and there some solid work in a fancy way.

The raised yoke effect is very good, and all the work in the front. The cuff and collar or hand-whipped braid gives cool and dainty relief to the sheer. The roses of lace which are basted over the design are then worked upon the linen by fine, solid stitches. The edges are also buttonhole. After embroidering, cut away the linen from the under side. Use mercerized cotton for the work and the turned-over edges before basting. The center can be solid, with the petals surrounding it. The petals may be filled in with tiny seed stitches for a white effect is lovely.

Use satin stitches for the leaves and work the leaves in solid stitches and veins half in seed stitch, half outline. The buds should be in solid work.

Begin working the front, joining with the backs in the same way to match in the neck line of the blouse the turn for the hem.

The straight strip can be applied for collar or on the top of the cuff. It is worked just as the other parts.

Of course, the wild rose pattern is pretty, and bids fair to be cultivated by one of my large circle of friends.

Satin Roses

Roses reproduced in satin and ribbon are growing in popularity, especially the rose, which is not difficult, but easy to make. You may have a rose pincushion in three shades of pink, satin ribbon gathered for this one yard and three-quarters for the shirred top and upper row of roses, one yard for the center row of roses and five-eighths yards for the base. Make the center row a shade darker than the cup and the base a shade darker than the center.

A five-inch cushion is used as a foundation. This is covered with a ruffle shirred in rows three-eighths of an inch apart.

Before you begin, the monogram of owner may be embroidered on the top instead of the ribbon. Then the three rows of roses are applied, each overlapping the other, to hide the stitches. Catch the roses in several places to the cushion to give a more natural appearance to the flowers.

Sprays of green leaves may be added to finish with.

Another idea is to decorate a candlestick to match a rose.

Select a simple glass candlestick and a pink, yellow or red rose to drop over the socket. Add a spray of leaves.

Tie the rose to the base of the stick with a green ribbon and add a rose-colored candle.

Roses of all sizes can be developed from small pieces of satin and silk for trimming the coiffure and as garnitures for evening frocks.

Do not neglect to add a spray of leaves to all roses used for such decorations.

How to Transfer

These are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to your material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a hard pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it easy.

If you have carbon paper, you should place a sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on which with a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression left is fine lines and will last until used. This method is successful with any material.

Another way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the design before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and with a pattern with a heavy pencil. Then place the design down on the goods and redraw the outline, following with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without dimming.

Lingerie

The reason why the French lingerie blouses are preferred to those made by the manufacturers of this country is that they are always finished with exquisite neatness.

The seams are always "trenched" or run and felled; the insertions are put in by hand; tucking is done and the whipping on of lace is done by hand. The armholes are cut in for a due amount of ease, being put in with a fine run or whipped over with tiny stitches if you are making your own blouse. Often the sleeves have a gusset set in, which fits the armhole by running around the raw edge with a fine thread or soft mercerized cotton. Such blouses can be finished in a short time, if you like the undergarments to be almost as dainty as possible.

A Dainty Pincushion

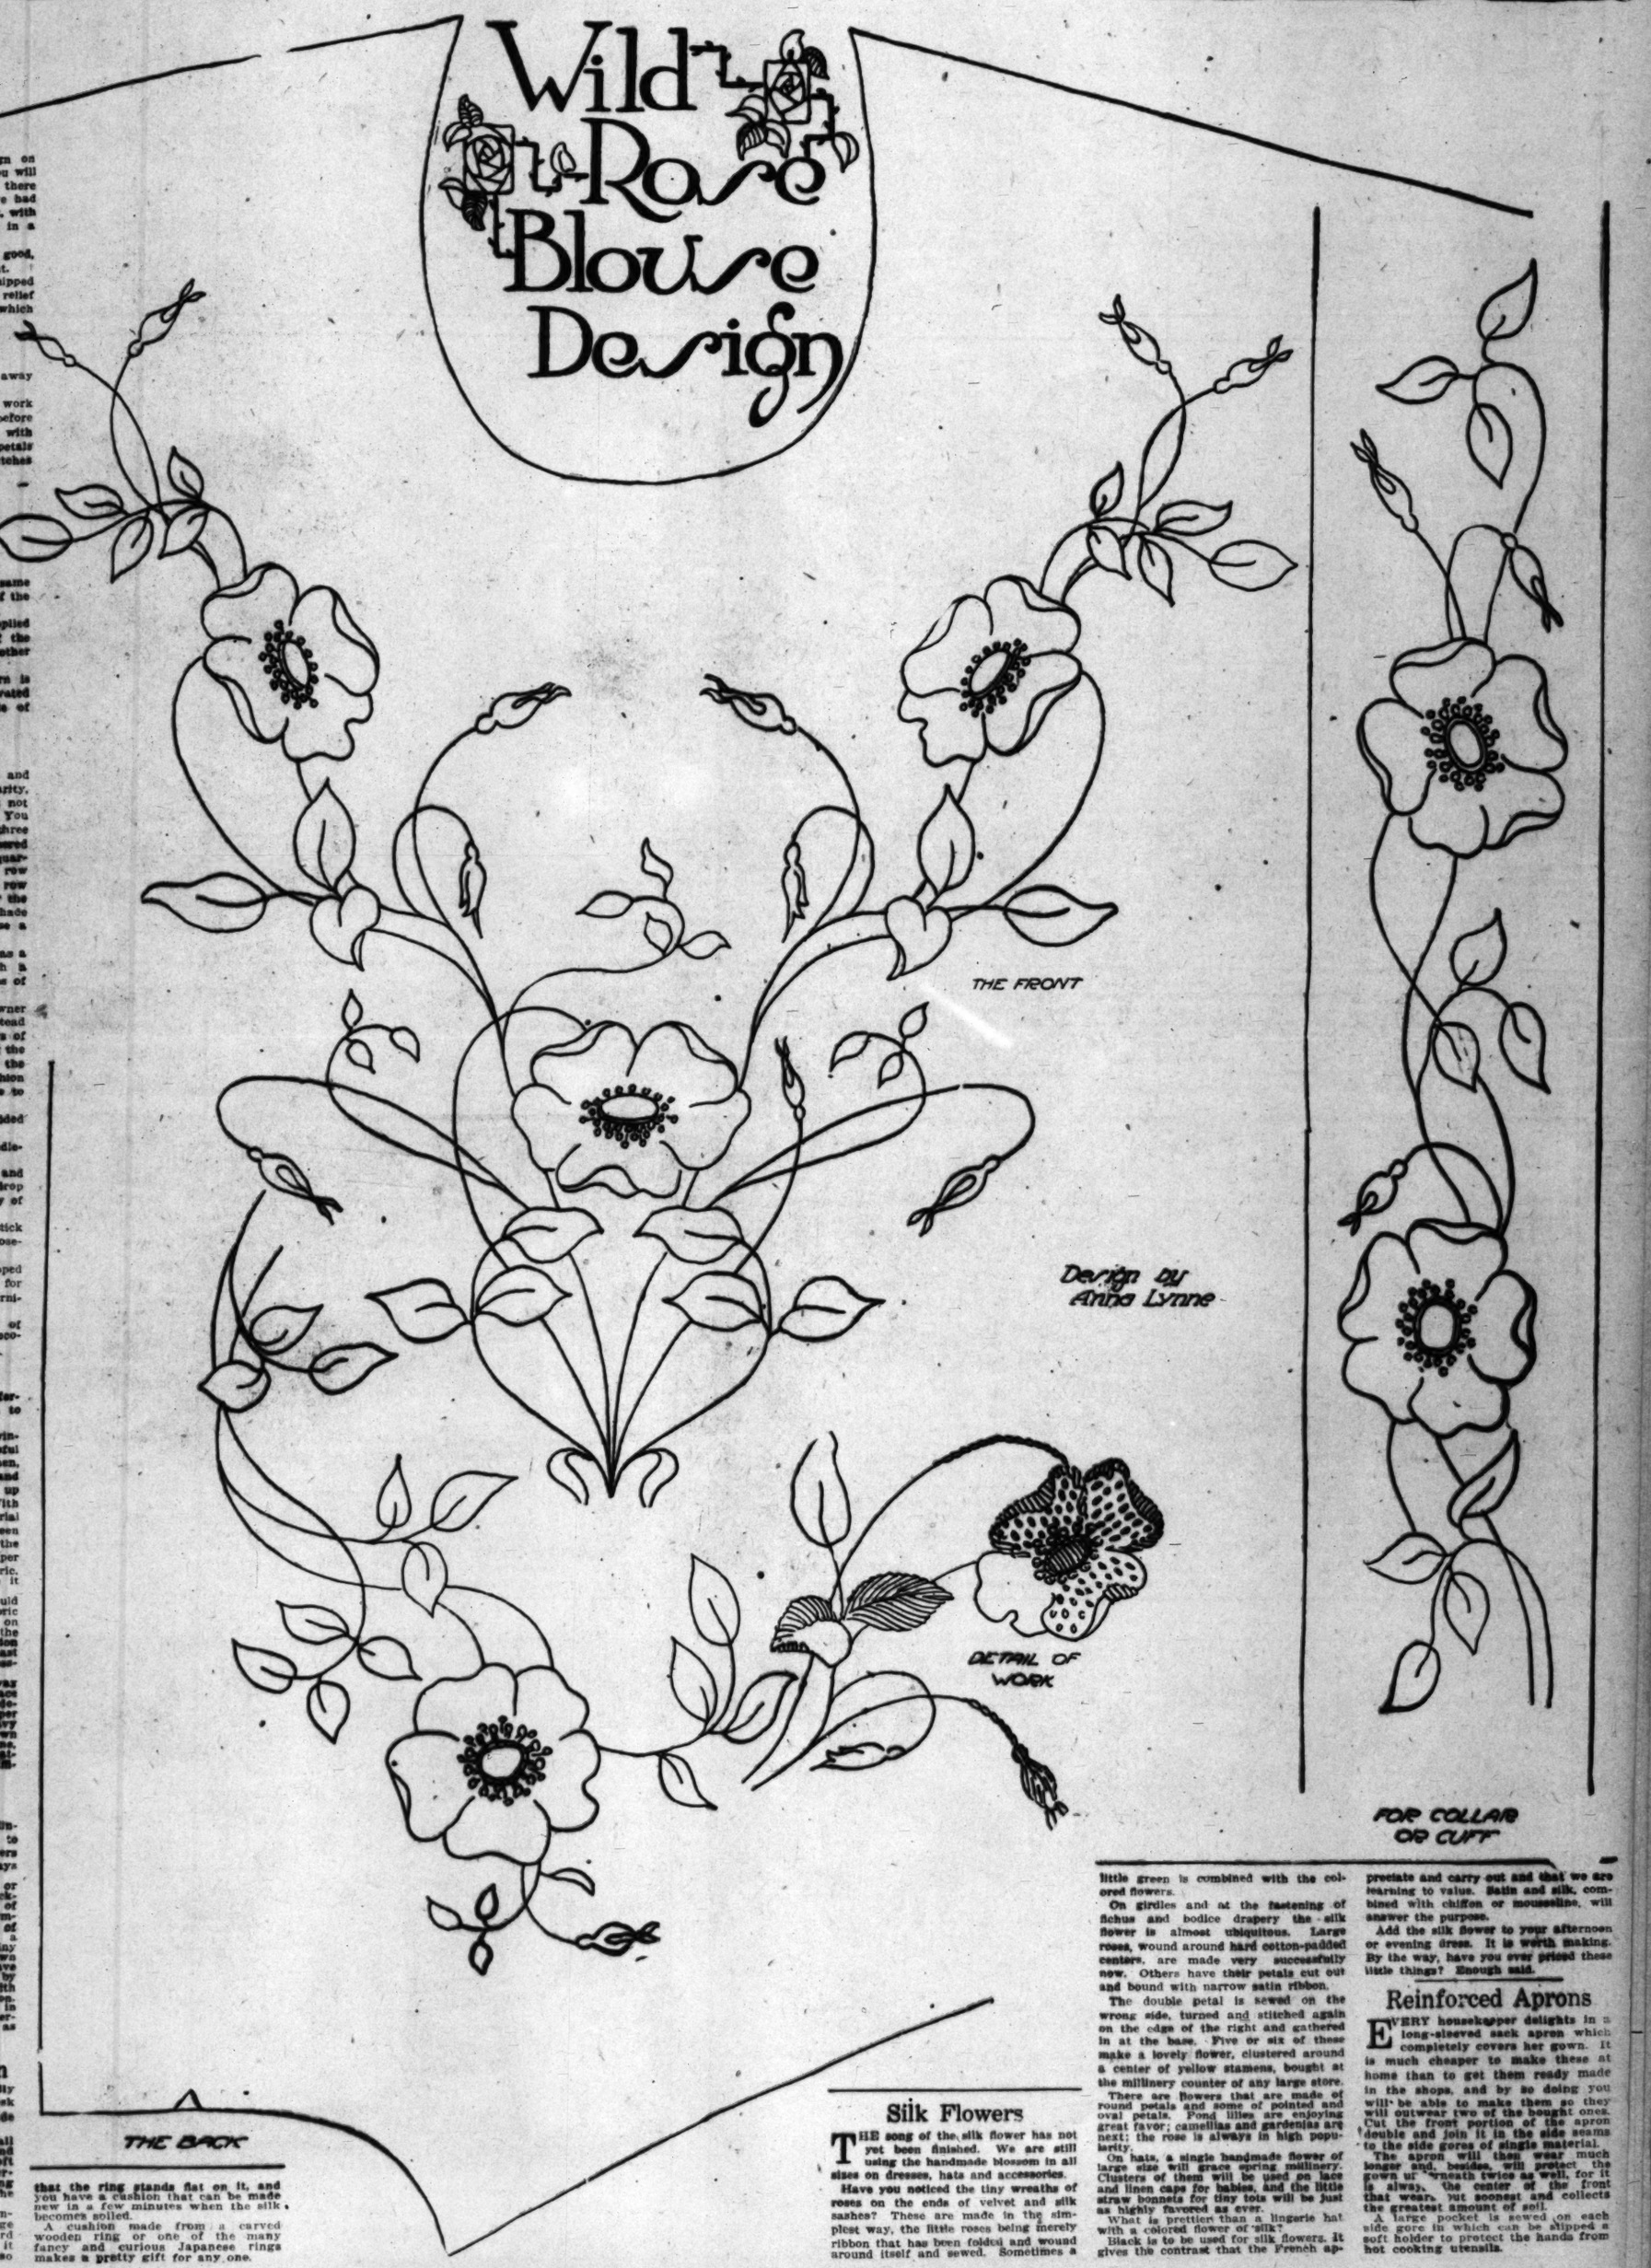
A UNIQUAL and decidedly attractive pincushion for a desk or writing table can be made from an ordinary napkin ring.

Wind yarn around and around until you have a ball of the size you want. Then run a long piece into the ring and wind it around and around. Cut a circle of soft material wider in circumference than the opening of the ring and run a gathering thread over one side of the circle. Draw it up around the ball.

Run the ball through the ring until the gathered edge rises above the edge of the ring.

Cut a circle of cardboard to fit the inside of the ring and glue it over the gathered edge of the material so that the ring stands flat on it, and you have a cushion that can be made new in a few minutes when the silk becomes soiled.

A cushion made from a carved wooden ring or one of the many fancy and curious Japanese rings makes a pretty gift for any one.



Silk Flowers

THE song of the silk flower has not yet been finished. We are still using the handmade blossom in all sizes on dresses, hats and accessories.

Have you noticed the tiny wreaths of roses on the ends of velvet and silk sashes? These are made in the simplest way, the little roses being merely ribbon that has been folded and wound around itself and sewed. Sometimes a little green is combined with the colored flowers.

On girdles and at the fastening of fichus and bodice drapery the silk flower is almost ubiquitous. Large roses, wound around hard cotton-padded centers, are made very successfully now. Others have their petals cut out and bound with narrow satin ribbon.

The double petal is sewed on the wrong side, turned and stitched again on the edge of the right and gathered in at the base. Five or six of these make a lovely flower, clustered around a center of yellow stamens, bought at the millinery counter of any large store.

There are flowers that are made of round petals and some of pointed and oval petals. Pond lilies are enjoying great favor; camellias and gardenias are next; the rose is always in high popularity.

On hats, a single handmade flower of large size will grace spring millinery. Clusters of them will be used on lace and linen caps for babies, and the little straw bonnets for tiny tots will be just as highly favored as ever.

What is prettier than a lingerie hat with a colored flower of silk?

Black is to be used for silk flowers. It gives the contrast that the French appreciate and carry out and that we are learning to value. Satin and silk, combined with chiffon or mousseline, will answer the purpose.

Add the silk flower to your afternoon or evening dress. It is worth making. By the way, have you ever prized these little things? Enough said.

Reinforced Aprons

EVERY housekeeper delights in a long-sleeved sack apron which completely covers her gown. It is much cheaper to make these at home than to get them ready made in the shops, and by so doing you will be able to make them so they will outwear two of the bought ones. Cut the front portion of the apron double and join it in the side seams to the side gores of single material.

The apron will then wear much longer and, besides, will protect the gown underneath twice as well, for it is always the center of the front that wears, but soonest and collects the greatest amount of soil.

A large pocket is sewed on each side gore in which can be slipped a soft holder to protect the hands from hot cooking utensils.

"There is no doubt that the above menu will be set upon the table for the criticism by the compiler in reply to 'Nora's' problem. Will our critical John be content with the fare his healthy, hungry self? We should like to hear from wives and husbands on the points suggested."

Husbands Write in Protest.

I am hearing from both! Perhaps from the husbands! One, evidently has overlooked the preliminaries to the menu and the statement of authorship, and forthwith "Holy Moses!" And, upbraiding the paper by name, "Are you daffy?" Noting that hominy appears three times in as many days, he comments, "There are a dozen cereals cheaper than hominy!" and at the seventh repetition relieves his tortured soul with "Oh, whatever that may stand for in the profane vocabulary.

I have to thank the critic for a hearty laugh, and beg that he will not quarrel with the menu which has wrought him to the verge of audible execration.

I should be glad if the readers of the letters just given would in candor and seriousness let us know their reasons for the question under debate. The answers to "Nora's" problem are to be inserted here. All agree that the wife she named will provide suffice for two people weekly. Our New York wife sketches an attractive variety of menus as possible to the ingenious cook. Is some enterprising wife who cares to would put the possibility to the test.

$4 a Week Menu.

The symposium upon "Nora's" problem of setting her table for two upon an outlay of $4 per week is completed by the publication of a quiet, sensible, and withal letter from one who writes with the confidence of an experienced manager.

"My table expenses for the five months housekeeping averaged $18.77 a week. This provided food for two people regularly, a few guests, and servant hire. I have four and five. Twelve months of my accounts totals $201.24 for the year, which is $4 for fifty-two weeks and $208.

"I canned all my fruit, including apples, made my own pickles, jellies and jams. Tomatoes were the only vegetable I put up myself.

"I do my own baking, and 'make overs.' I buy carefully, by the sale, watch for 'special sales' in staples.

"A small kitchen garden helped out $5 worth last summer, not counting cost of seeds.

Me'n Puppo we was—er—we was a-climbin' up the rocks an' up the rocks, an suddently we seed—a whole lot o'—o' wind-fairies, an' 'ey was a-flyin' out to sea, an' ther' was a ship—an' it was full o' 'ittle mans all maked out o'—out o' oranges—an' 'ey was orful funny, an' the wind-fairies turned the ship topside up.

An ever'buddy was gettin drowned-ded all up—an' 'ey seed me'n Puppo—an'—an' 'ey sed, "Hell-up, Hell-up, Kaptin Kiddo," an' I sed, "What! does you expect me to make an orange-aid—an' this is the seventeenth o' March—I is a big brave Hero—but not for me," I sed.

Well, what-che-know-'bout-'at? Ever' last one o' those orange-men turned Emerald Green, an' me'n Puppo we—we maked a breeches buoy out o'—out o' a pair o' pants what I had in mine pocket an' we—well, we safed 'em all up, an'—an' we had a n'orful tussle wif the naughty bad wind-fairies to do it, too.

'En when all o' those turned green orange men was on shore we catched the naughty wind-fairies an' we gived 'em a good hard spankin' an' we sended 'em home to bed—'cause they'd broked the orange men's ship so's it wasn't no use no more.

En the 'ittle green men an' me'n Puppo we putted on fine 'ittle green hats an' we had a p'rade, an' I leaded the p'rade, an' I was the Drum Major an' Puppo he was the banner-man—an' carried a green flag wif a—wif a bu'fules' gold Harp on it, an' the 'ittle green orange men follered after.

An' 'ey wanted me to be the King—an' the Commodore—an' the General an'—an' eve'fing—but I sed it was time for me to go home to my supper now—an'—an' me'n Puppo—well, I telled Bridgie 'bout it while she was givin' me mine supper, an' she sed, "Arrah, thin, but it's yersilf is the broth av a bye—Ha! Ha! Oh you Kiddo!"

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS FOR LINGERIE GOWNS

Simple and Effective

With an Apron Tunic

The Double Skirt

Filet and Eyelet Embroidery

Eyelet Work on Linen

Embroidered Batiste and Lace

EVERY woman will want to include at least one lingerie gown in her summer wardrobe.

Dame Fashion says (and who would not obey her dictum?) that the lingerie frock for the approaching season must be elaborate, at least to a certain degree.

Therefore considerable time and attention will necessarily have to be expended upon the making of these gowns; so it behooves every woman to begin early the planning and making of this particular costume. Laces and wash fabrics are tempting in prices, and there is no time like the present to buy.

From the great makers of fashion come several delightful models that, fortunately for us, are all copyable.

Take, for example, the frock fashioned of embroidered batiste combined with "all-over" valenciennes lace. The embroidery is cut out in circular motifs, bordered with insertion, to form a circular yoke effect over the lace bodice. Again, these motifs are seen in the narrow peplum over a girdle of soft black satin.

A short tunic effect is obtained by the valenciennes lace on the skirt, which is then finished with alternate bands of embroidery and lace insertion edged with frills of lace.

The black satin hem serves a double purpose; it protects the bottom of the skirt from wearing and also acts as a charming trimming.

Wide embroidered flouncing is employed in the next model. Here we have a double tunic of embroidery over the drop skirt, which is edged with wide linen fringe. The bodice of this gown is made with the fashionable one-sided effect, carried out by the aid of a broad reve of embroidery on the right and a band of embroidery on the left side.

The girdle is of lemon-colored satin.

Fringe, by the way, plays a prominent part in lingerie gowns this season. It is either of mercerized cotton or linen and, of course, is washable.

Eyelet embroidery combined with filet lace is seen in the next gown. Here the "set in" kimono sleeves are of embroidery and lace, with a fringed edge. The newest sleeves, you see, are all cut separately and set in under a pleat to give the kimono effect.

This skirt is also double, the upper portion finished in deep scallops edged with fringe, while the lower portion has a straight fringed edge.

The now fashionable scallops and short apron tunic are the salient features of an imported gown made of finest French embroidered batiste. No more charming gown could be found for the fair young debutante than this little frock, and it can be copied by the home dressmaker.

Quite simple in design and inexpensive, too, is the next model of fine linen. Embroidered bands, separated by lace insertion, form the entire gown, except for the tucked net yoke and cuffs. The girdle is of American beauty satin.

Linen embroidered in graduated circles of eyelets is used for the last model. Black taffeta undercuffs and hem correspond to the soft folded girdle. Small-ball fringe of Irish crochet is used with telling effect on both bodice and skirt. This is quite a simple yet exceedingly effective gown that can be worn on a multitude of occasions.

Is it not true that "Everywoman" would do well to copy one of these? With a pattern that emphasizes new lines, lace, embroidery or linen can be combined and allied with small trouble.

In constructing the bodice of a lingerie frock a tissue-paper pattern serves as an excellent foundation upon which the fabrics can be stitched, and when the bodice is completed the paper can be torn away. The construction of a skirt is the easier task; the same plan can be followed successfully.

Remember that the time to prepare for the first warm day is not when the day is dawning. The wise woman will avail herself of the decided styles and the first choice in lingerie fabrics.

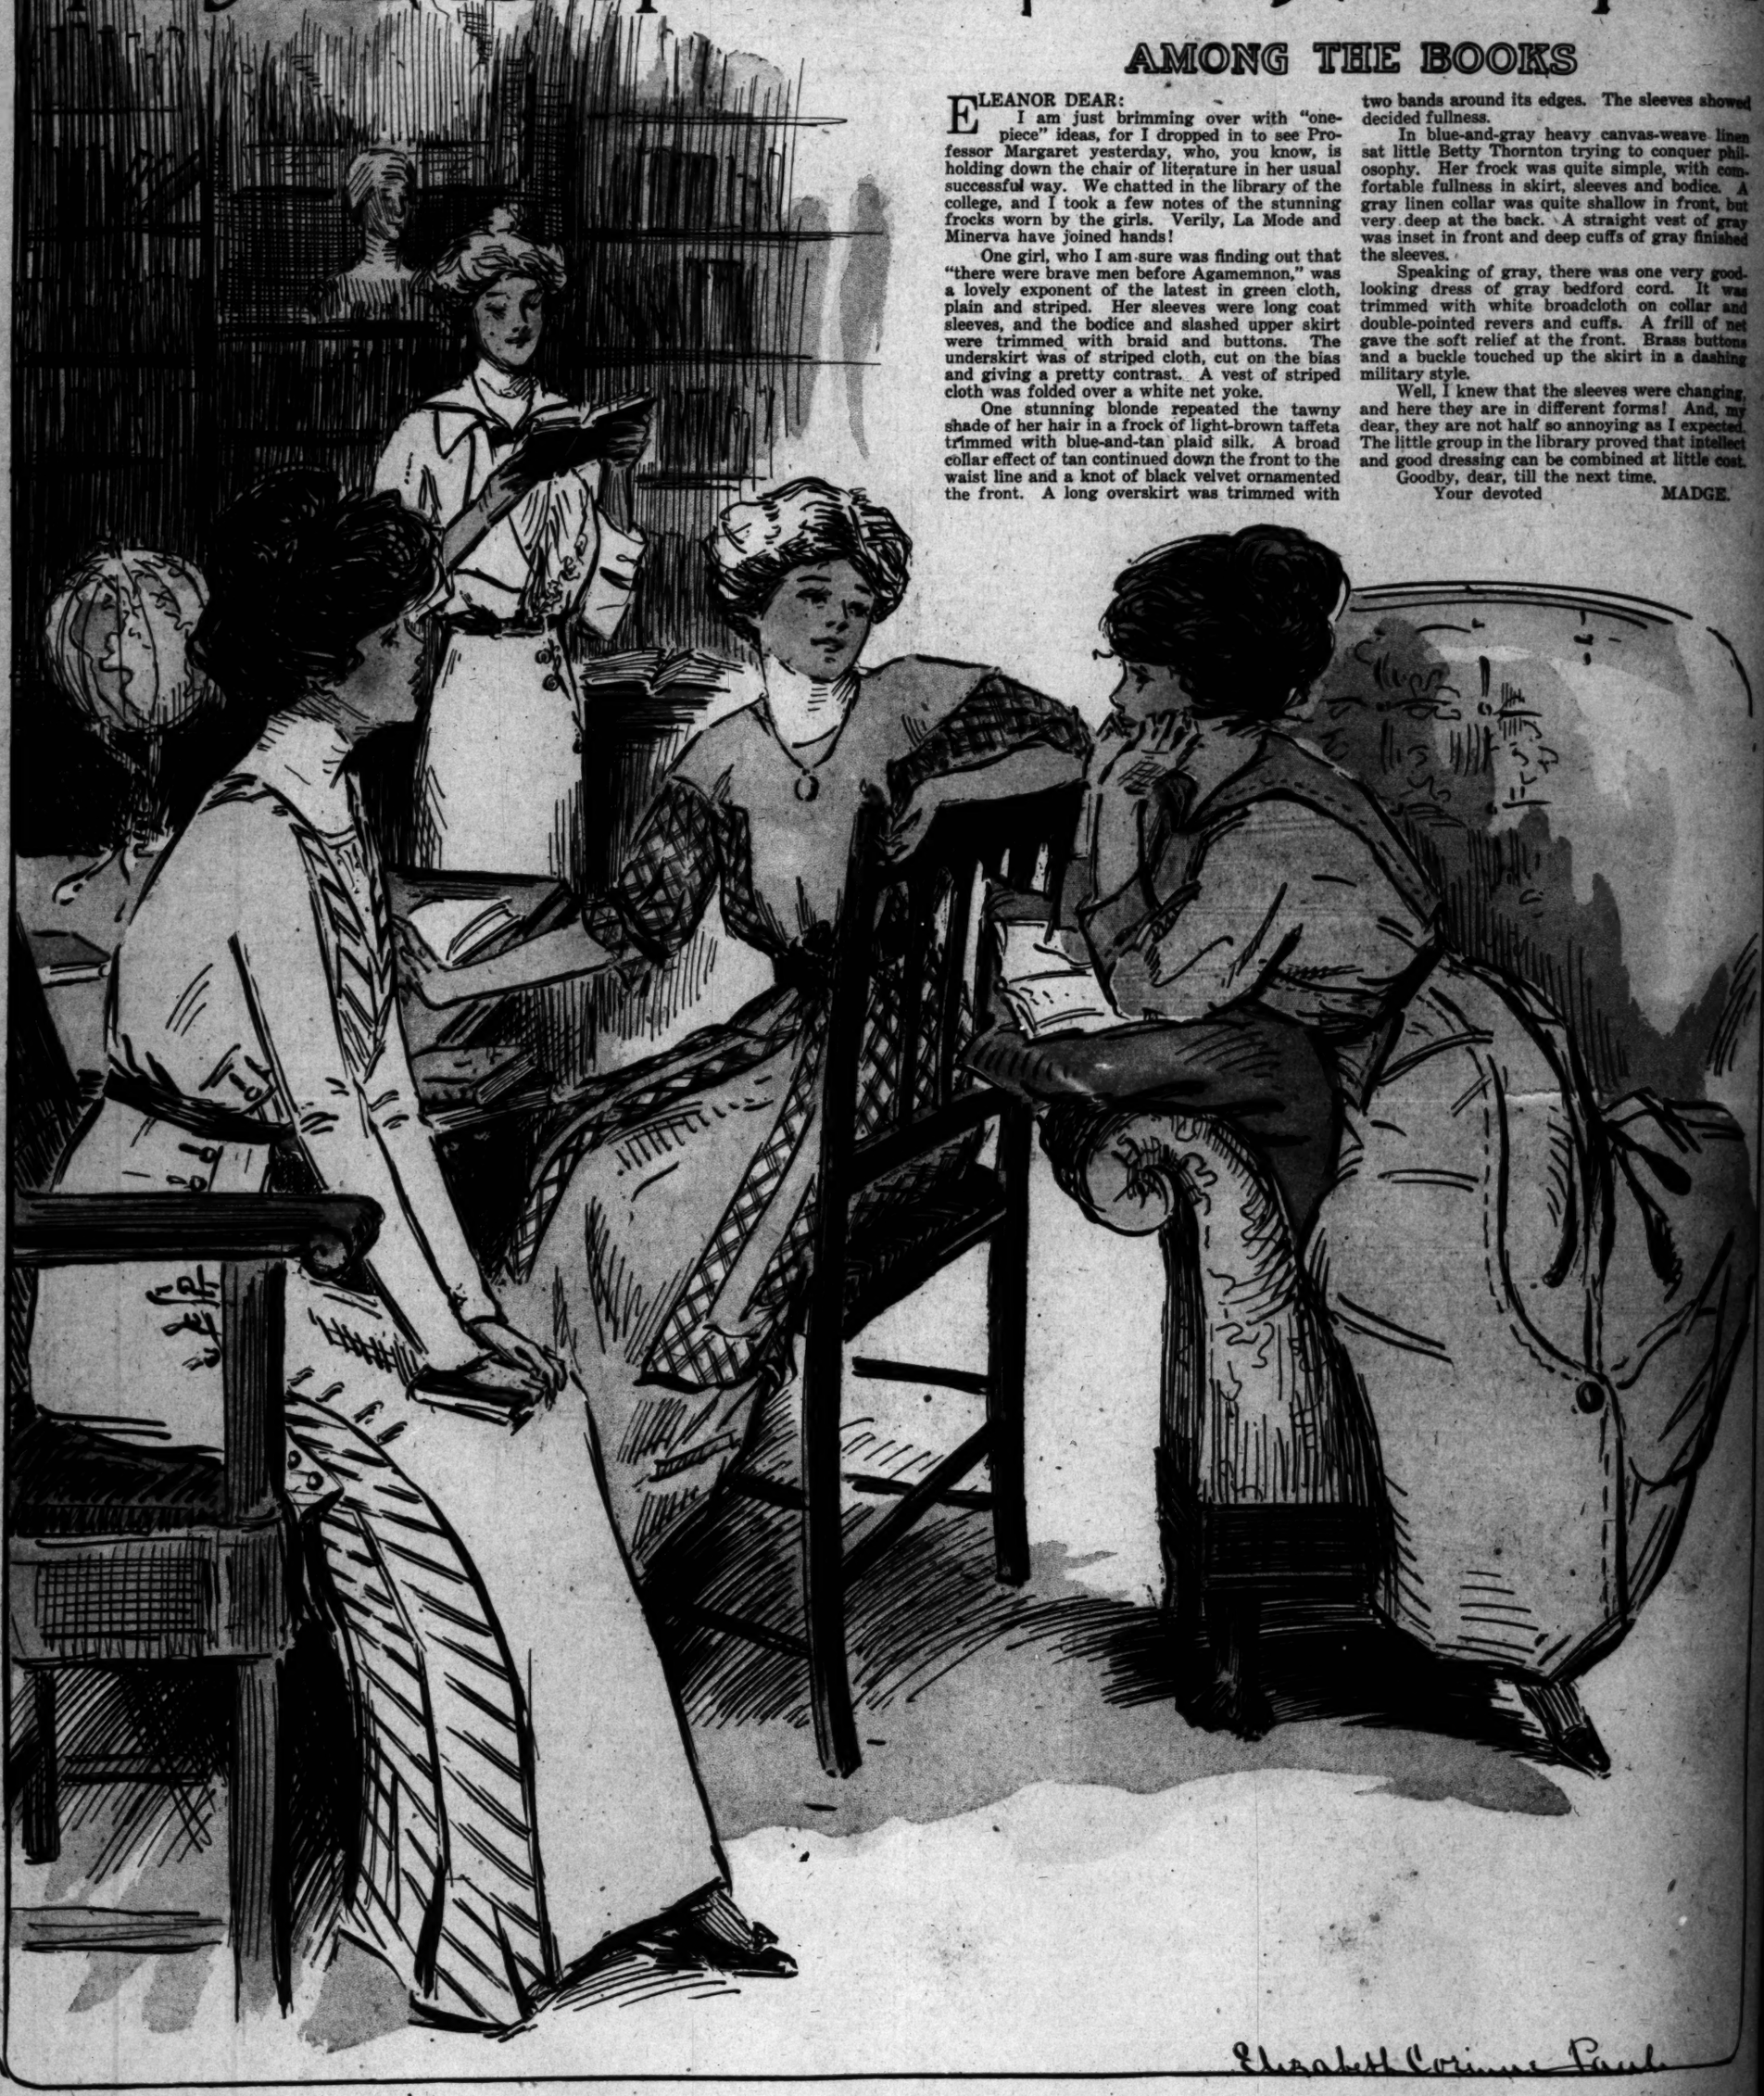
THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK



Elizabeth Corinne Faulk

AMONG THE BOOKS

ELEANOR DEAR:

I am just brimming over with "one-piece" ideas, for I dropped in to see Professor Margaret yesterday, who, you know, is holding down the chair of literature in her usual successful way. We chatted in the library of the college, and I took a few notes of the stunning frocks worn by the girls. Verily, La Mode and Minerva have joined hands!

One girl, who I am sure was finding out that "there were brave men before Agamemnon," was a lovely exponent of the latest in green cloth, plain and striped. Her sleeves were long coat sleeves, and the bodice and slashed upper skirt were trimmed with braid and buttons. The underskirt was of striped cloth, cut on the bias and giving a pretty contrast. A vest of striped cloth was folded over a white net yoke.

One stunning blonde repeated the tawny shade of her hair in a frock of light-brown taffeta trimmed with blue-and-tan plaid silk. A broad collar effect of tan continued down the front to the waist line and a knot of black velvet ornamented the front. A long overskirt was trimmed with two bands around its edges. The sleeves showed decided fullness.

In blue-and-gray heavy canvas-weave linen sat little Betty Thornton trying to conquer philosophy. Her frock was quite simple, with comfortable fullness in skirt, sleeves and bodice. A gray linen collar was quite shallow in front, but very deep at the back. A straight vest of gray was inset in front and deep cuffs of gray finished the sleeves.

Speaking of gray, there was one very good-looking dress of gray bedford cord. It was trimmed with white broadcloth on collar and double-pointed revers and cuffs. A frill of net gave the soft relief at the front. Brass buttons and a buckle touched up the skirt in a dashing military style.

Well, I knew that the sleeves were changing, and here they are in different forms! And, my dear, they are not half so annoying as I expected. The little group in the library proved that intellect and good dressing can be combined at little cost.

Goodby, dear, till the next time.

Your devoted MADGE.
